RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

At a meeting of the directors of the Terrell County Chamber of Commerce held in Sanderson, Texas, on the 18th day of January, 1928, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the Hon. C. B. Huddspeth, our representative in Congress, introduced on December 13, 1927, in the House of Representatives, Bill H. R. 7205, authorizing and providing for the construction of a military highway paralleling the international border from the mouth of the Rio Grande River to the Pacific Coast, and appropriating money therefor, and

Whereas, Terrell County and this region of Southwest Texas is expanding very rapidly in population and especially in property values, and is contiguous to a foreign nation alien to our customs, language and aspirations, which nation is continuously harassed by bandits and semi-military forces which its government has difficulty in suppressing, and which roving bands constitute a perpetual menace to the dignity, peace and safety of our citizens, and

Whereas, should the spectre of war arise our families and homes would be left without protection from the armed forces of the enemy, in addition to which a cutting of the Southern Pacific system in isolated sections would bring to us starvation as there is no other railroad within hundreds of miles and we are great distances removed from our sources of food and supplies, and

Whereas, such a highway would be of incalculable help to the border patrol, immigration, prohibition, public health and other related departments and give some measure of protection to the lives of Federal officers charged with enforcing these laws, and

HONOR PUPIL AT SUL ROSS

Alpine, Tex., Jan. 16.—One of the highest averages made during the fall quarter at the Sul Ross State Teachers College was that made by Erdice Gilmore of Sanderson. It has been announced by Anna D. Linn, registrar of the college, who has recently completed a compilation of the grades of the students during the fall quarter.

Miss Gilmore is on the honor roll, published by the college, having made an average better than "B," which is very good indeed, as the scholastic standards at Sul Ross are unusually high.

Her record is all the more remarkable in that she is prominent in student activities.

On the whole the quality of work done by the students of Sul Ross has been higher this last quarter than ever before.

Miss Gilmore has done her share in increasing the interest of the student body in academic work by her excellent grades.

NOTICE!

I wish to announce that I will fill the pulpit at the Methodist church next Sunday at 7:30 p. m. I will preach in Marathon at the 11 o'clock hour, but will be at Sanderson for the evening service.

ANNUAL MEETING AND BANQUET C. OF C. HELD LAST WEDNESDAY NIGHT

The officers and directors of the Terrell County Chamber of Commerce were enthused by the turnout for the annual meeting at the Kerr Hotel on January 18, and for the support given their policies by their unanimous re-election as well as the kind remarks of the various talkers.

Those in attendance were: J. C. Mitchell, T. L. Williams, Joe Kerr, W. J. Banner, G. J. Henshaw, S. S. Daggett, Chester Smith, W. H. Mansfield, Mrs. W. F. Bohlman, W. J. Ferguson, H. R. Lawrence, J. Calvin Stansell, J. M. Corder, Max Bogusch, O. H. McAdams, J. C. Stansell, Addie Lee Boling, James Kerr, F. K. Harrell, Clyde Mills, P. F. Robertson Jr., F. B. Carter, J. S. Nance, Alfred E. Creigh Jr., W. E. Stirman and D. J. Guinan, secretary.

President Joe Kerr showed that while collections from members were under $1,000 yet despite this handicap of inadequate financing and while only in existence nine months the chamber has sponsored and equipped a tourist camp, fencing, cleaning, posting and equipping it with lights, water and other comforts. Had affiliated with the South Texas Chamber of Commerce for adequate handling of State and National matters in which Terrell County might be interested but could not sponsor of its own accord. Had answered hundreds of letters from correspondents and school children scattered throughout the country as to the resources, climate, etc., of Terrell County. Had established most friendly contacts with neighboring chambers of commerce. Had handled volumes of correspondence and attended many meetings at Del Rio, Alpine and elsewhere in connection with improvement of our highway between San Antonio and El Paso, securing columns of publicity in the San Antonio and El Paso newspapers. Had distributed thousands of booklets to tourists showing advantages of traveling over our highway. Had conducted correspondence in connection with the proposed military highway from Brownsville to the Pacific Coast, and for the building of which Hon. C. B. Huddspeth has asked Congress to appropriate $17,000,000. With all these activities, traveling, etc., the present deficit in the treasury is only $400.

President Kerr likewise expressed the hope that the following projects could be undertaken in 1928 and some of them carried through to a conclusion:

Lighting dome of courthouse as a beacon of hospitality to those traveling at night and as a symbol of government to our own folks. Installation of a public health nurse as a medium to eradicate minor ailments in our school children and preventing epidemics, and being available to us all in cases of emergency.

Establishment of a public park for rest, recreation and being part of a scheme to beautify Sanderson and make it more attractive.

