MOTHER'S DAY.

Next Sunday, May 13, is Mother's Day. Let us all on this day set apart to honor mother dear. Her memory cherish, if she's gone, affection show if she's here. And if she lives in Sanderson, let's show we love her much by bringing her with us that day to Sunday school and church.

Should she be living elsewhere, come anyway, then write a loving letter to her, ere you retire that night. If she but lives in memory and sleeps beneath the sod, Turn your footsteps Sunday to the house of Mother's God. To the Presbyterian Sunday school, that this tribute you may pay. Invites you, sons and daughters, to meet with us that day.

J. F. Dexter of Dallas was a business visitor over the weekend in the city. Mr. Dexter flew over in his private plane and inspected the highway which his company is asphaltting through this county.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Spears had as their guest last Thursday Mr. Spears' sister, Miss Ione Spears, of Austin. At one time Miss Spears taught here and her many friends were glad to see her again. She was en route home from attending a Y. W. C. A. convention in Sacramento, Calif.

Mrs. J. W. Wolff has returned from a visit with Mrs. Benny Smith in Pearsall and with Mrs. T. Walters in San Antonio.

J. W. Wolff of the Scott ranch is visiting home folks this week.

Langtry Wins Game Sunday.

Last Sunday the return game was played on the Howard field between Langtry and Sanderson. The game was more of a practice one than anything else as the Sanderson team had not been organized. In the final count the score was 11 to 3 in favor of Langtry.

Monday evening several interested fans met at the Empress Confectionery and a team was organized. With plenty of support, both moral and financial, Sanderson should have a good team.

This Sunday they will meet the Del Rio Cowboys on the home field and a good game is assured.

Democrats Hold Convention

The Democrats met Saturday, May 5, for their regular precinct convention. The following were elected delegates to the county convention: A. E. Creigh, Jr., Clyde Griffith, Joe Kerr, J. Calvin Stansell, C. H. White and G. J. Henshaw.

CARRUTHERS BUYS SANDERSON RANCH

J. W. Carruthers Sr. entered into an agreement about two weeks ago for the purchase of a 10,400-acre ranch from Harry Brown, six miles southeast of Sanderson, for a consideration of $4.25 an acre.

Earnest money was posted on the deal and attorneys are now examining abstracts to determine whether or not the title is clear. The deal is expected to be completed by the first of June, and the purchaser will be given immediate possession of the property. The sale was made through Clyde Deaton of this city.

There has been no stock on this ranch for the past two or three years, it is said, and despite the fact that until Wednesday evening's rain, it has been dry in that section, feed was good.

Mr. Brown has also disposed of his other ranch located about 45 miles north of Sanderson to Ben Robinson of Ozona. Possession of this ranch, which consists of about 8,000 acres, will also be given about June 1.—The Herald, Del Rio.

BIG RANCH DEAL

The deal was closed Monday whereby Alex. Mitchell became the owner of 28,000 acres of land bought from the R. R. Russell estate. The land purchased by Mr. Mitchell is off the west side of the Big Canyon ranch and is located in Pecos county. The purchase price was $8 an acre.

Educational Drawback in Failure of Teachers to Understand Pupils

By DR. ALFRED ADLER, Viennese Psychologist.

THE most common error in education is the failure of the teacher to understand the coherence of the child's living. The "problem child," the class "bad boy," is scolded and punished, but that is about as foolish as for a physician to call on a man who has broken his leg and say, "Aha! I see you've broken your leg—for shame!" If the teacher will put herself in the bad child's place she would see that, according to his lights, he is acting intelligently. He has either been pampered or hated and has grown into an atmosphere of alienness, feeling nothing in common with others around him and wanting to be aloof.

To discover the child who steals, and punish him, does not correct the evil; it increases his sense of the sport of the thing and only sets him to figuring out what his mistakes were which led to his discovery so that in future he can avoid them.

The progress of education has been greatly retarded through the stress placed on the inheritance of abilities. To say that one child is gifted and another stupid is to retard both. The gifted child is stumped by thinking too much is expected of him, and the stupid one comes to think it is futile for him to try to achieve anything.

Mankind is as a species tremendously timid. We need encouragement, not discouragement. We need to be taught, what is really the truth, that we can be anything we want if we will train ourselves properly for it.

Entrance Requirements for Colleges Savor Too Much of Medievalism

By DR. GEORGE W. FRASIER, Colorado Educator.

American liberal art colleges, which seem not to be interested in the future of public education for the masses, should strive to discover the kind of students they want rather than how they have been prepared. Preparing for entrance to one of the average eastern colleges wrecks the high school career of thousands of boys and girls.

