Dodge Brothers Standard Six is the fastest car, with the fastest pick-up, under a thousand dollars.

HOWEVER

That is only HALF the story. The IMPORTANT point is that this exceptional speed is made practical by Dodge ruggedness of chassis and body construction.

OTHERS

Might succeed in building a car at this price with equal SPEED, but to do so successfully they would also have to build a car with equal STURDINESS.

AND

That is where Dodge Brothers, with years of experience in building a dependable low-cost product, are years ahead of the field.

YOU

Can buy the Standard Six knowing that it is not only the fastest car in its class but the sturdiest—and the one is every bit as important as the other.

District Judge Joseph Jones presiding. Monday morning the grand jury was impaneled, the following men being selected:
Willie Banner, R. N. Allen, A.
Appel, C. H. Arvin, R. B. Cox,
Robert Doak Jr., L. Lemons, C.
H. White, R. Murrain, N. M.
Scott, Charles Stavley and A. L.
White, foreman. R. J. Turner and Lee Cook were bailiffs. Only one indictment was returned.
The grand jury completed its work that day and adjourned on July in the afternoon.

At this term the following civil cases were disposed of:
Katherine (Katy) Gibson vs.
Leonard Isaac, suit to remove cloud from title, dismissed at cost of plaintiff; Glyde Mills and E. F. Howard vs. Sanderson State Bank garnishee, passed to await action in regard to case on appeal; Thomas A. Spencer moned for Thursday was not used as there were no jury cases.

Hand Is Injured.

Theo McDonald, an employe of the Ferguson Motor Co., acci-dently ran a file through the fleshy part of his right hand Monday while at work at the garage. He was filing the inside of a wheel which was turning and was as careful as possible to keep the file from slipping and catching in the spokes of the wheel. However, some one called to him and he turned to answer, when in so doing he let the file slip, running it clear through his hand. So far the wound is giving him very little trouble.

The Church of Christ.

If I can serve God acceptably and help save the lost in an institution (religious though it be) that men have organized, the conclusion is so far as the salvation of souls is concerned, the institution of man is just as good as the Divine.

Are we ready to come to that conclusion? Why should the Savior establish a church if "one church is as good as another?"
Further, if "it makes no difference which church you belong to," Divine things are no better than purely human things; we accuse the Son of God of doing something unnecessary—acting with less wisdom than most men.

Now let every honest heart turn and read Eph. 5:23 to 27.
"As the church is subject to Christ." If there are several churches, different in name, doctrine, faith and practice, "all subject to Christ?"

Birthday Party.

Mrs. L. E. Wilson entertained several of the young children at her home Monday afternoon in honor of the sixth birthday of her daughter, Frances.

The afternoon was spent in playing various games dear to the heart of children.

Refreshments of cake and lemonade were served. The honoree was the recipient of many useful and pretty gifts.

TWO ACCIDENTS THE LAST WEEK.

Last Friday morning Bill Henshaw, who has been working at the local plant of the Texas-Louisiana Power Company plant had the misfortune to lose the thumb on his right hand when it was accidentally hit by a sledge hammer. Bill had been holding a pipe and thought the fellow was through hitting it and started to pick up the pipe when the hammer came down.
The thumb was so badly crushed that it had to be amputated at the first joint, by Dr. Doty, the attending physician. He has suffered considerably with it but should no complications set in the injured member will heal in time.

Last Saturday about noon while unloading gasoline at the storage house, a barrel of the gas fell striking W. J. Ferguson and knocking him off the truck.
A deep gash was cut in Mr. Fer-guson's head and he was unconscious for several hours, also he sustained injuries to his right leg. The accident, while not serious, could have been worse and Mr. Ferguson was lucky in that he was not killed outright, or even sustained more serious injuries.

COURT OF APPEALS AFFIRMS CASE.

The Court of Civil Appeals in El Paso affirmed the Mills-Howard Commission case which went up on appeal from this county, following a decision in the District Court here last January rendering a judgment in favor of the company. The Mills-Howard Commission Company sued J. Q. Carter et al for commissions alleged due them for selling a part of the J. E. Carter Estate ranch to V. A. and Joe Brown of Rocksprings. A jury allowed the company a 5 percent commission.

