Tacky Party Given

The Tacky Party given by the Parent-Teacher Association last Tuesday night has been pronounced a success.

Everybody and their children came to have a good time get acquainted with the many visitors.

Among the out of town guests were, Mirandy Storms of Smithville, Sissy Gibson and little friend Abe Mulkey, Mr. Dukes and wife and Madam Carter of Hicksville, Mamselle Pollard and companion madam Daggett crew, ed quite a stir by attending wearing Paris gowns of the most gorgeous cut-away styles.

Madames McKee, Mitchell, Bogusch, Savage, Nations and many others were in from Pumpkin Center. Liza Turner and son with her notable pup came all the way Farmerdale to mix with city folks. Madame Cochran, son Carl and bride, sisters Lea, Bodkin, Murrab, Grigsby and Smith astounded the guests by coming out in their latest Paris creations of dress and millinery.

And they do say farmers Howard and Charlton with their wives had quite a time getting suitable wardrobes to attend the social. The future men of our city Wade Harrell, Wallace Henshaw Jr., and Snooks Harrell were above reproach and seemed proud of their timid, tho stylish girls. Louise Williams just recently back from a renown college at Hopedale gave a reading on, "My Opinion of Boys."

This being the first social affair that all the country side might attend a committee provided delicious outs of cake, sandwiches, coffee and chocolate and candies that vanished as rapidly as they served them. Judge Henshaw one of the future statesmen from Choxtown honored us by being present, and immediately fell for the Paris dama. Madames Holland, Franklin, Sherrod, Harrell, and other high society lads from Dry Creek were eager to spend their money. The Wall Flowers did their bit toward the cause and enjoyed every moment.

After counting the votes cast for the most tackily dressed lady and gentleman, Mirandy Storms and Abe Mulkey were the lucky winners and were presented with lovely gifts.

All the little girls and lads from the nearby villages were present in all the glad toggerly and they do say many a lad and girl found their hearts going flutter-flutter, but so far have heard of no fatalities.

The P-T. A. assure all that helped their cause to another such affair in the near future.

Soldiers Wanted at Marfa Caught Here

Two soldiers giving their names as Frederick L. Lincoln and Geo. S. Graham were taken off of an east-bound freight train here Monday night by local officers following a receipt of advice from officers at Marfa.

The men stated that they were privates in the army stationed at Marfa and that they stole an Essex touring car, Sunday, that was standing in front of a church at that city. They also stated they drove off with the car and got as far as Alpine where they ran out of gasoline, abandoning the car in front of a filling station they caught a freight. They said they were going to Boston to get a job and be married.

CITY SNOW

"Don't pay any attention to them," said Madame Snow. She was a beautiful lady wearing the loveliest of snow. Over her snow gown was a long white coat of the snow material and her hat matched. She wore white boots and long white gloves and everywhere as the sun shone down upon her you could see the jewels she wore and with which she decorated her clothes.

The Snow children were coming down to the earth as fast as they could.

They were having a beautiful time. But it seemed the city people did not all want them.

"They are grumbling," said the Snow children. "They were talking about how hard it is to get about in a snowstorm in the city."

"They are saying that we will tie up traffic and that maybe trolleys will stop and that it will be hard to get about."

"They are saying that it makes it hard and awkward for them."

"Don't pay any attention to them," Madame Snow said again.

"I don't notice them. They don't treat me any too polite nor do they treat my family politely and so I am not here to consider or think of them."

"They throw soot about and cool dust and all sorts of things like that and they don't care if they ruin my lovely white frock."

"They don't care in the least! And if lots of them have to get out and shovel snow and exercise it will not harm them. It will give plenty of them good work."

"That is not Madame Snow's worry. At no, I think of the children--the city children. And so I come to the city every once in awhile and bring you too."

"For even though there are grumbles in some spots there is more than enough joy to make up for the grumbles."

"The children come out with their sleds and they are happy as happy can be."

"They build snow men and snow forts and snow houses. They play games in the snow. They play 'house' and 'store' and all kinds of games."

"But above all they coast. On all the hills a little off the main lines they are to be found now. And in the parks and squares they are playing. In the parks particularly they are having such a good time."

"And just because of a few grumbles do you think Madame Snow is going to keep the children from having all this fun? Not for a moment. Not a bit of it!"

