SOUL WINNING LAYMEN DIES

Christianity has lost a layman in Joseph Thompson Qualtrough who gave himself unceasingly to winning men and women to Christ says Rev. M. M. Wolf, his pastor. Funeral services were held Thursday from the home at 3114 Smith St., with Rev. Wolf and Rev. C. S. Rush officiating. Death occurred from pneumonia at the Southern Pacific hospital at 8:50 p. m. Tuesday, March 24.

Mr. Qualtrough was instrumental in establishing missions at Park Place, Alameda, Port Houston and Pasadena. Mission work had a great appeal for him and he devoted his spare time to it after "discharging in the highest acceptable manner the duties of his position," which for a number of years was head of the pass bureau of the Southern Pacific, according to Dr. Wolf. He spoke often at the Star of Hope Mission, and his services as speaker and personal worker were in constant demand. Though a member of South Main Baptist Church where he served as deacon and was otherwise active, he found time to teach the men's class of 80 members at Woodland Baptist Church.

"For a long period in his life Mr. Qualtrough had been a great sufferer, all of which he bore in the spirit of a true Christian," states his pastor.

He was a member of Temple Lodge No. 4, A. F. & A. M., and of the Macabees.

He is survived by his wife; father, W. Qualtrough; two sisters, Mrs. Thos. M. Flavin and Mrs. H. C. Nagel, all of Houston; three brothers, John of El Paso, Walter of Sanderson and James Qualtrough of Houston.—Texas Church News, (Houston.)

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Qualtrough returned the first of the week from Houston, Texas where they attended the funeral of Mr. Qualtrough's brother.

NOTICE.

I will be in Sanderson, Monday, April 6th, and anyone desiring dental work done please arrange to make your appointments early so that I may finish the work during my short time in Sanderson.

Mrs. Shaw will take final charge on or about April 15.

THE TIME OF HIS LIFE

A play will be given at the high school April 9 by some of the faculty and talent from the town. This play, "The Time of His Life," is a three act comedy full of fun from the first curtain until the last. Uncle Tom, an old negro servant, and Mr. Peter Wycombe, a chronic grumbler and a prince of pessimists, are sure to keep the audience in an uproar. Uncle Tom, with his hysterical cackling, and Ord Wycombe, with his apothecary's shop which he carries around in his pockets, are characters worth seeing. The action is centered around Thomas Carter, who has "The Time of His Life," but in doing so has many mishaps, and as a whole a different "time" than he expected.

The proceeds of this play will go to pay for the sweaters awarded to the basket ball team, and everyone is urged to come out and help by attending the play.

This play has been advertised for Friday, April 10, owing to the absence of some of the members of the cast on that date it will be given Thursday night, April 9.

Mrs. W. H. Savage, Lee Van Zandt and P. F. Robertson attended the meeting of the Woman's Presbyterian Auxiliary of the Western Presbytery held at Del Rio this week.

HELP FOR MOTHERS OF AILING DAUGHTERS

Mrs. Quigg and Mrs. Betton Tell in the Following Letters What Is Best To Do

DAUGHTER OF MRS. QUIGG
310 MAIN STREET, ROYERSFORD, PA.
Royersford, Pa. — "My daughter was sickly from the time she was 13 years old, and when she was 15 she was irregular and also had severe headaches and pains in her sides and back. She was this way about six months before I began giving her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly although she had tried it before. It helped her very much. She is not bothered by headaches, backaches, or cramps any more, and has not missed but one day's work. We recommend it to other mothers with girls who have these troubles." —Mrs. QUIGG, 210 Main Street, Royersford, Pa.

