JOEL B. HARRELL

With the passing of Joel B. Harrell at his home in this city early Tuesday morning, Sanderson has lost one of its pioneer as well as most respected citizen. Death followed an illness of only a short duration, altho' he had been in failing health for a year or more.

Joel B. Harrell was born in Gonzales county December 21, 1850. A native Texan, he witnessed the growth of Texas from its early days. Mr. Harrell was among the first settlers at Ozona. Twenty five years ago he moved to this county and made his home here ever since. No higher tribute could be paid him than to say that he was a good, useful citizen, a man whose word could be relied upon and was a friend and helpful neighbor. He was devoted to his family and they have the consolation that his good deeds and honesty above all will be a brightness to remember. Early in life he joined the Church of Christ and has been a faithful member for over forty years.

Mr. Harrell is survived by his wife Mrs. Bessie Harrell, and the following children: Miss Myrtle of this city, Mrs. George Newberry of San Angelo, Mrs. W. A. Cochran of San Antonio, Mrs. Clyde Crozier of Waelder, Frank and Roy Harrell of this city and Melvern of Phoenix, Arizona; all of whom were here to attend the funeral except Melvern. He is also survived by two brothers, F. N. Harrell of this city and George Harrell of Ozona, as well as numerous grand children and great grand children, and a host of friends to mourn his loss.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning, Rev. V. L. Wunneberger of the Church of Christ officiating at the cemetery. The remains were laid to rest 'neath a mound of floral offering attesting the esteem this good man was held in. The entire community extends condolence to the bereaved ones.

DELPHIAN SOCIETY

The first meeting of the Alpha Delphian Chapter was held on Thursday, October 20, at the Masonic Hall, with fourteen members present.

Mrs. Susie Way, organizing chairman, appointed Mrs. Clyde Griffith membership secretary. Mrs. Edward Downie was elected reporter. Mrs. Joe Kerr and Mrs. Edna Mussey were added to the list of charter members.

A most interesting program on the Prehistoric Ages was given by the following: Mrs. Clyde Griffith, Mrs. Mildred Lemons, Mrs. Loehausen, Mrs. Pollard, Mrs. Laurence, Mrs. Luella Lemons, Mrs. Dave McLymont and Mrs. Edward Downie.

The Regular meeting of the Alpha Delphian Chapter was held on Wednesday afternoon at the Masonic Hall. The meeting was most enthusiastic and interesting.

Mrs. Lee joined the chapter as a charter member.

The well rendered program on Egypt was splendidly conducted with Mrs. Will Savage as leader. Those having assignments were the following: Mrs. Joe Kerr, Mrs. James Kerr, Mrs. Clyde Mills, Mrs. Guy Nations, Mrs. Rufe Murrab, Mrs. E. F. Howard and Mrs. Joe Brown.

Mrs. O. G. Porter has returned to her home in Llano following a delightful visit with her sister, Mrs. Joe Kerr.

Mrs. Charles L. Harrell left the latter part of last week for Del Rio where she will enter Draughon's Practical Business College.

AUXILIARY MEMBERS ENJOY ALL DAY MEETING

The Presbyterian Woman's Auxiliary met at the ranch home of Mrs. John Nichols Saturday, October 22, with Mesdames Lee Grigsby, Harry Newton, H. R. Laurence and Smith as hostesses. The ladies enjoyed themselves by sewing and conversation before noon. As the call for lunch was given each woman, man and child provided themselves with a plate, cup, spoon and napkin and wended their way into the kitchen to be served from the heavy laden tables of ranch cooked beans, sandwiches, cheese balls, salad, sugared potatoes, pumpkin pie, ginger cookies and coffee. Halloween decorations were used.

The regular business was taken up and our president made a report on the convention held in Del Rio, that was attended by Mrs. Will Savage, Mrs. Lee Grigsby, Mrs. J. H. Loehausen and P. F. Robertson. Each reported a pleasant and instructive trip. Plans were made to have our bazaar on November 19, at the Masonic Hall. Mrs. Nichols had charge of the program which consisted of songs in concert and papers read by members on Foreign and Home Missions. The meeting closed with a prayer by Mrs. Robertson. As each prepared to start home many snap shots were taken of all present, there being six visitors, Mrs. C. A. Brown, Mrs. Joe Nichols, Mrs. Loehausen, D. A. Pollard, Nichols, D. Kessler and 21 children with 25 auxiliary members. Each one expressed delight in being able to attend the rally meeting and voted Mrs. Nichols a successful hostess.