The fixing of our streets. The extension of the street lighting system. Organization of a volunteer fire department with suitable motor driven apparatus and the erection of a building to house same and which could also be used as a community center equipped with small library where Boy Scouts and others could meet and pass evenings in innocent amusements, as our young men are now without suitable building for recreational purposes.

Printing of a folder acquainting the outside world with Terrell County, its marvelous climate, resources and possibilities.

Endorsement of these plans were made in most interesting talks by A. E. Creigh Jr., J. Calvin Stansell, Prof. T. L. Williams, Judge G. J. Henshaw, S. S. Daggett, O. H. McAdams, Mrs. Addie Lee Boling, Mrs. W. F. Bohlman, D. J. Guinan, J. Monty Corder, J. C. Stansell, Chester Smith, W. J. Banner, Clyde Mills and H. R. Lawrence.

By unanimous vote the constitution was amended to provide for eight directors and J. C. Stansell added to the directorate, the old directors being re-elected. The board of directors

WHAT A DOCTOR KNOWS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

There IS a way of overcoming the tendency to constipation. And here is how you can PROVE it.

The next time your bowels need any assistance, don't take the first laxative that comes to mind. Take one of the druggists can assure you is made with CASCARA. Just as effective as using force, and it's good for the system. Indeed, it helps make good blood. For cascara is nothing but the bark of a tree. The Indians chew this bark, and live to an old age without a day's sickness.

What happens when you encephalize the bowels? They will usually function well for SEVERAL DAYS. One more dose—no larger, and perhaps smaller than the first—and the bowels function of their own accord for a still longer time. Until you don't feel the

Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless, "fruity laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the Court Upholds Right of Women to Gossip

Nowark, N. J. — Recorder Frederick Stoddard, in the Irvington (N. J.) police court, upheld the right of women to talk about each other. One woman complained that her neighbors were holding card parties and talking about her. Judge Stoddard refused to take a complaint against the neighbors and issued the following obiter dicta: "They had a perfect right. It is one of the inalienable privileges of women to hold card parties at which the neighbors are placed on the frying pan and their faults exaggerated and their virtues minimized."

MYSTERY CRIME Baffles Police

"Alarm Clock Murder" Seen as Inside Job.

Gosmen, N. Y. — "The alarm clock murder" has Orange county authorities baffled. The losing of cattle, un milked and without feed for several days, called attention of neighbors of the Price farm.

They investigated and found the family of three—a man, wife and daughter—dead in separate rooms. They had been shot to death.

Police say John Price, middle aged farmer, killed his wife and daughter, then turned his pistol on himself. But their quest for a motive has failed to bring to light a cause for the murder and suicide. Others think all three were murdered.

There was an alarm clock in each room. The clocks were set to go off at exactly the same time—shortly before dawn.

Piecing together evidence found in the farmhouse, the sheriff's office concluded that Price was awakened by his clock; that he procured his revolver, went to the bed where his wife lay and shot her, then entered the room of his fourteen-year-old daughter and fired a bullet into her body.

Price then returned to his bed, sat up, placed the gun against his head and killed himself. His body was found slumped forward, the gun clasped in his hands and resting between his knees.

$17,000 Ship Is Burned to Foil Devils Aboard

Seattle, Wash. — To foil the devils which Japanese seafaring men were convinced brought her misfortune, the "death ship," Ryo Yei Maru, has been consigned to the flames.

The vessel, a fishing smack, drifted on the broad Pacific 11 months while her crew of 12 Nipponese fishermen sickened, starved and died.

The Ryo Yei, valued at about $17,000, was secretly towed to an isolated beach on Puget sound recently, her hold filled with waste and soaked with oil, set afire and reduced to a mass of smoldering ashes and twisted metal.

It had been planned to ship the Ryo Yei back to Japan and arrangements were made to place the 85-foot boat on the after-deck of an American mail liner for the return voyage, but the fisher folk of Misaki, Japan, where the ship was built, were convinced that evil spirits had taken possession of the ship and her return to Japan might bring other calamities.

Boy Flees Guardian; Lives 76 Days in Cave

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—Elno Kusela, twelve years old, formerly an inmate of an orphanage, has been returned to his guardian after an absence of 76 days during which, according to his story, he lived without fire in a cave he dug, with only turnips, potatoes and what game he could snare for food.

Elno ran away from the home of Frank McKaughan, a Goulais Bay farmer, October 4, because of fear at school and fear at home, he said.

He took to the wilderness, 25 miles northwest of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and there, he said, worked for two weeks to dig a cave to shelter him from the cold which at times was below zero.