"And, of course, you all must help her."

"We will, Madame Snow," the Snow children shouted, and their voices were clear and high and lovely.

"Then, too," said Madame Snow, "we bring beauty to the city people. We decorate ugly old roofs and dingy houses, we are very willing to go anywhere to improve it. Nothing is so ugly that we won't try to do something."

"We go to fire escapes and decorate them, and we go to leafless, bare trees and work wonders with them."

"We do lovely things to benches--we make them pretty and you know that jewel makers get ideas from the way we and members of the Leicle family decorate. Oh yes, many a jewel in the way it is set is a copy from the way we do."

"And that pleases us. We like to help in the making of beautiful things."

"Many lace designs, too, are made from crystal and snow patterns we have made!"

"The city to night will be a lovely sight. It may be gloriously inconvenient to some--but even the ugly old light posts will be made to look so pretty. The dullest thing we'll help, too, to look like a bit of Fairyland."

"And that is what we do. We give everything a Fairyland feeling once in a while. We put the whole city into a fancy dress costume of glistening snow."

"But we must not pay any attention to complaint. For above everything else we must think of what we mean to children--and the city children will have their snow. Madame Snow will see to that."

Cause for Surprise
"Why, Charles," said a fond mother, "I'm surprised that you don't want to go to school."
"Huh!" exclaimed Charles. "I guess you'd be a whole lot more surprised if I did want to go."

"What kind of a proposition did that man Hofmeister make you?" he inquired. "He asked me about you, and I told him you're a crackerjack."

"I'm much obliged," replied Jim. "No use in back-cappin' a fellow that's tryin' to make somethin' of himself," said Bonner. "That ain't good politics, nor good sense. Anything to him?"

"He offered me a salary of seventy-five dollars a month to take charge of his school," said Jim.

"Well," said Con, "we'll be sorry to lose yeh, but you can't turn down anything like that."

"I don't know," said Jim. "I haven't decided."

Bonner scrutinized his face sharply, as if to find out what sort of game he was playing.

"Well," said he, at last, "I hope you can stay with us, of course. I've liked, and I never squeal. If the rest of the district can stand your kind of tricks, I can. And say, Jim—if here he grow still more mysterious—if you do stay, some of us would like to have you be enough of a Democrat to go into the next convention for county superintendent."

"Why," replied Jim, "I never thought of such a thing."

"Well, think of it," said Con. "The county's close, and with a popular young educator—an' a farmer, too, it might be done. Think of it."

Jim was almost dazed at the number of "propositions" to which he was now required to "think"—and Bonner's did not at first impress him as having anything back of it but blarney. He was to find out later, however, that the wily Con had made up his mind that the ambition of Jim to serve the rural schools in a larger sphere might be used for the purpose of bringing to earth what he regarded as the soaring political ambitions of the Woodruff family. To split the forces which had defeated Mr. Bonner in his own school district, with the very instrument used by the colonel at the last school election—that, to Mr. Bonner, would be a fine thing.

Jim had scarcely taken his seat in the car, facing Jennie Woodruff and Bettina Hansen in the Pullman, when Columbus Brown, pathmaster of the road district and only across the way from residence in the school district, came down the aisle and called Jim to the smoking-room.

"Did an old fellow named Hofnung from Pottawatomie county ask you to leave us and take his school?" he asked.

"Mr. Hofnung," said Jim, "—yes, he did."

"Well," said Columbus, "I don't want to ask you to stand in your own light, but I hope you won't let him tell you off there among strangers. We're proud of you, —an, and we don't want to lose you."

"Proud of him! Sweet music to the underling's ears! Jim blushed and stammered.

"The fact is," said Columbus, "I know that Woodruff district job ain't big enough for you any more, but we can make it bigger. If you'll stay, I believe we can pull off a deal to consolidate some of them districts, and make you boss of the whole shooting match."

"I appreciate this, Clumb," said Jim, "but I don't believe you can do it."

"Well, think of it," said Columbus. "And don't do anything till you talk with me and a few of the other boys."

"Think of it" again!

