Murder Charge Filed Against J. W. Fox in Jones Slaying

A charge of murder with malice and forethought was filed here this morning against J. W. Fox, 51-year-old day laborer, in connection with the fatal shooting of C. F. Jones, 45, of Silverton, Oklahoma.

Complaint was made by J. O. Newell, Sheriff, and was taken by County Attorney Carl Gilliland, and reads:

"J. W. Fox voluntarily and with malice and aforethought killed, C. F. Jones by shooting him with a pistol."

An examining trial will be held in the county court at a date to be set by County Judge Fred Baird. The complaint followed several days of examination of witnesses by peace officers and Judge Gilliland, who said that several statements have been secured and will be turned over to the district court following the examining trial.

Allen Johnston and C. F. Fox, son of J. W. Fox, were released early this week. No charges have been filed on either of these men, but both have been notified to be available as witnesses.

The shooting occurred last Wednesday night around 11 o'clock in front of the Jones shack, south of the City Water works, after J. W. Fox, accompanied by his son and Johnston, went to the home of Jones and called him out.

No details regarding the shooting were released by local officials, who said that these details will be brought out in the trial.

Jones, who is survived by his wife and three children, was carried to Oklahoma, where he was buried this week. They had lived here around 30 days, during which time Jones had been employed in harvest work.

A son-in-law, H. B. Roberts, who witnessed the killing and later took Jones to the hospital, along with Mrs. Jones and the older children, will be called here for the examining trial.

Ripen Tomatoes Indoors To Avoid Blistering

Pointing out that tomatoes which are allowed to stay on the vine to ripen at this season of the year often become sun-blistered, Miss Sadie Lee Oliver, county home demonstration agent, this week advised that the crop be harvested when there is a small area of pink showing on the blossom end. The fruit, if then placed in a cool, shady location for two to four days will ripen to a deep pink or red color, ready for use fresh, for canning or for juice.

Fruit so handled seems to ripen better indoors than if left on the plant to mature, Miss Oliver says.

WEATHER AND HARVEST

Weather conditions during the past week have been comparatively fair for the harvest season, with only a few showers to slow up the work for a few hours at a time, the latest shower, being Sunday evening, when an estimated eighth of an inch fell in some localities throughout the territory.

The heat has not been oppressive, and the light showers have been of wonderful help to the growing row crops, therefore were a blessing, as they did no material damage to the wheat yet standing in the fields.

Wednesday morning dawned with a brisk and cooling breeze from the northeast, with some clouds and slight threats of rain, which did not materialize.

TO BEGIN REVIVAL

Rev. J. A. Branaman, Missionary of the Plains Baptist Missionary Association, was in Friona Wednesday making arrangements for holding a series of revival services here.

Oklahoma Man Here For Harvest Season

Rev. O. Hamblen and wife and two grandchildren of Healdton, Okla., are spending the harvest season out in the Rrea community, where they own a nice Panhandle farm, which is yielding them a good crop of barley this season.

Rev. Hamblen is not taking any active part in harvesting the crop, owing to the fact that he was recently discharged from a hospital after undergoing a serious operation.

Owing to the severe heat at their home in Oklahoma, Rev. and Mrs. Hamblen drove out here to enjoy the cool Panhandle nights and avoid the sub-tropical heat of the lower altitudes.

Rev. Hamblen has been pastor of the First Baptist Church at Healdton for the past 20 years. He has two sons and a son-in-law in the armed service, both sons being overseas, and the son-in-law was until recently when he was returned to the States for a rest.

One of the sons, who is a minister, is a Major in the Army Chaplain service, and since he has been in England he has had many honors bestowed upon him, one of which was that of being entertained at dinner by the King and Queen of England.

His work also brings him into frequent contact with General Eisenhower, with whom he is on quite intimate terms. He was with the first landing force in the French Invasion.

The son-in-law was in the Invasion of Africa, Sicily and Italy.

The Hamblens like the plains country and are truly enjoying their short stay here.

Son Sends Large Coconut to Parents

Mrs. D. H. Coldiron brought in to the Star office one day last week, one of the largest coconuts we have ever seen, which was sent to her by her son and daughter-in-law, Sgt. and Mrs. Dallas E. Coldiron, who are now stationed at Boca Raton, Florida.

One thing that made the coconut seem so unusually large was the fact that it was still within its outer hull, but not regarding the fact it was still unusually large. The nut was taken from a tree that is growing in the yard at the home of the young people.

