Church of Christ.
You are invited to all of the services at the church of Christ. From the beginning man has never been content with God's ONE plan of doing things. "God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions." Eccl. 7:29. One disastrous invention is preaching more than one plan of salvation. God has never had more than ONE plan. If God punished the people for doing what he said do, in a way that he had not commanded (Lev. 10:1) will we punish us now? The new and living way through Christ, has been opened and who will dare alter it?

A Baby-awful at Three—and it's Dangerous—
by Ruth Brittain

Thumb sucking does look sweet in a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen! The habit may cause an ill-formed mouth or induce adenoids; and it always interferes with digestion. Planning the sieve over the hand; attaching mittens, or putting on cardboard cuffs, which prevent lending the arms at the elbows, are some of the ways to stop the habit.

Another bad habit—irregularity in bowel action—is responsible for weak bowels and constipation in babies. Give the tiny bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods each day. If they don't act at first, a little Fletcher's Castoria will soon regulate them. Every mother should keep a bottle of it handy to use in case of colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, loss of sleep, or when baby is cross and feverish. Its gentle influence over baby's system enables him to get full nourishment from his food, helps him gain, strengthens his bowels.

Castoria is purely vegetable and harmless—the recipe is on the wrapper. Physicians have prescribed it for over 30 years. With each package, you get a valuable book on Motherhood. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper so you'll get the genuine.

LITTLE DANGER FROM LIGHTNING FLASHES

One Chance in Millions of It Hurting You.

New York.—The next time the lightning flashes and baby cries and mother shivers and you swallow hard and tell Johnny, "Poooh, poooh, there is nothing to be afraid of," and then duck your own head under the bed clothes—don't. You are right. There is nothing to be afraid of. The chance of a person being struck in his home is one in several million.

And if you chance to be at your desk in some downtown skyscraper, the lightning cannot reach you. You have the assurance for this from R. M. Spurck, an engineer of the new switchgear plant of the General Electric company at Philadelphia, in charge of the high voltage testing of circuit breakers, where arcs of artificial lightning at from fifteen to twenty feet are played over apparatus to make sure there are no defects and that it will withstand conditions when put into service out in the open in natural lightning areas.

Not Mere Guesswork.
"Shooting a million volts into circuit breakers to thoroughly test them before leaving the factory is not mere guesswork. The fundamentals are based on studies made in the company's laboratories, field observations, and the classic work of the late Doctor Steinmetz," Mr. Spurck said.

If you reside on the top of a hill with no trees about you are in a comparatively perilous position. But if you live in the average city home, with houses of equal height about you, lightning is likely to single you out about once every thousand years. As for the residents in the house perched upon the hill, the chance is one in several million that they will be struck by the bolt that comes once every hundred years.

The bolt might tear up the roof, or even set it afire, but likely would get no closer to you. It would encounter the electric house wiring and would be carried impotent to the ground. Or it would hop on to the plumbing system and docilely speed off into the earth.

Keep Away From Walls.
The safest place in your house is anywhere except where these lightning conductors are centered. Most plumbing and heating pipes run up and down in the middle of the house. Keep away from the walls in which they run. Do not stand between two metal objects, such as a heating radiator and the plumbing pipes. There is nothing wrong with the superstitious belief that the bed is a safe place.

In the modern steel office building lightning can't even get the roof. Most roofs of such buildings are metal and are purposely brought in contact at some point with the steel framework, and this circuit absorbs and carries off any lightning that may chance to shoot down.

Climate 3,000 Years Ago Shown by Tree Rings
Washington.—A climatic curve which is described as "fairly reliable" back to a date before the beginning of the Christian era and "moderately reliable" for a period running back several hundred years further has been worked out by D. Ellsworth Huntington of Yale university through studies of growth-rings of trees.

Stupidity in Making Collections Great Defect of the Income Tax Law

By FRANK E. WOLFE, National Labor Leader.

THERE is something wrong with the income tax system. Not a startling statement. There is always something wrong with all tax laws.

In this case it is being pointed out that the income tax from more than 2,000,000 persons in the United States cost the government more to collect than their total tax amounts to.

It is stated that while these taxpayers paid an average of only $2.23, the handling of their returns and the administrative expenses involved amounted to an average of more than $2.50.

Of course the same situation holds in regard to the thousands whose returns are defectively made out and are sent back for revision or for investigation. Even when an error is found that involves a small sum the cost of collecting it far exceeds the amount.

