Kerrville was selected for the 1927 convention of the Texas Sheep & Goat Raisers' Association at the 11th annual convention which closed Thursday afternoon, July 29, at Del Rio.

J. A. Whitten of Eldorado was named first vice president and Robt. Real second vice-president, both by acclamation.

Sanderson, San Angelo and Sonora all bid for the next meeting city of the executive committee to be held in October. Sanderson was finally selected after a session of the committee.

In the meeting of the first day of the convention it developed that the organization was in the best financial condition it has been in since organized at Del Rio 11 years ago.

There was a little over six thousand dollars in the treasury with no debts outstanding.

There were many noted speakers who gave some fine addresses in the interest of the sheep and goat industry of Texas.

BRIDAL SHOWER

Lovely indeed was the miscellaneous bridal shower given last Friday afternoon at the Ferguson home with Mesdames W. J. Ferguson and T. L. Williams and Miss Louise Williams as hostesses, honoring Miss Myrl McKee a bride of the month. The hostesses choose as their color scheme yellow and white, which was carried out in the refreshments, as well in the bouquets of shasta daisies and sunflowers that were placed profusely throughout the home.

Soon after all the guests had arrived, Miss Merie was called over the telephone to come down and assist Mrs. Ferguson with some sewing. Upon arriving the honoree was surprised to see so many guests "that were helping Mrs. Ferguson." She was seated beneath the horse shoe, which really brought her good luck.

Soon on the horizon was seen a high ship heavily laden, with master Billy Ferguson in command, and aboard was Dan Cupid in the person of little Jimmy Wilkinson. Little Mary Ferguson then recited the following poem: "Oh Captain! Captain! What shall we do Our ship so loaded seems lost for a clue The sail is set, the crew is waiting But no one knows where we are sailing; Oh! I know one who'll tell us true The place and person to set sail to. He's not very large but he's very wise And will answer at once and heed our cries. Dan Cupid's his name so short. But he's one of the famous sort. He says to cross the deep blue sea And leave our ship with Myrl McKee."

On unloading the cargo many beautiful gifts consisting of linens, silverware, cut glass, and things needed in a home was found. The bride elect was also showered with many good wishes and a few choice recipes written by friends present.

As a gift from the hostesses was the lovely "Bridal Book," where each guest had registered. Delicious refreshments of ice cream and cake were served to about fifty guests.

WEIGHED ONLY 98 POUNDS

Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cleveland, Ohio.—"I have really had all kinds of trouble. After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. After taking four bottles, I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble."

—Mrs. M. RUSSELL, 10004 Nelson Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

If some good fairy should appear and offer to grant your heart's desire, what would you choose?
Health? It's a transient thing that brings its own cares.
Happiness? It's an elusive thing which we keep by giving away.
Health? That's the best gift. Health is richer than gold cannot buy and surely health is cause enough for happiness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be the good fairy who offers you the priceless gift of better health.

Wedding Bells

Cortlandt Bleeker said at a wedding breakfast in Lenox:
"Most of us are disappointed in love—I mean after we get married."
"Marriage is the beginning of a woman's life and the end of a man's."
"Marriages are made in heaven, though we have all seen brimstone matches, too."
"Marriage gets easier after the first twenty-five years."

"It makes no difference about your choice—marry whom you please, you'll discover you've got somebody else."

Sport Notes

At the first tee of any municipal course, golf is a waiting game.

Jack Dempsey has been knocked out only once—by Jim Flynn, in one round in 1917.

Eighteen swimmers, eleven of whom are women, are in training to swim the English channel this summer.

Ivan Poddubny, the giant Russian wrestler, is the oldest man now engaged in strenuous competitive sport. He's fifty-seven.

Agitation has been started in Great Britain to establish permanent golf courses where championship tournaments may be played.

The polo center of the United States is on Long Island, N. Y., and here, within a radius of fifteen miles, can be found nineteen polo fields.

The American golf player uses an average of about 200 balls every season, or a total of approximately 1,000,000,000 balls for all players.

Eight teammates of Fred Feilz, Santa Rosa (Calif.) athlete, underwent blood transfusions that he might recover from injuries resulting in a football game.

Three California woman tennis players have won the national singles title three times in succession. They are Hazel Hotchkiss, Mary K. Browne and Helen Wills.

