SENIOR CLASS ORGANIZE

The Seniors were invited to meet at the home of Nelberta Lea Thursday at 7:30 to organize their Senior Club. They were called to order by Mrs. Len and election of officers was as follows:

Alfred Morgan, president.
Kendrick Harrell, vice-pres.
Mattie Banner, secretary.
Ray Newton, treasurer.
Hazel Winn, reporter.

The choosing of a name for the club caused quite a bit of merriment, there being 14 seniors, seven girls and seven boys. The name "Seven Pairs (Pears)" was suggested, but the boys objected to the girls not being penches, vetoed the suggestion. All decided on "Fifty-Fifty 1925," as a very good name. Meetings are to be held on Wednesdays.

After the business was closed guests arrived to join the club members in playing different games. Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Lea. Much excitement prevailed when it was discovered that Nelberta was having a birthday, and each took part in blowing out a candle. The following girls and boys bid the hostess and her mother goodnight regretting next day was school day as they could not stay out late: Seniors: Mattie Banner, Mable Harrell, Carrie Ivy, Hazel Winn, Margaret Haass, Nelberta Lea, Ray Newton, Alfred Morgan, Roy Bogusch, Walter Grigsby, Wade and Kendrick Harrell. Guests: Mr. and Mrs. Carrol Harper, Ivin and Gerald Grigsby and Lillian Mae Lea.

Mrs. Pollard Entertains.
One of the most delightful as well as entertaining forty-two parties given in some time was when Mrs. Pollard was hostess to several friends at her home last Friday afternoon. At the close of several interesting games Mrs. T. L. Williams held high score, an oak-wood bon-bon dish being the prize. A bulb bowl and bulbs was the second prize, that went to Mrs. H. R. Laurence. Mrs. J. C. Green was the winner of cut prize, a set of decorative table numbers being the prize.

Refreshments consisting of cake, fruit jello, topped with whipped cream, and nuts were served to the following guests: Mesdames F. B. Carter, John Stovell, Ed Downie, P. E. Burns, J. C. Green, E. F. Howard, L. H. Lemons, H. R. Laurence, T. L. Williams, J. A. White, J. W. McKee, W. H. Savage, A. Mitchell, W. J. Ferguson, T. E. Arrington, D. L. Duke, Joe Kerr, M. A. ### Gives Full Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for Remarkable Recovery

Wellston, O.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make me strong I was troubled with my back and sides hurting me till I could not do my work, and whenever I caught cold it made me irregular. Since I have taken the Vegetable Compound my side and back don't bother me and I can do my housework and care for my children now, where before I did not feel like doing anything or going around. After my first child was born about four years ago I saw an advertisement in the paper about the Vegetable Compound. I knew it would help me, but I was afraid to try it because people said it would help you to have children and I knew I was having children fast enough. But I thought if it would help me it would be better to have a whole house full of children and have good health. I became stronger from taking it and my husband says I look like a live woman instead of a dead one. When Spring comes I am going to take your Blood Medicine as I am very thin. I will answer letters from any woman who wishes to ask about your medicine."—Mrs. WILLIAM BUTTS, Wellston, Ohio.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Establishing a record for speedy solution of such a problem the American and Czechoslovakian debt commission on Friday agreed upon an arrangement for funding Czechoslovakia's debt to the United States. All differences were swept aside, the formula of settlement worked out, and an arrangement made for signing the formal documents within a week after the Czechoslovakian mission had arrived in this country. The American government accepted, subject to congressional approval, a lump sum of $115,000,000 as the basis of the settlement upon which the annual amortization payments will be made, conceding a reduction of $2,679,986 from the obligation as shown by treasury records.

The postmaster general Wednesday awarded the contract for the transportation of air mail from Chicago and Kansas City to Fort Worth, Texas, to the National Air Transport, Inc., of Chicago.

Hutchinson I. Cone, vice president and general manager of the fleet corporation, submitted his resignation to the shipping board Thursday in protest of its action in removing Leigh C. Palmer as president.

Advocating a policy of placing active fliers in control of America's air forces, naval aviators Wednesday laid before the president's air board a series of plans by which fliers would be promoted to the commanding posts in aviation.

Six naval air officers Monday opposed before the president's air board, Colonel William Mitchell's plan for reorganization of the national defense, while the colonel himself was called to the war department where disciplinary proceedings against him are under consideration as a result of his criticism of existing policies.

The supply of anthracite coal in the United States is 5,000,000 tons short of the amount available at this time last year, bureau of mines statistics at Washington disclosed this week. Larger exports were a greater factor than the coal strike in causing the shortage, it was said.

STATE AND DOMESTIC NEWS.

Legion business was concluded Friday at Omaha, Neb., with the election of John R. McQuigg of Cleveland, as national commander. McQuigg was chosen on the first ballot over Edward E. Stafford, of New York, and Howard P. Savage, of Chicago. He is 60 years old, a veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, and holds the rank of major general in the reserve corps.

An indicated total production this year of 14,749,000 equivalent 500-pound bales of cotton of high 7,191,719 running bales, counting round as half bales, had been planned prior to October 1, was announced Thursday in the consolidated report of the department of agriculture and the census bureau.

Seven conditional pardons and one full pardon, two furloughs and 19 restorations of citizenship were granted by Governor Ferguson of Texas, Thursday.

Building of a toll road from Corpus Christi, Texas, to Galveston is the purpose of the Gulf Coast Causeway Company, charter for which was granted Friday. Counties the road would touch are: Nueces, Aransas, Refugio, San Patricio, Kennedy, Kleberg, Wilbarger, Cameron, Calhoun, Victoria, Jackson, Matagorda, Brazoria, Galveston and Harris. The road would form a link between Brownsville, Corpus Christi, Galveston, Houston, Port Aransas and Rockport.