Two former companions recently followed his tracks to his cave, found him and returned him to his guardian. He was in good health.

Broken Jaw Fails to Shake Indian's Courage

Oconto, Wis.—His jaw broken by a limb which sprung up and hit him when he was trimming a tree in the woods near Townsend, Benjamin Wheelock, an Onondia Indian, was in a local hospital in apparently good spirits.

Wheelock was taken seven miles to the hospital here and doctors wired his jaw together without the use of anesthetic. When asked if his injury pained him he said it didn't. The only sensation he claims to have felt was when the limb hit him.

Doctors are marveling at the man's physical vigor.

Fatal Auto Ride

Shreveport, Iowa.—Two girls and a man were killed and two persons were injured when a roadster in which they were riding overturned and went into a water-filled ditch.

Responsible Government Threatened Because of Apathy of Voters

By SARAH SCHUYLER BUTLER, New York Politician.

WHILE 51 per cent of those entitled to exercise the franchise in 1924 did so, the percentage would have been smaller had it not been for the work of the party machines. What is true of the general election is even more true of the primary.

Theoretically the primary gives every enrolled voter in a political party an opportunity to participate in the selection of candidates. Actually it makes it possible for a small minority to select or defeat candidates, renders it difficult for a man of moderate means to run for political office, since he must now finance two campaigns instead of one, and in many cases consolidates the control of a party "machine." The reason is that the voters will not take part in the primaries.

Even in primary contests in which public opinion is aroused, the number of qualified voters who take part is rarely over a third, and in some contests the primary vote dwindles to pathetic proportions, the result sometimes being decided by less than one-twelfth of the registered voters.

This great power of minorities, and particularly of organized minorities, is having a serious effect upon the whole system of representative government in the United States. Representative government depends for its success upon the co-operation of the individual citizen. Government by minorities cannot be truly representative. It is for each of us, as American citizens, to choose whether in the generations that are to come our representative form of government shall continue and flourish, or whether so far as we are concerned "government of the people, by the people and for the people" shall perish from the earth.

Prosperity Dependent on Cooperation of "Big Business" and Labor

By WILLIAM GREEN, President A. F. of L.

Organized labor is convinced that the present living standards and national prosperity can be continued only through the maintenance of a high industrial productivity level and a high and still higher mass purchasing power.

The real problem of the new year will be that of financing commodity consumption. Not only must the consuming mass of people be encouraged to buy but they must be financed to the point where they can buy freely.

How will the owners of industrial enterprises meet this challenge? Will they accept organized labor's offer of co-operation? Will they assist in the giving of new force and meaning to collective bargaining, so that all concerned may think in terms of industrial peace and of the peaceful solution of industrial problems which affect the relationship of employers and employees?

Opposition to the American Federation of Labor and its constituent parts through the organization of company unions, the use of court injunctions, and the forced denial of the exercise of the right to employees to join the labor union of their choice tends to fan the flame of industrial hate. Will those employers who have been pursuing such an opposition policy during the past continue to do so in the future?

Parents Leaving Too Much to Teachers and Employers in Education of Youth

By CAMERON BECK, New York Stock Exchange.

Too many parents are inclined to "pass the buck" to teachers and employers in bringing up their children. Employers are more concerned with the moral welfare of the young people on their pay rolls, than many of the parents of modern youngsters.

As the head of the personal department of the New York stock exchange I personally interviewed more than 9,000 young people yearly and out of the group employed, boys and girls of high-school age, no serious boy trouble has presented itself, although the last year has been the most trying period in youth this country has ever had.

We adopted the policy that we would not allow a boy to continue with us in voluntary ignorance. Today 71 per cent of the 275 boys attending evening schools are now enrolled in evening schools of college or university rank, and I believe that what has been done on the stock exchange can be done in every industry in this country. The result is that within six months we do not have to go out of the ranks to find anyone ready for the position open above.

Imbeciles Without Hope of Recovery Should Be Chloroformed in Childhood

By CLARENCE DARROW, Noted Criminal Lawyer.

After reaching the age of ten, imbeciles for whom there is no hope of recovery should have their lives snuffed out.

Of course the consent of the parents should be obtained. With the consent of the parents, a child who has no hopes for the future beside that of life in an asylum would be mercifully put away. The sight of a child with the blank expression of a hopeless imbecile not only inspires pity, but instills a feeling of disgust and horror.

Our institutions for the feeble-minded are growing beyond control. They are sadly packed, and in a great many cases overflowing. Such a law would relieve the tragic situation.

Children showing criminal tendencies should not be removed. Criminal tendencies can be cured by proper treatment. If they took to chloroforming all those with such tendencies they might as well chloroform us all.