The Court of Appeals held the hearing last month and affirmed the decision of the lower court last Thursday. A. E. Creigh Jr., prominent local attorney, represented the commission company.
The judgment means a sum of about $5,926.45 plus court costs, and interest that the commission company was awarded.

U. S. BREAKS UP GANG OF ALIEN SMUGGLERS

Immigration Inspectors Nab Two Leaders.

Brownsville, Texas.-With the trial, conviction and sentencing to jail of Isaac Amram and Juan Samano on charges of smuggling aliens into the United States, it is believed by United States immigration authorities here that the two leaders of a far-reaching band of border lawbreakers have been disposed of, temporarily at least.

Amram, who is only twenty-six years old, speaks English, Spanish, French, Greek, Italian, German and Turkish fluently and has a smattering of various other tongues and dialects.

Charge is $100 a Head

According to his story, his grandfather, a Spaniard, settled in Turkey, and he was born in that country, coming to Mexico several years ago.

Belief that the organized gang of alien smugglers operating from Reynosa had been broken up by the arrest of Samano and Amram was expressed by Brownsville immigration officers, who assert that through the activities of the organization many Greeks and Italians were brought to this side of the Rio Grande.

Leader Smuggled In

American immigration officials had ascertained from several Greeks and Italians, apprehended after they had crossed the river, that Samano was a member of the organization which had its headquarters at Reynosa and had been endeavoring for several weeks to effect his capture.

Amram stated he was smuggled across the river at Reynosa two years ago, Samano aiding him; that he went to New York, where he was employed as a musician, and later came back to the border and became a member of the Reynosa band.

Preacher by Day Is Cab Driver at Night

New York.-By day he is Rev. Thomas H. Whelpley, ministering to his flock at the Chelsea Presbyterian church, but by night he is plain Tom Whelpley, hack driver.

His motive is not hard to understand. He is alive with curiosity about how the many thousands who seldom appear at church on Sunday spend the long Saturday nights before and driving gives him a chance to know.

Recently, while out on a run, he remembered he had a wedding to perform. In a minute he had rushed into his room, changed into his clerical garb and walked solemnly into the transept.

After the ceremony, as the young couple were being congratulated in the doorway, Rev. Whelpley did his Jekyll-Hyde act and appeared at the wheel of his cab.

"Cab!" shouted the young groom. "Yes, sir," answered the preacher, who had just tied the knot. They were off through the rain to Woodside, L. I., and their new home.

Lonely After Release, Convict Kills Self

New York.-To James Brackett the stone walls of Sing Sing meant home. "I can't stand the loneliness of freedom," he said after he had been released on parole recently. Seventeen years ago Brackett was convicted of murder and sentenced to the death chair. One hour before the time of his execution a reprieve was granted.

After fifteen years he was released on parole, but the loneliness preyed on his mind. "All my pals are up there," he said. "I want to go back."

Brackett was found dead in his bed, the gas jets open. He was buried by Capt. Stanley Shepard, the Salvation army parole officer, who saw to it that his remains did not lie in the Potter's field.

Girls Wear "Galluses" Just to Mock the Men

Visalia, Calif.-Not to be outdone by the men of the Tulare county courthouse, girl employees have taken to wearing suspenders. When young men clerks and deputies suddenly appeared in the courthouse wearing "galluses," Mrs. Edna Dewey Harkins, deputy county recorder, started something by donning a pair of red suspenders, and now there is an epidemic.

Problem of Empty Church Pews Calls for Most Serious Consideration

By REV. DAVID HOWIE, Cleveland (Congregationalist).

THERE are three fundamental reasons for nonattendance at religious services, though many excuses are put forward as to why men absent themselves from the public worship. I do not think anyone is prepared to show just how church attendance compares today with that of 25 years ago, the world over. But, losing sight of the matter of comparison, the fact remains that a great multitude of people do not attend church.