John Russell Pope, New York architect, has been awarded the $20,000 prize for the best design submitted to the Roosevelt Memorial Association for a national memorial in Washington to Theodore Roosevelt.

Christy Mathewson, "Big Six" of baseball and president and part owner of the Boston Braves, died Thursday at Saranac Lake, N. J. Death, according to his physician, Dr. Edward N. Packard, was due to tuberculosis pneumonia.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The population of Achill Island, off the coast of County Mayo in Western Ireland, is being ravaged by consumption and lunacy. It is established by an inquiry held by a free state inspector. Many natives are dying in Korea from an epidemic of smallpox.

The soviet government is fighting desperately to prevent spread of the bubonic plague which has broken out in the Kirghiz steppes east of the Astrakhan.

Abd-El-Krim's foreign minister, accused of being a traitor, has been blown to pieces by the Rifis at the cannon's mouth.

King Alfonso of Spain and General Primo De Rivera, president of the Spanish military directory, will visit America in 1927, the general announced this week.

"Red" Grange Seen in Illinois Line Again This Year

In his two years of competition, Nebraska is the only team that has stopped "Red" Grange of Illinois from scoring a touchdown. Yet the Illinois believe that if Grange had been given the ball when Illinois was within scoring distance at Lincoln last year, his record would have remained intact.

Twenty-five touchdowns in thirteen games is the remarkable record of Grange in his two seasons. "Red" went through the 1925 campaign with the distinction of scoring against every team he faced. Grange made his debut that season by scoring three touchdowns against Nebraska.

Although the 1924 Huskers kept Grange out of the scoring column, he played a big part in Illinois' 9 to 6 victory. In the inset Coach Zuppke is shown, while below "Red" Grange is seen tackling his brother, Garland, and also giving him some points on handling a football.

He Finished Second

Although Jockey Thurber finished second on Nomad in a recent race at Belmont the muddy riding made the ride far from pleasurable. He is shown spotted with mud from the hoofs of Siren, who came in first.

Many Rockne Pupils to Coach Grid Performers

Virtually every member of the undefeated Notre Dame football eleven of 1924, which played in practically every section of the country, is coaching college gridiron performers this season.

Harry Stuhldreher, last all-American quarterback chosen by the late Walter Camp, is in charge of Villa Nova, assisted by the right end, Eddie Huntjensen.

Jim Crowley, one of the greatest of the "four horsemen," is at the University of Georgia to handle the back field while the sensational full back, Elmer Layden, is coaching the Notre Dame freshmen, and Dan Miller, also of the famous quartet, is the backfield mentor at Georgia Tech.

Adam Walsh, captain and center, has been engaged as head coach at Santa Clara college in California; Joe Bach, tackle, has charge of the line at Syracuse; Chuck Collins, end, has become an assistant at the University of Chattanooga; Rip Miller, tackle, will direct the line in Indiana; Noble Kiser, guard, will handle the line at Purdue, and John Weibel, guard, will coach the line at Vanderbilt university.

Greb Belongs With Best of Middleweight Boxers

Harry Greb's sensational victory over the courageous Mickey Walker was due to qualities which only two world middleweight champions, Fitzsimmons and Ketchel, have excelled.

Greb as a boxer and fighter is in the same class with the famous Tommy Ryan, Jimmy Clabby, Frank Klaus and Bill Papke, although Papke carried a heavier wallop. Greb would have been outwaged by Fitzsimmons and Ketchel but he might have defeated Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil, who really was a welterweight.

Walker would have conquered an adversary of less mentality than Greb. The quick thinking of the middleweight champion and his thorough knowledge of ring tactics proved too much for the little Irishman.

High Batting Mark

Here is a batting record, Bobby Caruthers, of the St. Louis Browns, and one of the most famous of old-time hurlers, batted against Porter pitching for Brooklyn and this is what Pitcher Caruthers did to Porter. Four times at bat, one double, one triple; two home runs. This happened August 14, 1908.

MAY USE PRO PLAN IN AMATEUR EVENT

New Sectional Qualifying Scheme Expected to Be Adopted Next Year.

Before the time comes for the holding of another amateur championship it is something more than a mere probability that the U. S. G. A. will announce a new sectional qualifying plan similar to the one now used by the Professional Golfers' association for its championship.

One of the officials intimated that the association was now considering the adoption of such a plan. "Golf has reached a stage in this country," he said, "where it is essential to devise a plan that will admit to the championship only those who are capable of playing championship golf and yet to give golfers in every section a chance to demonstrate their fitness without clogging up the field."

The problem of reducing the championship field to a workable size without doing injustice to the youngsters on the way up is one that has baffled the eligibility committee for years.

Formerly there was a national eligibility list, and admission to the qualifying rounds was based on handicap. This did not work out satisfactorily, for in spite of every precaution the field continued to be so large as to be unwieldy. Last year, at Marion for example, there were 147 competitors out of the 196 who were eligible.

At the annual meeting this winter the association decided to abolish the list and to base admission solely upon performance for the last two years. It was the general belief that such a plan would eliminate some of the usual chaff, but it hasn't, judging by what has been shown at Oskmont.

What probably will be done next year is to divide the country into sections, play a preliminary qualifying round in each, and by so doing limit the championship field to 64 players.

Jeering Was Too Much

Big Jack Fournier, the hard batting first baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers, can't stand the jeering of the Brooklyn fans and has turned in his resignation. It is not believed that President Robinson will accept it.

Origin of Football

Among the many things that Japan borrowed from China was football, said to have been introduced as early as the middle of the Seventh century.

Emperor Toba II was an expert player and got up a club at his palace. The beginning of professionalism may be traced to an emperor and his court, of whom it is told that in the time of poverty they earned a little extra money by teaching the art of football.

LATE FARM NEWS

(By S. C. Hoyle, Editor of Extension Service Publications.)

With Texas County Home Demonstration Agents.

