ALPINE ROTARIANS HOSTS TO SANDERSON CLUB

Last Thursday evening eleven Rotarians and ten Rotary Aunts (22 in all) motored to Alpine where the Club entertained us. What I mean entertained, I mean "pouring it on." The first thing they had on the program was a banquet at six o'clock in the dining room of the Holland Hotel. There were about 84 who attended this affair which was acclaimed as being one of the most delightful social events in many months. Jawn Perkins was toastmaster and during course vocal selections were enjoyed and the Alpine Rotary Quartet (six voices) rendered several selections.

Following the banquet the Sanderson delegation were guests at the Mojave Theatre to witness the farce-comedy, "The Womanless Divorce." This play was presented and each character was enacted by members of the Alpine Rotary Club. This play was a real knockout. The men were garbed in all the frivolities of the gentler sex, including short skirts, lip stick and other accessories. The ladies envious and broke shells hearts. The proceeds, over all expenses, amounted to $175 was turned over to the P. T. A.

After the show the Rotarians were hosts at a dance given in the social parlors of the Masque Hall, which lasted until the wee hours of the morning.

Rotarians and their sweethearts of Sanderson who enjoyed the Alpine Club's hospitality are as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Hy Laurence, Mr. and Mrs. Sator Daggott, Mr. and Mrs. Al Dreigh, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lemons, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Holing, Misses Inez Lyons, and Ila Lowman and Doc Gorman, Jesse Henshaw and Harry McAdams.

R. F. Elder Is Ill

R. F. Elder, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Elder, of the Main Hotel, is critically ill in Santa Rosa Hospital, San Antonio. The young man suffered a partial stroke of paralysis early last week and was carried to San Antonio Friday, since which time little change has been noted in his condition. — Kerrville Mountain Sun.

Fal's many Sanderson friends regret very much to learn of his serious illness and only hope that he will soon be well. The last report from his bedside was that he was still pretty ill and there was not much change in his condition. Most of the time he is unconscious.

SIX PROSPECTS FOR HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMAS

Last May 12, Largest Class in History of School Was Graduated.

Graduation from high school of another senior class of Sanderson girls and boys is rapidly approaching. In fact, there remains only four more weeks of school. Last year the largest class in the history of the school was graduated when six girls and six boys were given diplomas. This year the graduation class will not be so large but will be far from the smallest.

Those whom Mr. Williams, the superintendent, thinks will have completed enough credits by the end of the school term to graduate are as follows:

Alton Franklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Franklin; Trona Fred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Fred; Olga Ford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Evan Ford; Gertrude Litton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Litton; W. D. O'Bryant, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. O'Bryant; and John Clinton Reese, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Reese of Ballinger.

Clean Up Week May 2 to 7

Feeling that a clean up of rubbish, old cans, junk and weeds is both a safeguard for health and an improvement in the looks of our yards and alleys, the Chamber of Commerce urges that citizens of Sanderson give Dr. Robertson full support in his efforts during clean up week.

Arrangements have been made to cart off this junk free to those who will have it piled up and ready for hauling when the truckman calls Friday and Saturday, May 6 and 7.

If full co-operation is given this clean up every one will feel better satisfied and our town will get rid of a lot of the unsightly junk which is now lying around and breeding disease.

THE KNOCKER "AS IT LOOKS TO ME"

By Jack Ainslie

Much of the world's progress has been due to dissatisfaction with the status quo and the criticism resulting therefrom. The constructive critic is essentially a pioneer who would rather be wrong than remain static.

Not so the busy hammer-wielder, commonly called the "knocker," whose chief claim to fame lies in his ability to pick flaws in everything and everybody, from the style of the angel Gabriel's wings to the activities of the ladies' aid.

The chronic knocker seldom does anything toward correcting the mistakes and evils of which he so stridently complains. Rather does he smother the white flame of enthusiasm with the wet blanket of carping fault finding.

The knocker drags the "home town" skeleton from its hiding-place in the closet, but never has the pride or modesty to cover it with the mantle of charity. When the harmony orchestra is responding to an encore the knocker breaks in with the clanging notes of the anvil chorus.

The knocker exposes the raw nerve of personal and community feeling with his little hammer but rarely renders first aid to the injured. Instead of lubricating the wheels of the engine of progress the knocker throws sand in the gears.

The knocker is always an impediment to achievement, a foe to harmony, a bore to the community and an all round nuisance. Don't be a knocker.

No Scientific Proof That Any One Race Has Superiority Over Another

By JOHN LANGDON-DAVIES, English Educator.

THE theory of Nordic supremacy is a method of whitewashing race prejudices. No evidence has been discovered by science to prove that one race is superior to another. There is no such thing as a pure Nordic race and there is no such thing as any pure race in Europe where complex racial mixtures have come to exist. Race is purely a means of classification and is similar to the letters on a card index.

Race prejudice exists because there is a certain point when our feeling of the universality of the brotherhood of man breaks down.

On the crowded islands of Great Britain we have learned to get on with people with as little friction as possible and we do not always find it necessary to distrust, fear, dislike and despise those who do not belong to our race.

In America there are many more groups which have not become a real part of the whole nation and in this great country there is a problem of race prejudice.

It has never been proved that any race is innately better than another. People are continually mixing race and culture. Race is hereditary and culture is something which comes to every individual from the fact that he has been born into certain surroundings.

There is nothing national or racial about language, music, art, philosophy or religion. When any group sets itself up as the chosen people of the universe then there will be trouble in the world. A feeling of racial superiority produces ill-feeling and opposition.

Women Play Large Part in Success or Failure of Conservation Projects

By MRS. ERNEST R. LATHAM, Federation of Women's Clubs.

Women do 87 per cent of the nation's buying. Just how and what they buy is an economic barometer and is an indication of their attitude toward conservation or extravagance.

The basic purpose of conservation is the maintenance of American standards of living. Secretary Hoover's broad program as announced in "ten major directions for national effort," reveals the close relationship of conservation to many stupendous issues and national undertakings. The keynote of Mrs. Sherman's administration, the American home, has called attention to the fact that the daily domestic use of materials and energy make the 26,000,000 homes of the nation a large factor in the problem of conservation.

More than half of all the hard coal and nearly 12 per cent of all the soft coal are burned in the homes. Of the 83,000,000 cords of wood burned annually as fuel, four-fifths or more are consumed in the homes.

What part are women taking in the struggle of science and industry to conserve these tremendously valuable assets? Are they being used wisely or wastefully? These are some of the questions which must be answered if women are going to bear their full share in the solution of the problems before us.

Education in Respect for Law Would Do Much to Check Juvenile Crime

By GEORGE M'DONALD, President Big Brother Federation.

Few children are ever told of the difference between childish pranks and law violation. If children had the seriousness of certain things impressed upon them early in school life there would be less juvenile crime. I believe we spend too much time on routine matters in school. Prevention and not prosecution is the biggest need in dealing with children who prove wayward. Get to them before they have to go to the reformatory or penitentiary. That is what the Big Brother federation is trying to do.

If I had my way every child would be encouraged to plant trees along the public highway and encouraged to see that those trees flourished and grew. No child engaged in that kind of activity can go far wrong. I would have them plant fruit trees and then between those fruit trees oak trees, so they could study the difference in them.

I believe in prosecution but I believe it should come in the case of children only after all preventive measures have failed.

Kiwanis, Rotary, Civitan, Optimist and other national bodies are more active than ever before. As the result, this year will be a happier one in thousands of homes safely removed from the shadow of wrongdoing.

Health Cults and Physical Hero Worship Detrimental to College Students

By PROF. G. T. STAFFORD, University of Illinois.

Blame for the deplorably poor health of the college student should be placed on the parent who follows health cults and the student himself who, as a hero-worshiper, has false standards of physical perfection.

The grip of various cults in this country is amazing when you consider this is the Twentieth century. Thousands of parents belong to such groups.