In a survey by the Federated Churches a few years ago, it was estimated that two-fifths of the population on the West side of this city were not affiliated with any church. This is the serious problem that confronts thoughtful Christian people.

One reason why men stay away from church services is because their parents did not set a church-going example before them.

A second vital reason why so many men stay away from church is because so many church members have so little interest in the church services. It is the men of the church who represent the church to the men outside the church membership, and the thing that will appeal most to those outside is not the well-appointed building, or the finely balanced service, but the Christlike character of the church members.

With all its faults, this age in which we are living appreciates reality and consistency. The man who does not go to church is looking on, and is influenced by the church member's interest, or lack of interest, in the church's services.

The third fundamental reason why so many stay away from church is because they misunderstand the purpose for which the church exists.

These reasons are not the excuses that men always offer, but they are, I believe, the reasons which principally account for the absence of many. Church folk should face the facts if they are to remedy the situation.

American Legal Training Lacking in Background of the Highest Importance

By DEAN GRAFTON ROGERS, University of Colorado.

The apparatus for educating American lawyers is an undigested, heterogeneous muddle. We are admitting men to practice with varying preparation. The typical man seems to have about one year of slim college work and two years of reasonably good law school experience.

He enters the bar with little information in literature, history or the social and political experience of the race. He enters the practice, moreover, possessing no closer contact with the actual daily work of a lawyer than an apprentice carpenter would have if he never had a saw or square in his hand, but had read and heard about them for some years.

Both the English and the French systems contemplate for the lawyer a general cultural education, while the American system is teaching a vocation before it trains the mind. Furthermore, the American system pays too much attention to the private side of law practice and too little to its public side.

I am not convinced that the American lawyer is as keen a public critic and as far-seeing a public adviser as his brother across the sea.

Necessity for Stressing the Spiritual Significance of Education

By RABBI A. M. HERSHMAN, Detroit.

If religion is anything it is everything. All education has a spiritual significance. It is with that belief that the young Jewish student can reconcile science and religion.

But much as these earnest people who somehow manage to get a twinkle into the eyes, who feel that their faith has lasted for thousands of years and will continue to survive, especially in a land such as America, where they have freedom of worship-much as they insist that their young people do not need to be saved immediately and completely, they do admit that there is no reason for not making assurance doubly sure, for not working in subtle ways to solve the problems of the adolescent orthodox Jew.

The trouble is that for too long we have concentrated on the motto of beginning with the child, and we have failed to realize that we have been ending with the child. I think, with Victor Hugo, that we will have to begin with the grandparents and never end.

Urgent Need for Devising Methods to Absorb Oversupply of Labor

By FRANK A. RUSSELL, Economic Authority.

In this modern age of speed we are overstepping all bounds. Progress in science and inventions, while good in a way, has also added a new and severe burden on the human race by eliminating man power in preference to machine power. Unemployed are walking the streets in every city and town. They have no means of support at all.

There should be a way to absorb the oversupply of labor. We need highways, since we have made the automobile a common carrier. The price of a first-class battleship could easily be invested in good, broad, substantial highways, a lasting benefit to the people, instead of a battleship that could be destroyed in a few minutes. It would be money well spent and would start currency circulation all around.

America is great enough to do these things, and here is the opportunity to relieve a great burden and receive from the masses gratitude such as common people can show.

Three Requisites for the Man or Woman Who Would Advance in Life

By DR. DAN F. BRADLEY, Cleveland.

Imagination, curiosity and humor are three characteristics for the man and woman who will advance continually. Ninety-five per cent of life is delightful. Growing up is glorious and you will always have the enthusiasm of life facing you.

The world has always been growing up and man is like the world. We are always in a period of transition and transition periods always involve certain unpleasantnesses, but there are more pleasures.

We have seen the world grow up from the period when crime had to be paid for by physical pain. We have seen the world graduate from the idea that sin is vulgar. And we are ever searching for a more ethical standard.

FAMOUS BELL BACK IN SAN FRANCISCO

Used in Early Days to Call Out Citizens.