Jasper County.—September has raised the total number of containers in food preservation from 8000 tin cans to a total of 8200 cans. This month canning had decreased because of the drought. However, there were pears and a few late peaches that were used in canning and drying. The chickens that were culled were canned for salad, sandwich and fried. The club members were delighted to know that chickens were canned and ready for use any time. Last year we did no canning of chicken and this year I have given three demonstrations of this kind. Many culls are disposed of in this way. So many have stated that they like it better than fresh chicken. Several hundred cans of peas were canned and less butterbeans.

The total score of glass canning has been raised during this month from 5000 to 5214 jars. Mostly fruit and preserves with some jelly.

One beef canning demonstration was given in the Magnolia Springs community, where we canned a small beef. The beef was canned in the form of steak, roast, chili, hash, loaf and soup. The tripe was also canned. Sixteen were present at this time, all eager to learn. Four were arranging to can beef. This small beef canned sixty-five No. 2 cans.

Milam County.—This month has been largely devoted to poultry culling. Owing to the scarcity of feed this year in our county there has been more interest shown in culling. We have had thirteen demonstrations, with 118 people present.

There were 489 hens from which we took 300 culls, leaving a total of 189 good hens in the thirteen flocks. The best feature, to my mind, was the interest shown by those present to make themselves familiar with the method so they might cull their own flocks. Four have already reported culling their flocks. One man reported he had forty or fifty hens and after culling he had four or five left. Milam will certainly have some improved flocks this year.

Bell County.—Our clothing work for this month has been rather good. Many who have never seemed interested in Home Demonstration work at all have shown great interest in the work. The dry weather and no crops have made many realize what it means to save. They are trying to do so by renovating hats and other garments. We have done a great deal of this kind of work. We have made eight hats in the office, one rug and one sewed basket. All of the hats were made out of old material. Fourteen communities were reached in this way. I had one demonstration at a home, where we made two hats and several were started. Ten hats have been made under my supervision this month.

Clyde Barfoot has been purchased from the Vernon club of the Pacific Coast league by the Detroit Tigers.

Eddie Taylor, shortstop of the Alabama club in the Eastern league, has been sold to the Boston Nationals.

A Rankin Johnson, the former Red Sox pitcher, has signed a contract to lead Harrisburg again next season.

Russell Pence, star right-hand pitcher of the Dallas Texas league club, was purchased by the Chicago Cubs.

The Cincinnati Reds have signed Bill Brown, a twenty-two-year-old first baseman playing with the All-Ohioans.

"If I ever hole out in one," confessed the dug golfer in a moment of profound discouragement, "it will be at Kelly pool."

Pitcher Ray (Red) Colbert, former University of Alabama athlete, could not quite stay the season out with Bloomington. He drew his release.

Three years ago golf was almost exclusively a big city luxury in Texas while today almost every town in the state boasts of its country club and golf team.

Kansas City has purchased two pitchers, Don (Specs) Houck and Bill Hargrove, from the Springfield club of the Western association. Both are right-handers.

It pays to be the manager of a pennant winning team. Stanley (Bucky) Harris, pilot of the champion Senators, the records reveal, paid $2,778.57 federal tax on his 1924 income.

Floyd Scott, hard-hitting outfielder of the Kansas City American association, who acquired a batting average of .341 for 97 games has been purchased by the Chicago Cubs.

Terre Haute has obtained Outfielder Roy Burrus, who had a fine season with Dubuque of the Mississippi Valley league, turning in a batting mark of .312. He is a former Indiana State Normal athlete.

The Hagerstown club of the Blue Ridge league won the five-state pennant, given by Ban Johnson, by defeating Cambridge of the Eastern Shore league in the seventh and deciding game of their series.

Charley Schmidt, former major league ball player and now umpire in the Pacific Coast league, has had the fingers on his right hand broken 30 times during his 24 years spent behind the plate.

Mrs. W. G. Fraser, formerly Alex Stirling, signaled her return to golf tournament play after an absence of two years by turning in the best gross score card in the qualifying round of the Canadian woman's championship. She shot a 77.

Look younger! Be younger! Age has little to do with your looks or your feelings. It's the condition of your blood that counts!

And blood will tell! It tells in a hundred ways. If your system is building up for rich, red blood, you may look and feel old at thirty. But if you build up the red-blood-cells with S. S. S., you'll quickly see the wrinkles fade away—the sagging pouches give way to firm, solid flesh—and the fresh, glowing beauty of youth takes the place of a skin sallow and disfigured with blemishes.

Rich, red blood means youth, vim and energy! S. S. S. helps Nature build red-blood-cells by the millions. For generations S. S. S. has been keeping people looking and feeling young.

Fresh, cleansing, purifying, rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build, nourishes every muscle, organ and tissue of the body. Pimples, blotches and blackheads disappear. Bolls, eczema and rashes dry up. Your face—your body—your whole being takes on the look and power of youth.