Mrs. Betton's Letter
Ridgely, Md. — "I want to tell you how much good your Vegetable Compound has done my daughter. Before she started taking your medicine she was in a nervous, run-down condition, so that she could hardly sleep at night. She always had a pain in her side and sometimes cramps so that she would have to go to bed. She is a schoolgirl and was going to school only half the time because she was so weak and run-down she could not stand it to walk there some days. She was this way for three or four years. She had been reading your advertisements in the different newspapers and she noticed that some of the girls and women had suffered just as she had. So she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and is a lot better. With the first bottle everybody could see a big change. She can go to school every day and can eat just as much as any one else, when before she did not have any appetite. We have told others about the medicine, and we are perfectly willing for you to use these facts as a testimonial. We are also willing to answer letters from other women concerning the help my daughter has received from the Vegetable Compound." —Mrs. JOSEPH BETTON, Ridgely, Maryland.

Reform in the Present Rules of the United States Senate Is Demanded

By VICE PRESIDENT DAWES, in Senate Address.

THE Constitution of the United States gives the senate and the house of representatives the right to adopt their own rules for the conduct of business, but this does not excuse customs and rules which, under certain conditions, might put the power of the senate itself in the hands of individuals to be used in legislative barter. Proper rules will protect the rights of minorities without surrendering the rights of a majority to legislate.

Under the inexorable laws of human nature and human reaction, this system of rules, if unchanged, cannot but lessen the effectiveness, prestige, and dignity of the United States senate. Were this the first session of the senate and its present system of rules, unchanged, should be presented seriously for adoption the impact of outraged public opinion, reflected in the attitude of the senators themselves, would crush the proposal like an egg shell. Reform in the present rules of the senate is demanded not only by American public opinion, but I venture to say in the individual consciences of a majority of the members of the senate itself.

As it is the duty on the part of the presiding officer of the senate to call attention to defective methods in the conduct of business by the body over which he presides, so, under their constitutional power, it is the duty of the members of this body to correct them. To evade or ignore an issue between right and wrong methods is in itself a wrong. To the performance of this duty, a duty which is nonpartisan, a duty which is nonsectional, a duty which is alone in the interest of the nation we have sworn to faithfully serve, I ask the consideration of the senate, appealing to the conscience and to the patriotism of the individual members.

Why Is the Word "Love" So Unfashionable Now in Discussing Marriage?

By WARD MUIR, in Washington Post.

Why is the word "love" so unfashionable nowadays? If you want to be laughed at as quaint, antiquated, namby-pamby, utter the word "love" during a discussion of the (alleged) failure of marriage. Yet every listener is secretly aware that though there may be ten thousand ingredients to make the happiness of a happy marriage, the one essential ingredient—the one lacking which all the rest are vain—is this same unmentioned mystery called love.

It is a mere matter of common experience that love can irradiate with beauty the most "unsuitable" match; and the absence of love or the petering out of a short-lived, shallow love may make a tragedy of the union of the most "suitable" pair imaginable.

Nevertheless, wisecracks persist in proclaiming smug prescriptions for the successful marriage. They say that the husband must give his wife lots of new hats, take her to dances, and remember to praise her house-keeping. Or that the wife must "feed the brute," exercise forbearance, and always take pains to be charming.

And so on—all the most pitiful trivialities in comparison with the condition that the married couple must be in love with each other.

Problem of Progressively Raising Standard of Medical Profession

By DR. K. W. NEY, N. Y. Polyclinic Medical School.

Undoubtedly one of the most important medical problems before the world today is that of progressively raising the standard of the medical profession and increasing the efficiency of the individual physician. This can be best accomplished through post-graduate training, which must be provided for by liberal contributions to graduate medical education.

As physicians, we give approximately 70 per cent of our time to charity. We carry out the teaching program entirely without remuneration, hoping thereby to increase the efficiency of our brothers. I am not aware that any other branch of human endeavor does so much to improve the lot of mankind, and while we give our time and energy to this work we have a perfect right to expect that the public will contribute adequate funds to provide our institutions with the equipment necessary to carry on this work.

We do not ask for funds from a standpoint of charity, but we ask that the public at least in some degree, attempt to discharge the debt they owe to medical achievements, and thus help us to make further contributions to the welfare of humanity.

Every Wife Deserves a Salary as Good as Her Husband Can Afford

By WILLIAM JOHNSON, in Good Housekeeping.