Sgt. Coldiron is now an instructor in the radio and radar service of the armed forces. He achieved this rating and distinction through his own studious efforts and persistence and his friends at Friona are proud of him, as they are of all our boys in service.

Plant Field Peas To Renew Soil Fertility

A crop which will both enrich the soil and provide good stock feed was recommended this week by County Agent A. R. Bateman, who suggests that farmers plant black eyed peas or some other type of field pea on wheat land.

Blackeyed peas will mature in from 45 to 60 days, Mr. Bateman says; and even if the plants make nothing but vine, the vines can be turned under for humus.

"We must think of our land in terms of a long-time investment," Bateman says in urging the replacing of soil elements removed by continuous one-crop farming and improper cultivation. Blackeyed peas and other field peas may be planted on both irrigated and dry land, the county agent states.

Old timers said that this is the third murder charge to ever be filed in the history of Deaf Smith County.

Following the examining trial, all statements and information will be turned over to the grand jury.

Bins Available For Sale or Rent

Grain bins, moved into Hereford two years ago to meet wheat storage shortages, are still available for sale or rent, it was announced this week by F. G. Collier of the Deaf Smith County AAA Office, who says that 89 of the unerected bins, 1610 bush-capacity, and 81 double and 90 single bins (all erected) are now in the county. Regular prices, $150 and $160 for the unerected 1610 bushel bins and $190 for erected bins, have been set; and rental charges are announced as three cents a bushel, rated capacity, for the crop year.

The bins may be bought or rented and left on the bin site, south of the railroad tracks in east Hereford, for the remainder of the crop year.

According to Mr. Collier, the Commodity Credit Corporation, owner of the wheat granaries, estimates that they will have paid for themselves after this year; and though the state office reports that demands for grain storage is fairly heavy in other parts of the state and possibilities are that most of the unerected bins may be moved out, there will remain in Deaf Smith County 81 granaries with approximately 400,000 bushel storage capacity. At present approximately 36,000 bushels of small bin storage is in use at Dawn.

"Though this is not the most desirable type of grain storage," Mr. Collier points out, "Still it provides something better than stacking wheat on the ground."

COGITATIONS and APHORISMS of Jodok

My mail still continues to bring to me more literature than I have time to read, but as I stated last week, there is still an occasional line or paragraph that at least causes me to think a little. And such was the case with a one-sheet letter, whose envelope bore the name and address of Grover Sellers, Attorney General of Texas, and I thought surely Mr. Sellers must have something worthwhile to say, so I read his letter. I had not read many lines until my mind was refreshed concerning an incident that happened some years ago, and that was a letter received from some loan company, somewhere in Iowa.

Yea, verily! I needed money and thought I needed it badly, and did I have anything to sell from which could realize the funds? Nay. And would the local bank loan me any money? Not on your tinfole. The banker asked me several questions, which I thought was none of his business; but I told him and he said "You are broke and don't know it. And would any of the business men in my home town loan me any money? Not so much as $5.00 from any of them." They told me, in effect, "We suppose you are all right, but none of us will risk $5.00 on you."

Pictured above are Cpl. Carl G. Scumbato and his bride, the former Miss Elizabeth Beatrice Ventruella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Ventruella, of the Hub Community, an account of whose wedding was given in the July 7, issue of the Star.

Well, here came that letter from Iowa, in which the loan company offered to loan me any amount from $5.00 to $5,000.00, just on my own personal note, did not even have to ask someone to go my security. No one need know anything about it. It was just a matter between the company and myself. And was it a temptation? Yea, verily.

But I allowed time to slip by without availing myself of this most liberal offer, and soon another letter from the company, which made the offer even more liberal and simpler. Then my habit of procrastinating saved me from a very bitter experience, and as I studied the matter over I found myself wondering why everybody, even the banks, did not borrow this money that was so easily obtained; and I concluded that this liberal offer must have a hook to it and the liberality and simplicity was merely the bait concealing the hook. Well, I did not want to be HOOKED any more, for I had had enough of being HOOKED without hunting up strangers to do the hooking.

I later learned that this liberal loan company was what is commonly known as a "loan shark," and that they later became so numerous and so bold in their offers and their fleecing of the people, that it has become necessary for our State Legislature to pass laws for curbing their activities in our great State of Texas, and that is what Mr. Sellers' letter is about. It seems that Mr. Sellers would like for everybody in Texas to read his letter, for he says: "I hope your interest in justice will send it on its way into your column in the paper, or words to that effect, so I am going to quote a part or maybe, all of it here."