A fine home-coming it was for Jim, with the colonel waiting at the station with a double sleigh, and the chance to ride into the snowy country in the same seat with Jennie—a chance which was blighted by the colonel's placing Bettina and Nils Hansen in the broad rear seat, and Jim in front with himself. The colonel would not allow him to get out and walk when he could really have reached home more quickly by doing so; no, he set the Hansens down at their door, took Jennie home, and then drove the lightened sleigh merrily to the huddle cabin of the rather excited young schoolmaster.

"Did you make any deal with those people down in the western part of the state?" asked the colonel. "Jennie wrote me that you've got an offer."

"No," said Jim, and he told the colonel about the proposal of Mr. Hofnung.

"Well," said the colonel, "in my capacity of wild-eyed reformer, I've made up my mind that the first four miles in the hip is to make the rural teacher's job a bigger job. It's got to be a man's size, woman's size job, or we can't get real men and real women to stay in the work."

"I think that's a statesmanlike formulation of it," said Jim.

"Well," said the colonel, "don't turn down the Pottawatomie county job until we have a chance to see what we can do. I'll get some kind of a meeting together, and what I want you to do is to use this offer as a club over this hopeless school district. What we need is to be held up. Do the Jesse James act, Jim!"

"I can't, Colonel."

"Yes, you can, too. Will you try it?"

"I want to treat everybody fairly," said Jim, "including Mr. Hofnung. I don't know what to do, hardly."

"Well, I'll get the meeting together," said the colonel, "and in the mean time, think of what I've said."

Another thing to think of! Jim rushed into the house and surprised his mother, who had expected him to arrive after a slow walk from town through the snow. Jim caught her in his arms from which she was released a moment later, quite flustered and blushing.

"Why, James," said she, "you seem excited. What's happened?"

"Nothing, mother," he replied, "except that I believe there's just a possibility of my being a success in the world."

"My boy, my boy," said she, laying her hand on his arm. "If you were to die tonight, you'd die the greatest success any boy ever was—if your mother is any judge."

Jim kissed her, and went up to his attic to change his clothes. Inside the waistcoat was a worn envelope, which he carefully opened, and took from it a letter much creased from many foldings. It was the old letter from Jennie, written when the colossal mistake had been made of making him the teacher of the Woodruff school. He read only the sentence in which Jennie had told of her father's interest in Jim's success, ending with the underscored words, "I'm for you, too."

"I wonder," said Jim, as he went out to do the evening's tasks, "I wonder if she is for me?"

CHAPTER XVIII

Old Man Simms Speaks.

Young McGeehee Simms was loitering along the snowy way to the school house bearing a brightly scoured tin pail two-thirds full of water. He had been allowed to act as water superintendent of the Woodruff school as a reward of merit—said merit being an essay on which he received credit in both language and geography on "Harvesting Wheat in the Tennessee Mountains." This had been of vast interest to the school who had ever seen in use that supposedly-obsolete harvest implement, the cradle. Buddy's essay had been passed over to the class in United States history as the best any one done, but byah, he was low-down people. They hated the people that had no learnin', no land, no money, an' no friends than what we had. My little gubbs wasn't respectable in their clothes. My children was ignorant, an' triflin', but I was the most triffin' of all. Ah'll leave it to Colonel Woodruff if I was good for a ping of teacker, or a bakin' of flour at any sto' in the county. Was I, Colonel? Wasn't I perfectly wuthless an' triflin'?"

There was a ripple of laughter, in the midst of which the colonel's voice was heard saying, "I guess you were, Mr. Simms. I guess you were, but—"

"Thankee," said Old Man Simms, as if the colonel had given a really valuable testimonial to his character. "I sho' was! Thankee kindly! An' what am I good fer? Can't I get anything I want at the stores? Can't I get a little money at the bank, if I got to have it?"

"You're just as good as any man in the district," said the colonel. "You don't ask for more than you can pay, and you can get all you ask."

"Thankee," said Mr. Simms, gravely. "What Ah tell you'll be right, ladies and gentlemen. An' what has made the change in we-us, ladies and gentlemen? It's the work of Mr. Jim Irwin with my boy Raymond, the best boy any man evah had, and my gubbs, Calista, an' Buddy, an' Jennie, an' with me an' my little woman."