The next meeting will be Bible study on November 14. —Reporter.

Tyler-Peters.

A beautiful home wedding was solemnized Tuesday morning at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. O. H. McAdams, when Rev. I. E. Owens, pastor of the First Baptist Church, united in marriage Miss Bess Tyler of this city, but formerly of Sabinal, and Hubert George Peters of Sabinal. The ring ceremony, which was performed before an improvised altar of ferns, was used.

The couple entered the living room to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march which was played by Mrs. Vance McLymont. The living room was lighted by six candles which gave a soft and effective light.

The bride is the daughter of A. N. Tyler and has made her home in Sabinal until the past few months. Her sweet, lovely character makes for friends everywhere. The groom comes from an old and prominent family in Sabinal and is a prominent business man of that city.

The bride's going away costume was a black satin crepe with accessories to match. Immediately following the ceremony the happy couple left by motor for a trip to San Antonio and other points following which they will return to Sabinal where they will make their home.

Their many friends here extend congratulations and best wishes.

W. M. U. HAVE SOCIAL MEETING.

The W. M. U. held their monthly social meeting on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. D. Brown. The program was "Heathen Invasion of America." Mrs. Tardy of El Paso, who helped organize the W. M. U. here, visited with us.

Following the social meeting a business session was held and the following committees were appointed: Flower, Mrs. Druse, Mrs. Haas and Mrs. Wilson; for the bazaar, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Butler, Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Downs, Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Adams.

There was about $67 worth of merchandise and $23 in cash given for Buckner's Orphan Home. Cake, fruit salad and tea was served by the hostesses, Mrs. A. D. Brown and Mrs. Ruel Adams.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. McAdams. —Reporter.

So Clean Inside, No Fear of Perspiration Offense, However Over-Heated

Once a person realizes the wonderful properties in cascara, no other laxative in the market would ever be considered. It's not tick to "clean out the bowels." Dozens of things will do that. But a little natural cascara purifies the system clear through. Cleanses even the pores of your skin. Renders perspiration as inoffensive as so much dew! The old-fashioned way was "sals." They get action, but they take the mucous membrane along with the waste matter! Mineral oils are gentler, but they leave the bowels with a film of poisons for the blood to carry off through the pores. But when you cascade the system, you get rid of all the poisons by normal muscular action of the bowels.

"ANYTHING that gets results, was all the thought I ever gave to laxatives. In those days my perspiration was so acid, it used to rot my clothes. Then a doctor tipped me off to those wonderful little sweeteners—

Still worse was to follow. Caesar, the second in command among the maroons, owned a nondescript black dog of the spaniel type, which ranged over the island as it pleased, and on the very next evening, shortly after dark, we heard, from the woods at the southerly end of the island, a sudden agonizing yelping which ceased almost as abruptly as it began. In the darkness, the sound was positively terrifying, suggesting all kinds of unseen tortures, and Caesar by daylight as brave a man as you could find, refused to go to the rescue of his pet. In the morning we searched for him, but in vain; the dog had vanished as completely as though the earth had swallowed him.

The maid was triumphant; her story was now substantiated, and indeed by this time it did seem as if somebody or something—man or spirit—was haunting the island. Yet realizing the difficulties of exploring the mangrove swamp, we took no action save to be in before nightfall, to lock up the goats and the poultry, and on the ground floor to make sure that door and windows were thoroughly barred.

One thing, however, we did not do. We took no heed of our herd of half-wild cattle, which roamed the island at will. That they also might be attacked never crossed our minds; yet it was on the succeeding evening that another tragedy was added to the list. We had just finished supper; dusk was falling; and Helen and I were debating whether or not we would take our customary stroll, which we had abandoned since the night of the hurricane. She had asked me whether I really believed there was danger, when her question was suddenly answered for her by a great bellowing of cattle. Running to the door, I could see six or eight of them, barely visible in the dim light, dashing at full tilt toward the house, as if they felt that here at least they might find protection. I seized my gun and went out, wishing greatly that Cudjo, the leader of the maroons, were with me, but there had been much talk of a rebellion among the slaves and he had gone up the river, the day before, on a scouting trip, to see what he could learn in the way of news. Caesar and Bill, however, were already on hand, like myself, with their rifles in their hands. The three of us stood close together, casting doubtful glances at the black shadow of the woods. Caesar, usually brave as a lion, for once hesitated. "What think?" he asked me.