AT LAST

SYNOPSIS—Lured by his four-year-old playmate, Jean Lane, Frank Hall, aged six, ventures on the forbidden wall of a dam, in a small Ontario town. He falls into the water and is saved from possible death by clinging to Jean's outstretched arms. Next day Jean informs him that because of their adventure of the day before he is in duty bound to marry her. He agrees when they are "grownups." With Jean's brother, John, also aged six, Frank begins school. Two years later they are joined by Jean and Frank's sister, Marjorie. A little later Jean confides to Frank, in verse, her hopes of some day becoming "Mrs. Hall." He accepts the proposal. Frank is fourteen when his mother dies. The boys are sixteen when John's father is killed in an accident. Two years later Frank's father and John's mother are married. Dissatisfied with conditions and ambitious, the two boys make plans to go to Manitoba and "homestead," the girls agreeing to go with them. They set out. At Regina they meet "Jake," who agrees to find them satisfactory homesteads. He does so, and the two friends file claims on Sections Fourteen and Twenty-two. Jake sagely advises the adventurers in the purchase of supplies, and in a wagon drawn by a yoke of oxen, and with a cow, the four arrive at their future homes. Construction of "shacks" and the making of a garden are their first occupations. A young Englishman of the name of "Spook" is a neighbor. They call on Spook, who is living in a tent. Spook, on his return visit, disposes himself as a man of varied social attainments. Frank's jealousy is aroused. Marjorie discovers that they have a new neighbor. "He," who tells them a Mrs. Alton, a widowed Englishwoman, who, with her three-year-old son Gerald, has taken up a claim. Frank and John leave the homesteads for a time to do harvest work for wages on a longer-established farm. They encounter Jake, who tells them of his adventure into matrimony. After two months' absence they return to their homes. The enthusiastic welcome encourages Frank. The land sections begin to fill up with settlers of all nationalities. Jake and his wife have located in the neighborhood. Mrs. Alton remains strangely aloof. Winter sets in.

CHAPTER X

Days were by, sometimes days of unbroken sunshine; sometimes days of gently sifted whiteness fluttering out of a gray sky. In a week all the prairie was blanketed deep with snow. Then came the great night. At this time of the year, in this latitude, it is dark by five in the afternoon, particularly if the sky happens to be overcast. On the day in question Jack and I had done up our few chores about the stable, carried in a supply of water and firewood, and returned to our shacks for supper. Marjorie, brisk, efficient housewife that she was, had the table set when I came in. Our meals were perforce simple, and when we had finished and the few dishes were cleared away I looked at my watch. It was barely six o'clock. "This is going to be another of our long, long evenings," Marjorie remarked, with what seemed like a suggestion of complaining. "Suppose you ask Jack and Jean to come over; I don't feel like going out in the snow." "Jean may not feel like going out, either," I retorted. "I guess she's as much like sugar as you are." I added, having in my mind some reference to an adage about sugar melting. "I fancy you think she's a good deal more like sugar than I am, brother o' mine," Marjorie returned. "Well, run along and find out." Later, when I recalled that remark, I was struck by its significance, but at the moment I had no suspicion that Jack and Marjorie were working a scheme on me. I have always held that Jean was innocent of any part in it. So urged, I pulled on my pen-jacket and overshoes and fur cap and started out on the hundred-yard jaunt from our shack to the one across the gully. I made the trip without difficulty and entered without knocking as was our custom in our numerous visits back and forth. Jean looked up from the table where she sat reading. "Alone, Frank?" she said, when I had closed the door behind me. "Yes, where's Jack? I came to see—" "Jack left for Fourteen some time ago. He was going to ask you and Marjorie to come over. You must have passed him." "That's rather funny. That's what I came for, if you reverse it. Strange I didn't see him on the way." "He may have looked in at the stable again, to make sure that the stock are all right," Jean suggested. "He said it looked like rough weather." I stood for a moment, undecided whether I should go back for Jack and Marjorie, or ask Jean to go with me. It was she who settled the question. "Take off your things, Frank," she invited. "Jack will be there by this time, and will keep Marjorie company. It is not a good night for a girl to go walking." So I stayed, although a little self-consciously. Jean and I had known each other's company since childhood, but, at least since coming to the West, we had hardly seen each other alone. Always Jack or Marjorie, or both, were somewhere about. There had been, of course, that sudden, impetuous, unspoken revelation when we returned from our harvest absence in the settlements, but there had been no talk of love between Jean and me. I had treasured that moment as a bit of wonderful memory, as a glimpse of wonderful promise, but I had not presumed upon it; I had concluded that two months' loneliness had been too much for Jean's reserve, and that she had done something it hardly would be fair to talk about. Doubtless Jack, when he found I had missed him, would be back shortly. I took my wraps off and sat down beside the stove. The warmth was very pleasant after the buffeting of the snow, and Jean looked very lovely and tempting in the soft glow of the lamp on the table. I felt a strange embarrassment growing upon me as the moments were ticked off by the little alarm clock on the shelf. The embarrassment grew until I felt that I must break it by speech of some kind. "What are you reading?" I ventured at last. "Nothing." "I know, but I'm not reading it." "Then what are you doing?" "Just waiting." "Waiting? For what?" Then she looked up at me, and there was a light in her eyes that was strange and good to see, but it sent my brain reeling. For a moment she looked at me thus, and started my heart thump-thumping like a steam pump. Then her eyes drooped. "Don't you know, Frank?" she murmured. Her face was ruddy in the glow of the lamp, and the pink skin shone a color that was not all reflected. Amazing as was her revelation I could no longer fail to understand it. I rose and walked to the table; I took her hands in mine and lifted her to her feet. "You are waiting for me to—kiss you, Jean," I whispered. She was trembling, but she spoke with outward composure. "There is something else, first." "Something else—first? I don't understand." "You should." "I could not follow her thought. "I kissed you once before," I ventured. "Many times before." "No, only once. The other times were when we were children. They don't count." "Do things that happened when we were children not count—with you?" "Do they—with you?" "Ask me, and see." It had come; the moment of which I had told myself in dreams and visions; the moment to which I had looked forward with a strange fear and a great hope. "Jean," I whispered. "I love you. Will you be my wife?" As I wrote the words they seem very bare and matter-of-fact. But they were all that Jean required. She made no spoken answer, but she turned her face to mine, and I drew her up in my strong arms and kissed her in the breathless passion of our young love. After a time, with one box serving us both, we talked of our future. I hinted that circumstances made our immediate marriage somewhat dependent upon the course that Jack and Marjorie might elect to follow. I took it for granted that Jack and Marjorie would marry, but I was very vague in my idea as to when this would happen. "I don't think we shall have to wait on Jack and Marjorie," Jean remarked, knowingly. "I rather think they have been waiting on us." "Then they need wait no longer," I said, boldly. "I am ready at once; now." "We might make it by Christmas," Jean remarked, more thoughtfully. "We can't afford any special wedding clothes but we can at least afford a few weeks' anticipation." "Then Christmas be it!" I exclaimed. "Oh, Merry Christmas!" I was so stirred with a strange new joy that all the future looked rosy and inviting. But suddenly I felt Jean's arm tighten on my neck and I looked up in her face just in time to catch the splash of a warm tear on my cheek. I was immediately filled with wonder and misgiving. What could make Jean cry in a moment of such happiness? I pressed the question. "I'm not sorry," she said at length, "but I'm a little—frightened. Not for you; for myself. Oh, my dear Frank, my dear boy—will you always—will we always—love each other as we do tonight?" Manlike, I assured her that of course we would. She rested her head against mine, and for awhile she seemed to nestle at peace in the soft luxury of our love. But presently a shiver ran through her frame, and drawing back a little, she looked me fairly in the eyes. "You know, Frank," she murmured, "it seems strange to say it, but I am so glad to get this settled." "Not gladder than I, little one," said I, shaping my lips to endearments with the awkwardness of my racial reticence. "You couldn't be gladder than I am." "I have waited so long," she continued, almost disregarding my interruption, "to get it settled—to be sure of myself—to know just what is going to happen."