In spite of her various discourtesies—in fact, because of them—Miss Suzanne Lenglen is recognized as the world's greatest exponent of temperamental tennis.

Wilmer Crowell of Swarthmore will referee, and Walter Eckersall of Chicago will umpire the annual Army vs. Navy football classic at Chicago, November 28.

For the second consecutive year the University of Montana won all its dual track and field meets this season and tied with the University of Washington in the Seattle relays.

Seven championship teams is the record established by the Princeton freshmen this year. The yearlings won in basketball, tennis, lacrosse, football, soccer, hockey and wrestling.

An Australian woman, visiting this country, says it is astounding how young Americans look. Only in America could Willie Hoppe, the billiardist, remain a boy wonder for twenty-five years.

Tommy Ryan, former world's welterweight and middleweight champion, has decided to grow a mustache. Ryan, who is fifty-six, says it will help "bring back memories of the days when fighters were fighters."

Plagues Chicago Fans

Pitcher Al Thomas, the big blonde pitcher bought by the Chicago White Sox from Baltimore, has made a decided hit with the fans by his clever work in the box. He has contributed much to the high standing of Collins' team.

Funniest Situation in Career of Umpire Byron

Bill Byron, one-time National league umpire, who, since leaving the Pacific Coast league, has gone into retirement, had his fill of funny experiences on the ball field. Asked not so long ago for the funniest situation of his career, Bill told of this one, which had occurred in a minor league game:

"I had chased about half the home club from the field and the manager was much disgusted. Late in the game a big butterfly insisted on flying about the diamond, mostly between the batter and the pitcher.

"At a rather critical spot in the game the manager, coaching at third, called for time. I stopped the game and asked him what was the trouble.

"Nothing, except that since you are so good at chasing players off the field, why don't you chase that butterfly?"

"I wanted to laugh, but I decided to try to make good, and did. I sneaked out, and on the first try put my cap over the butterfly. I then summoned the bat boy and ordered him to take it to the clubhouse."

Maureen Is Champion

Exhibiting a brilliant brand of golf, Maureen Orcutt, eighteen-year-old star, triumphed over Mrs. Wright Jones at the Westchester-Biltmore Country club for the Metropolitan championship by the score of 5 up and 4 to play. Miss Orcutt is now regarded as one of the leading contenders for the laurels of Glenna Collett.

Badgers Get Field for Baseball and Football

The addition of a plot of land ten acres in size, bordering on the land of the new university dormitories, will give to the university one of the finest intramural athletic fields in the country. The land will be fixed over into baseball diamonds for the spring part of the program and will serve a greater purpose for football in the fall. The extension of such a program in the neighborhood of Camp Randall will tend to center the entire Badger athletic program away from the lower campus. With the dormitories on the verge of completion, it means the growth of a new center for Cardinal athletics and an extension that should carry them out of the business district of the city. Another factor that will make this the real center of Wisconsin warriors is the fast-growing impetus for the field house and the sanction of the regents to a location just across the street from the new intramural field.

Kelly's Lengthy Reach Also Helps the Umpire

"It is difficult for an umpire to make a close decision at first base when George Kelly is the first baseman," says Harry McCormick, "provided he is familiar with the manner in which Kelly operates. Kelly has such long arms and uses them so skillfully that a runner who might be safe by half a step with any other first baseman on the bag is out by a step because Kelly reaches out and snags the ball. The other Giant infielders don't have to get the ball to the bag ahead of the runner. All they have to do is get it within a yard or two of the bag before the runner reaches the bag itself. This makes plays that might have been hard for an umpire very easy."

Juvenile Courts Doing Good Work in Proper Handling of Behavior Problems

By PROF. THOMAS D. ELIOT, Northwestern University.

JUVENILE courts cannot stop crime as things are at present because the community does not actually understand the functions and limitations of these courts.

These courts used to be the last word in the prevention of crime. But crime is not prevented by calling it delinquency, nor is delinquency prevented by calling it "behavior." We still have an egregious crime situation in the original home-town of the juvenile court. Does this prove that the courts are coddling crime and that what is needed is more police?

If by "police" is meant a reign of terror, "No." Repression alone has proved itself inadequate. It merely makes criminals more careful.