To tell the truth, I should have been very glad to retire into the house, but since he had appealed to me in this way, I did not wish to be quoted afterward as having counseled prudence. And, as a matter of fact, to retreat, like frightened children, because of a stampede of cattle in the darkness, appeared the very height of cowardice. And so, with a resolution I was far from feeling, and with what was, I fear, that species of false bravery which comes from the dread of being thought afraid, I replied: "I think we ought to go ahead. Come on, boys, and we'll clear up this mystery for good and all."

Thus appealed to, two old fighters like Bill and Caesar could not well demur, and at once, as the light was each instant growing dimmer, we walked rapidly toward the border of the trees. At the edge of the thicket we halted, cocked our rifles, made sure that our knives and pistols were in readiness; then, spreading out a little, slowly advanced among the trees. There were no sounds anywhere, save the faint tread of our own footsteps; and I was beginning to feel renewed courage and rather to pride myself upon my decision when we suddenly emerged into a little clearing, and as we did so I gave an uncontrollable start. I could not have said that I had seen anything, yet, fanciful as it may sound, I had a feeling that some one had been in that clearing but a moment ago; and in spite of myself I felt my hair actually bristling on my scalp. At the same moment Caesar, whose eyes were as keen as those of a lynx, gave vent to a low exclamation. At once I hastened to his side, and found him and Bill peering intently toward the farther side of the clearing.

"Look like one of cattle," said Caesar. "Maybe somebody hide. We dare go?"

By this time, though I am far from making the statement boastfully, I had become wrought up to such a pitch of excitement that now, instead of being half frightened to death, I was in a state of absolute recklessness. With a terse "Come on!" I advanced, taking advantage of the faint light that still illumined the clearing, though all beyond its boundaries was dark and silent as the grave.

I did not wait to see whether or not I was followed, for as I say I was fully beside myself with the tension of the whole affair; but, as a matter of fact Caesar and Bill were close at my heels, and in a moment we were standing by the silent heap upon the ground.

It was one of the cattle; no doubt of that. It lay in a strangely contorted position, with forelegs extended as if in a last desperate effort at flight, and with head thrown back, as it seemed to me unnaturally far. I stooped to see if the animal were really dead, and then, in my mingled surprise and horror, uttered a cry, for its strange and unnatural attitude was now explained; the heifer's neck had been broken, its throat was torn and bleeding terribly, so that the ground about was soaked with blood. With courage suddenly evaporated, I threw a terrified glance at the forbidding blackness of the woods. Surely this was not the work of human hands, and at the moment I could have sworn that I saw something moving in the trees and heard the snapping of a twig. It was enough. Thoroughly panic-stricken, all three of us dashed headlong across the clearing and through the woods beyond; nor did we stop there, but kept on running until we were once more within a stone's throw of the house. Then, indeed, we pulled up, and gazed at one another, but, with teeth set and heart hammering against my ribs, I pressed on toward the woods, thankful that at last a faint light was beginning to show around me. If I was to die, I wished to meet death face to face, not to be struck down in the dark.

I reached the edge of the clearing without mishap, and, peering forth, knew instantly that the worst had happened. In the center of the glade, face downward, lay the body of Cudjo, a little nearer, just on the edge of the clearing, a head and shoulders, projecting from the undergrowth, betrayed the body of Caesar. A hasty examination destroyed the last vestige of hope—both men were beyond all aid. Caesar, I judged, had been struck down from behind with awful force; while it was only too evident that Cudjo had met his death by the same hands that had slain the hapless heifer. I felt my brain going; never before had I believed in vampires or warlocks; yet now I did, and for an instant I was actually convinced that here was the work of some ghostly visitor from beyond the grave.