A large portion of this loss could be eliminated by the simple expedient of raising the limit on the small man's exemption and stop worrying him for returns when he doesn't make the limit.

When this suggestion is brought up before those in the seats of the mighty you will find there a counter plea for a reduction of the surtaxes and exemptions for the very rich.

If a grocer should adopt a system of collections that would cost him $1.10 for every dollar collected people would call him an imbecile, but the government does the same thing—thus proving that there is collective imbecility as well as individual idiocy.

United States Should Stop Trading With Any Nation Beginning Armed Conflict

By NEWTON D. BAKER, Ex-Secretary of War.

The next war will be the greatest demonstration the world has ever seen and will be a battle of combatants against noncombatants, not between soldiers; the sufferers will be men, women and children supposedly in peaceful pursuits; it will be a struggle of nations to gain access to the natural resources of the world.

Most causes of war are based on territorial disputes, religion or dynastic necessities, but all are overshadowed by the exploitation by nations of natural resources. Modern war can be made only by five or six nations, England, France, Italy, perhaps Germany, Japan and the United States. Other nations can create only riots, not wars, but they could make wars if supplied with arms.

There is one agency really at work, the League of Nations, for perpetuation of peace. I believe that congress should pass a doctrine that if two countries enter war the United States will cut all trade relations with the country breaking any treaties. No nation would declare war then, as the United States is indispensable. I believe that the country should be into the World court and should be sympathetic to all agencies of understanding and conciliation.

Religions in America Can Learn Something From Those of the Orient

By PROF. JULIAN MORGENSTERN, Hebrew Union College.

America is creating a distinctive culture, and the Orient has many contributions to make to it. There is need for a wider tolerance in this country's treatment of the problems raised by immigration, prohibition, and the conflict between fundamentalism and modernism.

Every would-be immigrant is regarded with suspicion as a parasite on the body of the American nation; but in characteristic manner, the United States has leaped at the conclusion that blond parasites are not quite as annoying or dangerous as brunettes.

There are growing up in the United States distinctive religions—American Protestantism, American Judaism, American Catholicism—all of which still have something to learn from the oriental religions. An increased interest in oriental studies would go a long way toward producing wider tolerance.

WAMPUM BELTS AID TO HISTORY

New York Museum Gets Valuable Specimens.

Albany, N. Y.—Four almost priceless belts of Indian wampum recently added to the collection in the New York state museum make it one of the finest groups of these "historical documents" in the world.

The belts were left to the museum by the will of Anna Treadwell Thacher, whose husband, John Boyd Thacher, purchased them in 1863 for $500.

The four new belts in the collection are known as the Hlawahta belt, the Washington Covenant belt, the Wampum to Mark the First Sight of Palefaces and the Champlain belt.

The Hlawahta belt is believed here to be the original record of the formation of the Iroquois league. The exact age of the belt is unknown, but it is believed to have been made in the middle of the sixteenth century.

The Washington Covenant belt was the one most highly prized by the wampum keepers of the Onondaga nation. It derives its name from its use during the Presidency of George Washington as a covenant of peace between the thirteen original states which he represented and the six nations of the Iroquois.

The third belt was made by the Iroquois to commemorate the "sight of the first palefaces," but it is not known whether this reference is to Spaniards, French or Dutch.

The Champlain belt is virtually a duplicate of the Gen. Eli S. Parker belt, also a part of the collection. It commemorates the excursion of Samuel Champlain into the country of the Iroquois in 1609.

Use Temple of Heaven as Army Storehouse

Peking.—The Temple of Heaven, whose dome of blue is one of the capital's crowning glories, and the first landmark to greet the traveler coming to Peking from the seacoast, has been converted to a military storehouse.

On the plea of military necessity the temple enclosure, with its great white marble altar on which the emperors for hundreds of years made the annual New Year sacrifices to the Supreme Being, and its beautiful wooded parkland, has been closed to the general public.

Until recently the temple itself was filled with explosives and ammunition for Marshal Chang Tso-lin's armies, so that a careless soldier's cigarette or an enemy's match might have destroyed what is generally considered the highest triumph of Chinese architecture. Now greater consideration for the temple, which the Chinese call the "Great Lofty Shrine," has caused the removal of these stores to the Hall of Abstinence, a less holy building in which the emperors rested and fasted in preparation for the ancient rites.