But if in the police function we include the protective and preventive; and if among the police personnel can be included trained social workers of either sex, detailed to such work, the police will be carrying out the spirit of the juvenile court, and will be going through and beyond it, back to the normal non-court agencies of the community.

The juvenile court has failed to stop crime because the community has overrated its possibilities, and has failed to recognize its limitations; and because the court has in most places failed to secure from the community the necessary reforms which would really prevent delinquency. At the same time, the juvenile court is a step in the right direction, and must be thanked for pointing the way to the proper handling of behavior problems before they reach the court.

Proper Advertising the Foundation of All Successful Business

By SIR HENRY W. THORNTON, Canadian Railroad President.

Through their tireless efforts and continuous fight for "truth" in advertising, members of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World have done more than any other factor to establish in the business world the faith of the buyer in the honest purposes of the seller. Proper advertising in its introductory aspect is the foundation of successful business.

Business has assumed a new aspect during the past quarter of a century. The days of bartering and trading have disappeared. New and more cordial relations exist between the seller and buyer, and a new confidence in the integrity of each has developed. Business today, whether in the sale of brains, in the industrial field or in the dispensing of that service which a railroad has to sell, is founded on integrity, fair dealing and truth.

Advertising which excites the reader to travel is inducing countless thousands to turn their faces toward the beauty spots of America and Canada.

It is advertising, backed by service and the efforts of those salesmen employed by the railroads which has made a race of travelers on this continent.

Need for Restoring Vitality to United States Soil Imperative

By DR. HARRISON E. HOWE, National Research Council.

With a possible 150,000,000 to feed in 1950, the United States must make rapid advances in the science of soil conservation to meet its needs for larger crops.

To feed this population, 38,000,000 more acres of land must be tilled, and a new vision of soil conservation caught in relation to civilization.

In the United States the leading crops annually absorb about 17,000,000,000 pounds of ammonia, phosphoric acid and potash, the farms themselves return to the soil in plant food not more than 8,700,000,000 pounds, and last year another 2,400,000,000 pounds of plant food were supplied in the form of commercial fertilizer, it is found. This leaves a deficiency of some 5,900,000,000 pounds.

Investigations show an even greater consumption of plant foods, and the need for replacing the chemical compounds required for plant growth is urgent.

Nutritive Diet of Highest Importance to Well-Being of Human Race

By MISS CAREY D. MILLER, University of Hawaii.

While no attempt is made to deny the influence of heredity on the stature and build of a people, students of nutrition have given convincing proof of the effect of food on the physical well being, and they can assert that fine stature in a race or unmixed group of people is due to good food over a long period of time, while, conversely, poor physical make-up is due to poor food over many generations.

The food habits of the Hawaiians when the islands were discovered were probably what they had been for centuries, at least since about 1100 A. D. and probably from 800 A. D. to the time of the great migration—or perhaps even since soon after 1 A. D. or thereabouts, which is considered to be somewhere near the year of the arrival of the first inhabitants.

The Hawaiians ate 138 kinds of edible fish, thirty-one fowls, breadfruit, ferns, bananas, yams, taro, poi, pandanus, and various types of seaweeds. Their diet differed from that of other fine races in that they had no milk, no cod liver oil, and no whole grains.

Improper Diet and Overwork Responsible for Early Deaths of Business Men

By DR. MILTON J. RAISBECK, New York.

Lack of exercise, improper diet and long hours of work are shortening the life of the American business man.

Overeating and lack of outdoor exercise and regular vacations, are some of the contributory factors to these diseases, which are carrying people off before their time. Loss of rest and improper diet forced on the traveling man and woman, and, in the case of some housewives who use canned goods at all times instead of fresh vegetables, are other serious factors.

It has been found that there is a relation between acidity of the blood and high blood pressure. In the past, in dieting to reduce blood pressure, the patient has stopped eating meat, but meat is not sufficient alone, as corn, rice and cereals are acid producing foods.

The new method of treating is to eliminate all foods which produce acids. Fresh vegetables are good alkaline foods.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Constipation! How to Keep Bowels Regular

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated men, women, children, and particularly old folks, had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only

Blind Girls Show Skill With Needle

A dress show remarkable in several ways was staged at Bush house, Strand, W. C., where the first free public exhibition in London of the handicrafts of the blind was displayed, says the Westminster Gazette.