Is there any wonder that students who do not have adequate instruction in health and health habits in their classes in schools—due to the squeamishness of us moderns in many instances who believe that certain facts about the body and the body's health are too indelicate to be discussed by trained instructors—come to college with distorted standards of perfection.

The average college freshman—in all the glory of his flat feet, falling or fallen arches—models his idea of physical perfection chiefly on muscular development. He comes to school bound to be another "Red" Grange. The star athlete to him is the perfect physical specimen.

Paid Advertising in Newspapers Vital to Work of Modern Church

By WALTER IRVING CLARK, Presbyterian Publicity Director.

Pastors who have regularly used newspaper ads find that they are a good investment. These ads should not be merely perfunctory announcements of sermon topics, but should be stimulating enough to inspire readers to desire to attend church and should also be thought-awakeners for those who do not attend. There should be a real message for conscience and soul in every ad.

A church that cannot afford much money for promotion may join with other churches in the community in a united newspaper appeal, using liberal effective display space. If the church will pay for live newspaper advertising it will find that newspaper advertising will pay the church.

DATE IS SET FOR SPECIAL SESSION

Governor Calls Legislature To Meet in Special Session On May 9th.

Austin, Tex.—Governor Moody has called the legislature to meet in special session May 9, listing three major items for consideration.

The legislature will meet at 12 o'clock noon on that date "for the following purposes":

To pass a general appropriation bill for the ensuing biennium; to pass a selective civil service law providing for the selection of subordinate employees of the state government under the classified civil service system; to adopt such laws as may be necessary to establish a more efficient and economical development of a system of correlated state highways; to consider and act on such other subjects of public importance as the executive may from time to time during the session, submit by message or otherwise.

Governor Moody listed civil service as the second most important problem, placing the appropriation measures first.

Aid Sought For Homeless.

Washington, D. C.—President Coolidge Friday issued a proclamation asking for aid for the sufferers in the area flooded by the Mississippi river and its tributaries. The flood situation "is indeed grave," the president's proclamation said, and for the task of caring for the thousands of refugees "additional funds must be obtained immediately." Mr. Coolidge recounted the efforts of the war department and other government branches to relieve suffering, but added that the "burden of caring for the homeless rests upon the agency designated by the government charter to provide relief in disaster—the American Red Cross."

Farm Population Decreases.

Washington, D. C.—A decrease of 649,000 persons in the farm population of the United States during the last year, the largest decrease in any year since 1920, was announced Friday by the department of agriculture. The department estimated that 27,892,000 persons were living on farms on January 1, 1927, as compared with 28,541,000 in 1926, and 28,982,000 in 1925, as shown by the federal agricultural census of that year. The movement of population from farms to cities was estimated at 2,155,000 persons for last year, while 1,135,000 moved to farms, making a net movement of 1,020,000 persons away from farms.

West Texas Growth.

Amarillo, Tex.—Considerable measure of development in the Panhandle and West Texas in recent years was claimed for the newspaper men by R. H. Nichols of Vernon, president of the Panhandle Press association, in delivering the principal address before the annual meeting of the association in Amarillo Friday. "This development has not been an accident. It is the result of foresight and careful planning," Nichols said. "Publishers and newspaper men of West Texas have contributed largely to the campaign."

Bandits Slaughter Passengers.

City of Mexico.—Between 50 and 100 helpless passengers were slaughtered by a great force of bandits who held up a Guadalajara-City of Mexico train Tuesday night, after killing the train's entire escort of 50 soldiers. The bandits drenched the coaches with gasoline and kerosene and set them afire, and as the terrified passengers tried frantically to climb out of the windows to escape incineration, they were shot down. The slaughter took place near Limon, State of Jalisco.

Thoughts While Falling

Thoughts came thick and fast to a man in Hove, England, recently when he slipped while standing in a bathtub. While falling, he said afterward, he had the following thoughts: (1) Will I break my neck? (2) Will there be an inquest? (3) Will my wife be put to any inconvenience giving testimony? (4) Will foul play be suspected by a silly jury? Fortunately all his questions were answered in the negative.

Divorceward Bound

Texas Guinan, the New York night club hostess, said to an interviewer the other night: "Whenever a new divorce scandal crops up I think of a conversation I once overheard between two women. 'My husband, said the first woman, 'just dotes on sarlines and all kinds of canned goods.' 'Yes, said the second woman, 'I'm a hum cook too.'"

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 88

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or

STORY FROM THE START

Laurie Devon, a gay young chap somewhat inclined to wildness, has recently succeeded as a playwright. His wealthy sister Barbara, who has helped him to succeed, has just been married and is going to Japan, leaving Laurie on his own. Estlin and Bangs, his theatrical partners, have promised Barbara to keep an eye on Laurie. They would like to see his latest play, and he retorts that he seeks adventure. From his window in New York he sees the reflection of a beautiful girl in a mirror in the house opposite. From the elevator boy in the girl's house Laurie learns the girl's name is Doris. Again in the mirror's reflection he sees her with a revolver and fears she means to commit suicide. He rushes into her apartment, and, winning her confidence, induces her to lunch with him, though she warns him of danger. At lunch she admits there is a mystery in her life. She says also that her funds are almost exhausted, but refuses Laurie's offer of financial help. As a stranger enters the restaurant, the girl mutters "He has found me." Upon learning that the man has no claim on her, Laurie warns the stranger not to molest the girl, whose name, Laurie learns, is Doris. To Louise Ordway, his invalid sister-in-law, Laurie admits his interest in Doris. Mrs. Ordway offers her help, but Doris refuses flatly to meet her.

"The police can stop all this nonsense," But Laurie spoke without his customary authority.

"Don't imagine that. The police know nothing about this matter, and they never will." A sudden thought struck her and she rose almost with a spring. He rose, too, staring at her in bewilderment. She caught his shoulders and held them tightly, in a grip wholly free from self-consciousness.

"If you warn the police," she said swiftly, "if you draw them into this, you will ruin everything. You will do me a harm that could never be undone. Give me your word that you won't. Please, please!"

She was almost shaking him now. Under the clasp of her hands on his shoulders Laurie paled a little, but his black eyes held her steadily.

"Of course I promise," he said, slowly, "as you make such a point of it."

She removed her hands and stepped back.

"Please go now."

"So soon? Why, I've only just come!"

"I know—but I'm tired."

There was no mistaking the sincerity of this. It was a poignant outcry. Clearly, she was at the breaking point. He took both her hands.

"This whole experience gives me the oddest feeling," he told her gently. "In one way, I seem to be dreaming it. Under it all there's a conviction that I'm on the track of the mystery; that everything will be cleared up, for us both, in another minute or two. It's merely an instinct. I can't explain it. But one thing I know. Sooner or later—sooner, I hope—I shall be able to work it out for you."

She seemed suddenly to remember that he was holding her hands. Flushing, she gently withdrew them. Then she turned, and with a brusque gesture walked away from him.

"I'm sorry I got you into this," she cried.

"Don't worry about me." He smiled at her from the door he was holding open. "May I come and take you to lunch tomorrow?"

"Not tomorrow. The next day, perhaps."

"We've got to look for that job, you know."

"With all this?" She indicated with the toe of her slipper a significant spot on the rug.

Laurie regarded the slipper with approval. It was a beautiful slipper, on a charming foot. It so diverted his mind from the main issue of the conversation that he was in the elevator and half way down to the ground floor before he recalled that issue. He was not disturbed. Doris had enough to go on with; and certainly he himself had sufficient scope for thought in the revelations she had just made.

As he walked down the outer steps of the studio building and emerged on the sidewalk, a figure detached itself from the shadow of a low iron fence and stealthily followed him. It was a short figure, overcoated out of recognition. It carried its hands in its pockets, and its head was thrust forward in a peculiar way. It kept a dozen feet behind him, until he reached the pretentious entrance of the apartment building where he dwelt.