The Temple of Heaven is the creation of the architects of Yung Lo, greatest of the Ming emperors, who ruled 600 years ago.

Civil War Pensioners Reduced to 79,300

Washington.—The mounting death rate among Civil war veterans reduced the number in March to only 79,300 pensioners. A total of 1,283 died recently, the pension bureau announced.

Once, in 1898, these pensioners totaled 745,522, which was the peak, but it remained for increases in appropriations to bring the highest in the amount of pensions in 1923, when $14,577,515 was disbursed.

GERMANS START HUNT FOR AMBER

Whole Village Digs for Prussian "Gold."

Palmnicken, Germany.—With frost out of the ground, quarrying for amber has started again at the great Prussian amber mining works here, only plant of its kind in the world.

Palmnicken lives on amber. The whole village of 800 people is employed in the plant.

Amber, "Prussian gold," was traded at this little spot on the Baltic coast with the ancient Phoenicians. Fishermen dredged for it in earlier days, but more recently it has been dug out of the blue clay.

Great hoppers bring up cars of clay from an area a square mile in extent. The clay is washed for amber in much the same way as auriferous earth is washed for gold. Each season about 3,000,000 cubic meters of soil are moved.

Amber is found in clusters. The pieces are picked out and washed with sand in great revolving drums. An army of girls sits at a running band and picks out six recognized standard qualities.

Every year the "crop" runs to about 125,000 pounds but only one-third of this is suitable for beads and ornaments. The rest is ground to powder to make "pressed" amber, or melted down to make varnish and colophony. Amber oil and acid are by-products obtained by distillation.

Pieces of seven or eight pounds weight are not rare, but the biggest single lump ever found here weighed about fifteen pounds.

In the laboratory, pieces of amber of all shades and sizes are kept—bright amber, pale-yellow amber, plain and with flies, bugs or tiny leaves imbedded in them, dating from the tertiary period when coniferous forests flourished here in a subtropical climate.

The most valuable amber bears the quaint name of "sauerkraut" because it is of a pale-yellow tinge and has markings suggesting strands of cut cabbage.

Radio Wave Penetrates Cells and Destroys Life

Princeton, N. J.—The production of a supersonic wave by means of a miniature radio broadcasting apparatus and a quartz crystal, which cannot be heard by the human ear but which will penetrate the walls of a cell, destroy all living matter within it and not harm the outside walls, was announced at Princeton university recently.

The experiment was successfully performed by Dr. E. Newton Hardey, professor of physiology, and Alfred Loomis laboratory, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.

The wave, which oscillates 20 times faster than waves to which the human ear is sensitive, is capable of rearranging the matter within the cells by setting them going in a kind of whirlpool action.

The final effect on the substances was the destruction of the blood corpuscles, which were broken into globules, much in the nature of the emulsion of oil.

Obligations Imposed on Society by Development of Labor-Saving Machines
By JAMES J. DAVIS, Secretary of Labor.

The time will come when employers who desire to use new labor-saving machinery will first see to it that the man who is to "go" with the coming of the machine shall not evolve into "waste" labor and his years of training and experience, perhaps, thrown upon the scrap heap of disuse.

As we go on inventing new machines for speed we must, too, invent new industries for the safety of our workers.

And to see to it that they so remain, with full protection to each and every worker, is one of the solemn duties that society owes to labor.

STORY FROM THE START

On the verge of nervous collapse, due to overwork, Gay Deane, successful New York artist, seeks rest at Isle Island. She rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine," from an island character, the "Captain," and his sister, Alice Andover, "administrator." Gay finds the cottage is tenanted by an elderly lady, "Auntalmiry," who consents to move to another abode, the "Apple Tree." Awakening from sleep, Gay imagines she sees the face of a Chinaman peering in the window. On an exploration of the island Gay, standing on the seashore, is horrified by the appearance of the drifting body of a drowned man, which she nerves herself to bring to the shore. A bullet wound in the temple shows the man to have been murdered. Gay makes her way to the "Captain" with the story. Returning with him to the shore, they find nobody there, and Gay's story of the incident is set down to an attack of "nerves." Gay, unable to convince her neighbors of the truth, draws a picture of the face of the dead man, intending to send it to the authorities. She meets a stranger, apparently another visitor, to whom she tells the story and shows the picture. He asks her to let him take it, but Gay refuses. Next day, after a night spent with "Auntalmiry," Gay finds the picture has been taken from the cottage. "Rand" Wallace, wanderer, and considered something of a "black sheep" by the islanders, expecting to find "Auntalmiry," surprises Gay at household tasks. She likes him at once.