Husbands who like to go off for a few days fishing, husbands who occasionally like to stay out all night playing cards, husbands who neglect their homes for the golf links, if they see that their wives get their regular salary each week no matter what happens, are not nearly so apt to come in for criticism and fault-finding at home.

Careful observation of the amount and variety of work that any wife does in running a home has convinced me beyond any question that each and every wife deserves a good salary—as good as her husband can afford—regularly paid to her.

Any man who has a good wife and doesn't pay her a salary, in my opinion, isn't a good business man—in fact, I'd be inclined to consider him a fraud—that despicable sort of person who cheats his own partner. I'm one of the old-fashioned kind of folks who believes that every girl ought to get a husband. But I also believe she should make a pre-nuptial deal—that her husband is to pay her regular wages for the important work of being the right kind of wife.

"Is the Story Interesting, Is It True to Life, Is It Well Written?"

By PROF. F. B. SNYDER, Northwestern University.

It is the average man and woman in politics who elects our senators and Presidents. So in the world of literature it is these same average persons who in the long run determine standards of literary excellence. Consequently, instead of asking some one's opinion concerning a drama or novel, it would be more rational for the intelligent reader to make up his own mind.

The three simple tests of "Is the story interesting, is it true to life, and is it well written?" should be made and all novels should be judged from these viewpoints.

Filthy truth in novels such as one can find in the works of the garbage-can school of writers today is not the sort of truth I have in mind. There are certain phases of life which are not proper matter for fiction. The popular verdict that clean, wholesome novels are always more interesting than filthy ones is authoritative and we hold that only the clean novel can be called the good novel.

Sinners in Heaven

"I—killed him? I—killed Baboona—a man?"

Swiftly he closed her lips with his own, with quick perception of the effects which renewed civilization might have had upon the primitive instincts aroused on the island.

"I owe my very life to you, wife of my heart," he whispered.

But his reflections were misplaced. "Thank God!" she cried unexpectedly. "I would still kill anybody—any day—who attempted to hurt you."

"Nom de Dieu!" he echoed the Frenchman. "Our life will be a checked career."

Then Barbara fully recognized once more the old Alan of flesh and blood, deep moods and light banter, poetic idealism and prompt action—deliciously human, warm with love and life. She suddenly laughed, the bewilderment of shock falling from her—the first real spontaneous laugh of many weeks.

"Alan! Alan! Nothing matters but the fact that you are here—alive! But I can't understand it all. How was such a mistake made?"

"Very easily. Because De Boreau didn't, of course, know friend from foe! Things were going all right with us. But when one of the devils set fire to the hut and the friendly spear knocked me out, De Boreau naturally thought all was up. Some of Baboona's lot tried to reach you, but Boowa frustrated them. Then De Boreau was staunch to his oath. He fought anybody who came near you like a medical knight, and carried you off to safety. Poor Boowa thought he had stolen you from me, and nearly went mad!" He laughed reminiscently.

"But you? What happened to you? The expedition searched the island. And what became of the De Boreaus when they returned?"

He sank into the big armchair, still clasping her in his arms. "It's quite a fairy story. You remember the wood in the east—where, that first Christmas day?"

"Every leaf!" she breathed.

He smiled into her eyes.

"But not every moss-covered rock. In that wood was a very cleverly concealed entrance to a subterranean passage leading to a kind of vault. This narrowed down into another outlet—quite impassable—on the shore, which allowed a little fresh air and glimmers of light. This cave was tabu. In happier days, when the tribe was sufficiently self-supporting—to provide its own meat, the condemned dinner was—well, we need not go into details! But that cave was supposed to be haunted with the spirits of past feasts. Nobody liked to speak of it, or go near it. When I was considered dead, our friends, very naturally, carried off my bleeding corpse."

"Oh, don't!" cried the girl who had suffered so much from this well-meaning act. She buried her face on his shoulder.

After a lucid interval he resumed his narrative.