Here, in the glaring light of two huge electric globes, conveniently held aloft for him by a pair of bronze warriors, Laurie turned suddenly, warned by the inner sense that tells us we are watched. The figure behind ducked modestly into the background, but not until he had recognized the round face and projecting nose of Herbert Ransome Shaw.

Laurie checked a passionate impulse to hurl himself upon the lurking and unpleasant shape. Slowly but surely he was learning self-control. Martin, the elevator operator, and Griggs, the night hall man, were already bidding him good evening and regarding him with friendly and interested eyes. To see him suddenly fall upon and beat a shabby stranger would surprise and pain them, besides unpleasantly stirring up the neighborhood. A better opportunity would present itself, or could be made.

In the meantime, however, he must convey to Herbert Ransome Shaw some idea of the utter contempt in which he held him. Taking Griggs confidentially by the arm, Laurie pointed out the skulking shadow.

"See that?" he asked in ringing tones.

Griggs was a Goliath in proportions and deliberate in his movements. He took his time to discover the object young Devon indicated. In the shadow the object stirred restlessly.

"Yes, sir," Griggs then said, uncertainly. "It's—it's a man, sir."

"Is it?" asked Laurie with interest, and still in loud, clear tones. "I'm afraid you're mistaken. But whatever it is, step on it!"

He entered the elevator after this crisp instruction, and was wafted up to his room. The hall man moved hesitatingly down the building's three

Perhaps we ought to cable to Warren. Sonya will know."

He spoke with such studied carelessness that Laurie flashed a sudden look at him. Under it Bangs flushed to the roots of his burnished pompadour.

"Well, well," murmured Laurie, "this is interesting! Odd I didn't notice it before."

Whatever "it" was, he gave his whole attention to it now. Leaning forward, he ostentatiously studied Bangs, with an expression at once indulgent and amazed.

"A flush on his cheek, too," he mused aloud.

"Shut up!" Bangs clenched his teeth, while the flush deepened.

"Easily irritated; respiration slightly irregular, all the familiar symptoms."

"For God's sake, Laurie, don't be an ass!" begged Bangs.

"All the familiar symptoms—of a heavy cold," murmured Laurie, sympathetically. "A hot bath and a dose of quinine might help at this stage. But if it gets worse—" Laurie reflected, anxiously shaking his head—"if it gets worse I'll send for Sonya," he finished brightly.

He rose, dodged the roll Rodney hurled at him, and strolled out of the room, opening the door again to add an afterthought that suddenly occurred to him.

"Don't risk your life by going to the hotel, old man," he added, kindly. "Take your quinine, and I will call on Sonya."

"She'll tell us whether or not to cable for Warren," repeated Bangs, with great dignity.

But Sonya, when she came into her hotel sitting-room an hour later, did not immediately solve this problem. For the moment her mind was wholly on the infant Samuel, who was to have his adenoids cut out that morning, and who had been encouraged to look forward to the experience as a new delight. While they were expressing fitting interest, Samuel himself entered the room, alone, but with all the effect of a juvenile procession. By the left leg he dragged his most cherished possession, a battered and dim-featured rag doll. Hospitably greeting the two young men, he solemnly presented the doll to Bangs.

"What's this?" asked Rodney, with a friendly impulse to adapt his conversation to the young.

"Hullen," affirmed Samuel. "Hullen, R. J."

"What does that mean?" Bangs appealed to Sonya.

"It's the doll's name. He gave it to her himself. 'Hullen,' I suppose, means Helen, and Mr. Warren's initials, you know, are R. J. Evidently Samuel liked the sound of them."

Samuel retrieved Hullen R. J. "Hullen R. J. go home! My Sammie," he further announced.

"He will," corroborated Sonya. "He never struts without her, and she sleeps in his bed every night."

Laurie turned a shocked gaze on Samuel, and Sonya laughed, then gulped.

"I'm horribly nervous this morning," she admitted. "I wish it were over. You see, a certain cherub isn't going to like matters at all after they really begin at the hotel. And his mother will be more of a burden than a help."

Bangs had an inspiration.

"Suppose I go with you," he suggested. "Then if you need a strong man to hold the cherub—"

"Two strong men," corrected Laurie. "Do you imagine that I'm going to desert Samuel in his hour of need? Besides, I've got to keep an eye on Bangs," he added sweetly, and was rewarded by a glare from that overwrought young man.

"Noticed anything odd about Bangs lately?" Laurie asked Sonya.

"I noticed nothing," she replied.

"I noticed nothing," she replied.

"I noticed nothing," she replied.

"I noticed nothing," she replied.

"I noticed nothing," she replied.

"I noticed nothing," she replied.

"I noticed nothing," she replied.

She turned on Rodney the dark gaze of her serene eyes.

"Why, no."

"You will," Laurie predicted, with a mournful shake of the head. "Watch him closely, and call on me if there are alarming symptoms that you don't understand."

Bangs rushed into confused speech. "He thinks I've got a cold," he gulped. "His nonsense, of course. Nothing in the world the matter with me. Er—how soon do we start?"

Laurie, helpless with laughter, rolled the ecstatic Samuel on the floor. Samuel's voice took on an added note of jubilation. Sonya, his mother, Hullen R. J., "Lawless," and "Missus Bangs" all going with him to the hotel—it was almost too much pleasure! Samuel became slightly intoxicated.

"He wants to sing," remarked Laurie, with masculine understanding of a fellow heart. "All right, old man," he encouraged. "How about that beautiful hymn I taught you at Bab's wedding?"

With considerable help Samuel recalled the ditty:

Hey, hey, ye gangall here,
Whalalaloo we care,
Whalalaloo we care,
Now—wow—wow—WOW—WOW!

"Laurie!" Sonya spoke with sudden austerity. "It's a relief from his mental strain," Laurie explained. "Any doctor will tell you that."

In the hotel, however, things assumed a different aspect. Still firmly holding Hullen R. J. by the leg, and keeping a steadfast eye on the surgeon, Samuel took in his immediate surroundings with a dawning suspicion in his soul. Having two men throw lights on his face and look down his throat had lost its novelty, though Sonya had assured him that wonderful views were to be seen there which he alone could reveal. Also, the men seemed hurried, and didn't want to look at Hullen R. J.'s throat, though Samuel warmly recommended this variety in the entertainment.

In short, the situation had become sinister. The smiles around him were dreadful-looking things, all except Laurie's. With an appalling howl Samuel detached himself from the surgeon's grasp and fled to Laurie, who picked him up and held him firmly and comfortably in his lap until a lady in white came with something nice for Samuel to smell.

The next thing Samuel knew was that he was in bed in a strange room. He gulped and discovered that his throat was sore. He sat up, dazed, and his mouth for a yell, and then very slowly closed it.

From every corner of the room familiar figures were hastening to his side. The lady in white, Sonya, and his mother all reached him at the same moment. On the pillow beside him Hullen R. J. awaited the honor of his attention like a perfect lady. No howls from her, as Sonya immediately pointed out. As she thus soothed, Sonya was kissing him. The lady in white was offering him something pleasant to drink. His mother was patting his back.

For a long instant Samuel took in the gratifying fact of these activities. Then he asserted his features, grabbed Hullen R. J., exchanged his yell for a large smile, and permitted himself to be waited on. Deep in his masculine consciousness he had realized that his world was normal again.

Bangs and Laurie walked up Fifth avenue together, stopping at a florist's to purchase the man's entire supply of roses for Mrs. Ordway. Bangs also discovered some masses of poinsettia and chrysanthemums that, as he said, "looked like her." Laden with these spoils, they took a taxicab to the Ordway house, where they found Jepson exuding an atmosphere of reassurance.

Yes, Mrs. Ordway seemed better. She had a more restful night, had Susanne said was quite bright this morning. Hof course she'd see Mr. Devon, hand probably Mr. Bangs, also. Jepson would hark at once.

Laurie gets mixed up in a nice, old-fashioned, knock-down drag-out, and something happens to him.