CHAPTER V—Continued

The days flew away like enchanted things. Gay had never been so happy, although she neglected her sacred canvases and brush. How could she work with Rand sprawling in the window-seat at her side, brown hand touching her hand, gray eyes holding her eyes? Every day he worked faithfully on the Bo'n's, Bem's yacht, worked very hard for a few hours to spare himself more time to be with her, appearing at the Lone Pine every morning promptly at eleven o'clock, the hour of her late breakfast, which was breakfast and luncheon in one.

Walked Up and Down Beneath the Trees.

"So this is how one lives on nothing a year," she said to him one day, laughing. "Well, I am relieved, I know at least that you will never starve."

The next morning he handed her a pound of the best coffee obtainable at the Pier grocery store. He was very laudatory. "I may be low, but I have my pride," he said. "My coffee! And when it is gone, kindly notify me. More will be forthcoming."

"Don't forget the electricity," she reminded him gayly. "It must be a nickel a week."

And laughingly she accepted the dingy coin he selected carefully from a handful to give her.

Every day he went up the slope to the Lone Pine at sunset, that sweetest hour of the day, and sat with her in the window-seat on the west, looking down to the bay where the sky burned with fresh-blown gold and flame and amethyst, burned fiercely for a while before it paled to smoking embers, pastel shades of rose and violet and cream. And when the embers had faded to gray ash, they went into the woods, and walked up and down beneath the trees that gossiped to one another above them, and breathed deeply of the intoxicating spices of the forest—pine, and spruce, and fir.

At that hour they never talked, but wandered slowly here and there, stumbling sometimes over the trunks of old trees or fallen logs, sliding over treacherous rocks, holding hands like children, smiling at each other.

never referred to it by word or by suggestion. It was that innate courtesy, that delicate New England reserve, which held sacred from reference a subject that might give pain.

Now, suddenly, Gay wished he would speak of it, would ask her what she had seen, or thought she saw. She wished greatly to talk freely with him, to tell him the surprising things that had happened to her on the island.

The closeness of her clasp on his hand relaxed. "I am not afraid," she said easily. "I just wondered who it was."

There was no sound from the thick growth of brush that lay so wickedly about them, no faintest crackle of dried, dead, crumbling needles of pine, but as Gay finished speaking, a dark shadow slipped away, almost from beneath her hand, slipped away, shadow-like, and melted with the other shadows. And neither Gay nor Rand suspected one shadow more or less among the many on either side.

Even when the Bo'n's was ready at last for the trip down the coast, Rand put off his departure as long as he could, and when further delay was impossible, he sent his bags aboard, and with all in readiness for sailing, with the two men chosen for his crew aboard, he slowly climbed the hill for a final breakfast with Gay at eleven o'clock.

Gay was very wistful, very sad.

She could not eat, although the breakfast tray for two was most enticingly arrayed. Over her cup of coffee her eyes clung to Rand's eyes, very large, very deep, darkly troubled.

"Rand, please eat," she begged. "You will be very hungry before night! Eat, please eat!"

"Gay, I can't. For the first time in my life, my appetite was all billed up before I began. I hate to go and leave you. Gay, you aren't thinking of going away the first of September, are you? I will make the trip as fast as I can, but I cannot be back by the first. You wouldn't go before I return, would you?"

"There's really nothing to hurry me away," she said reasonably. "I like it here, and I do need more rest, and they say—the weather is very nice in September."

"The weather! Are you staying for the weather?"

Gay shook her head. No—for you.

Rand stood up suddenly, and Gay, too, rose slowly. Hard in hand they crossed the pleasant room to the door that opened down upon the bay where the Bo'n's waited for Rand, to take him away.

"I kissed you when I came the first time," he said softly, "wouldn't it rather hurt your feelings if I went away—less affectionately?"