Civilization of the United States in Advance of That of Europe

By LUCIEN ROMER, Leading French Editor.

Which continent will be the master of the future: Europe or America? Two types of civilization are facing each other. The European is based upon personal invention and individual well-being, the American on group enterprise and social well-being; the American has the better chance of surviving.

This is true largely because economic masses in the United States have a type of organization superior to those of Europe and receive an education inspired by the idea of service as well as that of profit.

In Europe the masses have been until the present at least artificially divided, the workers on one side, the capitalists and directors on the other, while in America the mass is always united, workers and capitalists co-operating instead of squabbling among themselves.

Doctor Found What is Best for Thin, Constipated People

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of his 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in his private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year.

Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have gotten many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us that it helped them when everything else failed.

"That's very good of you, sir," said Wilkins. "I'll see that she's sent uto your room the moment you ha-finished dinner."

There was another little silence; still Wilkins kept his place beside our table. Presently, after a little apologetic cough, he spoke again.

"It strikes me, sir, that it might, perhaps, be as well if the young woman were not to know that she was to be questioned. If she is innocent, it would only fluster her, and if she is guilty, it would give her time to prepare herself. If you wish, I will arrange to have her sent to your apartments. Instead of the regular cham-bermaid who works upon that floor, to prepare your bedrooms for the night.
In that way she'll suspect nothing."

The doctor glanced at him shrewdly.
"That was a very able suggestion, Wilkins. Thank you for making it."

"Not at all, sir," said Wilkins.

"For the present," the doctor concluded, "you will remember that you prise into the Doctor's Face.

are to say nothing of this conversation to anyone, either to the other people in the hotel, or to—Mr. Ashton."

"Certainly not, sir."

The arrival of some other people in the dining room called him away just then, and we did not see him again until we were half through our meal.
Then, looking up, we found him standing, silently, in his old place.

"The matter is arranged, sir," he said to the doctor. "The young person is at her own dinner just now, but she'll go up to attend to your rooms in about half an hour."

"Very good," said the doctor. "We can have our instruments ready by that time."

At the word "instruments" the man started, and, looking up, I found him regarding the doctor with a queer, half-frightened expression.

"Speaking of instruments, sir," he said, stammering a little, "there isn't going to be any mesmerism, or—"

The doctor interrupted him with a full-voiced laugh. "No hocus-pocus whatever, Wilkins; no black art, no clairvoyance, or anything of that sort.
The instruments I speak of simply serve the purpose of a stop-watch, and the test is a perfectly simple, straightforward one."

Then, seeing that the man was still not entirely convinced, he added, "You can be present yourself, if you care to be."

"That's very good of you, sir," said the man. "On the young woman's account I will be glad to come, if you can wait until I can leave the dining room. That will be about eight-thirty, sir. I'd be sorry to keep you waiting, but she might be alarmed at any sort of test, and she has a good deal of confidence in me, sir."

"Very good," said the doctor, "only don't come up to the room with her.
Follow along later, on some errand or other, and we'll call you in. Perhaps we'll make a little demonstration on you in advance, just to give her confidence."

A look of decorous amusement appeared on Wilkins' face.
"That will be very interesting, I'm sure, sir," he said. As he bowed himself away I could see that he was still smiling.

"It's curious," I observed to the doctor. "We've seen that man dally since we came here to The Meredith to live, but I got an absolutely new impression of him this evening. It never occurred to me before that when he laid aside his professional manner he might be a thoroughly human, kindly old chap, with as many affections and concerns as any of us, and with, perhaps, about the same opinion of our reality as we have always had of his."

"We'd better get on," said the doctor, suiting the action to the word.
"We haven't any time to waste."

As we walked over toward the elevator Wilkins preceded us and rang the bell for us, just as he always did.
I had it my tongue's end to make some reference to our engagement with him for a little later in the evening, not that it was necessary, but simply because it was more natural to say, "In half an hour, then," or something of that sort, than merely to nod and answer his good night. I think he must have perceived that intention, certainly he checked it by looking, just then, a little more wooden and professional than ever. I understood when I glanced over his shoulder and saw that Ashton had just come in. He was not looking our way.
Whether he had made a point of not looking, I do not know; but I was glad that I had not blurted out, in his hearing, any reference to the unusual and highly unprofessional sort of engagement that the doctor and I had with Wilkins.

"A rather remarkable man," said I, as we stepped into the elevator.

The doctor nodded.
A few minutes later, in the doctor's spacious sitting room where we had set up our instruments and now sat waiting for the arrival of the subject we meant to test by them, we heard a rap at the door.