Plant Trees!

A FOREST NURSERY IN COLORADO

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE MOTTO for all good Americans during the week of April 24 to 30 should be, Plant Trees! That is American Forest week by proclamation of President Coolidge, who recommended its observance to the governors of the 48 states. In issuing his proclamation the President suggested that the agricultural question, one of the most acute national problems of the present time, might be solved to some extent if poor farm lands were converted into forests.

"One-fourth of our soil," the President said, "is better suited to timber growing than anything else. I cannot escape the conviction that our industrial and agricultural stability will be strengthened by bringing into full productive use this great empire of land. Although much progress has been made in public forestry and hopeful beginnings in private industry, we still have a vast acreage of idle or semi-idle forest land, and another large acreage of poor farm land that might more profitably grow timber instead of adding to the problem of agricultural overproduction. Our migratory forest industries would be stabilized and made permanent. Rural industry would be greatly strengthened and vitalized, agriculture would find in silviculture a strong ally, providing markets for farm produce and for surplus labor. Our farms themselves contain nearly a third of our woodland—an enormous potential farm asset if handled for continuous timber crops."

The proclamation was made public by Secretary Jardine, who announced coincidentally that Forest week observance would be directed by Frank O. Lowden, Illinois, chairman of the special committee created for that purpose.

This American Forest week committee, which is affiliated with almost one hundred of the principal associations in the United States, is making elaborate plans for the stressing of the importance of this week to every one in the country. State chairmen and state committees have been appointed from the most influential men in each state. These, together with the state forestry associations and the United States forest service, will form the nucleus for the pushing of this educational campaign on forest conditions in the United States and show the tremendous need for the preservation of forest fires and the closer utilization of our forest products. Recent statistics have shown that the great virgin forest of northwestern United States, which now supplies the bulk of this country's lumber, will last and because of the different time upon which it is observed in different states, its celebration is almost a year-round affair. Here are the dates upon which citizens of the various states and territories celebrate the day:

Poker Not Entirely According to Hoyle

The traveling agent of a liver pill concern in the East struck this town to contract for an advertisement in the Torchlight, remarks the editor of the Snagtown (Ark.) Torchlight. Finding that he was an old newspaper man and that he purposed remaining two or three days to take in the town, we set out to post him on some of the idioms and customs. He thought he knew it all, however, and that the reason he is in bed room No. 48 in the hotel was a bullet in his groin.

It seems that he dropped into the White Eagle still and took a hand in a game of poker. The game is rather eccentric in this town. Sometimes two pairs beat four of a kind, and sometimes not. It is a good deal according to who is playing and how much there is up. It seems that our friend got a royal flush and was called by three jacks. He at once jumped to the conclusion that he had won the jackpot, but he was sadly mistaken. Tom Ephraim Smith was in the game, and it was an occasion when a pair of sixes, held by Tom, would beat four aces. While raking in the pot the liver pill man was stopped by a bullet, and even if he gets well he will have a limp in his left leg. This town isn't as big as Chicago or New

A stranger entered the outer office of a pretentious suite and inquired: "Is the boss in?"

"I will see, sir," said the courteous attendant.

Returning, he reported: "Yes, the boss is in about $40. If you will give me your card I think he would welcome the chance to leave the game."

Alligator Pears

California avocado growers do not like the idea of having people speak of their fruit as the alligator pear. The popular name can probably be traced to the thick, knobby skin of the wild West Indian varieties first put on the market. The California Avocado Growers' exchange recently issued the following protest against the reptile name, which, it is stated, does not properly describe the modern product:

TWO HOMES MADE HAPPY

By Women Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried," is the statement made by Mrs. Goldie Shoup of St. Joseph, Illinois. She declares that after taking the Compound she is in better health than before.

Mrs. J. Storms of 29 Lane Street, Paterson, N. J., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of your medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

These statements were taken from two enthusiastic letters which tell of the help that has been received from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. When women are suffering from lack of strength and from weakness, their own life and that of their family is affected. When they feel well and strong and are able to do their household work easily, happy homes are the result.

SEEING OTHERS

Douglas and Dorothy were taking a walk with Uncle John the following day when suddenly he asked them how they would like to see several thousand children.

"Several thousand!" exclaimed Dorothy. "Of course in schools, but this is Sunday and they are all scattered about in their different homes."

"I know of several thousand who aren't scattered about, though," said Uncle John. "It's quite true. And would you like to make them a visit? Sunday is their day to receive callers. They are looked after by the city as they have no homes of their own."

Douglas and Dorothy were eager to go and they started off, arriving, after a little while, before a huge building with very large grounds around it.

"Well," said Dorothy, after she had thought of the fact that they were going to see several thousand children, "they would need a big building for so many."

They walked through the gate and up the steps of the building. The matron showed them all around. They went through the school rooms and then through the dormitories. How many beds there were!

But Douglas was anxious to see where all the children were.

"I've seen where they sleep and study, but I have not seen any children."

"They are in the big play rooms and in the dining room and the reception room," said the matron.

So Douglas and Dorothy went off to see the children.

"Perhaps you would like to talk to some of them," said the matron, "and they would show you around even more. They could show you the games they play and tell you about the good times they have." So the matron left them then and Douglas and Dorothy soon made friends. What a good time they did have going about the building and finding out about the children's games and studies and everything in which they were interested.

But the most wonderful thing of all was to hear that often they gave a band concert and on many occasions, too, for they had a splendid band played by the children, which Douglas and Dorothy were invited to come back and hear.

"Well," said Douglas, soberly, "it makes us realize how very, very lucky we are, for we have a mother and a father and an Uncle John and each other!"

Uncle John took them further up into the city that afternoon.

"This," he said, after they had arrived at a park where they could see far out over Long Island and the glorious Hudson far below them, "is the highest point on the whole of the island of Manhattan and that is the reason we can get such a view."

The children walked all about the park. How they did admire the scenery and the magnificent view!

"This park," explained Uncle John, "connects with the Interstate park across the river and ferry boats will take the people from one pleasure ground to the other, and all this beautiful land will be kept for every one to enjoy."

"Oh," exclaimed Douglas, "I can see the Storm King mountain, the Harlem river, the Speedway and the New York university grounds." He was almost out of breath by this time, but Dorothy was exclaiming.

"That's not all. I can see the Statue of Liberty."

"Way, way back in the Revolutionary days," said Uncle John, "this was used as a fort."

"How glorious," said Douglas. "Years ago it was to protect the people that this place was so necessary and now it is for the pleasure of their great-grandchildren that a park is to be made."

"Is the city doing all this?" asked Dorothy.

"It is a gift to the city," said Uncle John. "That is why we all will be able to use it, for it will belong to every one—all the city's people. One very rich man is giving it to the city."

"Well," said Dorothy, after a pause, "I think it is simply a wonder gift to a wonder city."

"And we'll never forget," said Douglas, "that we would not have this great, free park made for us like this if we hadn't been made free and independent by men like those who protected the old Fort Tyron."

And as the children left with Uncle John they kept thinking to themselves of wonder men in an old-time fort and of a modern wonder gift to the city!

CUTE PANTIE PLAY-FROCKS; GINGHAM'S PLACE IN MODE

LIKE so many little animated daffodils and buttercups will see tots be looking this Maytime and summer time, too, for Dame Fashion is informing mothers that until further notice yellow will rank as one of the very popular colors for little folks' dresses.

This preference for yellow is evidenced throughout all fabric showings especially gingham, organdies, voiles and dotted swisses. Included also in the list are dainty printed dimities and plaques, with flowerets scattered all over their surface or perhaps dots or pin-stripes of yellow. A piping of solid yellow, or cuffs and collars of yellow add a charming touch to frocks made of the printed fabrics. If the dress be white then cunning embroidery or applique in yellow is suggested with yellow thread or floss.