"He showed us how to get a toe-holt into this new kentry," he taught the children what orto be did by a rentin' farmer in loway. He done lifted us up, an' made people of us. He done showed us that you-all is good people, an' not what we thought you was. Outen what he learned in school, my boy Raymond an' me made as good crops as we could last summer, an' done right much wuk outside. We got the name of bein' good farmers an' good wukkers, an' when Mr. Blanchard moved to town, he said he was glad to give us his fine farm for five years."

"Now, see what Mr. Jim Irwin has done for a pack o' outlaws and outcasts. Insid' o' hidin' out from the Holidays that was layin' us in the mountains, we'll be livin' in a house with two chimneys an' a swimmin' tub made outen crock-ware. We'll be in debt a whole lot—an' we owe it to Mr. Jim Irwin that we got the credit to get in debt with, an' the courage to go on and get out agin'!" (Applause.)

"Ah could afford to pay Mr. Jim Irwin's salary myself, if Ah could. An' there's enough men byah tonight that say they've been money-helped by his teachin' the school to make up mo' than his wages. Let's not let Mr. Jim Irwin go, neighbors! Let's not let him go!"

Jim's heart warmed. "There isn't a man in that meeting," said he to himself, as he walked to the schoolhouse door, "possessed of the greatness of spirit of Old Man Simms. If he's a fair sample of the people of the mountains, they are of the stuff of which great nations are made—if they only are given a chance."

Modern Destruction.

"If there should be another war," remarked the military expert. "It won't last long."

"No," rejoined Senator Sorghum. "Neither will anything nor anybody else."—Washington Star.

Can You Do It?

Fame is fleeting, just how fleeting is shown by the fact that for the life of us we can't remember what half the men did to get cigars named after them.

schoolyard, he heard a burst of applause, from which he judged that some speaker had just finished his remarks. There was silence when he came alongside the window at the right of the chairman's desk, a silence broken by the voice of Old Man Simms, saying "Most chairman."

"The chair," said the voice of Ezra Bronson, "recognizes Mr. Simms."

Jim halted in indecision. He was not expected while the debate was in progress. There is no rule of manners or morals, however, forbidding eavesdropping during the proceedings of a public meeting. Therefore he listened to the first and last public speech of Old Man Simms.

"Ah ain't no speaker," said Old Man Simms, "but Ah can't set here and be quiet an' go home an' face my ole woman an' my boys an' gubbs without sayin' a word for the best friend any family evah had, Mr. Jim Irwin." (Applause.) Maybe Ah'll be thought forward to speak byah, bein' as Ah ain't no learnin' an' some may think Ah don't pay no taxes; but seein' as how we've took the Blanchard farm, a hundred an' sixty acres, for five years, an' move in a week from Saturday, we pay taxes in our rent. Ah reckon, an' howsoever that may be, Ah've come to feel that you-all won't think hard of me if Ah speak what we-us feel so strong about Mr. Jim Irwin?"

Old Man Simms finished this exordium with the rising inflection, which denoted a direct question as to his status in the meeting. "Go on!" "You've got as good a right as any one!" "You're all right, old man!" Such exclamations as these came to Jim's ears with scarcely less gratefulness than to those of Old Man Simms—who stammered and went on.

"Ah thank you-all kindly, Gentlemen an' ladies, when Mr. Jim Irwin found us, we was scandalous pore, an' we was wukkin pore—we was low-down." (Cries of "No—No!")

"Yes, we was, becuz when a man gets in a new place, he's got to lift himself up to what folks does where he's come to, or he'll make a place fer himself lower'n anybody else. In the mountains we was good people, becuz we done the best we could an' the best any one done, but byah, he was low-down people. They hated the people that had no learnin', no land, no money, an' no friends than what we had. My little gubbs wasn't respectable in their clothes. My children was ignorant, an' triflin', but I was the most triffin' of all. Ah'll leave it to Colonel Woodruff if I was good for a ping of teacker, or a bakin' of flour at any sto' in the county. Was I, Colonel? Wasn't I perfectly wuthless an' triflin'?"

There was a ripple of laughter, in the midst of which the colonel's voice was heard saying, "I guess you were, Mr. Simms. I guess you were, but—"

"Thankee," said Old Man Simms, as if the colonel had given a really valuable testimonial to his character. "I sho' was! Thankee kindly! An' what am I good fer? Can't I get anything I want at the stores? Can't I get a little money at the bank, if I got to have it?"