Then, in a flash of reason, I somehow regained my power of control. We had searched the island; nothing was there. This deed had happened within a few moments; if done by visitors from the mainland, they could not yet have escaped. As fast as my legs would carry me, I dashed through the strip of woods that led to the seaward point; and there—I could have shouted at the sight of it—there was a canoe of cottonwood, its single occupant making his paddles fly. It was light enough for me to see that he wore a scarlet handkerchief about his head, and even in the dim light I had the impression that he was not a negro but a white man. I threw my rifle to my shoulder, aimed at the base of the man's neck, and pressed the trigger. My aim was true, for at the report he

Life's End Sometimes Welcomed as Friend

I went in where he sat groaning beside his fire on a warm spring day, and I said, "What makes you do that, grandfather?" "Do what?" "Groan like that." "Groan?" he said. "When did I groan?" "Just now. For that matter, you do it dozens of times a day." "No!" he said, and he seemed surprised. "Do I? I think you must be mistaken." Then he looked dreamily at his fire for a moment, seeming to forget both me and my question. "Oh, ho, ho, ho, ha, hum!" he said. "There! You did it just then, grandfather. Didn't you know it?" "I believe I did groan then," he said. "Perhaps you're right. Yes, I suppose you must be." "Don't you feel well?" "Well? Yes, I'm not ill." "Then why do you groan so often?" "It must be," he answered thoughtfully, "it must be because I'm not dead."

half leaped to his feet, dropping his paddle and clutching at the air, then plunged over the side, upsetting the canoe in his fall, and floated, struggling feebly, but without, as it seemed to me, any real notion of what he was doing. With a feeling of relief that this mysterious murderer was at last laid low, I started to run to the spot where the boats lay moored, but throwing a hasty glance over my shoulder, I stopped in my tracks, for even as I looked I saw his body rise half out of the water as if impelled by some force from beneath the waves. Then swiftly and silently disappeared from sight, to rise no more. I needed no explanation; some one of the huge sharks that haunted the lagoon had secured a meal, and the identity of the mysterious murderer would never become known.

The effect of the affair on McAllister was remarkable. The solving of the mystery lifted an enormous weight from his spirits. My killing of the murderer in the canoe especially pleased him; I was in the highest favor; and again and again he praised my skill with the rifle. "What a gift!" he would say admiringly. "What a bonny gift!" And again, "Where might I be now, if I hadna written you to come and join me?"

He was so pleased, indeed, that I had not the heart to impart to him the doubts that still remained in my mind, for the more I thought about it the less I could arrive at a satisfactory conclusion. That this mysterious visitor was the murderer seemed plain; and yet, if it was against our household that he had designs, why had he slain the dog? Why had he slaughtered the heifer? What possible object was there in thus alarming our garrison and putting us on our guard? The theory which I at last adopted as the most probable was that this was a madman, seized with some blood lust, and prowling about in the darkness, like a beast of prey, to gratify his murderous frenzy.

For twenty-four hours quiet reigned. Then, at breakfast, Helen told us that her maid had, during the night, been almost frightened to death. She had awakened in the darkness, had heard a faint scraping noise outside her room, and while she had lain there, quaking at these cautious, hardly audible sounds, something—she was sure of it—had peered in at the window. It was, she thought, a large man with very broad shoulders; she had screamed, and immediately the visitor had vanished. Of course none of us took this seriously, for almost all the blacks are imaginative to the highest degree. So instead of allowing ourselves to become disturbed, we heard the story with a smile.

Thus the next night came—sultry, unbearably hot, with a high moon peering occasionally through drifting clouds. For some time I tried to sleep, but finally, overcome by wakefulness, I determined to resort to my expedient of the rope; and slipping on my lightest clothing I armed myself, dropped noiselessly to the ground, and was just starting to walk away when I heard a noise as if of a door closing, as though some one were entering or leaving the house. Flattening myself against the wall, I waited, and presently a figure came into view, not, needless to say, that of a ghost or demon, but the bent and commonplace form of McAllister, carrying a spade in his hand.

I could scarcely believe my eyes. What new phase of the mystery was this? Evidently McAllister was impelled by some motive more direct than that of mere sleeplessness, for he proceeded, with a swift and certain step, toward the mangroves. And suddenly it flashed over me. This was the spot he had examined himself—and from which he had excluded the rest of us—the day when we had searched the island. As cautiously as possible, I waited until he had disappeared; then stole hastily after him. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic, or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

Turkey Time.

To fatten turkeys for the market, begin about the first of November. Feed just enough at a time so the birds will go away a little hungry, gradually increasing the quantity until they are given all they will clean up three times a day during the week before marketing. It is a good plan to feed equal parts of wheat and oats during the first part of the fattening season, gradually changing to corn as the weather becomes cooler. Old corn is much better for turkeys than new corn, but it must be free from mustiness. Heavy feeding of new corn often results in scours.