"No timidity about that," observed the doctor in a whisper; "and no effrontery, either. A plain, commonsense, professional knock. Let her in, will you, Phelps?"

It was with a mounting excitement that I crossed the room and laid my hand on the knob, for there, on the other side of this door, was one of the elements of our mystery. What would she prove to be? Another innocent person, tangled by pure chance in the spider's web of circumstance which surrounded our mystery; or would she turn out to be, herself, one of the spinners of the web?

When I opened the door I got, instantaneously, a very good view of the girl, for the sitting-room was brightly lighted and the little entrance hallway where she stood comparatively dark. And that first look of mine brought a disappointment, there was no doubt of that. I had not known exactly what I had expected Jane Perkins to be like, but something different from this, certainly.
The whole look of her as she stood there, an appearance so pervasive that it baffled analysis, was of stolid stupidity.

Her eyes were dull, her cheeks a very dark red, so that as I looked at her first I suspected a perfectly reckless use of cosmetic. Of course the standard I compared her by was the wild girl in the hospital, for, upon the doctor's theory of Harvey's testimony, that wild girl's profile had reminded him forcibly of this English housemaid. There was a crude sort of resemblance between the two faces—the heavy brows and lashes, the black hair and general contour of the features. Indeed, the thing that occurred to me as I stood there was the ridiculous futility of written descriptions of faces, when the same description would include two people whose general air and appearance were so diametrically different.

I found it impossible to describe the wildness and curious unearthly distinction of that other face; I found it as difficult to analyze the tameness, the commonplace banality of this one.
And yet, seen in silhouette, they might look a good deal alike.

West Point's 150 Years

CADET LINE-UP FOR REVIEW

J. Kosciuszko.

UP THE HUDSON FROM WEST POINT

Knox

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IF YOU have never yet seen it, it's a "thrill that comes once in a lifetime," that you have yet before you, this march of the West Point cadets. Just why it should be such a soul-stirring spectacle is difficult to explain. America is not essentially a militaristic nation, so love for military pomp and display is not an adequate explanation. Perhaps it's because the sight of these future captains and colonels and generals recalls to us the history of the wars of the past in which West Pointers had been our successful military leaders and in these future leaders we see a guarantee of future military successes but more especially future national security.

We call them "the West Point cadets," because the United States Military Academy happens to be located at West Point, New York, and this year marks the hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the appearance of the name "West Point" in the national consciousness. It was singularly appropriate that the training school for America's defenders should have been founded during the struggle which established this nation. The earliest proposal for a military school for the United States was that made by Brig. Gen.
Henry Knox, the Boston book seller who became one of Washington's most trusted subordinates, served as his chief of artillery and was later the first American secretary of war. Knox's proposal was made in May, 1776, and his plans were seconded by a young colonel named Alexander Hamilton, destined to be a brother cabinet officer of Knox's and the first secretary of the treasury. The plans of these two officers were approved by General Washington but were not adopted in the form suggested immediately.

On October 1, 1776, congress passed a resolution appointing a committee to prepare a plan for "A Military Academy at the Army." Another resolution on June 20, 1777, provided for a Corps of Invalids "to serve as a military school for young gentlemen previous to their being appointed to marching regiments."

So far there had been only the preliminary legislation looking toward the establishment of a military academy but nothing had been done towards the highly important matter of finding a location for such a school. After the capture of Forts Montgomery and Clinton on the Hudson in September, 1777, both General Washington and congress saw the necessity of having a strong fort farther up the river, which would interfere with the projected junction of Burgoyne's army coming from the north and Clinton's army coming from the south, and which would also protect the ferrying of troops and supplies between New England and the other colonies. Fortunately nature has provided just such a place about forty-eight miles above New York city. There, on a little plateau overlooking the Hudson and commanding that river, was an ideal place to build a fortress which the whole British army would have difficulty in capturing.
Accordingly, West Point was occupied January 20, 1778. Since it has been occupied continuously since that date, January 20 of this year may be regarded as a sesquicentennial anniversary of the founding of our national military academy and for that reason is worthy of more than passing notice.

Associated with the history of West Point is the name of a brilliant young Polish officer whose passion for human liberty, strengthened by his experience in his native country, had brought him to the aid of the American colonists.
Thaddeus Kosciuszko, a graduate of the Royal Military Academy at Warsaw, Poland, and later a student of military engineering in France, had arrived in this country in 1776, and upon recommendation of the military committee, congress appointed him colonel of engineers. He soon showed his worth in directing the fortification of Philadelphia and later in planning the fortifications on Bemis Heights, at Saratoga, which had such an important part in Burgoyne's defeat. So when a skilled engineer was needed to lay out the defenses of the new fortress, the young Pole was called upon.