"Texas must be purged of the loan sharks," Mr. Sellers declared in a radio speech in Dallas which opened his campaign for his first elective term to the high office of Attorney General. In his address, he was highly critical of the filibuster in the Senate against passage of the loan shark bill. "Now that the courts have sustained the injunction law, passed by the last legislature, my office is going to make it miserable for these heartless usurers who have grown rich at the expense of thousands of our unfortunate citizens. 'Urging any person in the clutches of these parasites to society' to cease payments to their persecutors. Mr. Sellers declared, "We want information on all of these unscrupulous operators who forcefully take the hard-earned living money of

Many years ago, when I was a lad of about eight or nine years, I remember my grandmother being called from her bed in the dead of night to go to the home of our nearest neighbor, she did not return until noon the following day, and when she came home she said little Harry had a case of diphtheria and could not live. As I remember, he was about four or five years old, but I often played with him and his older brother, and when I saw his little body lying in the little white casket, I was terribly shaken, and for years after, the word, "diphtheria" filled me with horror, and I have not fully out lived the sensation yet.

Since the medical science has discovered a positive immunization for this one-time dreaded disease, it occurs to me that it is just TOO bad if parents do not avail themselves of its use on their children. You parents, if you have not already had this done for your children, WHY don't you have it done NOW. I know of nothing better that parents can do for their children than to have them immunized against all diseases where immunization is possible. Of course, diphtheria can be cured now, when taken in time, but as the old maxim puts it, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Here are some of the things that Dr. Cox has to say about diphtheria:

"Few conquests of science have been as spectacular and complete as those relating to diphtheria. Science has firmly established the value of serum treatment in both its preventative and curative phases. However toxin-antitoxin, or its successor toxoid, for immunization, and antitoxin for a cure, are sera of which the general public is even yet not fully aware."

Dr. Cox urges that children receive diphtheria immunization as early as possible, preferably as soon as they are six months old. The necessity for this immunization is apparent when it is realized that two-thirds of all deaths from diphtheria occur in the age group under six years. "It cannot be too strongly emphasized that to deprive children of this protection which science has made possible is to subject them to unwarranted and unnecessary hazards that can easily turn into tragedy," Dr. Cox said. Parental interest in immunization must be more widespread if the Texas death rate from this disease is to be eliminated as a cause of death. When a child has been stricken with diphtheria, antitoxin is the only treatment that will save his life. Also, to be effective it must be given early in the illness and in large doses. Delay is usually caused by parents failing to realize that any sore throat may actually be diphtheria. It is always safest to immunize against the disease than to risk curing it.

I have often heard the expression, "There is no time like the present." I have cogitated over this saying quite a bit of late, and I have concluded that it is true in fact as well as in principle, for there is NO SUCH THING as present.

our people. Write me at my office in Austin if you are in trouble and one of our investigators will meet you at your district attorney's office to take quick action to break up this nefarious practice."

And here is something more that I have gleaned from another of these circular letters, which came from the office of State Health Officer, Dr. Geo. W. Cox. I have often wondered why so many parents will allow their children to go on unprotected from that dreaded disease "diphtheria" when they can so easily be fully protected from its ravages, which in many cases mean death.

Many years ago, when I was a lad of about eight or nine years, I remember my grandmother being called from her bed in the dead of night to go to the home of our nearest neighbor, she did not return until noon the following day, and when she came home she said little Harry had a case of diphtheria and could not live. What about travel conditions?

Travel conditions are different than they were in pre-war days.

Let's look at the facts: Throughout the land, tens of thousands of men and women of our armed forces are now traveling across the country by rail.

The families of our fighting troops are taking trips to "see the boys" before they shove off for overseas.

Executives and war workers of essential industries are traveling between various plants on important missions.

It all adds up to this: More passengers than ever before are crowding the Santa Fe trains.

We are required to handle this unprecedented volume of passenger traffic with practically the same equipment we had in 1941.

Building new passenger equipment has not been permitted since Pearl Harbor.

Our government has issued instructions to the railroads under Interstate Commerce Commission Service Order No. 213, effective 12:01 am June 27, to displace or remove any passenger in any accommodation upon any train, in order to provide necessary space for sick or wounded service personnel, and their attendants, transported pursuant to a medical certificate. We hope there will be little of this.