"When they realized you had been 'stolen' and I was still alive, the fear arose that the 'bird of ill omen' would return and make off with me, too! So, to insure my safety—that was the irony of it all—they raised the tabu and hid me in the cave. Only Boowa was courageous enough to enter with food. I was knocked out for some time. When I recovered—Barbara! Can you possibly imagine my feelings upon discovering that the rescue party had come and gone? I was raving mad! The poor beggars had done it for the best and were bewildered. Nothing would convince them that the white men were my friends. I spent what seemed years of agony, doubtful if any further help would come. My only hope lay in you."

"In me?"

"I thought you would persuade De Boreau or somebody to try again, not rest content."

"I wanted to come myself," she cried. "I implored and threatened—and—Oh! everybody was so pig-headed. But what happened to De Boreau?"

"As soon as the plane's arrival was known the whole tribe raced pell-mell to the shore and burned it to cinders. I found the brothers hiding for their life in the forest." He gave an irrepressible bubble of laughter. "They—literally—fell from the trees upon my neck! We have been kissing each other's hands or faces ever since. So again, nothing remained but to wait and hope. I thought at least a missionary party would turn up. That second expedition was infernally slow!"

He laid his cheek impulsively down upon hers. "But De Boreau could give me news of you. He told me everything—about Singapore—"

Her lips turned, trembling a little, to his.

"And," she whispered, "it!"

"And 'it,'" His arms tightened. "And—other things. I insisted. He acted loyally—for us both, Barbara. But—by heaven!—it made my gorge rise to know what you were facing—the inferences, the—And there I was, powerless as a stranded infant to help you."

"It was—h—!" she murmured briefly. "Have you heard?"

"Madge told me everything. She got the news of our rescue almost directly after you left London! I came home like the very devil—by sea, air, and land—to find you had disappeared—gone to break your little heart alone, where I couldn't find you—"

"I had to come away, Alan. I was in a turmoil—"

"My Barbara, don't I understand!" Suddenly his eyes blazed in their old way; and he dashed an arm upon the table, causing the flame of the lamp to jump.

"Those blighted Pharisees! Those d—d, gossiping—"

"Oh, my dear!" She laughed again at this familiar vehemence.

"I went to Darbury," he explained briefly.

Her laughter fled. "You went to Darbury, Alan?" She glanced apprehensively into his grim face. "What—what happened?"

He remained silent for a moment, then met her eyes with a smile.

"Well . . . No deaths occurred."

"Did—did mother—say?"

"There was a very free, candid interchange of opinion! I honestly tried to reconcile your mother, but—she gave one of his old careless shrugs—'she considers herself disgraced, and talks darkly of being obliged to leave Darbury. . . . I saw Rochdale, too—"

Barbara raised her head again. "Ah! Dear old Hugh! He has been—splendid, Alan. His friendship—his struggle to—believe—" Her voice quavered.

"I know. And he, of everybody concerned, might with justness have condemned—"

They fell silent awhile, each knowing, by their own joy, what it all meant to the friend who had lost. . . .

A realization of what this return would mean to Mrs. Field combined with her own overwhelming joy to draw from the very depths of her heart a voiceless prayer met thanksgiving. In the luminous, darkened eyes that met her own, she saw the same look of almost reverent awe. Never had he seemed so gloriously alive, so radiant in spirit. Again she raised her hands to feel the features she had never thought to see again; then drew the dear head, with passionate tenderness, down to her breast, and clasped it there.

To both of them, beneath the superficial lightness of talk, this hour equaled in sacredness that of their marriage morning in the dawn. But this held in it, also, the half-fearful joy of a resurrection. The past darkness, with the struggle toward the light, had left ineffaceable marks upon each soul.

"Can't we go back to the island?" she whispered at last.

"Some day." He raised his head and smiled. "We'll retire there, now and then, and live it all again! But our first jaunt is to Australia. I've been commissioned to rebuild the old bus. There's been an awful lot of interviewing and publicity since I got back ten days ago—"

"Only ten days! And you've been to Darbury—"

"That's not all."

He looked at her with eyes which held something of their old inscrutability.

"Your relations showed unfattering surprise at what they termed my 'constancy' now we are rescued. Oh, lord!"