Wainy frocks were shown, but the girls whose clever fingers made them never saw them. Some of the girls are deaf and dumb as well as blind. Their work is so good that it sells on its merits in the best salons of Paris and London.

In the Rue de la Paix, in Bond street, Regent street and Oxford street women are unknowingly buying the work of these afflicted girls and praising the perfection of the articles and the "extra finish."

Each girl is responsible for a garment throughout all its processes—from the yarn to the completed parts. The wages are higher than those paid in factories where the employees are sighted. Between 300 and 400 garments are turned out a week.

Giant English Ox

England has always been famous for her pure-bred cattle and sheep. Nearly 300 years ago huge oxen were produced there. In his diary, Evelyn speaks of an ox that was nineteen hands high and four yards long, and that was in 1640. At that date Leicestershire sheep had already obtained a great reputation and fetched big prices. The marvelous sheep of New South Wales, one of which recently yielded forty-five and one-half pounds of wool at a clip, are of purely British descent.—Capper's Weekly.

Differences in Love

"Man is the hunter; woman the quarry. Once a woman has given all, she longs to go on giving. Once a man has taken all, the quest loses savor. Woman pours out her love from a never-emptying chalice. Man dashes the cup to the ground once he has drained it," writes Jane Cowl, eminent American actress, in an article in Liberty.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

She had difficulty in adjusting some twigs of the hedge to her liking, and her voice was so low I could scarcely hear it as she said:

"I told you once that should you feel the same as you did that time on the river—that second time on the second river—there could be no harm—Ah, I put shame on myself to speak more."

"And I repeat I am a very foolish man and must have love where I love," I stammered.

"Such a hard man!" she sighed, with a quick uplift of her eyes; and I could swear she was laughing at me.

"You brought me here to have me propose marriage to you?" I bluntly demanded.

"It is shameful to make me say that. But it is true," she murmured.

Even then I feared she was sacrificing herself to me because of some absurd sense of gratitude.

"But your pride—"

"Enough of that word!" she fiercely cried, clutching both my hands and turning eyes filled with tears for my inspection. Then humbly:

"Does monsieur find pride in me now? Or does he find a poor, homeless, homesick girl with no friends, no people?"

My arms would have closed about her slim form had she not had a second thought. Withdrawing from me and holding her head high and haughty she accused me:

"You dared to think wrong of me on that island off Bloix! You dared to think weakness of me because I came on that terrible ship! Not a word, monsieur! I will listen to no defense!"

As poor Joe Labrador would have said, "Ah, that Mademoiselle Dahls-gaarde!" In her moods she was as irresponsible as a butterfly, and as irresistible as a sunbeam. I led bravely and sternly, and severely lectured her for presuming to read my thoughts and then to convict me on whatever conclusions she might happen to form.

The rigidity of her pose gradually relaxed while I talked. By the time I had finished a discourse on the evilness of "pride" she was quite limp. And when for the third time I asked her to marry me she did not refuse.

Our wedding was two weeks old and I was still as ardent a believer in fairytales as any Frenchman. Then my host demanded my attention, and informed me that the man who was so insistent on seeing Mrs. Brampton was again calling.

"I believe the fellow must be crazy, William, but it's for you to dispose of him. He bothered her some before you came."

I vowed I would scold him, and directed the butler to bring him into the rose-garden back of the house. He came, and behold he was the man who had yelled to me as I furiously galloped up the plantation road in search of a wife. What was more astonishing he was Jules Mattor, my boatman when I escaped from Pascagoula bay.

I sternly inquired his business with Mrs. Brampton, and with much squirming and twisting, he told me how he had brought her a message from Bloix, it being written by no one less than his excellency, Sieur de Bienville.

"And, monsieur, I have waited six weeks, and she will give me no answer to carry back. If I go without an answer his excellency will believe I did not do his business, and he will use a hard hand. Mademoiselle would not give me an answer. Cannot monsieur, who is so big and strong, induce madame to write just a word?"

I sent a boy to fetch Mrs. Brampton. As she entered the garden and beheld Mattor she smiled slightly, but there was nothing but happiness in her face.