ELECTRICITY BRINGS INCREASED COMFORT

By Herbert Hoover

"We are in the midst of a great transformation in the development of electric power—it is reducing the burden of human toil; it is increasing productivity; it is bringing increased comfort to our people."

What each workman in the United States can do with his hands is multiplied ten times by the electric power he uses. Sixty-eight million people are also using labor-saving electrical devices in their homes.

Electrical service has its greatest value because it is delivered at the time and place where it is needed. That is what electrical service means, and the foresight and enterprise of the country's light and power companies have helped make it possible.

Because power companies built power plants and transmission lines that would take care of the growing demand for service many years in advance, every new electrical invention has found an abundance of power ready to serve it. Now even the small communities get electrical service through interconnected power systems.

Enthusiastic public acceptance has done much to help build this electrical service. Three million investors own the securities of electric power companies and the whole public has benefited from rate reductions made possible through increased use of labor saving devices.

To insure the complete fulfillment of the promise of comfort and happiness which electricity offers, the American principle of individual initiative must be maintained.

Three Rivers, Tex., Oct. 24.—Friends of Charles R. Tips of this city and of San Antonio have begun a movement for his candidacy to the presidency of the South Texas Chamber of Commerce to succeed R. W. Morrison of San Antonio, who has served since the formation of the chamber.

Others being mentioned for the office, election to which will take place at the convention in Brownsville November 14 and 15, are W. T. Eldridge of Sugarland, S. C. Tucker of Brownsville, who is now vice president; E. K. Fawcett of Del Rio, second vice president.

NEW WELL FOR THIS COUNTY.

According to a news item appearing in the October 21 issue of the West Texas News, Del Rio, another well for oil will be drilled in this county. The Millham Oil Corporation of Texas will in the immediate future begin drilling for oil on Block Y.

This land on which the company is drilling was formerly owned by Julian M. Bassett, who reserved the mineral rights to the land, but is now the property of E. F. Measles. The News also stated that Mrs. J. B. McPhee, who recently closed a deal leasing 14,000 acres of land from Russ and Hal A. Hamilton, is making preparations to drill immediately. This land is located in this county close to the Val Verde County line.

BOY SCOUT NEWS.

This notice will serve as an SOS to every boy that will have a twelfth birthday between now and January 1, 1928, to send your name, postoffice address, and birthday to Scout Headquarters, Uvalde, Texas. We want to tell you about this wonderful Scout program; we want to send you a birthday card, and we want to meet you and talk with you about what you are going to do in life. Write us a letter or a postcard when you read this.

The Scouts welcome another new troop into the fold this week—this makes the nineteenth. It is at Batesville, county seat of Zavalla County. Prof. Erskine, principal of the high school there, is scoutmaster. This group of fine boys did not wait until everything was fixed for them; they approached three representative citizens and asked them if they would serve as a troop committee, and select Mr. Erskine as scoutmaster. The scoutmaster was in the office Saturday getting more supplies for his troop. Ye Scouts of the area, watch this troop. They mean business.

We are sure that the Scouts of Southwest Texas Council join with Catarina Troop 15 in extending to Scouts Thomas and Mason Sheard our sympathy in the loss of their mother, Mrs. Sheard. The Scouts showed their preparedness by being ready to serve, and the troop stood at attention on either side of the walk as the casket was being removed from the home. At the train they showed their respect in the same way. These fine lads designed and made with their own hands a most beautiful floral offering. All in all, it was a beautiful thing for a Scout troop to do, a thing they would never have done had they not been organized as a group of boys to render service to each other and to the community. The troop has pledged itself to take the place, as far as possible, of the mother's care in the lives of their brother Scouts, by helping them in every way possible.

Asherton Troop 4 appointed a committee of boys to write resolutions of sympathy for the Sheard boys in their neighboring town troop. Every Scout there is playing football or tennis. That's a good way to get rid of boy energy. Scout Bob Conly got a little bit too much football in one scrimmage, and came out with a broken collar bone. He will soon be all right, however.

Crystal City will soon have her troop organized. The troop committee and scoutmaster are already on the job, and we expect their charter application in the office this week, making Troop No. 20.