Kosciuszko began work on March 20, 1778, staking out the lines and setting a large force of soldiers at work erecting the walls of the fort which were of earth and logs, 14 feet high and 21 feet wide at the base. The main work was 1,800 feet in circumference with bastions, ditches and many angles. The fort could be approached from only one side—toward the river—and that was protected by a strong oak palisade, made by driving logs in the ground and bolting them together at the top. A hundred guns of all kinds were mounted in the main fort and the surrounding work. To prevent the British ships passing the fort at night a great iron chain was stretched across the river just above the fort. Composed of huge links, the chain weighed more than 180 tons. (A part of this chain is still preserved and may be seen by the visitor to Trophy Point at the academy.) In fact, so strong was this post that Washington had the main supplies of munitions for the Continental army stored there.

In the meantime the project for establishing a military academy had gone forward. On March 20, 1779, the Board of War adopted regulations for a "Corps of Engineers and for the Sappers and Miners," and these regulations were promulgated in orders issued by Washington on July 30, 1779, providing for a plan of instruction to be carried into effect after the commander and the board had approved of it. This plan included lectures by engineer officers on fortification, mining, reconnaissance and encampments.
As early as February, 1780, practical experiments in gunnery were conducted at West Point and an engineer school, a laboratory and a library had already been established in three separate buildings. In 1781 the Invalid Corps, which had been organized in July, 1777, was marched from Philadelphia at the request of Washington to form a part of the garrison at West Point and to continue their instruction as "young gentlemen previous to their being appointed to marching regiments."

When the Revolution ended in 1783, Washington, when called upon for his views as to what peace-time army establishment the new nation should have, included in the recommendations, which he laid before his officers at Newburgh, the matter of a military academy. When he had been made President, he referred to it again in his message of December 3, 1793. The first action taken toward the organization of a cadet corps, however, was the law passed May 9, 1794, which authorized the organization of a "Corps of Artillerists and Engineers" with two cadets to a company, thus creating the new officer grade of "cadet" in the American army. According to a school for artillerists and engineers and for cadets attached to the corps was, on Washington's recommendation, and by order of congress, established at West Point in 1794. But this small beginning toward a military academy suffered a severe setback two years later when the buildings at West Point were destroyed by fire and the school was suspended.

It was not resumed until 1801. In July of that year the secretary of war directed that all cadets of the corps of artillerists should report at West Point for instructions and in September a school was opened with four army officers and a civilian as administrators and instructors. The real beginning of a military academy and the first use of that name for it dates from the following year.
By an act of congress, approved March 16, 1802, the President was authorized to organize and establish a corps of engineers to consist of five officers and ten cadets to be stationed at West Point and to constitute a military academy. Accordingly on Independence day, July 4, 1802, the United States Military academy opened at West Point with ten cadets present.

From that time on an attempt was made to have the development of the military academy keep pace with the needs of our national military establishment, but for years the effort lagged. Acts of congress passed in 1802 and 1808 authorized the establishment of a cadet corps of forty from the artillery, one hundred from the infantry, sixty-teen from the dragoons and twenty from the riflemen. Few of these were appointed, however, and no provision was made for them at the academy. In fact, in 1810, the academy was deprived of nearly all means of instruction and officers and cadets had the greatest difficulty in obtaining their pay. During 1811 and a part of 1812, even though war with England was imminent, instruction at West Point was practically abandoned. In March, 1812, the school was without a single instructor.

The result of this short-sighted policy in training officers for our armies was soon apparent during the second war with England. In no other war in which we have ever engaged have we suffered such disgraceful reverses, due mainly to poor leadership. As one historian has put it "Every nation has some had generals," . . . but as the War of 1812 dragged to its dismal end, Americans were apparently faced with the intensely humiliating necessity of having to admit that their generals were all bad." Jackson's victory at New Orleans was about all that saved our national self respect, but the humiliations of that war had one good effect, at least. It showed the necessity for a systematic training of future army leaders and a hasty effort was made to supply that need.

By an act of congress on April 29, 1812, the academy was reorganized and the provisions of that act have furnished the general principles upon which the military academy has been built since that time. By this act a more adequate staff of teachers was authorized, a maximum of 250 cadets was fixed and the age and mental and physical requisites for admission were prescribed. Under the provisions of the act and the able direction of Maj. Sylvanus Thayer of the corps of engineers, who was appointed commandant in 1817, the new era in the history of West Point opened.