"Madame, this man, Jules Mattor, says he brought you a message from Sieur de Bienville and fears he will be punished if he returns without an answer."

"So?" she softly answered. "Then he should have an answer. And has monsieur, my husband, been told what the message contained?"

"I doubt if the messenger knows. I certainly have not asked him."

"I turned aside and became interested in a rosebush. With a swish of skirts she was at my side and explaining:

"They found out directly after I sailed. Word came by the very boat which followed the Maire, the very boat Bienville went out to the island to meet that night you escaped from Bloix. Think of it! That very night Bienville had his orders from my uncle, the marquis, and if you had been a day late they would have bundled me back to France and you would have no little wife to make you happy this day."

I gaped at her stupidly and nuttared.

"The trail is very blind, madame. I find a sign here and there."

"Foolish one! I knew it would come in time. That was why I was determined to marry you before you learned the truth."

"Aye? Well, you did it." "Because I feared that once you learned the truth your silly English pride would send you back to the terrible forest and that abominable river, and I would return to France, or stay here unwed. Here is the message. Read it."

She pulled a paper from the bosom of her gown, but I refused it, suggesting that she tell me what she would. She settled herself primly on a rustic settee and made an imperious little gesture for me to be seated.

"It is like this, my love. My mother was a de Baude, a distant kinswoman of Comte de Frontenac—"

"Friede!" I exclaimed, beginning to understand.

"Her family would have none of her because she married a Dahls-gaarde. After both she and my father died an uncle was named as my guardian. He is a friend of Monsieur le Regent, and being a marquis and having great wealth, he is a very sad dog. His tastes and Monsieur le Regent's are the same. The two plan to marry me to an execrable creature, who has much gold, a great family

"Very good. I am glad it is cleared up. Nothing from those experiences can ever come into your life to make you sad."

She rose and asked: "No questions, my dear?" "No questions, sweetheart."

She glanced down at the letter and laughed aloud as a child does when immensely pleased.

"Ciel! But I forgot Sieur de Bienville's letter! I have told you nothing of it. I must have no secrets from my husband. It seems his orders are to place me on the first ship returning to France. He is much concerned to have me go back. Monsieur le Regent is vastly interested; and that means Monseigneur L'as will do anything to get me back."

"D—n them all! All France can't get you back!" I cried.

"O-o-o!" and she drew back in a pantomime of fear. "Such terrible words my husband speaks! But his excellency writes most polite. He the same as says I shall dictate my own future. A ship will take me from Charles Town, or Pensacola, as I wish. It is arranged with the English government that I may go in an English ship, if I wish. I am warned not to return by way of the river, as it would be too dangerous. You should feel very proud to find me a woman of so much importance. Now you know all. Will you keep me?"

"Against all Europe!" I told the top of her head.

She struggled free and cried: "But you never ask about the old pirate. Such a polite husband! I know you die of curiosity. He was an undergardener at my uncle's country place. He saw me steal away from home, and he followed me. He was a very wicked old man. He followed me on board the ship, planning to make a fortune out of my disappearance. He knew there would be a great search and a big sum in gold offered. He would wait in the new world till he could drive the best bargain; then he would betray me. He was very wicked."

It was all told. I felt humble and meek, but took care it should not show. So I urged her to get rid of Mattor by sending an answer to Bienville.

"Ma foi! As your wife I think it would be better for Mr. Brampton to write the answer," she replied. "Else why did I keep this poor man waiting until you came here and married me?"

"We've traveled far together since those old brave days, and many of the myths have been killed out of the valley. A miracle she never wastes of contemplating is our twin boys. I called them English and she flared up and declared them to be French, and before I could join the issue she was in tears, and saying they were neither French nor English, but were Americans. And so she brought them up to consider themselves. A second miracle she could scarcely comprehend was their astounding growth until they were my equal in stature. And her pride! It towered above all other pride she had ever felt, as the heavens overtop an ant-hill. Their obedience and reverence when with their mother was very beautiful for me to watch. As they became Americans and carried her along with them I ceased calling myself English; for one must go with one's folks, or else feel very lonely."

Narbonne and Labrador; Six Fingers and Damonn the Fox. The good and the bad. Yet somehow the mighty river utilized both elements to give me my wife. And I wonder if its other seemingly blind purposes may not contain some hidden good for those who ultimately build cabins in the valley.