An important item in the wee tot's wardrobe is the pantie-dress. The one in the picture is made of yellow and white gingham. The collar, cuffs and pockets are finished with a buttonhole stitch worked in black and white floss. The tiny duck in the center is embroidered in black and white.

An item of importance to remember in connection with children's dresses is this—sleeves are most often of the raglan type. A reason for this is that the peasant-type frock is "all the rage" for little girls this season and even on the avenues and the boulevards.

It is a fact, society is turning out in gingham frocks at many a smart daytime event now that the mode is high-lighting cotton weaves as of outstanding style appeal. It is really amazing to see the smart styling which fashionists are giving to gingham.

In this picture are two exponents of the new gingham movement. A pin-check in the popular black-and-white makes an arresting ensemble costume as illustrated to the left. A three-quarter length coat of the gingham is posed over a straight one-piece dress of the same fabric. The vertical tucks suggest a panel at both back and front. Since it is the proper thing to line the coat throughout, in this instance a soft melon shade of gingham has been used for the purpose. The e-ton jacket suit to the right is made of hunter's green gingham with a fine black design outlined with a single thread of lighter green to which the bias banded trimmings have been matched.

That which is true of gingham is true of all cotton weaves—they have taken a place of prominence in the mode. Cotton prints which have every appearance of silk are made up with painstaking care, their appearance warranting their wear at any before-six-o'clock occasions. Printed cotton crepes are also a very smart item. Bouffant frilly organdies for summer evening wear are in anticipation, too.

Youngsters are dressing in ensemble as well as grownups, according to the new styles coming in for summer. These include cunning printed sheer frocks, with hats of the same fabric. Quaint little bonnet shapes are shirred, having quite large scoop brims. Some are lace-trimmed, placing little rosettes of valenciennes edging about the crown and brim.

Romance in fashionland! Gingham, yes, simple everyday gingham, has been promoted from the plebeian class into the ranks of the aristocrat. After all these years spent in the kitchen, the schoolroom, the nursery and the playground, as a medium for housedress, bungalow apron and play-frock, behold! gingham is making its debut at the country club, on the golf links, on the tennis courts and

The Tea Shop a Success

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

"BUT why a tea shop?" inquired their friend, Mrs. Gray.

"That is such a foolish question, Dolly," retorted Lois Raymond, "but I will try to explain; we are opening a tea shop, Polly and I, in the hope of making money."

"All the luck in the world, my dears," cried Mrs. Gray folding them both in her long arms, "but everything has turned out so differently since I went abroad—I expected to find you both engaged! Young Polly to that Burnet boy—and you, Lois, why you were engaged to Gardner Allen. Where is he?"

They both flushed. Lois Raymond shrugged away all knowledge of Gardner Allen, and young Polly denied that her acquaintance with the Burnet boy was anything except a flirtation.

"I shall be giving a luncheon next week," decided Mrs. Gray, "to about twelve people—you must let me have the shop that day."

When they were alone, Polly looked at her year older sister, "Dolly Gray is a dear," she said sincerely, "that luncheon will be the making of us, Lois."

Lois lost the little broken, far-away look she was wearing and she essayed a cheerful smile. "It may be the making of this shop! In the meantime, we must just pick up business the best way that we can. Our food is delicious, we know that, Polly."

"Even if grandfather did say—"

"Never mind what grandfather said about the tea-room business, Polly, never mind anything about the way he treated us—what he said to Gardner Allen or Bob Burnet, we cannot even guess that he could say anything very unpleasant after we have spent our lives with him since we were orphaned, but he might have given the impression that he questioned their ability to keep us in the style—oh, dear, and then we both quarreled with him, and he sent us out with a hundred dollars between us—we will have to forget poor grandfather, Polly."

After that luncheon the success of the tiny tea shop was assured.

Then one momentous day, Bobby Burnet came in with another girl! The girl was studying the luncheon card. Bobby, looking rather bored, suddenly saw Polly standing beside their table and started violently.

He stared while the girl ordered, and when she had finished and waited for him he made a strong effort to concentrate.

"A sandwich—anything will do—"

"A cup of tea," was his order.

Polly's dimple suddenly came into her cheek, and she went behind the scenes and worked furiously over a very delectable chicken salad sandwich for Bobby. Somehow, the little look of joy in Polly's eyes remained there for days.

One sunny autumn day, when both the girls secretly longed for a good horseback ride in the country, the business in the little shop was very dull. Only a dozen people came to eat and then left at once.

"I suppose it is too beautiful out of doors for people to spend a spare moment in here," murmured Lois.

"Somebody coming now," remarked Polly, as three men entered the low door. When the first one lifted his bowed head, the girl almost cried aloud.

It was her grandfather, and accompanying him were Gardner Allen and Bobby Burnet! The latter came forward, smiling pleasantly at Polly.

"Can you arrange a table for five—we are expecting two ladies to join us—just a regular luncheon—anything you please will do." He rejoined his companions and they stood in front of the window, looking into the sunny street where their car was at the curb, while the two girls rapidly arranged a round table for five. When everything was ready, Lois went forward.

"The table is ready, sir," she said to her grandfather.

"Very good, Lois, my dear," he said and bent and kissed her tenderly. This was too much for young Polly, who came for her embrace and then when the three were standing at their chairs, grandfather said, "We are waiting for you girls to join us, one on either side of me, if you please!"

At the close of the meal, it was the grandfather who rose in his chair with his water glass in his hand.

"I propose the health of the tea shop," he said.

They drank solemnly, and grandfather lifted his glass once more and looked at the two girls and the two young men with smiling eyes. "Almost a year ago," he said, "two young men came to me and asked me for the hands and hearts of my granddaughters. I asked them to go away for a year, and then return—and they have kept their word. Before my granddaughters married I wanted to be sure that they could be self-supporting in case of adversity, so I quarreled with them and we parted. It has nearly broken my heart, but they have proved to be pure gold—they have succeeded, and if all four of you are of the same mind, we will consider the matter settled, and close the tea shop now, and then we will all go out to the country club for the afternoon!"

That is the real secret of why the popular little tea shop changed hands, and how Lois and Polly married the men of their hearts and they all came to live with grandfather in the big house.

Popular Texan Praises Tanlac

Patrick Dougherty New Man Now

Widely and well known in Southern states, Mr. Dougherty had had breakdown due to stomach trouble of 10 years' standing. Tried Tanlac and felt improved; persevered and fully overcame distressing symptoms

In his active outdoor life as a dealer in horses and mules, Mr. Patrick Dougherty has traveled all through the South, making and keeping a host of friends. His home is now at 203 West Central Ave., Fort Worth, Texas. For ten years stomach trouble afflicted him.

"I suffered untold agony," he said recently. "The very odor of food sickened me and what little I could eat lay like a stone in my stomach."

"Each morning I would rise with an awful pain inside me, and I had no heart for the day's work. Life was a dreary drudge to me then. I grew weak and sallow, lost weight and was easily exhausted. I grew discouraged and depressed."

"Seeing what it had done for other sick folks, I gave Tanlac a trial and can truthfully say it gave me relief. Three bottles convinced me of its value so I continued till six were finished. The awful weight and pains in my stomach soon disappeared and my appetite came back. I was able to sleep naturally again for the first time in years. Now I'm strong and well; nothing bothers me. Tanlac will always have a warm place in my heart."

What Tanlac did for Mr. Dougherty it has done for many thousands of others. Over a hundred thousand grateful friends have written to tell us so. If you're in poor health, try Tanlac. Your druggist has it. Over 52 million bottles sold.