Its results were soon apparent, for the Mexican war, the various Indian campaigns and the Civil war proved conclusively that the time when "all its generals were bad" was over for this country, and perhaps it is not too much to say that the Civil war was the terrific struggle that it was because so many West Pointers, who regarded their allegiance to their native states paramount over their allegiance to the nation and accordingly cast their lot with the confederacy, more than made up for the inferiority in numbers with which the South entered the war.

By an act of congress, approved May 4, 1916, on the eve of America's latest and greatest war, the corps of cadets, as now constituted, consists of two from each congressional district, two from each territory, four from the District of Columbia, two from Porto Rico, four from each state at large and eighty from the United States at large, twenty of whom shall be selected from among the honor graduates of educational institutions having officers of the regular army detailed as professors of military science and tactics under existing laws. They are appointed by the President, who is also authorized to appoint cadets from among enlisted men in number as nearly equal as practicable, of the regular army and the national guard, between the ages of nineteen and twenty-two years who have served as enlisted men not less than a year. The total number so selected may not exceed 180 at one time and there are other regulations governing their appointment. Under the act of 1916, and the apportionment of members of congress, according to the last sentence, the maximum number of cadets is now 1,332.

Birds to Be Classed as Master Builders

Birds are the most perfect builders, and—strange as it may sound—there is scarcely a trade that you will not find represented among these feathered craftsmen.

Many of the nests of American birds are marvels of ingenuity, but their greatest efforts pale beside the wonders of the tropics. Weavers, carpenters, tailors, plasterers, tunnelers—these are but a few of the many trades that we find practiced when the nesting season arrives.

The sand-martin and the kingfisher, both belong to the guild of tunnelers, and are content with a burrowed hole.
Ducks, gulls, water hens, and cor-crakes are all primitive builders, with no ideas beyond a rough and scanty collection of materials loosely thrown together on the ground.
The house swallow is a plasterer, employing as his building materials nothing more than mud, but out of this he contrives to erect a nest that is wonderfully strong, and put together with neatness and care.

The singing thrush uses more varied materials, a mixture of clay, cow manure, and moss, but well and truly laid, and forming a splendid home for the young birds.

VIVID COLOR IN EARLY HATS; FORECASTS STYLES FOR SPRING

THE statement that "first hats" from Paris, for between-seasons wear, are trimmed with feathers is not to be interpreted as referring to elaborate plumage. There is nothing formal or overdone about the new feather novelties as exploited by French modistes at the present time. There is, rather, something intriguingly smart and cunning about these feather trims, even amusing one might say of many of the pasted fantasies.

Imagine a colorful little parrot all of tiny pasted feathers, applied to stone, and why? Because these very fashions which are having a "try-out" among winter resorters forepeak fashions "on the way" for the approaching spring and summer.

Especially does it behoove the home dressmaker who is doing her spring sewing in the months of January and February to "read the future" in the new of Southland fashions.

To illustrate the point—the attractive gown in this picture is especially designed for winter wear at smart the side of a nobby felt which has printed chiffon stretched over its entire surface—the new trend is toward just such unique effects. And that reminds one of the fact that parrot colors are said to be very smart for millinery not only in combination but in monotone. Parrot green, for instance, is one of the colors registered for a successful vogue during the coming months.

Soft wings are tucked under the flap of the first hat in the feather embellished collection of chic chapeaux in the illustration. Pads of hackle are flattened against the crown of the toque shown at the top to the right. They are arranged in clusters forming a huge flower design. Several handsome colors are featured in this feather-covered crown.

Its fitness for spring and summer, and the fact of its being such a venerable type recommends it as a model which the home seamstress might wisely copy either in silk or perhaps in washable striped broadcloth. It need not necessarily be sleeveless, although "they say" that sleeveless frocks are to be quite fashionable for midsummer. However, the practical thing to do for early spring wear is to add neat snug-fitting long sleeves. Just to make it look genuinely smart one could wear ers over one ear, balancing it on the opposite side with a similar brush in white.

The brush, felt pictured to the center-right tucks a fan-shaped brush of feathers under each end of a flap which extends across the back of the hat.

The very clever little felt toque shown last in the group works in a feather band across the front as if it were a very part of the hat.

Not only to the elect who are blissfully willing away the wintry months under the palms amid flowers and sunshine do the so-called styles for the Southland bear a message of importance. These selfsame modes are as vital a theme to those who linger about the home hearth

SICK WOMAN SOON RECOVERS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"A neighbor advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which she said had helped her so much. So I bought a few bottles and tried it out. It sure helped me wonderfully. I felt much better. My work was no longer a dread to me. If I hear of any one who is troubled the way I was, I will gladly recommend the Vegetable Compound to them and I will answer any letters in regard to the same."—Mrs. BERTHA MEACHAM, 1134 N. Penn. Ave., Lansing, Mich.