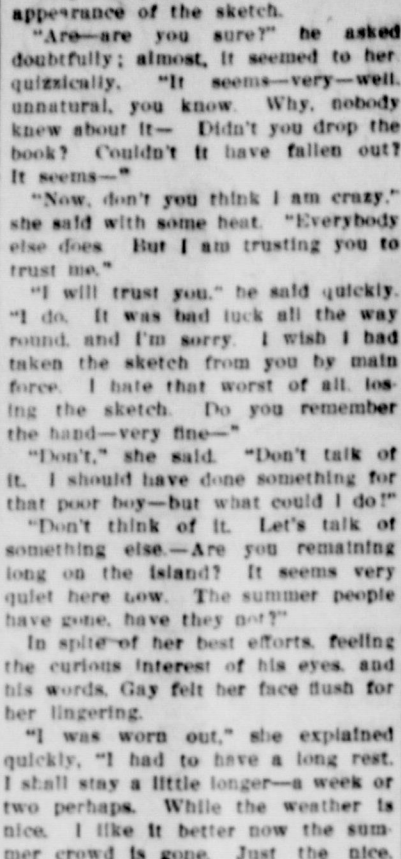

"Gay nodded. "Terribly. I should think you didn't like it."

Rand took her in his arms, and kissed her, not once, but many times. "Were you ever in love before, Rand?" Gay asked softly.

"Well—yes," he admitted hesitatingly. "Er—weren't you?"

"Well—yes," she acknowledged, smiling faintly. "But never like this, Rand, never like this."

Lucky Thirteen Make Fortunes

Violate Superstition and Win Great Wealth in Oil Field.

Sweetgrass, Mont.—Since the Sunburst-Kevin oil field in Montana, which now has been proven to extend over the Canadian border into Alberta, has become world famed as a producer of oil and riches, a story book of romance could be written about the field.

The original Kallispell-Kevin Oil company had 13 members. Assuming that their company was to tear down tradition and become one of the world's most startling financial successes, they arranged to form their company of 13 members on Friday the 13th, and forthwith rented a post-office box No. 13 to carry out the number 13 as far as possible.

The organizers were mostly entirely unfamiliar with the oil business, which they formed in 1921. Gov. J. E. Erickson of Helena, Mont.; C. L. Emmons, George F. Standard, James K. Lang, J. M. Carlson, F. O. Williams, Miss Alsea Gray, Dr. D. F. Vossburgh, Theodore Torbenosen, Lee Kerr, and Dr. J. C. Boyd, all of Kallispell, Mont.; A. J. Lowery of Polson, Mont., and Ralph Arnold, a famous geologist of Los Angeles, composed the group.

Each member of the 13 original investors bought $500 worth of units, at $2.50 per unit, thus each received 200 units. Since that time the units have increased in valuation until they are worth $1,500 or more on the open market today, or $300,000 for an original investment of $500.

The company has over 100 producing oil wells and several good gas wells, and has room on its acreage for about 300 more oil wells.

Shortly after the company was formed some of the members of the firm bought used cars and gave units in exchange for them in order to have means of conveyance about their scattered acreage in the oil field.

Evidence That Tigers Select Human Victims

Man-eating tigers of the Indian jungles sometimes appear to single out a certain person and go after him, ignoring all others until they get him, points out Gen. William Mitchell, the noted flying officer, in an article in Liberty. The general tells a story to illustrate his point.

"A native became separated from his companions in the jungle and was chased by a tiger," he writes. "He succeeded in climbing into a tree, while the tiger remained on watch below."

"After a while," General Mitchell continues, "his companions, noting his absence and suspecting that a tiger

CANNON TAKEN IN CIVIL WAR RETURNED TO SOUTHERNERS

Gun at Gettysburg Goes Back to Marietta, Ga., With Consent of War Department.

Marietta, Ga.—This little city, situated a few miles from Atlanta and at the foot of Kennesaw mountain, which saw such active fighting between the troops of the North and South during the war between the states, recently sent a delegation to Gettysburg, Pa., and recaptured a small brass cannon that formerly belonged to a state college here. It fell into the hands of the Northern troops near Augusta late in 1864.

Following the exercises at Gettysburg the cannon was shipped to Marietta, where it was formally accepted by the United Daughters of the Confederacy and other Confederate organizations at exercises held on April 23, Confederate Memorial day, a date that marks the final surrender of Johnson's army.

Any Woman Can Look Stylish

By MAE MARTIN

Most stylish looking women you see are simply "good managers." They don't open their pocket-books wide for every change in fashion. They know simple ways to make last season's things conform to this season's styles.

Thousands of them have learned how easily they can transform a dress, or blouse, or coat, by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing. With true, fadeless Diamond Dyes, anyone can do this successfully. The "know-how" is in the dyes. Each package represents the perfection of 50 years of dye-making. They don't streak or spot like inferior dyes. New, fashionable tints appear like magic, right over the out-of-style or faded colors. Tinting with Diamond Dyes is as easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little longer. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. Insist on them and save disappointment.