[THE END.]

Unhappiness in Wake of Avoidable Worry

The thing which causes us to worry is either something that can be remedied, or can't. The thing to do is to look it squarely in the face. Swallow an unpleasant truth or so if necessary, but get down to the issue, is the advice of the Montreal Family Herald.

If the cause cannot be changed, there is only one thing to do—don't think about it. Force yourself to shut it out of your consciousness. Just close your mind to it, and let the blow fall when and where it will. Since you can't stop it, you might at least save your strength for the finish.

But most of our worries are avoidable. We worry because we suddenly think, two hours after we left the house, that we maybe didn't turn off the electric iron in the kitchen, or because we have a house full of company in the evening and nothing seems ready, or because the children won't eat their vegetables, but will fill up on candy, or any number of small things that are the result of our own carelessness or our inattention to duty.

Many Kinds of Oaks

There are 300 kinds of oak trees having vastly different characteristics, but they have one common feature, and that is they all produce acorns. The white oak is so called because it has a rather white bark, while the black oak's bark is quite dark, black to all intents and purposes during the "wood age." Live oak was always preferred for shipbuilding and for heavy duty, but just why it was named "live" is a matter of doubt.

At one time the island of Nantucket was covered with live oaks, but the land was denuded of this timber years ago during the whaling activities when several shipbuilding yards flourished on the island and a great fleet of whalers was built there.

Forest fires last year burned over 80,000,000 acres of ground—an area greater than that of New England.

LACROSSE OLDEST AMONG PASTIMES

Ancient Indian Game Senior Sport of This Country.

Not only is lacrosse the oldest known game in North America, but it is also one of the fastest in existence. The "crosse" or racket-like implement used in the game receives its name from the likeness of the gutted "stick" to a bishop's crozier, thus causing the early French colonists in America to call it "La Crosse."

While the Indians played it as a war maneuver game, it came into significance as a test of athletic activity among the tribes long before the white man took it up as a major sport.

Canada adopted lacrosse years ago. Professionalism has been out and it is a purely amateur sport. It has been played in the United States since 1883, when it was organized in the colleges in the East, and is now a great factor in Harvard, Yale, Syracuse, Johns Hopkins, Cornell, Swarthmore, Hobart, West Point Military academy, Annapolis Naval academy, and other leading seats of learning.

Feminine lacrosse started in England, and in the British Isles at present there are 12 girls' teams in colleges and universities alone. In this country, besides the Ladies' Lacrosse League of America, with six teams, there are expert clubs of feminine athletes playing lacrosse at Bryn Mawr, Sargent college and other leading colleges.

Lacrosse has some similar points to both football and ice hockey. It is played on a field the same size as football, with gridiron of similar proportions, the goals being the same distance apart—100 yards. While the 11 players on a football team line up across the field facing each other, the 12 players on a lacrosse team line up and down the field, from goal to goal, facing each other. The goals are similar to hockey goals, six feet square, with nets as in hockey. The positions of goalkeeper, point and cover-point are also similar to hockey and there is a similarity to basket ball in the mode of lining up the players.

The game is played with a hard rubber ball, "faced" off from the center by the two center players. At the referee's starting whistle the "draw" is made by the two "facing-off" and the game begins, the players carrying or passing the ball up or down the field. The object is to put the ball into an opponent's goal.

Walter Mails, left-handed pitcher, with the Syracuse International league club, has been purchased by San Francisco of the Pacific Coast league. Mails was the property of the St. Louis Nationals.

Helnie Manush, who has been playing center field in place of Cobb for Detroit, has been doing his share of hitting. Manush takes a wicked "cut" at the ball and, when he connects, the pellet takes a nice ride.

Harry Payne Bingham, a millionaire yachtsman, and deep sea explorer, has just returned from a cruise covering more than 12,000 miles, to the Gulf of California, in search of new and rare specimens of marine life. The Wolverine, the first iron vessel ever built by the United States navy, and the fifth steam-propelled man-o-war, will soon steam into Erie, Pa., to end its arduous life. The Wolverine, originally called the Michigan, has been the entire naval force of the United States on the Great Lakes since 1844. During the Civil war it was used to cut Confederates from running arms across the Canadian border. The ancient vessel was to have been junked, but the people of Erie asked that it be given to them.