"I've never forgotten the joy I had When I was a lad And a man full grown played the friend to me. Would that every boy had such a friend as he! For many a day, when the summer came, He'd take me out to the baseball game. 'He gave me the thrill of the game complete— A grandstand seat, And all the popcorn that I could eat. Introduced me to men that I longed to meet, Taught me the rules and the players' names— And that is the way to see baseball games. 'Oh man, when you go with that merry throng, Take a boy along! Talk with him, walk with him, let him share In the glorious thrill of the game out there; And down to the end of your life you'll be That small boy's happiest memory. 'For there's nothing a boy likes better than To be chum to a man! And I'll say for the friend who was good to me That never a baseball game I see But I think of him and his kindly ways When I was a boy in those early days."

FACTS ABOUT FISH

By J. G. Burr
Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, Austin.

The days of "the poor fish" are few and full of troubles. They come forth by the millions and are cut down. If by chance they escape the angler and other dangers, the water hole or stream may dry up; and that is what happened the past summer in many parts of Texas. For the first time in the history of the department, deputies were assigned to rescue work and approximately half a million fish were transferred from Vanishing streams and ponds to places of safety, as shown in the annual report of Commissioner Will J. Tucker.

As an interesting sidelight stagnant pools and occasional dead fish told the story of vanishing oxygen. Stagnation, putrefaction and disappearance of dissolved oxygen, go hand in hand. The life of a fish is keyed to a normal supply of oxygen and when this is depleted the fish is undernourished. Also, long, hot summers reduce the oxygen, especially in ponds where there is little aeration by movement of the water, and the resistance of fish is broken down.

Recent reports to the department told of fish dying in apparently good ponds where no pollution existed, and while no field tests were made, every indication pointed to insufficient oxygen. Artificial aeration was suggested to one correspondent, whose pond was supplied by a pump, by spraying the water as it entered the pool. Super-saturation of dissolved oxygen is thus obtained, other conditions being favorable.

The normal of dissolved oxygen at sea level in a given volume of water is 0.6 per cent. Authorities claim that 0.4 per cent is the danger line and that 0.2 per cent is insufficient to sustain fish life. Clearly a one-third loss of ration is serious, and two thirds loss, indicated by the lower figure, would necessarily be fatal to fish.

LOBOS FACE FARE

Alpine, Tex., Oct. 26.—The Sul Ross Teachers' College Lobos left Alpine today, and they will play the third and fourth games of their schedule before they return again to Alpine. On October 22 they are to play the strong Texas Tech team at Lubbock, and on October 27 they are to take on Howard Payne at Brownwood. These two games will almost establish a Texas record for a traveling football team, as by the time that the game at Brownwood is over, the Lobos will have played four games away from the home field.

When this trip is over, however, there will remain but one game which the Lobos will have to play away from home—the one with Schreiner Institute at Del Rio. The other opponents will be met at Alpine.

The first game of the season for the Lobos was with Abilene Christian College at Abilene and resulted in a close defeat. In their second they were more fortunate, having found their stride, and swamped the strong New Mexico A. & M. team to the tune of 19-6.

In spite of the fact that Howard Payne and Texas Tech both report strong aggregations, the Lobos are out for meat. They consider themselves the best team in the highlands of Southwest Texas and New Mexico and they are confident that they will prove that football in this section is the equal to that played in the rest of the State.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

BILLIE BROWNIE'S TRIP

Billie Brownie had been taking a trip and when he came back of course all the brownies and fairies and gnomes wanted to hear what Billie Brownie had seen.

"Oh, I saw so much," Billie Brownie said, "that I don't know how I can ever tell everything."

"Begin," the others urged.

"Well, first of all I saw a great many children, and they were playing a game and were making up talks as they went along. It was no real language at all—just made-up words of their own and they could understand each other pretty well as they all understood the made-up words."

"I thought maybe we could have a private special language, too—a funny new one."

All of the others thought this was a jolly idea.

"Then I saw my little friend Melly eating ice cream off the dasher."

"The ice cream had just been made and Melly was having a fine time with the dasher from the freezer. She had been hearing the freezing of the ice cream for some time and oh, what a happy moment it was for her when she was called and asked if she would like a little taste of the ice cream before it was packed.

"How she hurried. The ice cream was always so good that way before it was quite frozen."

"I saw two boys who were so glad that today was not tomorrow! Today it showered a little and tomorrow they wanted to go off on a camping trip and wanted it to be quite dry at the start, and they said that tomorrow would be a fine day, according to all the signs."