"They would!" she cried, with indignation.

"The fear that we meant brazenly to defy the English law possessed them. They besought me to marry you 'properly, in a church.' Your aunt particularly insisted upon a Protestant church—not a registry office, or chapel."

"Just like Aunt Mary!" She laughed

"Oh, Don't!" Cried the Girl.

FARM STOCK

POISONOUS PLANTS KILL RANGE STOCK

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Among the many anxieties of the range stockman, not the least is the worry occasioned by the presence of a great variety of plants poisonous to cattle and sheep. The problem of reducing the losses from this cause has been of much concern to the states in that region, and scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture have devoted much attention to finding the various plants responsible for the losses, describing them, and suggesting practices that will protect the industry.

No exact figures are available as to the number of animals lost each year through this cause, but there is evidence that the drain is heavy, probably as much as 3 to 5 per cent. Estimates are that stockmen in Colorado alone lose a million dollars annually as a result of plant poisoning. Sheepmen in Wyoming believe their losses from the same cause are nearly 15 per cent, most of the animals being mature ones which represent a large expenditure in their raising.

Investigations show that although there are many poisonous plants, most of the losses are caused by a few species. Practically all the deaths of sheep and cattle from plant poisoning are caused by death camas, larkspurs, locos, water hemlock, laurels, milkweeds, western sneezeweed, Colorado rubber plant, woody aster, rayless goldenrod, fern, coyotillo, wild cherry, greenwood oak, lupines, coffee bean, and Indian turnip. Some of these plants cause very heavy losses under certain conditions and some of them are only occasionally eaten in dangerous quantities.

Stockmen may protect themselves from losses by studying these various plants so as to be able to recognize them. The department is making investigations and has issued descriptions of a great many of them.

Find Potatoes Good for Hogs in South Dakota

The possible use of cull potatoes as a feed for hogs was investigated in recent experiments at the South Dakota station. Potatoes were fed cooked and raw with corn and tankage. Raw potatoes were not palatable to the pigs and it was difficult to get them to eat many. When raw new potatoes were fed with corn and tankage, 515 pounds replaced 100 pounds of yellow corn. When old potatoes were fed in the same way, however, 962 pounds were required to take the place of 100 pounds of corn. The pigs fed raw potatoes made poor gains.

Cooked potatoes were a great deal more palatable than raw potatoes with corn and tankage made satisfactory gains, and took much less feed. In three trials an average of 330 pounds of cooked potatoes replaced 100 pounds of shelled corn.

Those in charge of the experiment suggest that if cooked potatoes are fed, the proportion of cooked potatoes to corn should not be greater than four to one. About thirty pounds of a cheap grade of soft coal were required to cook a barrel of potatoes.

The experiment suggests that the only time when the feeding of potatoes to hogs is justified is when a considerable quantity of unmarketable potatoes is on hand.

Substitute Barley for Corn in the Hog Ration

In sections where barley is available, farmers can get good results by substituting barley for corn in the hog ration. In a recent test at the Wisconsin experiment station 12 lots of pigs were fed, using ground barley in the ration. The return for each pig over the cost of feed was $14.38 for the barley-fed pigs and $12.38 for the corn-fed pigs.

Interesting facts were brought out in this experiment as to how barley might be used in various combinations, one being barley and whey, which netted a handsome return.

Live Stock Squibs

A flock of good sheep will do well on most farms.

Corn alone is not good feed for swine. Feed a protein ration with it.

Good quality of wool is not alone the product of breeding, but the result of both breeding and feeding.

Wheat is about equal to corn for feeding swine. Oats, if ground and hulls sifted out, is one of the best grain feeds for little pigs.

Wool is grown only by good feeding that properly nourishes the sheep's body.

Alfalfa hay with one pound per day of equal parts oats and corn by measure, make a ration hard to beat for sheep.

You can't make a No. 1 hog out of a No. 2 merely by selling it through co-operative marketing. Quality and all-round honesty will continue to be the most compelling virtue of all right-thinking men and women.