We of the Santa Fe will do our best to carry all the passengers we can, as quickly and comfortably as we can, but we ask this before you plan a trip this summer:

Unless your trip is essential, can't you put it off until we have a little better opportunity to carry you in the traditional Santa Fe manner?

NEWS ABOUT FOOD

from local
W. F. A. Committee

CAN THE PLENTIFUL PEACH

The luscious peach which promises abundance this year will be ripe for canning in one part or another of the country from now until October. Take advantage of the good supply, canning specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture urge. The amount of peaches canned need not depend on the sugar in the cupboard—peaches may be canned satisfactorily with little or no sugar.

Choose fresh, firm, ripe fruit. The pink blush on many varieties of peaches tells little about quality, but the background color is important. If the background is green, the peach is not ripe for canning, and when it does ripen will likely have a poor flavor. Choose peaches with yellow or whitish-yellow background color. Never use one with a decayed spot. Even when cut out, bacteria may be left on the peach to spoil the rest.

When canning any food, play safe and have full up-to-date directions based on scientific research. A free copy of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's leaflet "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables" may be had by addressing a post card to "Home Canning," Washington, 25, D. C. These are the steps:

First, wash and peel the peaches. Handle fruit gently so as not to bruise, but wash well. Take no more than a canner load at one time. For easy peeling, place in a wire basket or cheesecloth, dip in boiling water about a minute or so, then dip quickly in cold water, and skin. Cut peaches in half and pit. If desired, slice peaches for packing.

Darkening of peaches is one problem in peach canning. To keep them from spotting while being prepared, drop them as soon as skinned and sliced into a solution of 1 gallon water, 2 tablespoons salt, 2 tablespoons vinegar. Drain when ready to precook.

If peaches are not juicy, extract juice may be needed in precooking and packing the fruit. For this, set aside sound peaches too soft for canning. Crush and heat to boiling, then strain.

Next step is to precook the fruit. When canning without sugar, cook fruit in its own juice until heated throughout but not soft. If fruit is not juicy, add just enough water to keep it from sticking to pan.

When canning with sugar, precook in one of two ways: (1) If fruit is juicy, add sugar—1-2 cup to each quart of uncooked peaches—and heat to boiling. (2) For less juicy fruit, make a sirup and either water or juice extracted from extra peaches: boil together five minutes. A thin, moderately thin, or medium sirup may be made, depending on the sugar supply and family tastes. To make a thin sirup, use 1 cup sugar to 3 cups juice or water; for a moderately thin sirup, use 1 cup sugar to 2 of liquid; and for a medium sirup use a cup each of sugar and liquid. Then precook fruit in sirup until it is heated throughout but not soft.

While peaches are precooking, heat clean jars and jar tops. But do not heat metal lids with sealing compound; instead dip them in boiling water just before putting on jar.

Pack hot peaches evenly into hot jars, leaving 1-2 inch headspace. Cover with boiling liquid, still leaving 1-2 inch at top. This usually takes 3-4 to 1 cup liquid to each jar. Taking care to have a good proportion of solid food and liquid, and leaving right head space help to keep the peaches from losing liquid during canning. They won't be left high and dry, to turn dark.

Work out air bubbles by running a knife blade down the jar side, and if necessary add more liquid. Wipe jar rim with a clean, damp cloth. One sticky bit can keep jar from sealing airtight. Put on jar top and adjust according to kind.

Next step is to process the jars of fruit in boiling-water-bath canner. Have water boiling in canner and put each jar in as soon as filled and ready. When jars are all in canner, add more hot water if needed. It must cover jar tops by an inch or two. When the water boils hard, put canner lid on and begin counting time. Process peaches 20 minutes at sea level. At higher altitudes, add 1 minute to the 20 for each 1,000 feet above sea level. Keep heat even under canner; if temperature drops, jars may have liquid drawn out. Add more boiling water if needed, to keep jar tops well covered.

When time's up, take out jars.

"Metal Medicos" Cure Wartime Ills

WHEN Canada undertook the manufacture of tanks in 1940 her industrialists ran into a production problem. The tracks of these ponderous machines kept breaking after 300 miles or less of running. The Physical Metallurgy Research Laboratories of the Bureau of Mines were called in to help. The mileage of her tanks was increased to more than 5,000.