"I saw two little girls out walking with their doll carriages and the carriages were exactly like baby carriages and the little girls were talking to their babies as if they loved them so much."

"One little girl, stretching out her arms very wide, as wide as she could, said:

"I love my baby doll that much."

"And I saw the people who live in the old white house where they do things with such order and enjoy the order, too. They always are to be found on the back steps in the morning, on the front steps in the afternoon, in the downstairs bedroom when fixing up a birthday table, and in the old parlor when it's very, very hot."

"I saw little Edna, who said she was much upset because she had just seen a large bird who had looked at her as though she should be ashamed of herself not to have a worm about her to give to him."

"He already had one in his beak and to feed his hungry baby, and would have scolded her, she felt sure, if he could have done so without dropping the worm."

"And I saw Joe who had written a little note to the mice on his typewriter and left it for them so they could see it."

"The mice had been eating Joe's special box of crackers. And Joe had asked them to please not eat so much. He had written a very polite note, and had called them 'Dear Mice' and then I heard another friend of mine singing a song, about 'What They'll Do in the Country.'"

This was the song:

Two Little Girls Out Walking.

The birds will sing
The pigs will squeal
The squirrels chatter
All as they feel
It's the wisest way, after all.

The cocks will crow.
The dogs will bark,
Oh, what a lark,
To hear them all.

Hens will cackle.
Horses will neigh,
A donkey will bray,
All according to fashion.

"And," ended Billie Brownie, "I think I've told you all that I saw on the trip."

COUNTY BOARD PAY RULE GIVEN JUDGE

Attorney General's Department Rules Tax Roll of Previous Year Governs Rate.

Austin, Oct.—Salaries of county commissioners are determined by valuations of the county as shown by approved tax rolls for the previous calendar year, and any change in valuation will not affect salaries until January 1 following approval of the rolls, the attorney general's department ruled Friday.

Thus the salaries of county commissioners based upon the 1927 tax rolls do not become effective until January 1, 1928, the ruling concluded, in an opinion to County Judge J. D. Patterson at Rankin, construing the 40th legislature's law amending the statutes governing pay of commissioners. Judge Patterson said the assessed valuation of Upton county for 1926 was less than six and a half million dollars, but that the roll just approved for 1927 exceeded that sum and wanted to know when the county commissioners could draw their $1,200 a year under the new law's sliding scale of valuation.

The opinion was prepared by H. Grady Chandler, assistant attorney general and approved in conference by Attorney General Claude Pollard.

The Best Laxative He Ever Tried

Mr. W. J. Horton, New York, writes: "Sick headache, indigestion and constipation have troubled me for years. I tried everything but I can truthfully say your CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS is the best laxative I have ever used. I find that they are small, easy to take and their action does not pain me. They keep me regular and I want to tell you how I appreciate this purely vegetable medicine, knowing, due to my experience in laboratory work that laxatives, containing Mercury, Calomel and other poisonous drugs are injurious."

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are sugar coated, small, easy to swallow, and everyone in the family can take them in perfect confidence as they are a doctor's own formula.

Credit to Motorists?

The automobile has been responsible for the development of a sturdier and incidentally a smarter race of roosters and chickens, according to Richard C. Haldean, president of the Pennsylvania Motor federation. Haldean asserts that the large number of chickens killed on the roads during the early days of the automobile age weeded out "mentally unfit roosters and hens." He asserts that instead of being blamed for the chickens which are still killed the motorists should be thanked, for they are aiding the farmer in developing a better grade of fowls.

MOTHER

A Cross, Feverish Child is Bilious, Constipated

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Fig Syrup," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless, "fruity laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeiters sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

O'BRYANT HOME LAUNDRY

High in Quality--- Low in Price

Motorists are beginning to learn that there's a big difference in tires, although they all look pretty much alike.

Some are made with skimpy, short-staple cotton. Some have an overdose of "filler" in the rubber of the tread. Some are long on looks and short on quality.

But you won't need a microscope to be sure that the Goodyear Tire you get from me is a real buy. Goodyear mileages tell the story.

Goodyears are performing so satisfactorily for my customers that they invariably come back—not with a kick but with a boost, and for another Goodyear when they need tire equipment.

I have your size—in fresh, new stocks.