"You're just as good as any man in the district," said the colonel. "You don't ask for more than you can pay, and you can get all you ask."

"Thankee," said Mr. Simms, gravely. "What Ah tell you'll be right, ladies and gentlemen. An' what has made the change in we-us, ladies and gentlemen? It's the work of Mr. Jim Irwin with my boy Raymond, the best boy any man evah had, and my gubbs, Calista, an' Buddy, an' Jennie, an' with me an' my little woman."

"He showed us how to get a toe-holt into this new kentry," he taught the children what orto be did by a rentin' farmer in loway. He done lifted us up, an' made people of us. He done showed us that you-all is good people, an' not what we thought you was. Outen what he learned in school, my boy Raymond an' me made as good crops as we could last summer, an' done right much wuk outside. We got the name of bein' good farmers an' good wukkers, an' when Mr. Blanchard moved to town, he said he was glad to give us his fine farm for five years."

"Now, see what Mr. Jim Irwin has done for a pack o' outlaws and outcasts. Insid' o' hidin' out from the Holidays that was layin' us in the mountains, we'll be livin' in a house with two chimneys an' a swimmin' tub made outen crock-ware. We'll be in debt a whole lot—an' we owe it to Mr. Jim Irwin that we got the credit to get in debt with, an' the courage to go on and get out agin'!" (Applause.)

"Ah could afford to pay Mr. Jim Irwin's salary myself, if Ah could. An' there's enough men byah tonight that say they've been money-helped by his teachin' the school to make up mo' than his wages. Let's not let Mr. Jim Irwin go, neighbors! Let's not let him go!"

Jim's heart warmed. "There isn't a man in that meeting," said he to himself, as he walked to the schoolhouse door, "possessed of the greatness of spirit of Old Man Simms. If he's a fair sample of the people of the mountains, they are of the stuff of which great nations are made—if they only are given a chance."

Business Service
Aid for Farmers

To Meet Changed Conditions
New Forms Have Been Devised.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To assist American farmers in organizing their business to meet the changed economic conditions of present-day agriculture, new forms of agricultural information have been developed, and fundamental studies in farm organization, marketing and crop estimates have been expanded by the bureau of agricultural economics during the past year, according to the annual report of the bureau.

"In the period of agricultural readjustment experienced during the past year, it was important for farmers to secure the facts bearing upon current problems that would give them the greatest aid in making accurate decisions in planning farm operations and in marketing their products," says the report. "The first attention of the bureau staff has been directed constantly toward these problems in response to the greatly increased demands upon the bureau for information on the general conditions of supply and demand, price trends, the effect of various domestic and foreign factors upon the farmer's returns, and for information bearing upon problems of crop readjustment."

Live Stock Surveys Help.

Special effort was made to strengthen present crop and live stock reporting methods, and to supplement these methods by surveys designed to give a more accurate knowledge of future supplies. The semi-annual pig surveys which give an indication of intentions of farmers regarding the production of hogs, and the reports of farmers' intentions to plant various crops are outlined as indicating the bureau's activities along this line. Numerous mechanical and other methods have also been developed to obtain maximum accuracy in acreage and production estimates.

A world-wide crop and market reporting service was developed by the bureau, to obtain the essential facts concerning probable foreign competition and demand for American farm products. Agricultural commissioners in England and Europe, and the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome keep the bureau constantly informed regarding the current foreign agricultural situation. This news is broadcast by the bureau to farmers by radio and the press.

A study of the factors that influence the market demand in domestic markets, as expressed in the prices and movement of crops and in consumers' requirements was made. Results of several years of farm management surveys were reviewed to secure facts of value in the present agricultural readjustment, the objective being shifting somewhat from studies with the historical point of view to the current readjustment point of view.

A steady growth in the bureau's work in warehousing, improved farm finance and in the study of agricultural co-operation is required. The correlation of various research projects conducted by state and federal institutions such as in the establishment of the New England research council on marketing and food supply is also regarded as a forward step. A similar council has been planned for the Middle West.

Market News Service.

The market activities of the bureau have been extended along the lines of research, standardization, market news, and food products inspection at shipping points and terminal markets. Grades were prepared for hay, wool, tobacco, rice, rye, peanuts, dressed meats, and a number of fruits and vegetables.