The subjects, Latin, essay writing, English classics, "dry as dust ancient history," as taught in high schools prepare for nothing in the world but college, and it takes a confirmed optimist to see how they do that.

Liberal arts colleges should not prepare high school teachers and these colleges should drop specific matter requirements for entrance and also drop the type of specific examinations demanded by the college entrance board.

For present entrance requirements I would substitute judgment of the student's intelligence and character and evidence of the accomplishment of whatever kind of high school work he may have chosen.

The present domination of the colleges over the high schools would be a good thing for the high schools if these colleges had a conception of education as something to do with modern life. But the average college of this group still clings to its medieval curriculum.

Older People Not Justified in Condemnation of the Youth of Today

By DEAN C. M. WOODWARD, Emory (Ga.) University.

Since youth today possesses more information and knowledge, is more intelligent than their predecessors, it is necessary to impress them with the reality and character of God in order to get them to co-operate with the moving force behind the universe. Youth today knows more about the world in all its phases than those of any other period in the race's history and youth today has a wider freedom of choice than youth has ever had.

With all its progress in every branch of human activity, the world has not had time to devise means of handling the knowledge it has obtained. I wonder if older people are justified in criticizing the youth of today. In my opinion, youth can be relied upon. The change from the home of the past, when authority and discipline held sway, and the present condition when the child has about as much contact with other spheres of life as the home, emphasizes the need of development of internal control and youth should be made to realize the reality and character of God. By using intelligence youth can co-operate with God in the development of a world personality.

Wage Earner Seeks Only Opportunity for Full, Free, Comprehensive Life

By WILLIAM GREEN, President A. F. of L.

Organized labor considers wages of first importance because wages are the basis of human activity and human enjoyment. The working man must depend upon wages for the education of his children, for old-age protection, for the care of dependents when he is incapacitated.

He seeks reasonable hours of employment that he may relax from exacting toil, so that he may have time to think, that the better part of his life may be developed, because man was not made to slave and die. There is something better in man. He must be given opportunity to live a full, free and comprehensive life.

We have increased wages, shortened hours, improved work conditions, but, in addition, we have secured enactment of laws that have brought many benefits not only to wage workers directly concerned, but to the community.

We were the pioneers in compulsory education for children. We prefer to see America's children in the school house and playground rather than toiling in factory, mill and mine.

Belief in Immortality Has Its Foundation in Accepted Natural Laws

By JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, New York Community Church.

I believe in the immortality of the soul exactly as I believe in the law of gravitation, or the theory of evolution, or the magnificent vision of a fourth-dimensional universe. What science consists of, in its higher reaches, is speculation as to the ultimate meaning of the facts of observation and experiment. These facts must be explained and man's explanation constitutes a generalization which we call a natural law. We do not doubt these scientific facts. We accept them as a part of the great body of scientific truth. But at bottom they are all theories, deliberately conceived to explain facts otherwise unexplainable.

Immortal hope is a generalization of the same kind. There are facts of human life that cannot be explained without the postulate of an immortal soul.

NEW DRAPERIES for A FEW CENTS By Mae Martin

All of us realize nowadays how bright-colored draperies seem to invite people in, and how warm touches of color in spreads, cushions and runners help to make us love our own surroundings.

No woman need deny herself these touches of cheer, because they can easily be had at the expense of a few cents and a little planning. Curtains that are faded or drab in color can be made bright and pleasing with a package or so of Diamond Dyes. Then spreads, covers, runners, etc., can be tinted or dyed to match. Anyone can do it. Tinting with Diamond Dyes is as easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little more time. Brilliant new colors appear like magic, right over the old, faded colors. Diamond dyes give true, fadeless colors. They are the kind of dyes used when the cloth was made. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. Insist on them and save disappointment.

My new book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of dollar-saving suggestions for beautifying your home and clothes. Sixty-four pages, fully illustrated in colors. It's FREE. Just write Mae Martin, Home Service Department, Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

Nearly 95 per cent of Canada's coal is bought in the United States, according to records of the Department of Commerce for 1927. "SAVE A LIFE" CAMPAIGN PROCLAIMED

In an effort to reduce automobile accidents and eliminate loss of life caused by motor vehicles in Texas, a state-wide "Save-a-Life" campaign will be conducted from May 19 to June 9, it was announced today, May 4.

The campaign is made official for the State by a proclamation issued by Governor Dan Moody at the Capitol this morning. The proclamation calls upon all municipal authorities, motor organizations and civic and commercial bodies to co-operate in the "Save-a-Life" movement.