The GIRL in the MIRROR

STORY FROM THE START

Laurie Devon, a gay young chap somewhat inclined to wildness, has recently succeeded as a playwright. His wealthy sister Barbara, who has helped him to succeed, has just been married and is going to Japan, leaving Laurie on his own. Epstein and Bangs, his theatrical partners, have promised Barbara to keep an eye on Laurie. They told him for his laziness of late, and he retorts that he seeks adventure. From his window in New York he sees the reflection of a beautiful girl in a mirror in the house opposite. From the elevator boy in the girl's hands Laurie learns the girl's name is Mayo. Again in the mirror's reflection he sees her with a revolver and fears she means to commit suicide. He rushes into her apartment, and, winning her confidence, induces her to lunch with him, though she warns him of danger. At lunch she admits there is a mystery in her life. She says also that her funds are almost exhausted, but refuses Satty Laurie's offer of financial help. As a stranger enters the restaurant, the girl mutters "He has found me." Upon learning that the man has no claim on her, Laurie warns the stranger not to molest the girl, whose name, Laurie learns is Doris. To Louise Ordway, his invalid sister-in-law, Laurie admits his interest in Doris. Mrs. Ordway offers her help, but Doris refuses Satty to meet her.

"The police can stop all this nonsense." But Laurie spoke without his customary authority.

"Don't imagine that. The police know nothing about this matter, and they never will." A sudden thought struck her and she rose almost with a spring. He rose, too, staring at her in bewilderment. She caught his shoulders and held them tightly, in a grip wholly free from self-consciousness.

"If you warn the police," she said swiftly, "if you draw them into this, you will ruin everything. You will do me a harm that could never be undone. Give me your word that you won't. Please, please!"

She was almost shaking him now. Under the clasp of her hands on his shoulders Laurie paled a little, but his black eyes held hers steadily.

"Of course I promise," he said, slowly, "as you make such a point of it."

She removed her hands and stepped back.

"Please go now."

"So soon? Why, I've only just come."

"I know—but I'm tired."

There was no mistaking the sincerity of this. It was a poignant outcry. Clearly, she was at the breaking point. He took both her hands.

"This whole experience gives me the oddest feeling," he told her gently. "In one way, I seem to be dreaming. Under it all there's a conviction that I'm on the track of the mystery; that everything will be cleared up, for us both, in another minute or two. It's merely an instinct. I can't explain it. But one thing I know. Sooner or later—sooner, I hope—I shall be able to work it out for you."

She seemed suddenly to remember that he was holding her hands. Flushing, she gently withdrew them. Then she turned, and with a brusque gesture walked away from him.

"I'm sorry I got you into this," she cried.

"Don't worry about me." He smiled at her from the door he was holding open. "May I come and take you to lunch tomorrow?"

"Not tomorrow. The next day, perhaps."

"We've got to look for that job, you know."

"With all this?" She indicated with the toe of her slipper a significant spot on the rug.

Laurie regarded the slipper with approval. It was a beautiful slipper, on a charming foot. It so diverted his mind from the main issue of the conversation that he was in the elevator and half way down to the ground floor before he recalled that issue. He was not disturbed. Doris had enough to go on with; and certainly he himself had sufficient scope for thought in the revelations she had just made.

As he walked down the outer steps of the studio building and emerged on the sidewalk, a figure detached itself from the shadow of a low iron fence and stealthily followed him. It was a short figure, overcoated out of the recognition. It carried its hands in its pockets, and its head was thrust forward in a peculiar way. It kept a dozen feet behind him, until he reached the pretentious entrance of the apartment building where he dwelt.

Here, in the glaring light of two huge electric globes, conveniently held aloft for him by a pair of bronze warriors, Laurie turned suddenly, warned by the inner sense that tells us we are watched. The figure behind ducked modestly into the background, but not until he had recognized the round face and projecting nose of Herbert Ransome Shaw.

Laurie checked a passionate impulse to hurl himself upon the lurking and unpleasant shape. Slowly but surely he was learning self-control. Martin, the elevator operator, and Griggs, the night hall man, were already bidding him good evening and regarding him with friendly and interested eyes. To see him suddenly fall upon and beat a shabby stranger would surprise and pain them, besides unpleasantly stirring up the neighborhood. A better opportunity would present itself, or could be made.

In the meantime, however, he must convey to Herbert Ransome Shaw some idea of the utter contempt in which he held him. Taking Griggs confidentially by the arm, Laurie pointed out the skulking shadow.

"See that?" he asked in ringing tones.

Griggs was a Goliath in proportions and deliberate in his movements. He took his time to discover the object young Devon indicated. In the shadow the object stirred restlessly.

"Yes, sir," Griggs then said, uncertainly. "It's—it's a man, sir."

"Is it?" asked Laurie with interest, and still in loud, clear tones. "I'm afraid you're mistaken. But whatever it is, step on it!"

He entered the elevator after this crisp instruction, and was wafted up to his rooms. The hall man moved hesitatingly down the building's three

Perhaps we ought to cable to Warren. Sonya will know."

He spoke with such studied carelessness that Laurie flashed a sudden look at him. Under it Bangs flushed to the roots of his burnished pompadour.

"Well, well," murmured Laurie, "this is interesting! Odd I didn't notice it before."

Whatever "it" was, he gave his whole attention to it now. Leaning forward, he ostentatiously studied Bangs, with an expression at once indulgent and amazed.

"A flush on his cheek, too," he mused aloud.

"Shut up!" Bangs clenched his teeth, while the flush deepened.

"Easily irritated; respiration slightly irregular, all the familiar symptoms."

"For God's sake, Laurie, don't be an ass!" begged Bangs.

"All the familiar symptoms—of a heavy cold," murmured Laurie, sympathetically. "A hot bath and a dose of quinine might help at this stage. But if it gets worse—Laurie reflect, anxiously shaking his head—"if it gets worse I'll send for Sonya," he finished brightly.

He rose, dodged the roll Rodney buried at him, and stroled out of the room, opening the door again to add an afterthought that suddenly occurred to him.

"Don't risk your life by going to the hotel, old man," he added, kindly. "Take your quinine, and I will call on Sonya."

"She'll tell us whether or not to cable for Warren," repeated Bangs, with great dignity.

But Sonya, when she came into her hotel sitting-room an hour later, did not immediately solve this problem. For the moment her mind was wholly on the infant Samuel, who was to have his adenoids cut out that morning and who had been encouraged to look forward to the experience as a new delight. While they were expressing fitting interest, Samuel himself entered the room, alone, but with all the effect of a juvenile procession. By the left leg he dragged his most cherished possession, a battered and dim-featured rag doll. Hospitably greeting the two young men, he solemnly presented the doll to Bangs.

"What's this?" asked Rodney, with a friendly impulse to adapt his conversation to the young.

"Hullen," affirmed Samuel, "Hullen, R. J."

"What does that mean?" Bangs appealed to Sonya.

"It's the doll's name. He gave it to her himself. 'Hullen,' I suppose, means Helen, and Mr. Warren's initials, you know, are R. J. Evidently Samuel liked the sound of them."

Samuel retrieved Hullen R. J., "Hullen R. J. go 'ho! wiv Sammy," he further announced.

"She will," corroborated Sonya. "He never struts without her, and she sleeps in his bed every night."

Laurie turned a shocked gaze on Samuel, and Sonya laughed, then gulped.

"I'm horribly nervous this morning," she admitted. "I wish it were over. You see, a certain cherub isn't going to like matters at all after they really begin at the 'ho! wiv Sammy."

Bangs had an inspiration.

"Suppose I go with you," he suggested. "Then if you need a strong man to hold the cherub—"

"Two strong men," corrected Laurie. "Do you imagine that I'm going to desert Samuel in his hour of need? Besides, I've got to keep an eye on Bangs," he added sweetly, and was rewarded by a glare from that overwrought young man.

"Noticed anything odd about Bangs lately?" Laurie asked Sonya.

As He Walked Down the Outer Steps of the Studio Building and Emerged on the Sidewalk a Figure Detached Itself From the Shadows.

steps to the sidewalk. One never knew exactly what young Devon was getting at. Still, if he really wanted Griggs to step on anything—

Griggs stopped. A slight sensation of disappointment swept over him. He was a conscientious man who desired to do his duty. But there was absolutely nothing for him to step on, except the snow-covered and otherwise inoffensive pavement.