Farm management studies were expanded during the year to include studies of farm income on various types of farms, farm production in localities, and the organization of the various lines of work formerly handled in the three bureaus. This has been preserved in the associated divisions under the three groups of production, marketing, and problems dealing with the economic phases of both production and marketing.

Rotted Manure Excellent
Fertilizer for Cucumber

Rotted manure is an excellent fertilizer for cucumber plants. The mixing of acid phosphate with manure is to be advised. If added before the nitrogen has a chance to escape it will hold the nitrogen in the manure. Acid phosphate contains gypsum and gypsum has this same power to hold the nitrogen, but acid phosphate is more effective than is gypsum alone and, of course, contributes valuable phosphorus. Acid phosphate retards the fermentation of the manure.

Acid phosphate may be added either before or after composting, and in either case is a valuable addition.

Dairymen Are in Favor
of Calves During Fall

Dairymen have practically settled the question of having calves come spring or fall, in favor of the fall season, because cows that freshen in the fall always produce more milk and butterfat than those that freshen in the spring, and because there is more time to attend the cows during the winter. Hence from January 1 to March 1 is the most favorable season to breed.

Dairy Cows Must Be Fed Liberal Ration

Hay, Silage and Grain Mixture Needed in Winter.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If dairy cows are to be fed for profitable production they must receive a liberal ration at all seasons. In summer, pasture generally is depended upon, but often it must be supplemented by silage or hay, and sometimes by concentrates as well. For winter feeding, the ration usually is composed of hay, silage, and a mixture of grains. In properly balancing the ration the grain mixture is compounded to fit the roughage with due consideration for cost, bulk, palatability, and physiological effect upon the cow. For best results, cows must be fed individually, scaled regularly, and furnished with all the clean water they will drink.

A few simple guides for feeding have been summarized by the dairymen of the United States Department of Agriculture as follows: (1) Under most circumstances the cow should be fed all the roughage that she will eat up clean, and the grain ration should be adjusted to the milk production. (2) A grain mixture should be fed in the proportion of one pound to each three pounds of milk produced daily by the cow, except in the case of a cow producing a flow of forty pounds or more, when the ration may be one pound to each three and a half or four pounds of milk. An even better rule is one pound of grain each day for a pound of butterfat that the cow produces during the week. (3) Feed all the cow will respond to in milk production. When she begins to put on flesh, cut down the grain.

Clutch-Holding Device
Very Handy on Tractor

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a clutch holder, the invention of F. F. Wunder, Valley Falls, Kan., says:

The invention relates to devices which are adapted for attachment to a tractor to engage a clutch control lever of the tractor to releasably hold the latter in position to occasion the releasing of the driving connection between the engine of the tractor and the transmission thereof, without disengaging the gears of the transmission. A further object is to provide a clutch holder which comprises but a single piece of resilient material.

Start Egg-Plant Early in Spring Under Glass

The eggplant is a warm-weather plant as yet not acclimated in the North. It should be started early, under glass. Plants should be "pricked off" when the second leaves appear, four inches apart, in boxes. "Pricking off" means removing the plants from their crowded position in the hotbed and placing at some distance apart in boxes or in flower pots. The boxes should be kept in a coldframe and plenty of light and air should be admitted on warm, sunny days in order to harden the plants. After frost danger is past and the soil is well warmed the plants may be transplanted. Care must be taken to avoid the use of extremely rich soil or the plants are likely to keep up their growth until too late in the season to escape the early fall frosts. The seed should be sown about April 10. A temperature of 65 to 70 degrees should be maintained in the hotbed.

Plants should be set about three feet apart each way. A dozen plants are sufficient for the needs of a family. One ounce of seed will furnish 750 plants.

Inefficient Production
No Cure for Low Prices

In discussing various aspects of farm product values, Professor I. Falconer, agricultural economist, Ohio State university says:

"Inefficiency in production is no cure for low prices. Experience and research have shown that farmers with high yields make greater profits than their neighbors with low yields. On high-priced land high yields are more economical to produce than low yields, if a reduction in output of a particular crop seems desirable, it would be better to reduce the acreage or, for individual farmers, to abandon the crop entirely than to reduce the yields."