A skeleton and two pieces of ancient pottery were discovered in the grave shown above. The grave was found beneath the ruins of a house in a village believed to have existed ten thousand years ago. The ancient city, erected by an aboriginal American tribe, believed to have been the oldest in the United States, was recently partially dug out of the sandhills in southern Nevada.

How to build up your Weight

TO BE under weight often proves low fighting-power in the body. It often means you are minus nerve power, minus red-cells in your blood, minus health, minus vitality. It is serious to be minus, but the moment you increase the number of your red-blood-cells, you begin to become plus. That's why S. S. S. since 1826, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women, a plus in their strength. Your body fills to the point of power, your flesh becomes firmer, the age lines that come from thinness disappear. You look younger, firmer, happier, and you feel it, too, all over your body. More red-blood-cells! S. S. S. will build them.

GENERAL FARM NEWS

(By S. C. Hole, Editor of Extension Service Publications, A. and M. College of Texas.)

Profitable Farm Production.

Farming is a business and should be handled along business lines in order to secure the best economic results. The blind hog may frequently get an acorn, but he seldom finds a number of desired acorns. Likewise the farmer who blindly plants his crops, regardless of other considerations, may get by, but he seldom finds a profitable market for his products. In fact, the farmer who intelligently decides what to produce and how much to produce on the basis of prices that will probably prevail when the product is ready for market stands a much better chance of realizing profit at marketing time than the man who is guided entirely by the prices at planting or breeding time.

The situation on major lines of production should be intelligently studied with particular care. Realizing these facts, the staff of trained specialists of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., after making a careful study of the agricultural possibilities for 1925, have prepared the information concerning the major farm products which are proving exceedingly valuable to the farmer in determining his farm program for 1925. These specialists are in touch with statistics of the past and are in a position to form intelligent conclusions regarding the possibilities of the future and among their general conclusions the following are some of the most important:

They advise that as a whole radical changes from the general trend of the past year are not recommended. The future will be safeguarded principally by maintaining production on an even keel, avoiding so far as possible violent changes in any direction as the result of unusual prices now prevailing which are not assured for the next crop. In shaping their program for 1925 growers should, of course, consider carefully local conditions in connection with the more general situations and the prospects for a profitable employment of their land, labor and equipment in the production of other crops, particularly in the production of feed. The production of hogs seems well worthy of consideration at this time and is being reproduced herewith for the information of Texas farmers:

Hogs—Hog producers enter 1925 with 18 per cent fewer hogs than a year ago and every indication that prices during the next eighteen months will be higher than at any time since 1920. Six to eight million fewer pigs will be born next spring than last spring. Fewer sows will farrow next fall than farrowed last fall if producers respond to the unfavorable relation of corn and hog prices as they have done in the past. Nevertheless, conditions are favorable for expanding fall farrowing. Breeding plans should be based not on present price relations, but on the relations that are expected to prevail when the pigs are ready for market.

A further reduction in hog production is highly undesirable both from the point of view of requirements for domestic consumers and from that of long time policy of production. Compared to the trend in the slaughter of hogs, the pigs born during 1924, represented about a normal crop. The reduction to normal has already caused hog prices to rise to about the equivalent of the average price for the period 1909-1913, taking account of the change in the purchasing power of money. Farmers' reports of sows bred or to be bred for spring farrowing indicate that the spring crop of pigs in the Corn Belt will be about twenty-five to twenty-seven million, as compared to thirty-three million in 1924 and forty million in 1923. This will result in receipts in the fall and winter of 1925-26 much lighter than for several years.

The present business situation indicates that during 1925 American demand will be at least as active as during 1924. The foreign outlook is for steady demand, the improved purchasing power of Germany and the gradual improving economic conditions in other countries enabling them to continue as active buyers for pork and lard. However, still higher prices will undoubtedly result in decreases in the volume of our pork and lard exports.