The purpose of the campaign is to establish a regular annual period of free mechanical inspection of all motor vehicles licensed to operate in this State. New York, Massachusetts and other states have already conducted "Save-a-Life" campaigns and several other states have announced their intention of doing so in the near future.

Service stations and garages in every community in the State will be officially appointed by the State automobile authorities to serve as inspection stations from May 19 to June 9. During that period every motor vehicle owner in Texas is requested to drive or send his car or truck to one of these official inspection stations to be examined regarding its mechanical condition. This inspection will be made entirely without charge at the official garages and service stations, and the motor vehicle owner may choose any official inspection station he wishes.

Official windshield stickers will be issued in the name of the State motor vehicle authorities, and one of these will be placed on every motor vehicle that passes inspection as being in good mechanical order. Cars that reveal mechanical defects, which render them unsafe, will have to be put in good order before the official State sticker will be issued to the owner.

"The proposed 'Save-a-Life' inspection of automobiles will be devoted chiefly to brakes, horns, lights, steering mechanism and mirrors," said an official of the Highway Department. "These are the items most likely to get out of order on the average automobile, and statistics show they are the most frequent cause of accidents.

"We want no unsafe automobiles on the roads in Texas and the co-operation of every citizen and motorist in getting his car inspected free of charge between May 19 and June 9 will go a long way toward saving lives and preventing accidents.

"It is perfectly obvious that the best driver in the world cannot stop a car which 'has no brakes' or warn pedestrians and other cars if the horn is not working. Inspection of drivers is not sufficient. The vehicles they drive must also be in safe condition to prevent injury to themselves and others.

"Fifty-nine per cent of deaths from automobile accidents in the United States are caused by defects in the mechanical condition of the automobile itself. A modern automobile is good for tens of thousands of miles of service, and is entirely safe in the hands of a careful driver, but being a piece of machinery it requires regular mechanical inspection at least once a year to keep it in good running order, and to operate it economically and safely."

Governor Moody's proclamation calls upon the officials of every community, and of the various civic and commercial organizations, to lend their wholehearted support to the State-wide movement for greater motor vehicle safety.

GOODYEAR NOW LARGEST TIRE COMPANY IN WORLD

"The enviable position of the World's Largest Rubber Company has been attained by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. through a policy of leadership and foresight and not by accident," declared W. J. Ferguson, who operates the Goodyear service station at Sanderson.

"Just as Goodyear has led the industry in many improvements in tire construction, so has it led in broadening its manufacturing facilities and thus taken advantage of the ever enlarging field for tire sales.

Mr. Ferguson pointed out that Goodyear was better able to supply the big demand for tires during 1927 because of its five manufacturing plants and big production and service personnel.

"Goodyear has," he said, "besides the two main plants at Akron, one in Los Angeles, two in Canada, another at Sydney, Australia, and a factory ready to start operations in England.

"The year 1927 was one of record breaking for the company," according to Mr. Ferguson.

"In the first quarter, the company produced 4,030,651 tires and sold 4,101,457. In April, Goodyear manufactured its 100,000,000th tire setting another record. A record six-month period was followed with production in August of 1,623,241 tires, a high mark for any 30-day period in the tire industry.

"During the peak production months of the summer, Goodyear made 62,000 tires and 71,000 tubes daily. With the addition of the Australian and English plants the company now has the biggest production capacity of any company in the world.

"These two plants have a definite need," he said, "the Australian plant takes care of the increasing market for tires in that country, while the English plant will enable Goodyear to make speedier distribution to European markets."

Short orders are now being served as well as regular meals at the Kerr Hotel dining room, Mrs. Ware, manager.

Notice to Music Pupils. Mrs. Kate James Cox will open a studio here for instructions in voice, piano, saxophone and string instruments about August 15. She succeeds Mrs. Mills and will teach instruments on the same terms. Voice $1 per lesson.

Protect Your Investment in Your Model T Ford

THE Ford Motor Company is making a new car, but it is still proud of the Model T. It wants every owner of one of these cars to run it as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

Because of this policy and because of the investment that millions of motorists have in Model T cars, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

More than eight million Model T Fords are still in active service, and many of them can be driven for two, three and five years and even longer.

So that you may get the greatest use over the longest period of time at the lowest cost, we suggest that you take your Model T Ford to the nearest Ford dealer and have him give you an estimate on the cost of any replacement parts that may be necessary.

You will find this the economical thing to do because a small expenditure may enable you to maintain or increase the value of the car and give you thousands of miles of additional service.