"I had been sickly ever since I was fifteen years old. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I got so I could do all my housework and I am in good health."—Mrs. MARIE K. WILLIAMS, Ketchikan, Alaska.

From Michigan to Alaska, from Maine to Oregon and from Connecticut to California letters are continually being written by grateful women recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Compound is made from roots and herbs and for more than fifty years has been helping to restore run-down, over-worked women to health.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs; but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

FAIRYLAND PARTY

"We're going to give the Shadows a dance," said the Blue fairies. "Do you want to come?"

"Indeed we do," said the Silver fairies. "Where is the dance to be?"

"It's to be at the top of yonder blue mountain where we live," said the Blue fairies.

"The Sky Blue fairies are coming to it."

"Do you see them all putting on their best blue frocks?"

The Silver fairies looked and they saw the sky was becoming bluer every single moment.

They looked again and they saw that the top of the mountain was as blue as they had ever seen it, such a beautiful shade of blue.

"Who are going to be the guests?" they asked.

"Well," said the Blue fairies, "we've asked the Fairy Queen and Fairy Princess Joy and Fairy Yash, and Fairy Twilight-Bell, and quite a number of others."

"Oh," said the Silver fairies, "what a lovely party it will be."

"Come, then, at three o'clock sharp, this afternoon," said the Blue fairies. So at the top of the mountain at three o'clock all the fairies kept arriving from this direction and that, from behind trees and stumps, from under blades of grass, and from behind great trees.

The Fairy Queen came dressed up as a daisy, and then came old Witty Witch, dressed as a buttercup.

Mr. Giant was dressed as an ox-eyed daisy, or black-eyed Susan.

But the great fun was when all the Fairy Queen's followers came after the Fairy Queen, Witty Witch and old Mr. Giant.

They were dressed in turn in the costume of the buttercup or the daisy or the black-eyed Susan.

Then the shadows came dancing in. First they danced in one direction and then in the other, and Mr. Sun, who had been invited for some time, laughed as he danced with all of them.

"I love to be the dancing partner of the shadows," he said, "for we know how to dance so many dances together."

The butterflies came, as they thought the daisies and buttercups were real at first.

They laughed when they discovered it was a party and that there was a joke on them for making such a mistake.

But it was the kind of a party they liked with so much beauty and with old Mr. Sun as one of the guests.

Later on, a shower came up, a very little shower. It was invited, too!

It came so the raindrops could dance with the sun and look like diamonds and glistening stones.

Oh, how everything gleamed and danced and shone. The shower left after a short dance or two, and the sky looked bluer and bluer and so did the top of the mountain with all the glorious fairies.

Down among the earth people, they were saying:

"Oh, what a wonderful day, with such a blue sky and such a blue hill, and such gorgeous colors."

It was the Blue fairies' party.

Later on, the humming birds came, for they had been invited.

"We've asked some guests to meet you, most especially," the Blue fairies said.

And as the humming birds looked they saw some of their good friends, the honey-suckles, smiling and waving to them.

After they had all danced, the Blue fairies said:

"Now we will have supper."

At once appeared little toasted tables of many different colors, upon which were delicious dishes for the Fairyland guests.

So they sang and ate most luscious food at the Blue fairies' beautiful, beautiful party.

MRS. ADDIE LEE BOLING

Owner, Publisher and Editor

Entered second-class matter July 22nd, 1908, at the post office, Sanderson, Texas, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Whereas, such a highway is the only artery possible for the movement of troops and transport in event of war and would have to be built while hostilities were in progress and at great expense, and

Whereas, such a highway would permit at all times of a proper patrol of the border and thus safeguard our homes against marauders, smugglers, the importation of the diseased, indigent and other undesirable, and so accord the citizens of this great territory their constitutional prerogatives of the right to enjoy undisturbed the blessings of life, peace and the pursuit of happiness; therefore,

Be It Resolved, that we, directors of the Terrell County Chamber of Commerce, hereby urge upon Congress the great and imperative need of this National highway for military purposes, and pray that Congress will give immediate passage to Bill H. R. 7265, and

Be It Further Resolved, that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Hon. C. B. Hudspeth in appreciation and gratitude for his efforts in our behalf.

(Signed) JOE KERR, H. R. LAUPENCE, W. J. FERGUSON, G. J. HENSHAW, MAX BOGUSCH, CHESTER SMITH, ED DOWNIE.

Attest: The above is a true and complete copy of the resolution passed by the Board of Directors of the Terrell County Chamber of Commerce, and duly recorded in the minutes of said organization.