SILVERY NIGHT

"I was flying over a house tonight," said the fairy named Silvery Night, "and I heard the voice of a little child inside."

"I hopped on the window sill where she couldn't see me. She was talking to her mother."

"When does the doctor say I'll be able to sit up?" she asked.

"Very soon, my love," her mother said, "you must be a little stronger."

"Oh, mother," the little girl said, "I do hope it will be soon. I get so tired of being in bed. I feel so very lonely sometimes without my friends, the Shooting Stars."

"Now I found out that this little girl always sat by her window before she went to bed and looked at the stars, and so many nights she saw the Shooting Stars."

"She loved them so," continued Silvery Night, "and always wanted to see them if there were any to see."

"But now she had to lie in bed and the bed was quite a distance from the window as she had to be kept out of drafts."

"I could tell that her mother was afraid she was getting so discouraged that it would take her longer to get well. So I stopped on my way and had a talk with the Dream King."

BRIDESMAID'S "PICTURE" FROCK; HOW TO MAKE A SCARF DRESS

IT IS written in the book of fashion that each and every bridesmaid in attendance at the June wedding must be "a picture." It is not going to be a difficult matter at all this season to carry out an order for the picturesque, for not only in the realm of bridesmaids, but in the feminine world at large, there is romance in the air when it comes to present-day fashions.

So when pretty Miss Bridesmaid-a-shopping goes, she will be meeting Miss Summer Girl seeking the self-same sort of big droopy brims and some such entrancing way as here pictured. In this instance not only is it artfully inset with the skirt but it forms that most voguish item—the lace cape. Most of the dainty transparent frocks for summer, are complemented with either a matching cape or a cape of exquisite lace.

And the ribbon-trimmed fine hair hat! It is just such as this modish bridesmaid should be wearing.

The most exciting thing has happened in fashion's realm—the scarf dress! They are too fetching for words, these scarf frocks, and the best of it is, they are that easy to make that if one knows how to sew even a little bit they can own a gown de luxe at comparatively trifling cost.

These diagrams show exactly how the dress illustrated to the left may be cut out of four square georgette scarfs. The first scarf is used for the two top pieces of the sleeves and the right front of the blouse. Note that the piece for the blouse includes the material for the jabot which is simply a straight piece of georgette allowed to

POULTRY DEVELOPMENT OF YOUNG TURKEYS

Many people report good success in raising young poulters until they are one or two months old and then report losses. In a recent majority of cases this is due to the birds becoming affected with blackhead. This disease does not always show a blackened color of the head and for this reason many confuse it with something else. Blackhead is really a disease of the liver and intestine and in some of the extreme cases the head shows a discoloration. The more common symptoms are weakness in activity, a diminished appetite and diarrhea.

Blackhead is closely associated with small cecum worms. The small parasitic protozoan which causes blackhead seems to enter the system of the fowls through the small irritations made by these worms. Therefore, the prevention of worms is as important as the prevention of the disease proper.

Fortunately the prevention of worms is accomplished by the steps necessary to prevent the disease. Keeping the poulters on fresh ground away from old birds, especially chickens, is necessary. Chickens are often affected with the disease but it does not injure them in the same manner as turkeys. Moving the poulters to fresh ground at frequent intervals not only insures greater freedom from the disease, but it also helps to furnish green material and good range.

It has been demonstrated that it is not necessary to allow young poulters the run of the farm. In fact many people are reporting better success when keeping them on ground that is not frequented by chickens.

A good ration for growing chickens is also a good ration for young poulters.

Tuberculosis Is Subject of New Government Film

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"T. B. or Not T. B.," a question that is causing many Midwestern poultrymen to soliloquize on the future of their flocks, is the title of a recently released United States Department of Agriculture educational film. The picture is a two reeler dealing with tuberculosis of poultry.

The film, which is presented in story form, is designed to instruct poultrymen on ways and means of controlling this plague and keeping it from their farms. Scenes depict the various common conditions which are conducive to the introduction of the disease to the poultry yard, the breeding of germs and the spread of the infection. Avian tuberculosis is not only fatal to fowls but spreads to swine as well, frequently resulting in heavy financial losses to the owners of the sick birds. Methods of wiping out the dreaded avian T. B. bacilli and preventing future losses from the disease are stressed in the new film.