CHAPTER VIII

Samuel Plays a New Game

The next morning Laurie awoke from troubled dreams with a vague feeling that life was getting a rise out of him, a feeling that the absent morning greeting of Rodney Bangs did not help to dissipate.

Without realizing it, young Devon had rather sunned himself in the adulation of his chum. When this adulation was removed, he missed it; and for the present, at least, there was no question that adulation was lacking.

Not that Bangs failed in any of the outward forms of friendship, but his manner had changed. He was increasingly preoccupied. When Laurie spoke, Bangs had the effect of coming to him from a long distance, and even of having one foot extended, as it were, for the return journey.

The two young men breakfasted together, for the first time in several days; and over their coffee and cigarettes Laurie confided to his friend his new anxiety about Mrs. Ordway.

Bangs at once became human. Indeed, he showed a degree of solicitude that surprised his friend. It was suddenly clear that Rodney was vastly interested in Louise. He had even ventured to call on her, though Laurie did not yet know this; for the first call was made, as it happened, on the afternoon of the day when the two young men had indulged in their first serious quarrel.

Bangs, usually the most modest and self-conscious of youths, had abruptly lost his shyness under the urge of a need to talk about his chum to some one who would understand. And Louise had understood, quite surprisingly. Recalling the long talk he and she had had, the help she had given him, the plans they had made, Rodney grew very serious.

"It's lucky Sonya's in town," he said, when this further fact had been revealed. "Let's go over to the hotel and see her right after breakfast."

Poker Not Entirely According to Hoyle

The traveling agent of a liver pill concern in the East struck this town to contract for an advertisement in the Torchlight, remarks the editor of the Snagtown (Ark.) Torchlight. Flindling that he was an old newspaper man and that he purposed remaining two or three days to take in the town, we set out to post him on some of the idioms and customs. He thought he knew it all, however, and that's the reason he is in bed room No. 48 in the hotel with a bullet in his groin.

It seems that he dropped into the White Eagle still and took a hand in a game of poker. The game is rather eccentric in this town. Sometimes two pairs beat four of a kind, and sometimes not. It is a good deal according to who is playing and how much there is up. It seems that our friend got a royal flush and was called by three jacks. He at once jumped to the conclusion that he had won the jackpot, but he was sadly mistaken. Tom Ephriam Smith was in the game, and he was an occasion when a pair of sixes, if held by Tom, would beat four aces. While raking in the pot the liver pill man was stopped by a bullet, and even if he gets well he will have a limp in his left leg. This town isn't as big as Chicago or New

Plant Trees!

AFTER A FURIOUS FIRE

ELM TREE CAPITAL GROUNDS WASHINGTON

BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE motto for all good Americans during the week of April 24 to 30 should be, Plant Trees! That is American Forest week by proclamation of President Coolidge, who recommended its observance to the governors of the 48 states. In issuing his proclamation the President suggested that the agricultural question, one of the most acute national problems of the present time, might be solved to some extent if poor farm lands were converted into forests.

"One-fourth of our soil," the President said, "is better suited to timber growing than anything else. I cannot escape the conviction that our industrial and agricultural stability will be strengthened by bringing into full productive use this great empire of land."

"Although much progress has been made in public forestry and hopeful beginnings in private industry, we still have a vast aggregate of idle or semi-idle forest land, and another large aggregate of poor farm land that might more profitably grow timber instead of adding to the problem of agricultural overproduction."

"Our migratory forest industries would be stabilized and made permanent. Rural industry would be greatly strengthened and vitalized, agriculture would find in silviculture a strong ally, providing markets for farm produce and for surplus labor. Our farms themselves contain nearly a third of our woodland—an enormous potential farm asset if handled for continuous timber crops."

The proclamation was made public by Secretary Jardine, who announced coincidentally that Forest week observance would be directed by Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, chairman of the special committee created for that purpose.

This American Forest week committee, which is affiliated with almost one hundred of the principal associations in the United States, is making of elaborate plans for the stressing of the importance of this week to every one in the country. State chairmen and state committees have been appointed from the most influential men in each state. These, together with the state forestry associations and the United States forest service, will form the nucleus for the pushing of this educational campaign on forest conditions in the United States and showing the tremendous need for the prevention of forest fires and the closer utilization of our forest products.

Recent statistics have shown that the great virgin forest of northwestern United States, which now supplies the bulk of this country's lumber, will last at the rate now being cut, only twenty to twenty-five more years. After this, the price of all wood products will not only take a fast upward trend but, if the present rate of consumption is continued, the supply will be insufficient to handle the demand with resultant shortage. To prevent this, steps must now be taken to prevent waste in the utilization of forest products, to prevent loss from forest fires and to secure the establishment of privately owned state or national forests on all lands best suited for forest use, 80,000,000 acres of which are now lying idle, either barren or covered with brush and costing the nation a tremendous annual loss in potential income.

Due to the fact that over 80 per cent of all the forest fires are man caused, the greatest step in preventing the tremendous loss from this cause will be in teaching the public the necessity of the greatest care in the use of fire whether in camp fires, cigarettes or cigars, both when on the road and when camping.

One of the leading organizations in the celebration of this week is the American Tree association, headed by Charles Lathrop Pack, a pioneer in the campaign to save our vanishing forests. One of the efforts of the association for observance of American Forest week is in urging all Americans to "plant a Centennial tree and register it with the American Tree association so that your name will be on the honor roll of tree planters and good citizens 50 years from now."

The association wants to see thousands of trees planted and marked so that the Centennial of Arbor day, started in 1872 by J. Sterling Morton, will see the greatest celebration ever held in this country.

The association will send to each tree planter a certificate of membership, advice of experts as to the care of trees, and other educational data having to do with planting "Roads of Remembrance," memorial trees, memorial parks, town forests, and kindred subjects.

"The American Tree association aims to make this country a nation of tree planters," says Mr. Pack, in making the announcement. "The people of this country must see the value of trees and tree planting. After planting individual trees themselves, they will come to see the value of town forests and town wood lots."

"We aim to make every tree planter a member of one big organization, the object of which is to plant more trees, so that there will be in the years to come a great intelligent army of tree planters who will be able the better to realize and understand the great questions having to do with the care and protection of one of our greatest natural resources."

"Plant Trees!" is also the motto for Arbor day which is being celebrated in many states this month. For the date of Arbor day is a variable one and because of the different date upon which it is observed in different states, its celebration is almost year-round affair. Here are the dates upon which citizens of the various states and territories celebrate Arbor day:

Alligator Pears

California avocado growers do not like the idea of having people speak of their fruit as the alligator pear. The popular name can probably be traced to the thick, knobby skin of the wild West Indian varieties first put on the market. The California Avocado Growers' exchange recently issued the following protest against the reptile name, which, it is stated, does not properly describe the modern product:

Alligator Pears

"It is bad enough that a Welsh rabbit contains no rabbit, and that no horse has ever eaten horse radish, but that the avocado, an exalted member of the laurel family, should be called an alligator pear is beyond all understanding. The humiliation of calling this fruit after a repulsive reptile is too great to bear."—Pathfinder Magazine.

S. J. R. No. 24
Proposing an amendment of Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of Article V of the Constitution of Texas for the purpose of providing a more efficient judicial system.