Says Mrs. Wolcott—All the Terrible Aches, Pains and Sour Bile Sickness Gone.

Like many other folks thereabouts, Mrs. Wolcott was a picture of misery. She says: "I was ghastly white as cotton, all thinned out, bilious all the time, terrible headaches, bones creaked as if they would snap apart, ached all over, could hardly walk or lift an arm; had been taking calomel steadily, and it made me so deathly sick I was completely discouraged. Then one day my cousin who lives near the state line, came on a visit and she had a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic. My! what a change. It gave me new courage. We sent to town for two bottles, and since then my face is filled out, with a ruddy glow. Gained over twenty pounds and am the picture of health. ### COCKLES AND BUDDY

The clock in the dining room was striking the hour.

One.
Two.
Three.
Four.
Five.
Six.
Seven.
Eight.
Nine.
Ten.
Eleven.
Twelve.
It was midnight.
And oh, it was very quiet. It was just the time for the Cockles of the Hour to be about. They had gone to call on Buddy. They came, just as they had come to Maggie's house, walking on their tip, tip, tip-toes, very, very, very quietly.

You know the Cockles dress in little shell suits which make them look like little sea mollusks, or mussels or shellfish as far as their costumes of shell are concerned.

Their happy little faces wrinkled up into funny little smiles and they all look so dear and funny and jolly and lovable that if ever you saw them you could not help but love them.

Buddy is a good deal younger than Maggie, and the Cockles knew that at such a late hour they had better not awaken him.

They knew that even as a special treat they had better not disturb him at midnight.

They sat around the fireplace in Buddy's house and they warmed their little selves before the ashes and the bright coals of Buddy's fireplace.

"We'll take him the bundles soon," said the biggest Cockle of all to the smallest Cockle.

"Soon," said the smallest Cockle. Then the Cockles spoke of Buddy.

"I've heard he plays 'elevenor,'" said one Cockle. "He jumps up and down on a board and makes believe that he is going up and down in elevators in big buildings."

"I've heard," said another Cockle, "that he pretends he is telephoning by using two spoons, one for a mouth-piece and one with which to hear."

"I've been told," said a third Cockle, "that he helps make beds and carries the soiled clothes and puts them in the big basket."

"I've heard," said a fourth Cockle, "that he puts away his own little suit after he has undressed."

"And he sings," said a fifth Cockle. "And recites," said a sixth Cockle. "And thoroughly enjoys himself," said a seventh Cockle.

"Hush," said the biggest Cockle of all, "we mustn't awaken him with too much noise."

"Shall we take the bundles now?" said the smallest Cockle of all.

"Oh, yes," said the biggest Cockle of all.

Then all the Cockles got up, and carried, each one of them, a little bundle, until they had reached Buddy's room.

There was Buddy fast asleep, and every little Cockle felt the most wonderful glow of happiness as they looked at him.

They formed themselves into a great heart as they gathered about him and then they scattered the contents of the bundles all over the room.

And the bundles? They were filled with the Secrets of Continual Happiness—for Buddy—beloved by the Cockles of the Heart family.

The Circus Parade
(By MINERVA HUNTELL.)
We went to see the circus. Pass by dad's office uptown. On all the streets were people A-walking up and down.

We thought the parade would never decide to come at all.
We leaned out of the window. Till dad thought sure we'd fall.

And then we heard some music; Police-men marched right by; And there were men with banners; You should have seen them fly!

There were lions, elephants, tigers, And a funny red-haired clown, And lots of little ponies, All black and tan and brown.

From daddy's upstairs window We saw the parade go by. It's fine to have a daddy With an office 'way up high.

Cape and Sweater Late Sports Note

Ensemble Outfit Features Paris Modes—Tailored Suits Favored.

The cape and sweater ensemble is the latest sports note of the Paris season, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune. The capes of these ensembles are short affairs, with military collars. They are developed in a novelty woolen, which precisely matches the wool of the V-necked sweater. The final member of this triumvirate, the skirt, is plaited all around.