No matter where you live you can get these Ford parts at the same low prices as formerly and know they are made in the same way and of the same materials as those from which your car was originally assembled.

Labor cost is reasonable and a standard rate is charged for each operation so that you may know in advance exactly how much the complete job will cost.

STORY FROM THE START

On the verge of nervous collapse, due to overwork, Lucy Deane, successful New York artist, seeks rest at Idle Island. She rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine," from an island character, the "Captain," and his sister, Alice Andover, "administrator." Gay finds the cottage is tenanted by an elderly lady, "Auntalmiry," who consents to move to another abode, the "Apple Tree." Awakening from sleep, Gay imagines she sees the face of a Chinaman peering in the window. She settles down in her new home, anticipating months of well-earned rest and recuperation. On exploration of the island, Gay, standing on the seashore, is horrified by the appearance of the drifting body of a drowned man, which she nervously herself to bring to the shore. A bullet wound in the temple shows the man to have been murdered. Gay makes her way to the "Captain," who, standing with her in the boat, tells her the story of the incident and sets down to an attack of "nerves."

"Is this the quiet good little place you brag about?" she asked herself. Where they come and—stare dead—under from your very eyes?—tears and laughter came at the classical notion. But in spite of her attempt to be facetious and unconvincing, she was highly nervous and she unconsciously called out, "Hello there," from behind, startled by the frightened scream and she went to her feet. Quite beyond her of person as she was, the call seemed to come from the valley of death.

Standing up, she saw on the piazza of the Little Club a man who leaned over the railing and beckoned to her. He was a stranger, she knew at once, one of the summer people, no one she knew.

"I beg your pardon," he called pleasantly, "but will you kindly show me the way down? I cannot find the path. There is no path. There is no way down. I beg your pardon—you are not here, are you not?"

He smiled up at him. "Yes, but I might down those steep rocks, and I am not a hand sliding. I assure you, I am not up. I will show you the way down the woods and the lane will lead you direct to the landing. I go with you. Wait for me."

He crossed from the piazza to the top of the rocky cliff and waited to see her descending with difficulty. She stepped to give her a hand when she gained that height.

"The little shack," he said, tapping the corner of the Little Club as they went. "Were you sketching it?"

"I was sketching—Oh, listen!" she called, and turned toward the man. A sudden longing for sympathy, for understanding, the reality of one of her own kind in her isolation, overwhelmed her. Her eyes, gazing darkly into his interested eyes, Gay told him the story of the body that had washed up on the waves, the wound in the temple, the fine white hands; she had gone for help, and returned to find it—gone.

down that hard and painful path on purpose to receive it—the poor body—swept to my very feet. It seems to make me—his avenger, don't you see? I dare say you think me very childish, but I feel that this has been sent straight to me, and I cannot evade it. I am sorry. But I must do it myself."

Suddenly they had cleared the forest and stood on the brow of the hill. The Lone Pine was directly at hand. "This is my cottage," she said. "Just cross right down the slope to the lane and follow it down to the pier. I am sorry about the drawing, but you see how it is."

"Oh, you are quite right, of course. It has been very fascinating—meeting you like this. I wish there was some place we could go for tea—"

"There is a place. There are lots of places. The island is full of tea. But I shan't go, thanks. Marching off to tea with a Perfect Stranger in the Good Little Club would be even more damning than the discovery of a nonexistent corpse. Even worse, I think, than living alone, which seems the very height of depravity here. It isn't accordin' to natur'—It makes women queer. They think that's what is wrong with me, living alone."

"What do they advise? An orphan for adoption, or a husband for attachment?"

"Heaven knows. But anyhow I shouldn't live alone." She laughed pleasantly. "Good-by. I say it with sorrow, for you seem almost one of my own."

He held out his hand, and Gay dropped hers in it. "Good-by. The best of luck to you. For myself I wish no better luck than the joy of seeing you again."

"Now, now," she reproved him, smiling. "Don't flatter. Consider the stately pines, the rugged coast and the surging surf. Flattery doesn't go with the Good Little Island."

down the hill and called to Auntalmiry. "Won't you keep a poor timid nervous old maid all night?" she asked pleadingly. "I don't want to stay alone. I've got the—you know—beebeee jeebees! My house is haunted. I'm afraid of ghosts, and things. Do you think it was just a ghost, Auntalmiry?"

Auntalmiry gave her a cozy chair and made her a cup of tea. That was Auntalmiry's unflinching resource in case of nerves.

"Now drink your tea, dearie, and don't say a word about it. We'll have a nice cozy evening. Just like a party." She was evidently determined to soothe Gay, determined to humor her, keep her quiet. She petted her, talked pleasantly of inane and pleasant things.