Dairymen Are in Favor
of Calves During Fall

Dairymen have practically settled the question of having calves come spring or fall, in favor of the fall season, because cows that freshen in the fall always produce more milk and butterfat than those that freshen in the spring, and because there is more time to attend the cows during the winter. Hence from January 1 to March 1 is the most favorable season to breed.

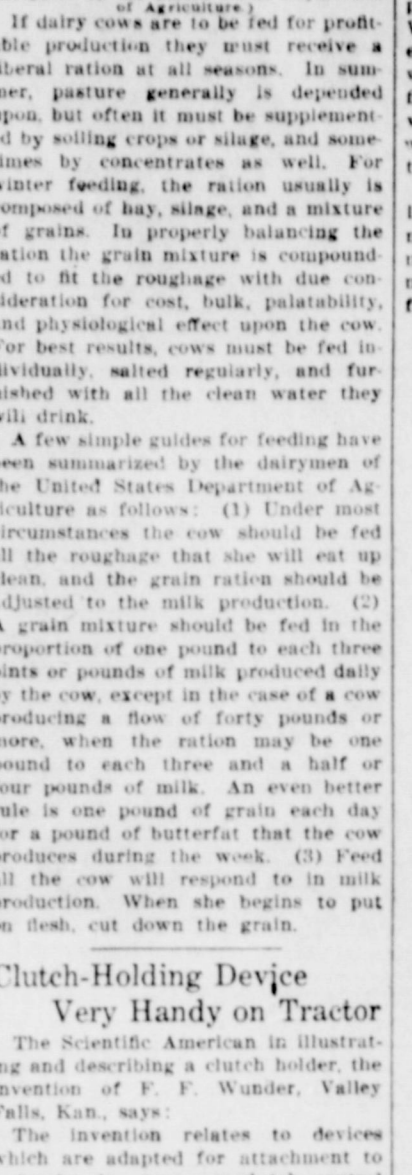

Brilliant Hats for Mid-Season;
Time to Do Children's Sewing

THOUGH snow may still be flying and little icicles fringe the window panes, creators of millinery appear to be quite unconscious of them. Winter is not in the minds of designers—their fancies have turned springward. The millinery merry-go-round finds for and just now it is luring us with brilliant headwear to bridge over the time between winter and spring.

Nearly all of these new hats are of lustrous fabrics—some of them familiar weaves in silk or satin—but many of them new and specially manufactured for hatmaking. These fabrics are draped over shapes that children's departments in the big retail stores and smaller exclusive shops are full of pretty new summertime clothes. Shelves are loaded with summery materials for making them and a leaf has been turned over in the book of styles. In the new page winter is forgotten.—It takes up the story of spring and summer things so that mothers may outfit all little ladies under their teens with tub frocks and other garments made of wash materials.

Among fabrics fine cotton voile appears to be highly considered for little girls' dresses. It is shown in white and colors, plain and figured, are more intricate and more dignified than the small, close-fitting cloche which has had such a long vogue. Nevertheless they pay tribute to it by continuing to fit the head closely and almost cover the brow. Crowns are growing higher and by spring we may be educated up to a new order of things in shapes.

HEADWEAR MADE OF SILK AND SATIN

The group of four models shown here is representative of demure-season hats. There is a trace of winter styles in the hat at the top made of satin and overlaid with a pattern wrought of fancy braid stitched on. An odd ostrich fancy, with long straggling flues, completes it. The two hats below are made of bright-surface millinery fabrics, the one at the left in black with a wide bow of moire ribbon slipped under a section of the frame that turns upward and ends at the top of the crown. In the other hat contrasting colors are used, the drapery in a lighter color than the hat and finished with rhinestone pins.

A very beautiful and original adornment distinguishes the little poke bonnet shown at the bottom of the group. Black moire silk in two sections, overlaid with flowers and fruits made of silk almost conceals the shape, but reverses turned back at the front allow a glimpse of it.

In times of snow prepare for summer so that when it comes there will be leisure to get about and live with it. This is the time of year when and dresses made of it are adorned with tucks, smocking and stitchery of colored threads and with frills of plain white net. The English smock frock appears to be the foundation of the styles for the smallest lassies, with narrow yokes or yoke effects introduced in different ways. An example appears in the dress pictured ample of light-blue voile with frills of white net at the neck and outlining the short split sleeves. Dimity suggests itself as a likely material for dresses of this kind.