"To be sure of yourself? How sure of yourself?" She dropped into a moment's silence, as though studying her words before attempting an answer. "You won't misunderstand, I think, Frank," she said at length, "if I tell you that I have been somewhat like a traveler on the prairie who comes upon two roads, and is not quite sure which he should take. Let us say a storm is sweeping down from the north, and his very life depends on the right decision. But the longer he stands there, looking at them, the harder it is to make the choice. It's a comfort to choose, and be on one's way." "But suppose he chooses the wrong way?" I blundered out, only half following her meaning. "Oh, Frank!" she cried, seizing my shoulders in her strong, supple hands. "It mustn't, mustn't, mustn't be the wrong way! I won't have it the wrong way—I won't think of that as possible! See, here we are. And we have known, always, since we were little children, that we were for each other, haven't we, Frank? It has always been settled, in heaven, don't you think, and we have just confirmed it? Oh, I know it has—I know it has!" "I have never doubted it," I said. And even as I uttered the words the first little poisoned arrow of doubt in some way dodged through my armor and stung me in the heart. Perhaps it was the reaction to Jean's vehemence; perhaps it was that I saw her striving over-hard to convince herself. And from being over-sure I now craved to be assured. "You are quite sure?" I ventured, after another silence in which I felt that subtle poison slowly chilling through my veins. "You are quite sure you should not have taken the road to section Two?" "Oh, Frank!" For a moment she buried her face in my shoulder, then she lifted her head proudly, like one who goes forth resolutely to try his spirit in some great issue. "Yes, I'm sure! Spook is to me only a neighbor, an acquaintance, always. I am quite sure."

"You're on Twenty-Two, All Right, but Why Did You Come Back?"

who goes forth resolutely to try his spirit in some great issue. "Yes, I'm sure! Spook is to me only a neighbor, an acquaintance, always. I am quite sure."

"And there was no third trail, no little-beaten third path, that might have been the one to be chosen? I persisted, anxious to stifle my demon of doubt at its birth.

"You are thinking of Brook," she caught me up instantly. "Let that give you no uneasiness. Brook was only an incident—a rather pleasant incident," she added, and for the first time I realized how exquisitely tantalizing Jean could be, "but an incident, after all. Let's not talk about it, or think about it, any more, at all. Everything is settled."

So, by force of will, we turned our minds into happy, unquestioning channels, and talked of the future, our future—and built fairy dream castles that were most wonderful things to dream about. From time to time Jean arose from my knee to throw fresh wood on the fire but she needed no cooing to return. Some strange phenomenon had already occurred between us, and Jean, with all her gentleness and beauty and delicacy, no longer walled herself about with quite the same barrier of shyness as had been her custom. But her soul, I knew, was as pure as the snow sifting across the white prairies outside.

At last we had to come back to earth. "It's growing colder," said Jean, as she again replenished the fire. Then, glancing at the little clock on the shelf, "Why, it's after midnight! Jack is late."

"Are you uneasy for him?" "No—why should I? Jack is all right. And I have you. But I thought he would have been back before this."

"Listen!"

We strained our ears, and presently became aware that what had seemed to be the silence of the night was really full of noises. The wind whined with a sibilant note about the eaves of the little shack, and the trémor of its pressure ran through the board walls and wrung mournful creakings from the slender framework of the building. Above all came a sound of rushing, as though the night itself swept by, drumming on the tin chimney-pipe as it went. The incessant lash of snow against the black panes of the windows gave further notice of the rising storm.

"Perhaps I had better go home," I said at length. "Jack is doubtless waiting there until I turn up."

"You have the same privilege to wait here until he turns up," Jean commented. "Still, I suppose it's the right thing to do."

So, reluctantly enough, I got into my pen-jacket, cap, and overshoes, and with Jean's goodnight kiss on my lips, and a promise to come again very soon, I opened the door. The moment I did so the suction of the storm put out the light, and the next instant a flail of icy snow particles lashed through the room. I pressed the door shut again while Jean found matches.

"Such a night!" she exclaimed. "Is it quite safe to try it?"

"Of course! It's not a hundred yards, and I could make it with my eyes shut."

So, with another farewell (for good measure) I started again, Jean shading the lamp while I rushed through the door and closed it behind me. My first sensation was of having been clutched by the neck; of being strangled in a grip which I could not throw off. In a few moments the worst of that sensation passed, and my lungs began pumping violently, working against the partial vacuum created by the storm. It was not very cold, but the snow stung the face where it struck; it clung in the eyebrows, melted, and ran into the eyes, blurring such poor vision as there was in the gaunt grayness that buffeted from every side.