When at last they made ready to retire for the night, she said Gay should have the solitary bed, and she herself would sleep on the couch. "She's afraid of me, I do believe," Gay thought to herself. "She wants the room between us, in case I turn violent." Her lips twitched with amusement at the thought as she crept between the white covers.

Auntalmiry turned out the lights, and went about the room from window to window raising the blinds. When she came to the window that showed the Lone Pine at the top of the hill she gave a sudden little exclamation.

"Did you leave a light on?" she asked. "No!" With a bound Gay was out of bed and at her side by the window, both staring up the hill at the cottage. From the wide window of the living room there showed a round circle of misty light, pale, wavering and uncertain, but a light.

"It's no earthly light," Gay said moodily. "It's a ghost. I tell you, Auntalmiry, the spirits are abroad this night. Say what you like, queer things are going on. I feel it. I am all creepy, and—oh, look! Oh, it is the hand! Oh!"

Her voice sank away breathlessly. Watching, suddenly outlined in the misty orb of light had been the reflection of a hand, reaching out, slim, shadowy and ghastly.

"Oh, Gay murmured sickly, 'oh, it is his hand!'"

Auntalmiry was shaken. Her arm beneath Gay's hand trembled. But she was firm. She did not believe in ghosts.

"I saw it," she said weakly. "It was just the reflection of a leaf, or a spray of twigs, moving in the wind. Look, it is gone. There is no light, there is no hand. It was the light from a boat reflecting against the leaves. Just a reflection, dearie. They often fool me."

"Have it your own way," Gay said moodily. "Call it a leaf if you like. I call it a hand, his hand."

from habit, without thinking. Heaven knows I had other things on my mind."

She sat down at once to her desk. It was her plan to go to the city on the first boat to relieve herself of all responsibility in the matter. And then, suddenly, she decided that she would not go at all, but write instead. She would describe the entire incident to the last detail, enclose her sketch, and that would be an end of it. She reached into the drawer and pulled out paper, envelopes and her sketching pad. To measure for the size of envelope, she opened the pad to remove the drawing. The page that met her eyes was virginal and white, no pencil line to mar its purity. Gay turned the pad about in her hand, studying it slowly, and then she turned every page, one after the other, and examined every one.

The page had been neatly extracted from the book, and her penciled sketch of the scene in the cove was not there.

Its disappearance settled the affair of the Little Club cove as far as Gay was concerned. With nothing to substantiate her seemingly wild story, she felt the less said of it the better. Gay knew, however, that she was the subject of endless discussion, endless neighborhood wit, in her absence, and for a few days she confined herself as largely as possible to the seclusion of her cottage.

One afternoon, perhaps a week after her discovery and betrayal in the cove, tiring suddenly of her work, she shoved the easel into the corner and decided to clean house. Hastily she bundled her slim knickered figure into a great bungalow apron that made a fat and stodgy housewife of her, twisted a bright silken scarf turbanwise about her small head and fell to work. She dusted, she swept, she rearranged. With brush and pan in hand, she was on her knees at the fireplace, coughing distastefully with the dust of ashes as she cleared out the cinders of last night's driftwood, when suddenly a hand slipped beneath her chin from behind, tilting her head backward, while two firm lips pressed down on hers from above, pressed firmly, warmly, for one long breathless moment.

And then a tremendous, electrifying silence. Gay dropped pan and brush among the ashes and stood up, very tall, very businesslike even with the huge apron bulkily enveloping her, deeply outraged. The man who stood before her, in a silence as great, an amazement as profound as her own, was one she had never seen before, nor seen his like before, she knew at once. Travel-worn hood, his worn, frayed-worn knickers, bareheaded, his blond hair, a little tousled, showed sunburn. But in that first glance it was really his eyes she saw, eyes dark and gray, with little mocking glints that shone through his amazement, gray eyes beneath black lashes, thick and long, that curled upward, veiling the gray with black.

Amusement soon supplanted the astonishment in his face, amusement and interest. His sang froid was perfect.

"Pleased to meet you," he said, with a mockingly deferential inclination of the bare and sunburned head. "So it seems." Gay's voice and eyes were frigid.

"Who art thou, pretty maiden, and where, may I inquire, is the revered and venerable Auntalmiry who one time made this hut her home?" There was laughter in his eyes now, the gayer for her coldness.

"Oh, you wish to see Auntalmiry," she said still with some stiffness, self-consciously, though melting surely beneath the warmth of the gray eyes. "She lives in the Apple Tree now. I live here. Will you sit down?" she asked very formally, and took off the great bungalow apron.