Another charming ensemble of the sports family, appropriate for town or country, is of natural kasha, which Gertrude Olmsted, the popular film actress, is shown wearing. The novel military cape is attached in lieu of sleeves and the new collar is plaited with red kasha. The jacket is hip length and double breasted, with the two-piece frock underneath showing a plaited skirt of kasha and a blouse of red flat crepe.

The tailored suit is enjoying a long delayed renaissance this season. The surprising part of this revival is that the Frenchwoman has embraced it so wholeheartedly as to actually look English when wearing it. This was particularly evident at the Racing club, where the French hard-court tennis championships were played, and at Wimbledon, where the fair Paris spectators could scarcely be distinguished from their London sisters. Beige and brown tweeds are the smartest fabrics for this season's tail-leors, which are tailored after the severe manner of O'Rosson.

Apparently the return to longer skirts, if it is to come, will be accomplished by slow and sometimes furtive stages. The evening mode, which is showing the way in this movement, has lately launched a group of period gowns with full ankle length skirts. The skirts, however, have transparent hems, the transparency beginning at about where the usual evening skirt terminates. At the moment they appear faddish and it is our opinion that their vogue will be fleeting. Ankle lengths are a lot too extreme for the present temper of the mode.

Printed Chiffon for Evening or Afternoon

So subtle in design and so elusive in coloring are the printed chiffons of this season that it is not surprising to find them used for models of a distinctly formal aspect. Almost every house of note in the world of fashion is showing for midsummer printed chiffon dresses for evening, as well as for afternoon. Designers rely upon the beauty of the materials themselves and have not added anything in the way of trimming.

Not a little of the smartness of the new silks may be attributed to the interest of the designs, which depart from stereotyped effects. Frequently large spaces of solid color appear in the printed silks. These look rather odd when the material is viewed in the piece, but the effect when the fabric is plaited or closely gathered and shirred is unusually attractive.

New Tub Silks Launder Like Linen or Cotton

The development of tub silks to their present state of beauty and smartness has added greatly to the interest of summer fashions. These tub silks make it possible to possess frocks of a certain degree of formal chic which may be laundered with all the ease of a practical linen or cotton dress.

Amazingly varied both in color and design, tub silks play a part of distinct importance and are chosen by the best dressed women for wear at the resorts. Smart stripes in both wide and narrow effects are seen, as well as tiny checked and bold plaided designs. Other patterns feature a striped border in contrasting or harmonizing colors.

As a rule frocks fashioned of washable silks are extremely simple in effect, often, in fact, almost mannish in silhouette and details.

Billions in Railroads

It is estimated that by the end of 1920 the total investment in railroads of the United States will reach $24,000,000,000, the largest sum put into any one industry in the world. In 1920 the improvement bill for the railroads will be $750,000,000 on conservative estimate. Railroad men are predicting the heaviest fall traffic this year in history and are preparing for it.

Freight Train Phone Latest in Railroad

By means of a telephone connecting the caboose and the cab of a freight train with 73 cars, the engineer and conductor of an eastern line held conversation recently, saving the need for hand signals and speeding the progress of the train.

As they were pulling out of the yards, the conductor notified the engine men that a car repair man was riding in the caboose and would get off at the east end of the yard and close the switch when the train was in the main track.

The saved slowing up, and later the engineer notified the conductor that, if conditions were satisfactory with regard to the train, he would not stop for water at the next station. Permission to proceed was given, sparing another delay. The wires were strung over the tops of the cars.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Emigrants Seek Cities

In 1920 there were about 14,000,000 foreign-born persons living in the United States and of this number more than 10,000,000 lived in the cities and large towns. Of this latter number more than 5,000,000 entered the country after 1900, while only 1,416,000 of those entering went to the rural sections.

An American Romance Youth Rides West

By WILL IRWIN

The story of Leadville has never been so well told as in this work of romantic, melodramatic fiction. Will Irwin claims that it is not Leadville alone but a composite of several mining camps in Colorado, Montana and Idaho. Nevertheless, it is Leadville which furnished the inspiration, for the author spent a portion of his early life there, and the scenes, incidents and characters fit no other place so well as that most loud and vivid of all the old camps. It could not be realistic without being melodramatic, for Leadville was melodrama in actual life. No one should miss this splendid, thrilling tale.