No matter how airy and sheer the material used, dresses for little ones often have knickers to match, to be worn instead of petticoats and many

Austin, Tex.—When the commission appointed to partition the 59,782 acres of land that the state has recovered from the Capitol Land Syndicate has completed its task, the land will be placed on the market and sold to the highest bidder.

The land is an excess over the 3,000,000 acres donated by the state for the construction of the state capitol, and is situated in the northwest part of the Panhandle.

"The judgment of the court in this land case," said Commissioner Robison, "provides that the recovered acreage shall be selected from an area of about 500,000 acres. That the quantity shall be in a solid body and of equal average value of the whole tract.

"Sales will be made to those who will pay the most for it, provided the price offered shall not be less than the price fixed by this department," continued Commissioner Robison. "One-fourth of the price offered must be paid in cash and a note bearing 5 per cent interest must be given for the balance.

"In what county or counties the land will be situated can not be known until the courts shall have approved the commission's selection. Sales can be made only on the first of January, May and September of each year.

TO FREE COUNTIES OF HOG CHOLERA BAN

Quarantine in Eight Sections, 18 Months Old, to Be Lifted.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Release of a tier of eight counties in East Texas from the hog cholera quarantine which has been in effect there for the last 18 months is probable according to Dr. Leon G. Cloud, state veterinarian of the live stock sanitary commission of Texas, who has dispatched Dr. H. H. Harrison, assistant state veterinarian, to that section to make a survey of conditions.

The counties being visited by Dr. Harrison are as follows: Panola, Rusk, Sabine, San Augustine, Nacogdoches, Shelby and Angelina. These counties, together with others in the same section of East Texas, formed a block of 25 counties which were quarantined because of the prevalence of hog cholera there 18 months ago. Three counties of the group were released about nine months ago, Dr. Cloud said.

Should Dr. Harrison find conditions in the counties good he will recommend their release to the live stock sanitary commission for action. Subsequently it is anticipated by Dr. Cloud that Dr. Harrison will survey remaining counties of the quarantine area with a view of recommending their release.

Hog cholera has been scarce in Texas during the last year, according to Dr. Cloud. In fact, he said, it has resulted in less loss in the last year than ever before.

The entire 25 counties formerly quarantined practically are clean of cholera, according to records of Dr. Cloud and the bureau of animal industry, co-operating with the live stock sanitary commission in hog cholera eradication.

Device Will Help Aviators at Night

The business of night flying will be greatly facilitated by the invention of a device which enables the man in the airplane to keep constantly informed as to the height at which he is flying. This information is valuable at all times while in the air, particularly when landings are being made.

This is accomplished in a very ingenious manner. The device consists of two powerful lights through projecting fixed beams directed toward the earth, parallel to each other. Two images are cast upon the ground by these lights—one a straight bar and the other a pair of arrow heads, the bar being the forward one.

There is also a movable light, and when this is adjusted with reference to the other beams it throws upon the surface of the earth figures in light which indicate the distance above the surface which the machine is traveling.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

That Alcock's Plaster is by far the quickest, safest and most certain remedy for all local aches and pains.—Adv.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste. These poisons, absorbed by the blood, are carried throughout the body. Headaches follow. Bilioussness, sleepless nights, lack of energy, all result from constipation. Each of these takes away piecemeal something of your health and strength. In time, intestinal poisoning due to lack of internal cleanliness may cause the breakdown of some vital organ.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Physicians Favor Lubrication

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Forecasting A Tremendous Spring Demand

739,626

more Ford cars and trucks were produced last year than the previous year, an increase of over 50 per cent.

In spite of this tremendous increase in production, it was impossible to meet delivery requirements during the spring and summer months when orders for 350,000 Ford Cars and Trucks could not be filled.

This year winter buying for immediate delivery has been more active than ever before—and in addition 200,000 orders have already been booked through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan for spring delivery.

These facts clearly indicate that the demand during this spring and summer will be far greater than ever, and that orders should be placed immediately with Ford Dealers as a means of protection against delay in securing your Ford Car or Truck or Fordson Tractor.