This instance is only one of the many which have made the operations of this important Government research branch one of the great untold stories of the war. For more than three years these "metal doctors" have been helping to iron out the multitude of wrinkles which naturally accompanied Canada's rapidly expanding industrial war effort.

The Canadian industrial war effort that startled the world wasn't accomplished without plenty of headaches. When Canadian manufacturers large and small took on the job of producing precision-built war weapons, they did so with little or no experience in this highly exacting field. Today Canada is making ships, guns, tanks, planes, shells and war equipment of all kinds.

Working hand in hand with Canadian manufacturers, the "metal doctors" have given their assistance in the solving of countless every-day problems. Because of a shortage of one particular metal something else may have to be developed, or an aircraft part may have to be made lighter and stronger. A new shell or gun may require steel of several different types.

When Japan's entry into the war cut off our supply of tungsten, the Bureau came to the rescue in a dramatic way. No large deposits of tungsten had been discovered in Canada at that time but small bits frequently cropped up with the ore in gold mines. Gathering these fragments from mines all across Canada, the Bureau engineers milled the ore in their own small refinery and managed to keep a sufficient amount of tungsten flowing to the manufacturers to tide them over the crisis. Since then, quite large deposits have been found at

6 Stew-pondous Ways to Stretch Meat Rations

There's not a more versatile dish in the archives of American culinary art than the famous meat stew. Found on the tables of rich and poor alike, it is a standard item on the national bill of fare.

Even with American meat production at an all-time high, the multiple requirements of the armed forces, lend-lease, and civilians necessitate that meat be conserved and extended. The nation's cooks and homemakers, searching for ways to stretch meat dishes and conserve precious ration points, have discovered that merely by adding one or two ingredients to the basic American stew they can achieve almost an endless variety of meat dishes with an international flavor.

Following are recipes for six stews which speak various languages:

Hungarian Goulash
1 pound beef (for stew)
2 medium onions, chopped
Lard or drippings for browning
1 tablespoon paprika
1 clove garlic, minced
2 cups water
4-6 potatoes, diced
1 teaspoon salt

Cook onions in drippings about 5 minutes. Add the meat and seasonings and water. Simmer one hour. Add diced potatoes. Simmer until tender, about 30 minutes. Add bread dumplings if desired.

East Indian Curry

2 cups lamb broth (stock made from bones removed from lamb roast)
2 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

Cover meat with water and simmer until tender. Brown vegetables in drippings, then combine them with seasonings, broth, and meat. Simmer for 30 minutes. Thicken with flour. Serve the curry with rice.

Dear Mr. White:

I thought I would drop you a few lines to let you know I am still alive. I received a lot of the backnumbered papers the other day. I have been overseas for the past six months and have just returned. I am glad to be back, but there is one more place I would like to go. I can't mention the place in this letter, but you can guess where. I was stationed in England for a while, then I moved to Italy. I am hoping we all will be back home soon. I saw in the papers the names of several of those I knew at Friona, who are now over there. It was never my good fortune to meet any of them there. You see our duties varied and it is hard to ever meet. We were always on the go. We carried supplies and everything they needed to carry on with. In fact, I went through the invasion of France on D-Day. I just arrived here the 7th of July, and am in the hospital here. I will be out soon I hope. Well, so-long, and best wishes to my many friends in Friona. I remain, as ever,

Ray.

A letter was received early this week from Sgt. Robert H. (Shine) McFarland stating that he was in a hospital suffering from a wound in his leg caused by a piece of shrapnel, which struck him during the battle of Saipan. "Shine" warned his folks not to be uneasy, as the wound was not considered serious. A telegram from the War Department at Washington was received later, bearing the same information.

Plow Fall Garden Early for Easier Cultivation Job

Right now is the time to start preparing for a fall garden. Miss Sadie Lee Oliver, C. H. D. A., advised this week, pointing out that some really "early" fall gardeners—Mrs. G. P. Owen and Mrs. J. E. Young—already have fall beans up in their gardens.

Especially Miss Oliver urges that the soil be prepared now, as plowing will prevent weed growth and the scattering of seed to come up next spring. Also, she points out, weeds growing through the summer will take moisture out of the soil and

If August turns out to be a dry month every bit of the moisture now in the soil should be conserved. When the soil is very dry, tillage is difficult and much irrigation is required to prepare the seed bed.

Garden soils that are prepared now can be harrowed from time to time and when planting time comes, all that is necessary is to add fertilizer and sow the seed.