If the recent high price of corn stimulates some increase in acreage, even with a yield per acre as low as that of 1924, the total production would be somewhat greater in 1925. The number of livestock has been so greatly decreased since a year ago that even an average yield of corn would prove more than enough for all ordinary feeding demands. Should there be a large yield of corn, with the reduced demand, considerably lower corn prices would result.

These facts indicate that the chances are in favor of fall pigs proving profitable enough to justify some expansion in sows bred for fall farrowing above the number of last year. Fall farrowing may be materially increased by breeding gilts for early fall farrowing that might otherwise be sent to market. It is probable that prices will be good for sows next winter. In fact, the full force of the shortage of hogs will probably not be felt in the markets until the early part of the run of 1925-26 or later, depending upon the size of the 1925 corn crop.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Donner

THE FARM'S SPRINGTIME

When everyone was fast asleep in the farm house and on the farm, Mistress Springtime waved her springtime greetings over them all so that when they got up the next morning they all felt that spring was in the air.

"Neigh, neigh!" said the good old horse. "Spring is in the air. I feel it. I must be ready to plow the fields now."

"There is lots that must be done now that the spring has come and I really do feel its gentle influence in the air."

"Somehow it feels like spring today," said the farmer. "I must start my planting."

"I've got lots of ideas for my garden this year," said the farmer's wife. "You know it does feel just like spring today."

The children gathered little blossoms on their way to school and as the soft spring air came in the school windows they found it hard to think of anything else but the woods and flowers that might be out, and birds that might have arrived for the summer, and walks that would be so lovely, and games to be played out-of-doors now that it seemed so pleasant.

"Spring has come, grunt, grunt," said Grandfather Porky Pig. "I have a good spring appetite."

"So have I, squeal, squeal," said Master Pink Pig.

"I'd enjoy a good meal now," said Porky Pig. "Really the spring is giving me an appetite."

"I'd like a bite myself," said Mrs. Pinky Pig.

"So would I," said Pinky Pig's mother.

"Spring certainly is in the air. I hadn't any appetite for quite a while and now I feel my old self again," said Miss Ham.

"Squeal, squeal, no one could have noticed your lack of appetite, Miss Ham, but they could have noticed mine, squeal, squeal," said Brother Bacon. "But I think I could eat again now."

"I have a springtime appetite," said Sammy Sausage. "Squeal, squeal, I must certainly have."

"So have I, grunt, grunt," said little Grunter.

"I could eat a morsel of food, too, squeal, squeal," said little Black Squealer.

"Ah, for a nice rest in the mud and a good banquet," said Sir Percival Pork.

"Not a bad idea, not a bad idea," said Sir Benjamin Bacon.

"Cock-a-doodle-do, a pleasant day," said Red Top the Hooster.

"Cackle, cackle," said Mrs. Hen, "a pleasant day indeed, Red Top."

"Quack, quack," said Mrs. Duck, "I feel just like a brook party. I do believe I'll give one."

All the ducks waddled after Mrs. Duck, who led the way down to the pond.

"Ha-na-na-a," said Sir William Gont, otherwise known as Billy Gont, "I must have a walk around the barnyard and see what there is to eat. A walk will help my appetite and make it something of which I may be justly proud."

"The ha, ha, ha," said the little lambs, "we love to play this lovely day."

"Me-ow-me-ow," said Jota, the cat, "I must have a nice sleep in the sunshine. It will do me good. Then a cupful of warm milk and all will be well."

"Gobble, gobble," said the turkeys, "the little turkeys are becoming stronger every one of these fine spring days."

"Gobble, gobble, they're a lovely little lot of turkeys."

So, everything and everyone on the farm felt that Springtime had visited them, for though they didn't actually know of her visit to them the night before, they all said that spring was certainly in the air.

So Big

By Edna Ferber

Author of "Cheerful By Request," "Gigolo," "The Girls," "Half Portions," Etc.

A romance of human nature; a diverting mine of human actions and people as they really are.

Why has it been the most talked-about novel of the year? Because:

Edna Ferber writes out of contemporary life, not from a literary window looking upon it.

We have secured the privilege of printing this charming story as a serial.