I looked for the light of the shack on Fourteen, but it was nowhere to be seen; evidently its faint rays could not beat their way through the hundred yards of swirling tempest that intervened. So, taking careful note of my directions, I started out, my head bowed to save my face from the lashing of the storm; my legs wallowing uncertainly through the varying depths of drifts.

At length I knew I had come to the edge of the gully; although I could see nothing I was aware that I was going sharply down a steep slope. Here at points the snow was already piled in great drifts and I plunged through it waist deep, only to come suddenly upon a bare, icy spot where I lost my balance and fell. I was now at the bottom of the coulee, and the ascent proved even more difficult than coming down. I had to plow through deep drifts and scramble up icy ledges, and I could only suppose that I had reached the top by the greater violence of the storm. Nothing was to be seen but a gray mist; my eyes were almost completely closed with snow and ice. I was not cold; indeed, I was warm, but I began to realize that my exertions and the strangling sensation I felt in breathing were quickly exhausting me. However, there could not be much further to go, and I pressed on.

It is wonderful how little sense of distance the average man has when deprived of the service of his eyes. He may walk a road every day in the year and yet have but a faint idea of the number of paces it represents. He probably could not tell you how many steps there are in the stairs of his house. As to direction he is even more hopelessly at sea, and when, in addition to these difficulties, he is plunging waist deep through snow drifts and buffeted by a fifty-mile gale he is in imminent danger of becoming hopelessly lost. Just how near to that state I had come I began to realize, and it was with more relief than I would have cared to admit that I at length discerned a faint glow of yellow light battling against the storm and throwing fantastic specters into the night. I was soon at the shack, and, groping my way along the wall, I reached the door and burst in.

Jean was sitting by the stove, her wonderful hair down about her back and neck, her face resting in her hands, her feet on the rail of the stove and her dainty ankles peeping out from under her woolen skirt. But for the moment my appreciation of her charms was buried in amazement.

"Jean! what are you doing here?" "Frank! You've come back! What is the matter?" I threw off my mitts and rubbed the snow from my eyes while Jean took my cap and shook it and then stood by, eagerness and apprehension in her face. Then, when I was quite sure I was not in a dream or a mirage, "I guess I'm back on Twenty-two, am I?" I said, as one who, suddenly awakened from sleep, finds it impossible to recall his surroundings.

"You're on Twenty-two all right, but why did you come back? Not that I'm not glad to see you—you know I am. Frank, dear, always—but, why did you come back?" "I guess it's because my time hasn't come," I answered, soberly. "I've heard of getting turned around in a storm, but I didn't know it could happen so easily. I suppose it was when I fell at the bottom of the gully."

"Well, you're here, and we're not going to take any more chances," said Jean, slipping her arms about my neck when I had told her. "We're going to have a little supper, and if Jack doesn't come you will stay until he does."

Jean hustled about and my eyes followed every graceful movement as she prepared hot tea and made toast at the fire, and found a jar of preserves that she had cached away for some special occasion. And when we had finished our betrothal banquet she gave me a lump and sent me into Jack's room. And after a little her limpid voice called to me a last goodnight, and through the open doorway of my partition—we could not afford unnecessary doors in those days—I saw her slender hand tossing me a caw. And then her light went out, and I lay under Jack's warm blankets listening to the roar of the storm and hoping Jack was quite all right, and marveling at the amount of happiness one human heart can hold. My doubts were gone; my faith was again the faith of a little child. And my mind wandered back into the past and picked up again those tender days of childhood when Jean and I played together beside the dam, and the sober millwheel across the stream flung its myriads of diamonds in the air. And Jean had saved me in those days, and I was to be hers—and she mine, forever!

I awakened with a consciousness that the shack was very, very cold. Under the blankets I was warm enough, but the breath with which I filled my lungs was the breath of the Arctic. The cabin was in inky darkness. Outside, the whine of the gale had risen to a roar, and the frail timbers of the little shanty creaked and trembled under its fury. I thought of Jack, and wondered. The telephone—best of all God's gifts through the inventive mind of man to those who live in the isolation of vast distances—was as yet not in general use on the prairies. As I look tonight at the telephone on my desk by means of which I can any other instant to Jack's house or any other house in the neighborhood I am reminded that these miracles of today are accepted so much as a matter of course that we are in danger of forgetting what the world was before they came. But that night there was no telephone on my wall, or Jack's; no fire-shod messengers from house to house could bear through the storm the cheerful news that all was well.

So I thought of Jack and wondered. Jean had accepted his absence with composure; she afterwards said that Brook, the mounted policeman, had told her that the man who was prairie wise, when caught away from home by a storm, stayed where he was safe, even if his doing so occasioned some uneasiness to his friends.

"It is better that your friends should be uneasy while the storm is on than that they should follow you with frowns when the weather clears," Brook had declared, and Jean, after accepting the philosophy, had passed it on to Jack. She had no doubt that he was as safe on Fourteen as was I on Twenty-two.

But I had none of this philosophy to steady me, and I was decidedly uneasy about Jack. My brief wrestle with the storm had shown me how easy it was to become hopelessly lost even among the most familiar surroundings and how soon exhaustion would overpower one. A little irresistible shiver of nervousness ran up my spine as I realized how fortunate I had been in coming back to my starting point. I might have missed it and gone on into the night.

Jean seems to be sure, at last. But is she? Girls have been known to change their minds.

Great Christian Creed

The Athanasian creed was one of the three great creeds of Christendom—the two others being the Apostles' creed and the Nicene creed. It derives its name from Athanasius, the opponent of Arius and champion of orthodoxy, by whom it was supposed to have been written. It is the most rigid of three creeds mentioned, and was the standard of orthodoxy during the Middle Ages. It is famous for its so-called "damatory clauses." By many it is thought to have been written by Sergeant Hilary of Arles about 450; some argue for a later date, between 700 and 800, while others pronounce it a forgery.—Exchange.