Copies of United States Department of Agriculture films are available for loan without charge other than the cost of transportation, which must be assumed by the borrower. Prospective users of the film should apply for bookings to the office of Motion Pictures, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Apoplexy and Internal Rupture Cause Death

When hens that have been apparently healthy are found dead under the roost in the morning or on the nests, the loss is probably due to apoplexy or some internal rupture. This is often due to the strain of laying. Too heavy feeding of corn which makes the birds overfat is responsible for some of the sudden losses. Leghorns do not become overfat as easily as the heavy breeds but they lay a large egg which may cause a severe strain and occasional losses. A few birds may die from apoplexy and internal rupture in spite of the best of management and such losses help to make up the normal death rate in most poultry flocks. A postmortem examination of the internal organs may help in locating any disease if that condition is present.

Get Chicks Outside

Weather permitting, baby chicks should be allowed to run out into the open air when they are a week old. Running outside will give them an opportunity to get away from the heat of the brooder stove and absorb the life-giving elements of the sun at the same time. Wooden frames two feet by ten feet, covered with one-inch poultry netting, can be used to make a small yard near the brooder house. The first few weeks the baby chicks should be confined to this small yard.

Buy Baby Chicks

Many poultry raisers would find it more profitable to buy their baby chicks rather than try to hatch them. Each year the hatcheries are producing better-quality chicks. This year it would be safe to state that average hatchery chicks will be better than many farm-hatched chicks. Such a condition may be attributed to the hatcheries having culled their breeding flocks closer than ever while the average farmer has not practiced culling.

Going One Better

A little girl of four was trying to impress her playmate with what she had seen at the Yosemite National park. He did not seem greatly interested and she persisted: "But I was wealthy on a great big vacation. I saw white water fall off a big mountain that was Yosemite falling down and Half Dome and—"

That brought a quick response; he knew all about domes, for his daddy worked at the state capitol.

"Huh! That's nothing," he said. "My daddy works where there is a whole dome!"

Too Sticked on Herself

Gene and Irma were discussing rather ruefully the fact that they were left out of a party given by another little girl.

"We don't care, do we, Gene," was the conclusion of Irma.

"No," answered Gene. "We don't want to go to the party of any one who is as sticked on herself as she is."

More Effective Punishment

"Willie," said the Sunday school teacher severely, "you shouldn't talk like that to your playmate. Had you ever thought of heaping coals of fire on his head?"

"No, ma'am, I hadn't, but it's a peach of an idea!"

en of fashion at garden parties and other of midsummer's happy events.

About the most interesting thing to learn concerning modern frocks for modern bridesmaids and the 1928 summer girl is that skirts are longer, yes, longer, and waistlines are higher. Not that hemlines are lengthened all around in stereotyped fashion, not at all. This lengthening process is done with greatest artistry. If there is such a thing as temperamental hemlines, then they are "having their day" right now.

More about bridesmaids' frocks and others—it takes yards and yards and yards of material for their making, for "tres boufant" is the call of the mode. And concerning lace. Never such a lace season as this. Very, very often it is combined with chiffon, in hang in natural graceful lines. See Diagram 1.

The second scarf cuts easily into the back of the blouse, all in one piece, and the side front of the blouse. See Diagram 2.

The third scarf gives the two under pieces for the sleeves and a straight piece for the skirt. See Diagram 3.

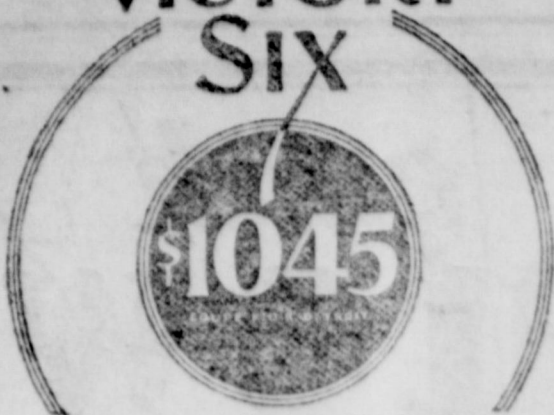

The fourth scarf is cut in two pieces for the skirt. The three pieces for the skirt should be seamed together and then finely knife-plaited. See Diagram 4. Sew this on to an under bodice of plain silk.

The other dress in the picture is made of four flower hand-blocked georgette scarfs. It is styled with a cunning bolero.