San Francisco.-Priceless relic of early days in San Francisco, the Vigilante bell that used to summon the people to council and war at Fort Gunnybags, here in the '50s, has been hung in the marine department of the chamber of commerce, a gift to the chamber from the First Baptist church of Petaluma.

Stirring memories of those times which tried the hearts of San Francisco's best men and the necks of her worst were recalled when Robert Newton Lynch, vice president and general manager of the chamber, announced the presentation. It was through his efforts that the bell was brought back here.

The bell was purchased in 1856 by the Vigilante committee, of which W. T. Coleman was then president. It was bought from a Boston firm of metal workers, Conroy & Connors, weighed 1,100 pounds, and cost $1,500. It is bronzed.

Hung in the steeple of old Fort Gunnybags, it sounded the death knell of many a reckless villain, proclaimed peace and victory to the upright and struck terror to the hearts of the vicious when the Vigilantes found it necessary to take the law into their own hands.

In 1858, when the bell no longer was required, the residents of Petaluma bought it from the Vigilantes for $50 and hung it in their first Baptist church. There it was used both for religious services and as a time bell, sounding the hour at 6 a. m., noon, and 6 p. m.

When the Civil war started, Union sympathizers rang it to announce Northern victories and those friendly to the Southern cause became angry. To prevent discord among members of the community, the bell was taken down and hauled away one dark night to a warehouse. A few hours later Northern sympathizers returned it to the steeple, hoisting the Stars and Stripes above it.

The next night a Southerner made his way unobserved into the belfry, and with a hammer sought to silence the bell forever. He made a big crack in it, not unlike that in the famous Liberty bell, but this had no silencing effect. The bell remained in use until 1907, and its chimes could be heard through the countryside within a ten-mile radius.

Future Seaplanes to Be Less Cumbersome

Langley Field, Va.-Seaplanes of the future need not be so cumbersome as those of the past.

This has been established by experts of the national advisory committee for aeronautics in a minute examination of the work actually done by a seaplane's pontoons, which enable it to alight on water, but cut down its speed in the air.

Present specifications for navy seaplanes call for pontoons having a structure sufficiently strong to withstand a shock on landing of 15 pounds to the square inch. Measurements made here with delicate instruments attached to various points on the floating surface of pontoons in operation, however, show that only seven pounds of pressure is exerted to the square inch, suggesting that their strength can easily be reduced with a material saving in weight and a corresponding improvement in performance and endurance in the air.

Wants Typist Job, But Has Only One Hand

Detroit, Mich.-Mrs. Flora Parker is looking for a job as typist or stenographer and she has only one arm.

When she was two and one-half years old in London she was the victim of an accident. After she grew up she taught school in London and then there was a young chap who had "gone out," as they say here, to Canada. He sent for her. They were married. Two years later there was a baby and then, suddenly, Mrs. Parker was the Widow Parker. Little Flora is three.

"I intend to make my own living," she said. "It is going to be difficult to make any prospective employer believe that I can be efficient. I can be, I am fast on the typewriter and my missing arm has never been a missing one to me. You see, I lost it so young that I never knew its use, and what we never have we do not miss."

Canned Music Stirs Ire of Paris Critics

Paris.-Something must be done to head off canned music, say the terribly shocked musical critics who contemplate the speedy abolition of the element in orchestras. It is the recent excitement over machine played violins, the perfection of phonographs, and the construction of mechanical orchestras for motion picture houses that has stirred the classic ire of the judges of the press.

CHAPTER X—Continued

Rand helped with the Christmas party plans. On little white cards, gay with candles and holly, they printed the invitation.

Auntalmy's Christmas Party at the Lone Pine Christmas Eve Five O'clock.

Just one week before Christmas, the Bodlong boys waded through the snow all over the Evergreen end of the island, and delivered the invitations, one to every house. It could not have been more than ten minutes after she received the announcement that the answer was to be seen

"Oh, you think I am chaffing. But I mean it. I—Miss Delano, tell me. If I should sell out—all my interests—my business connections—would you—marry me? Would you even think of it? I know it is too soon for you to know— But would you let me come where you are, let me see you, try to make you love me— Is there any chance for me at all? I would have some money. I could take care of you. We could go any place— West, or to Europe, anywhere."