Guinea Pigs for Table

Guinea pigs used as food are taken whole, or may be cut into pieces and fried or fricasseed. Cavies are excellent as entrees. In various stews and served with mushrooms, with brown onions, peas a la souflee, and especially with curry. On account of the whiteness of its skin the smooth-haired white guinea pig is best adapted for the table. The males become somewhat strong flavored with age, but are fine when four or five months old. Females are tender and finely flavored for a much longer period of time. They are probably at their best when about one year old.

Bathtubs in Motors

Motor vehicles fitted for long cross-country tours are furnished with an added convenience in a bathtub built into the floor and concealed by a trap lid when not in use. The basin is fastened securely so that it cannot rattle when the car is moving and is emptied by removing a plug at the bottom.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The Point of Equilibrium Between the Country and City and Town

By PROF. EDWARD M. EAST, Harvard University.

QUEER idea not at all compatible with the facts is the "back-to-the-soil" propaganda. A few years ago President Roosevelt became very much excited over the congestion of the cities caused by the trek of rural manhood from the farm. He appointed a commission which was expected to devise some method of enticing the migrants to reverse their steps. But things do not work this way. One cannot repeal natural laws by a statutory enactment.

Agricultural efficiency is increasing, thanks partly to the advance of scientific method applied to the art of farming, thanks partly to industrial development in other lines which has had an indirect effect. In the early part of the last century four out of five of our people were farmers. The ratio has gradually gone down. Yet the people have been fed, and we have exported food in quantities.

Today only 30 per cent of the total population are to be classed as farmers. Every three farmers support ten people; and as the days go by, bringing production to a still higher state of efficiency, this ratio will further decrease. I do not know where the shift will end, but I have not the slightest hesitation in predicting that within twenty years 80 per cent of the population will be housed in cities, towns and villages, leaving only 20 per cent to produce the food of the nation—and still the nation will be well fed.

One farmer can and will support five persons; perhaps he may even support six persons. Whatever the limit is, this limit will measure the point of equilibrium between the country and the town and city. Until that point of stability is reached, the farms will continue to feed the cities and the cities will increase in numbers.

"But I Will Try to Be a Fair Referee Between You and the Book"

By WILLIAM OLIVER STEVENS, in New York World.

The only other school in the world beside Annapolis where this practice of officer teaching holds is at West Point, but there it has been a practice to get younger officers for duty in a certain subject who had stood high in that subject while at the Point, and older officers were detailed because of their previous experience in teaching that subject. In some subjects the officers do not enter their classes before they have undergone instruction on how to teach the lesson of the day. Furthermore, the period of duty there is longer than the average period spent by a naval officer at the Naval academy. Thus, while the system is not ideal, the teaching is done by officers who are chosen because they do know something about the subject. But up to the present many an officer at the Naval academy has been ordered overnight to teach physics, for example, who had expected to be assigned to ordnance. Some are ordered to teach subjects in which they were notoriously low in their midshipmen days and have to get along as best they can. It is a commonplace there that an officer opens his course with the remark: "Well, gentlemen, I don't know a d—n thing about this subject, but I will try to be a fair referee between you and the book."

The Controlling Factor in Forest Fire Hazard Is Undoubtedly Humidity

By C. E. NORQUEST, U. S. Weather Bureau.

The element that seems to claim the distinction of being the controlling factor in forest fire hazard is undoubtedly humidity. As it fluctuates the degree of fire hazard increases and decreases. Temperature and wind only accentuate the influence of low humidity. It makes no difference how hot the day or how high the wind, if the forest materials are wet fire will neither start nor spread. The seeming exception to this general assertion is the lightning fire that may be started even in the rain. All dead forest materials are hygroscopic, some to a very high degree, and readily absorb moisture from humid air or lose it to dry air, so that to a marked degree the moisture content, and hence the inflammability, of forest materials is determined by the humidity of the air to which they are exposed. There is no fire hazard before the moisture content of forest materials has dropped to the inflammability point and the degree of hazard increases rapidly with further drying, which is accelerated by rising temperature and wind.

Unless British Immigration to Canada Speeds Up More Rapidly

By J. T. GUNN, Editor Canadian Labor Press.

These figures show quite clearly that unless British immigration speeds up at a much more rapid rate than at present, the Canadian West in a very short period will be peopled by those who have migrated from countries outside the British empire. There is no desire on the part of labor in Canada to exclude non-British European immigrants who are desirous of making a new home here, and who usually become steady, prosperous citizens, but a great many of us feel that if Canada can furnish the opportunity to the non-British European, it can also furnish the same opportunity to the British immigrant. And if they can see their way to choose the Dominion as a new home it will assuredly prevent the creation of problems and difficulties that will, in all probability, take place if British immigration keeps getting less and less in proportion to that from other countries, as is the case at present.

Texas Needs More Railroads.

Some of the railroads operating in Texas appear to want to monopolize the sections of the State in which they have lines, and are fighting hard to prevent development of those sections. Texas can maintain five times its present population, and there are portions of the State, not yet well enough supplied, or at all supplied with railroads, that can care for from ten to twenty times as many people as they now have. If only they can get railroad facilities and more railroad competition. It may be all right, so far as railroads are concerned, for them to monopolize a territory, but where there is no competition the tendency is to give very poor service. If the Interstate Commerce Commission is interested in the people more than in the roads, its policy in Texas will be to encourage, rather than retard, railroad development. The fact that a few short lines running from nowhere much to nowhere else have not paid in Texas does not prove that there is too much railroad building.

Brownwood Now After Irrigation.