The daring gray eyes explored the revelation of her, slim and straight in the stout shoes, the smart knickers, and the silken blouse; came to rest, contentedly, on the sleek, dark, proud little head.

SLAKE STYLES

"We must be fashionable at all costs," said Mrs. Garter Snake.

"Why do you say at all costs?" asked Mrs. Sally Snake. "One would think that we couldn't afford new suits."

"Indeed I can always afford one when I need one."

"I said that we must have them at all costs," replied Mrs. Garter Snake, "as I've heard people talking, and their talking has been important."

"They have said: 'Oh dear me, dear me, I feel so poor, and yet I must have a new dress. I must have one at all costs.'"

"So I imagined," continued Mrs. Garter Snake, "that we should pretend we were poor and yet that we must get new suits."

"My dear," said Mrs. Sally Snake, "it is very foolish to talk that way; and I don't admire anyone who does."

"If a creature is poor and can't afford a new suit, I admire her, or him, for going without one."

"But if a creature isn't poor and is simply talking that way—then I call it very absurd, and I just wish they could go blind for a little while and really suffer for new things as we do."

"You say in one breath that we don't get our suits at all costs, and in the next you say how we suffer for them," said Mrs. Garter Snake.

"You just said that you didn't admire people when they grumbled. Why copy something you don't admire?"

"True," said Mrs. Sally Snake. "It's strange how often we copy what we don't like to see."

"I hate to gossip about my neighbors. I don't like Mrs. Green Snake because she does," and then to go on talking about Mrs. Green Snake for talking to others.

DRESSY THREE-PIECE ENSEMBLE; WIDE BRIM HATS ARE IN AGAIN

IN REGARD to that three-piece dressy afternoon ensemble of your plans and your dreams, had you thought about velvet for the jacket? Seeing that velvet is receiving the enthusiastic endorsement of leading stylists, as a suitable fabric for spring and summer, as well as for autumn and winter wear, one really could not make a happier selection than this delectable weave.

Young girls are choosing colorful velvet for short jackets to be worn with silk plaited skirts, while their elders are luxuriating in exquisite separate coats topping their summery frocks of sheer prints and pastel chiffons.

Color is outstanding for the youthful velvet jacket types. The original of the model photographed is carried accurately to the dress over which they are posed, are also noted, such as, for instance, a beige velvet coat over an all-over beige lace frock.

Wider brims, wider ribbons—yes there is no doubt about it, milliners are taking a broader view of things than for several seasons past. There is no doubt about it, a decided change is taking place in the realm of hats. To look pretty as well as chic is again becoming fashionable. And so to carry out this new order of things, means to recall to the scenes of activity, the ribbon and flowers and feminine trappings so dear to our hearts—and pocketbooks.

Now this entry of broader brims does not mean that the snug-fitting hat has lost caste. Skull caps and toques out in beige tones, the frock being of crepe with the skirt featuring the popular all-around plaiting. This same style would be very attractive in wine tones or in one of the new soft greens.

A stunning sports item is that of the quilted velvet jacket. These have an imported look, although some of them are being made by the best stylists in this country. They are extremely good-looking, and they top plaited silk skirts or those of sheer woolen weave, to perfection. They are charming with summer lingerie frocks, too.

Ideal as a dressy summer wrap and lending an elegant note, are the seven-eighths-length topcoats made of sheer black velvet. Almost without fail these coats are made with a scarf collar with long streamer ends to be wrapped about the throat or let fall in graceful which follow the line of the coiffure are receiving every encouragement in Paris. However, we are not confined to the brimless types this season. Already the medium large brim has become a general style item. There is every indication that large picturesque types will add charm to the midsummer costume.

It adds a refreshing note, too, that straws are again in the picture—and such interesting straws. Many of them feature a smooth linen-like weave, and one bears the names hallibunt, skol, baku and the like mentioned at every turn.

The models in this group bespeak the new style trend which emphasizes use of ribbons on colorful straws. The top hat is a cocoon crown of wide soft ribbon, just a degree lighter in tone lines. Lined with white brocade or plain crepe, and with a boutonniere of white violets or a cluster of gardenias, these velvet coats are the very essence of smartness.

When intended as a general wrap white is preferred for the lining, but if the ensemble theme is to be carried out, the coat is lined with the same material as that of the frock which it complements. If the dress be of flowered chiffon, the coat lining is likewise, or if the frock be of pastel-colored crepe then this is repeated in the lining.