There was no doubting the sincerity of his words, the eagerness of his desire.

"Don't," Gay said gently. "You will spoil our pleasant friendship, and I don't think it. It is because you have

When he reached the piazza of the Lone Pine, he did not wait to knock, but opened the door slowly and went in, closing it after him. Gay was but a little way behind, and she ran in breathlessly, but stopped short to surprise when she did not find him in the living room nor the kitchen.

"Hello," she called. "Hello! Anybody up there?" But received no answer. Frightened by the unnatural silence, and mindful of Rand's words of warning, she went to the desk, slipped her pistol deftly into the pocket of her heavy coat, and then she climbed the stairs, watchful and alert.

And there indeed she found him, lying face downward on the soft rug of her bedroom floor.

"We'll just roll him over in the corner out of the way," she said briskly, and cover him up with the rug, and let him sleep it off. We'll lock the door, and keep him here till it is over."

"Will he stay drunk all night?" Gay asked. "Shouldn't we give him something—"

"Whisky! I wish we had some whisky. If we had time—maybe we could keep him drunk for a week. I don't know just how long it does last, but I know the party lasts all night. He may sleep it off."

"I have a little cognac. Brought it in myself—from Paris—in the toe of my dancing slipper. Real stuff," Gay said proudly. "I was keeping it for a wedding, but he can have that."

"Good! We'll give him a big swig—of it." She brought out the nautical term with a nautical swag.

Two Congressmen Who Fought With Rifles

By ALFRED SORENSON Drawing by Ray Walters.

ONE of the most sensational meetings on the "field of honor" in the United States was the fatal duel between Jonathan Cilley and William J. Graves. The principals, the seconds, and the four witnesses were all prominent members of congress.

February 24, 1838, there was no telegraphic communication, and the news of the day was spread slowly by the stage coaches, the few railroads and steamboats. But when the people throughout the country learned of the tragic occurrence there arose a general wave of excitement and indignation.

Jonathan Cilley, victim of Graves' bullet, represented the state of Maine in the national house of representatives, and was a very popular and honorable man. He had made a speech in which he scathingly criticized a charge of corruption which had been brought against some bachelor congressmen in a letter, published in the New York Courier and Enquirer over the signature of "A Spy in Washington."

This letter was indorsed in the editorial columns by James Watson Webb, the editor of the paper, who took offense at Cilley's emphatic denunciation of the author of the anonymous letter as well as of the general tenor of his speech, and sent him a note demanding an explanation and an apology. Graves, a member of congress from Kentucky, acted as Webb's note bearer. Cilley refused to receive the hostile communication "without making any personal reflection on the character of Webb."

The challenge was accepted and the duel was fought near Washington with rifles, the two men being stationed 240 feet apart. Henry A. Wise, member of congress from Virginia, acted as second for Graves, and George W. Jones, member of congress from Tennessee, seconded Cilley. The four congressmen who were witnesses were Crittenden and Menefee of Kentucky, Duncan of Ohio, and Blynum of North Carolina.

and again exchanged shots. Again they shot wide. Graves then demanded another round, and once more they fired. This time Cilley was shot through the body, and falling to the ground died in a few minutes.

Congress was simply astounded upon learning that one of its most esteemed members had been shot to death without justifiable provocation. Immediate investigation of the affair was ordered and a committee of seven members of the house was appointed for that purpose. This committee presented a voluminous report stating, among other things, that "the challenge was given because Mr. Cilley declined to accept the note from Colonel Webb, borne by Graves, on grounds which would exonerate Mr. Graves from all responsibility growing out of the affair. This, Mr. Cilley could not do without an admission that in his remarks in the house relative to Colonel Webb he had slandered that gentleman, and he therefore accepted the challenge because the act was indispensable to avoid disgrace to himself, to his family, and to his constituents."