Following closely after San Saba's example, Brownwood has filed with the State Board of Water Commissioners a notice that a district in which Brownwood is located, is planning to erect a $1,000,000 dam to irrigate 30,000 acres of rich valley land. The Commission has granted six months' time in which the district may work out its plans and present them for approval.

When San Saba set the good example for its neighbors it became evident that they would begin to look around to see how they could keep close up with San Saba's development. Brownwood had been "considering" the matter for some time, but will now try to keep step with San Saba. A good example is a wonderful stimulus to communities, as well as to people.

Should Keep Public Confidence.

Every interest of Texas demands that if possible the "muddle" about road matters in the State should be settled in such a way that Texas people may retain confidence in a wise and economical expenditure of their funds. Texans have been paying their automobile taxes without protest and in the belief that they have been contributing that much to good roads; they have been liberal in voting bonds in many counties; they have paid the extra tax on gasoline cheerfully. But if they come to think that their money is being wasted, or is being used to enrich contractors, without adequate returns being made, there will be heard a protest that will resound throughout the State, and road building will be set back a decade or so.

Every Texan interested in the progress of the State is hoping that nothing is being done to destroy confidence in the administration of Texas' road funds and that nothing has been done to weaken that confidence. Faith is essential to progress.

East Texas Cotton Palace.

If Waco doesn't "look a little out," those East Texans are going to gobble up its Cotton Palace. Age is a good thing, but age has to be mighty alert to keep up with youth. That East Texas Cotton Palace is young in years, but it is a husky youngster and is attracting much attention in the north. Athens is in East Texas, but is not so far east that people will not go there if it offers something better than other places. Its Cotton Palace has been drawing large crowds and has been an eye opener to those who have not been studying the progress that is going on in East Texas.

Goats No Longer Jokes.

A few years back cattle growers, farmers and even sheep raisers were accustomed to speak jeeringly of those who spent their time raising goats. But the humble goat is much respected now. He makes money for his owner and complains less about it than any other animal. Others may fall, but the owner of a ranch stocked with well-bred goats has a steady income that is not to be despised. Mohair is in great demand all the while and at a good price, and the goat can come nearer looking after himself all the while than any other living animal.

The goat rancher no longer hangs his head in shame when he announces his "Goat Breeders' Association" and lets the world know that he is engaged in a highly lucrative industry.

Mother! Don't "Physic" a Child

DR. CALDWELL AT AGE 93

To Dr. W. R. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary. In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement, but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

Faustina Zappi

Faustina Zappi was the daughter of a painter, Carlo Mazzati, and wife of Gambatista Zappi, who was born in 1868 and died in 1919. Faustina was very lovely and also wrote very beautiful poetry. Some of her sonnets are very fine. She resided principally at home, being very happy in her composition and in the love of her husband.

Why That Bad Back?

Is backache keeping you upset? Feel all tired out—so nervous and disgruntled you can hardly keep going? Then look to your kidneys! Your kidneys rid the body of poisonous waste. But if they lag, impurities accumulate and poison the whole system. Then one is apt to suffer backache, stabbing pains, headaches, dizziness and other annoying kidney irregularities. If your kidneys are sluggish, help them with a diuretic, like Doan's Pills. They are praised the world over. Ask your neighbor!

A Texas Case

Mrs. E. J. Sadler, 401 E. So. Line St., Corsicana, Tex., says: "I had a constant dull ache in my back. When I bent over, sharp cutting pains caught me across my kidneys. I had headaches and my kidneys acted too frequently. I was nervous. Doan's Pills but after using Doan's Pills the trouble left and I felt like a different woman."

Now Go to Africa

Sightseeing in Africa has become a late fad as a result of the recent visit of the prince of Wales to the "dark" continent. A party now being made up will contain 400 tourists and the route of the trip will be far removed from the beaten path. Places which figured prominently in the Boer war will be visited.

Conquers Bad Breath and is Popular Again

"The day I started taking Carter's Little Liver Pills," says Mr. John A. Perry of New York City, "my habitual bad breath and bad stomach stopped. I strongly recommend them to all those afflicted with these nasty troubles. I assure you that my own case was a bad one, causing me untold embarrassment, and Carter's helped me right from the start."

Bad breath comes from sour stomach and can usually be relieved quickly by Carter's Little Liver Pills. They are wonderful for constipation, sick-headache and indigestion and they physic the system in a mild and gentle manner, no bad after effects. Recommended and for sale by all drug stores.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SIBERIAN TIGERS

"The winter is coming," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.
"Let it come," said Master Siberian Tiger.
"The people will shiver," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.
"Let them shiver," said Master Siberian Tiger.
"They will wear furs and even then they will be cold," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.
"Serves them right," said Master Siberian Tiger. "Who ever asked them to wear furs?"
"I'm sure I didn't."
"I know that is true," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.
"I know it is," agreed Master Siberian Tiger.
"We came from Siberia and so we are called the Siberian tigers," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.
"There is nothing strange or wonderful or interesting about that," said Master Siberian Tiger.
"We are used to cold weather and so here in the zoo they let us live out-of-doors," continued Mr. Siberian Tiger.
"They had better do so," said Master Siberian Tiger. "If they want to keep us, for we would not look so beautiful and handsome with our big bodies and our fine fur if they put us inside, where it is horrid and hot."
"People think we're strange when they see that we live out-of-doors during the coldest days of winter," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.
"Hearken to me," said Master Siberian Tiger. "It matters not what people think, for people aren't Siberian tigers and they can't understand our ways."
"So I don't worry about them, but I do my own way and I think my own way."
"Let me tell you, Mr. Tiger, we would be better off if we all did as I do and were quite without interest in what people think."
"Without a doubt you are right," said Mr. Siberian Tiger. "I'll take the hint."
So the tigers walked and paced and raved and growled and ate and slept. They paid no attention to any one but thought of the beautiful winter ahead of them—just a little ahead of them.