Sensuality Made No Appeal to Epicurus

If Epicurus could return to earthily life today he would be somewhat surprised to hear his name as an adjective applied to persons and things sensual. Impartial history represents the habits of this Athenian philosopher and his followers as exceedingly frugal and temperate.

The members of his communal school of "Epicureanism" were mostly poor, but being greatly attached to one another, they, in times of scarcity, contributed to each other's support. Epicurus himself began his philosophical career when he was thirteen years old. At that time, upon hearing a verse of Hesiod wherein all things are said to come from Chaos, he asked: "And whence came Chaos?" His teachers referred him to philosophy and to philosophy he did apply.

He sought instruction from many masters, but none could give the youth any solid conviction. He thus founded his own school of thinking and tried to teach the world by precept that they who live simply have no fear of poverty and are better able to enjoy the pleasures of life. He was the first to make philosophy a basis of morals, yet, ironically enough, his fame is the perverted one of a sensualist.—Kansas City Star.

Flowers at Weddings

It is impossible to state when flowers were first used at a wedding, since this is a very ancient custom. Orange blossoms were worn and carried by brides from the earliest times, as they portend luck and happiness. Spencer and Milton were of the opinion that the orange was the golden apple presented to Jupiter by Juno on her wedding day. It was customary for the Anglo-Saxon bride to give her friends small knots and ribbons to wear or carry on the wedding day. This custom still survives in the bouquets of the bridesmaids.

MEN NOW INVADING BEAUTY PARLORS

Go In for Marcelles and Facial Treatments

New York.—"O, Harold, your beautiful, wavy hair thrills me to death. I mean it really does. Was it always that way?"

"Why, no," replies the young man modestly. "I just dropped into the Beauty Shoppe this morning for my weekly marcelle."

This might well be typical conversation nowadays between the flapper and her well-groomed, wavy-haired sheik, for an ever increasing number of men are patronizing women's beauty parlors in order to enhance their masculine "appeal."

Many he-men will roar at this statement, but it is inside dope, straight from the proprietor of a beauty shop, who says that the beauty parlors, once devoted entirely to the ladies, are now no more sacred to the fair ones than the barber shops reserved for men.

"The men are now beginning to realize," she explained, "that they must take advantage of art in order to make the best of their personal appearance for business and social success. The girls found that out ages ago."

Within the past two years, especially, have the boys been invading the beauty shop, not only for marcelles, but for facial treatments, hair dyeing and even for permanent waves. Some of the customers are irregular, but many of the establishments have their weekly male patrons. The women often resent the intrusion, she said, so her own shop doesn't encourage this trade.

Most of the boys are very awkward about coming in, she related. Either they flush and drop their hat or are too nonchalant to be convincing. They are quite docile under treatment, as a rule, but are apt to be afraid of the formidable looking permanent wave machine. When a man is put in a chair the big contraption fastened on to his hair in about twenty places and the current turned on, he usually moans and asks the operator to hold his hand.

Middle aged business men and prematurely gray young ones come in regularly to have their hair dyed. In their case personal vanity plays no part. There is a strong prejudice against gray hair. So they disguise it under the more youthful shade of dark brown.

Elevators to Enable Men to Inspect Stacks

New York.—Man-carrying elevators inside 225-foot smokestacks are features of the new million-kilowatt capacity East river generating station being created from the existing plant.

Seven smokestacks will tower above the roof of the power house. They will reach 22 feet in diameter, constructed entirely of steel plates riveted together.

Heretofore the inside of steel smokestacks has been lined with brick, because moisture, gathering where the plates are riveted together, causes corrosion and destroys them. But the designers of the East river station decided that a brick lining was not necessary. Instead, they had the inside of every seam in each stack welded smooth, to allow no place for moisture to gather. Thousands of linear feet of welding protect the vulnerable places where plates are joined together.

The elevators permit thorough and safe inspection of the insides of the stacks. Each elevator consists of a steel platform running along guides and suspended from a cable over a sheaf at the top of the stack. When not in use the elevators rest at the bottom of the stacks below the openings in the sides where the smoke enters from the boilers.

Steel ladders are built outside the stacks to provide another means of ascent. The workmen climb between ladder and stack, rather than outside, since this gives them a feeling of security.

Mud Baths Revive French Race Horse

Dax, France.—A course of mud baths saved Grillemont, one of France's great race horses, from the slaughter house.

Eight months ago Grillemont was so stricken with rheumatism that his owner, as a humanitarian measure, considered destroying him. As a last resource he decided to try on his horse what doctors were advocating for human beings, and Grillemont for weeks on end patiently suffered himself to be plastered with hot mud and steaming water.