Be it Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas:

Section 1: That Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of Article V of the Constitution of the State of Texas, be amended so as to read as follows:

Section 2 (of Article V): The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and eight Associate Justices, five of whom shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of five Judges shall be necessary to the decision of a case. No person shall be eligible to the office of Chief Justice or Associate Justice of the Supreme Court unless he be, at the time of his election or appointment, a citizen of the United States and of this State, and unless he shall have attained the age of thirty years and shall have been a licensed lawyer for seven years and, during that time, shall have been a practicing lawyer or Judge of a court of record, or such practicing lawyer and Judge together. Said Chief Justice and Associate Justices shall be elected by the qualified voters of the State, at a general election, and shall hold their offices six years, or until their successors are elected and qualify, and shall receive such compensation as may be provided by law. In case of a vacancy in the office of Chief Justice or Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, the Governor shall fill the vacancy until the next general election for State officers, and at such general election the vacancy for the unexpired term shall be filled by election by the qualified voters of the State. The Judges of the Supreme Court who may be in office at the time this amendment takes effect shall continue in office until the expiration of their terms of office under the present Constitution and until their successors are elected and qualify. When this amendment takes effect the Governor shall immediately appoint six additional Associate Justices of the Supreme Court for terms of office so that the terms of two of such appointed Associate Justices shall expire with the term of office of each of the present members of the Supreme Court, and, upon the qualification of such new Justices, the Commission of Appeals of the State of Texas shall terminate.

Section 3 (of Article V): The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction only, except as herein specified, which shall be co-extensive with the limits of the State. Its appellate jurisdiction shall extend to questions of law arising in the cases in the Courts of Civil Appeals in which the Judges of any Court of Civil Appeals may disagree or where the several courts of civil appeals may hold differently on the same question of law, or where a statute of the State is held void, and to questions of law arising in such other cases of which the Courts of Civil Appeals have appellate jurisdiction as may be prescribed by law; provided, that the Legislature may authorize direct appeals from the County and District Courts in any case where a statute of the State has been declared void. The Supreme Court and the Judges thereof shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus as may be prescribed by law; and, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, the said Court and the Judges thereof may issue the writs of mandamus, procedendo, certiorari, and such other writs as may be necessary to enforce its jurisdiction. The Legislature may confer original jurisdiction on the Supreme Court to issue writs of quo warranto and mandamus in such cases as may be specified except as against the Governor of the State. The Supreme Court shall also have power, upon affidavit or otherwise, as by the Court may be determined, to ascertain such matters of fact as may be necessary to the proper exercise of its jurisdiction. The Supreme Court shall be open at all times and shall sit at the State Capital for the transaction of business at such times as may be designated by the Court. The present statutes defining the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court not in conflict herewith shall continue in effect until repealed or altered by the Legislature. The Supreme Court shall appoint a Clerk, who shall give bond in such manner as is now or may hereafter be required by law, and he may hold his office for four years, and shall be subject to removal by said Court for good cause entered of record on the minutes of said Court, and who shall receive such compensation as the Legislature may provide.

Section 4 (of Article V): The Court of Criminal Appeals shall consist of three Judges, provided that the Legislature may increase the number to five, and a majority of the Judges shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of a majority of the Judges shall be necessary to the decision of any case. Said Judges shall have the same qualifications and receive the same salaries as the Judges of the Supreme Court. They shall be elected by the qualified voters of the State, at a general election, and shall hold their offices for a term of six years. The Judges of the Court of Criminal Appeals who may be in office at the time this amendment takes effect shall continue in office until the expiration of their terms of office under the present Constitution and laws.

Section 5 (of Article V): The Court of Criminal Appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction co-extensive with the limits of the State in all criminal cases of whatever grade, with such exceptions and under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and the Legislature may confer original jurisdiction upon it to issue writs of mandamus, procedendo and certiorari in criminal cases. The Court of Criminal Appeals and the Judges thereof shall have the power to issue the writ of habeas corpus and, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, issue such writs as may be necessary to enforce its own jurisdiction. The Court of Criminal Appeals shall have the power, upon affidavit or otherwise, to ascertain such matters of fact as may be necessary to the exercise of its jurisdiction. Said Court shall be open at all times and shall sit at the State Capital for the transaction of business at such time as may be designated by it. Said Court shall appoint a clerk, who shall give bond in such manner as is now or may hereafter be required by law, and he shall hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed by the Court for good cause entered of record on the minutes of said Court, and said Clerk shall receive such compensation as may be prescribed by law.

Section 6 (of Article V): The Legislature shall, from time to time, divide the State into such number of Supreme Judicial Districts as to it may seem necessary, not exceeding twelve at any one time, and shall have the power to re-district the State at any time, and shall establish a Court of Civil Appeals in each of said Districts, which Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and not less than two Associate Justices as the Legislature may provide, who shall have the qualifications as herein prescribed for Justices of the Supreme Court, provided that the aggregate number of Judges of all the Courts of Civil Appeals shall never at one time exceed thirty-six. Each of the existing Courts of Civil Appeals shall continue until otherwise provided by law. The Courts of Civil Appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction co-extensive with the limits of their respective districts, which shall extend to all civil cases of which the District Courts or County Courts have original or appellate jurisdiction, under such restrictions and regulations as may be prescribed by law; provided, that the decisions of said Courts shall be conclusive on all questions of fact brought before them on appeal or error. Such Courts of Civil Appeals shall hold their sessions at such places as may be designated by the Legislature and at such times as may be prescribed by law. Said Justices shall be elected by the qualified voters of their respective Districts, at a general election, for a term of six years, and shall receive such compensation as may be provided by law. Said Courts shall have such other jurisdiction, original and appellate, as may be prescribed by law. Each Court of Civil Appeals shall appoint a Clerk in the same manner as the Clerk of the Supreme Court, which Clerk shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by law. The Judges of the Courts of Civil Appeals who may be in office when this amendment takes effect shall hold their offices until their respective terms shall expire under their present election or appointment.

Section 7 (of Article V): The State shall be divided into as many Judicial Districts as may now or hereafter be provided by law, which may be increased or diminished by law. For each district there shall be elected by the qualified voters thereof, at a general election, a Judge, who shall be a citizen of the United States, and of this State, who shall have been a licensed lawyer for four years next preceding his election, and during that time shall have been a practicing lawyer or Judge of a Court of record or such practicing lawyer and Judge together, who shall have resided in the District in which he was elected for two years next preceding his election, who shall reside in his District during his term of office, who shall hold his office for the term of four years and shall receive for his services such compensation as may be prescribed by law. He shall hold the regular terms of his Court at the County seat of each County in his district at least twice in each year, in such manner as may be prescribed by law. The Legislature shall have power, by general or special laws, to authorize the holding of special terms of the court or the holding of more than two terms in any County for the dispatch of business. The Legislature shall also provide for the holding of District Court when the Judge thereof is absent or is, from any cause, disabled or disqualified from presiding. The Supreme Court or the Chief Justice thereof may assign any District Judge to any District in the State other than that for which he was elected, with all the powers of a resident District Judge of the District to which he is assigned, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Legislature, or by the Supreme Court in the absence of such regulations enacted by the Legislature. The District Judges who may be in office when this amendment takes effect shall hold their offices until their respective terms shall expire under their present election or appointment.

Sec. 2: Said proposed amendment shall be submitted to a vote of the electors of this State qualified to vote on constitutional amendments at an election to be held throughout the State on the first Monday in August, A. D. 1927, at which each voter opposing said amendment shall scratch off of the ballot with pen or pencil the following words printed thereon:

"For the amendment to the State Constitution amending Section 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of Article V of the Constitution of Texas for the purpose of providing a more efficient judicial system;" and each voter favoring said amendment shall scratch off of the ballot in the same manner, the following words printed thereon:

"Against the amendment to the State Constitution amending Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of Article V of the Constitution of Texas for the purpose of providing a more efficient judicial system."

If it shall appear from a return of said election that a majority of the votes cast have been cast in favor of said amendment, it shall become a part of the Constitution of the State of Texas.

Sec. 3: The Governor shall issue his proclamation calling said election and have the same published and said election held in accordance with this resolution and the Constitution and laws of this State; and return shall be made and the votes canvassed and counted as provided by law; and if said amendment is adopted by the required vote of the qualified electors of this State, the Governor shall issue his proclamation as required by law.

Sec. 4: The sum of twelve thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of the State Treasury to pay for publication of the proclamation calling said election and any expense of the State in submitting said amendment and holding said election.