Now, says the veterinarian, he has completely recovered, and to celebrate his return to health won a fast race over a mile and a half course. So outstanding was his performance that the government stud at Geles, in the department of Basses-Pyrenees, bought him at auction for 600,000 francs ($24,000).

Don't Make a Toy Out of Baby - Babies Have Nerves

By RUTH BRITAIN

Much of the nervousness in older children can be traced to the overstimulation during infancy, caused by regarding baby as a sort of animated toy for the amusement of parents, relatives and friends. Baby may be played with, but not for more than a quarter of an hour to an hour daily. Beyond that, being handled, tickled, caused to laugh or even scream, will sometimes result in vomiting, and invariably causes irritability, crying or sleeplessness.

Fretfulness, crying and sleeplessness from this cause can easily be avoided by treating baby with more consideration, but when you just can't see what is making baby restless or upset, better give him a few drops of pure, harmless Castoria. It's easy to see how quickly it calms baby's nerves and soothes him to sleep; yet it contains no drugs or opiates. It is a purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper. Leading physicians prescribe it for colic, cholera, diarrhea, constipation, gas on stomach and bowels, fretfulness, loss of sleep and all other "upsets" of babyhood. Over 25 million bottles used a year shows its overwhelming popularity.

With each bottle of Castoria, you get a book on Motherhood, worth its weight in gold. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package so you'll get genuine Castoria. There are many imitations.

Then the dead twin and the dummy are buried or cremated together and it is pretended that both have passed from life. The remaining twin is regarded as a "nobody" until he or she can be taken to the temple to receive a new name and to be considered ever after as a new member of the family.

GIRL'S CONFIDING UPSETS NAVY TRIP

Leads to Finding Four Others on Ships.

Washington.—Five girls who sought adventure on the high seas might still be sailing with Uncle Sam's navy had not one of them confided to her chum that she intended to ship on a destroyer as a stowaway. But she did, and now five girls are on land again, one sailor under arrest, and a court of inquiry will go into the matter.

The girl who told was Cynthia Alberta Poole, fifteen-year-old high school student of St. Petersburg, Fla. The chum told Cynthia's parents and her father got in touch with the naval authorities. A search of the destroyer Billingsley resulted in the discovery of the girl and she was put ashore at Mayport, Fla.

Poole's message also resulted in a general search of vessels in south Atlantic waters and four other girls were found. Besides the Poole girl, the navy had been informed one girl each was discovered on the light cruiser Concord, the destroyer Sands and the destroyer repair ship Dobbins. Dispatches from Florida, however, accounted for a fourth besides Miss Poole.

The four gave their names as Billy Lacer, Rose McGuire, Flossie Rice and Ramilda Avary. Placed ashore at Key West by the Concord, they said they had "shipped" at New Orleans to return to their homes in Philadelphia where they were employed as waitresses. All were given fares back to New Orleans.

Cynthia was said to have told the commander of the Billingsley that she met a sailor named Kramer at a soft-drink stand in St. Petersburg when the vessel was anchored there. She added that Kramer, who is being held by the authorities, persuaded her to board the destroyer.

"He persuaded me, but I wanted to go," Cynthia told Judge J. L. Gavan, in whose custody she was placed pending arrival of officers from St. Petersburg to return her to her parents.

Moon Has an Effect on One Crop—Oysters

Washington.—The production of seed oysters on both natural and cultivated beds has shown tremendous fluctuations from year to year, ranging in the Long Island sound region from over one million bushels in 1925 to practically none in 1928 and 1927. Obviously this uncertainty of a "set" adds greatly to the hazards of oyster farming, for without a set each year the oyster farmer cannot keep his growing areas properly seeded and therefore cannot count on a regular crop.

H. F. Prytherch, assistant aquatic biologist of the United States bureau of fisheries, has found that water temperature is the most important factor in controlling not only the development and ripening of the spawn, but also the time when spawning of the oysters will take place. During the last six years setting has been the most successful in this region when the temperature was above normal and has failed when it was below normal.

Recent studies at Milford, Conn., disclose that fluctuations in water temperatures in inshore areas are controlled largely by the tides and that the maximum temperatures necessary for spawning occur during full or new moon periods, when the range of tide is greatest. Herein lies a grain of comfort for the believer in the moon having an effect on crops.

Aerial Surveys Save Time for Geologists

Ottawa, Ont.—Geologists formerly wasted 75 to 80 per cent of their time exploring unpromising areas, but now aerial surveys have largely banished this loss, says A. M. In the last five years they have mapped out 200,000 square miles of hitherto unexplored territory.