The committee came to the conclusion that the words spoken by Mr. Cilley in the course of a debate in the house of representatives, his refusal to assign any other reason for it than that he did not choose to be drawn into any difficult regard to the subject, were the causes that led to the tragedy.

The committee maintained that Graves had committed a breach of the highest constitutional privileges of the house and of the most sacred rights of the people in the person of their representative, by demanding in a hostile manner an explanation of words spoken in debate and by being the bearer of such a demand or demand for a reason for refusing to receive it.

The committee held that the sending of a challenge by one member to another member and killing him in a duel was a still more aggravated breach of the privileges of the house, and was the highest offense that could be committed against either branch of congress, against the freedom of speech in debate, and against the spirit and substance of that constitutional provision that for any speech in either house the members shall not be questioned in any other place. "The present case is without any circumstance of extenuation," said the committee in its report, which praised Cilley as a man of high character, whose death could not be excused by any circumstance, whatever, "not even by that custom, the relic of unenlightened barbarous ages, which was formerly supposed to be a proof of a degree of physical courage, but is in fact a signal monument of the want of the higher attribute of moral courage."

Graves was denounced in unmeasured terms by the committee who recommended that he be expelled from the house of representatives, and that Wise and Jones, the seconds in the duel, be censured. Action was taken in accordance with this recommendation.

As to Webb, the instigator of the duel, the committee decided to leave him to the chastisement of the course of the law and of public opinion . . . and to consult its own dignity and the public interest by bestowing upon him no further notice."

Webb, by the way, was a man of some political importance and had an active and interesting public career. He was born in Claverack, N. Y., and when a young man he entered the army as a second Lieutenant and served under General Scott in the West for a brief period. He resigned to become editor of the New York Morning Courier, and when that paper merged with the Enquirer he was retained by the consolidated journal—the Courier and Enquirer—and made it the leading Whig organ. In 1801 it was taken over by the World. Webb served a term as chief engineer of the state of New York and was given the rank of major general. He refused the appointment of minister to Turkey, but accepted the office of minister to Brazil. While in France in 1865, General Webb negotiated a secret treaty with the emperor for the removal of French troops from Mexico, which led to the downfall of Maximilian.

Webb was himself a duelist, and fought Thomas F. Marshall of Kentucky in 1842. The meeting took place in Delaware and resulted in the wounding of Webb. Under a New York law making it a felony to give or receive a challenge, he was convicted and sentenced to two years of imprisonment, but Governor Seward immediately pardoned him. He died in 1884 at the age of eighty-two. Webb was the author of an entertaining volume in which he vividly described life and adventures in the Rocky mountains. He also wrote a book on "Slavery and its Tendencies," and one on "National Currency."

Working to Compute Mass of the Earth

Dr. Paul R. Heyl of the bureau of standards in Washington is again busy on one of the most difficult problems in physics—to determine still more accurately the constant of gravitation, which, in turn, will enable scientists to measure the weight of the earth and deduct its composition.

For several centuries there have been experiments in this direction. But only last year Doctor Heyl, after prolonged and most delicate experimentation, succeeded in giving to the world a precise constant of gravitation. Now he is bent on even greater accuracy. The new observations will be carried on in a stout laboratory 35 feet underground, so that temperature changes may be avoided, as well as the horizontal attractive forces of moving objects on the earth's surface. It will take several months of the most careful work with a torsion balance, massive steel cylinders and thin glass balls to compute and complete the fresh series of observations.

ger, both doubtless inherited from the long line of seafaring ancestors. "We'll keep him as tight as a lord—until the party's over." Carefully but sternly they rolled him over half out of sight beneath the window-seat, and covered him. So Gay brought the precious smuggled bottle of cognac, never yet unsealed, and they gave him a generous swallow, forcing the bottle between his teeth not without much difficulty. He choked over it and coughed painfully, while the conspirators held their breath in a panic above him. But presently he relapsed into troubled breathing again.

"That'll hold him for a while," said Alice Andover grimly.

They locked the door upon him and went downstairs. But when Alice Andover moved as if to go to her own home, Gay refused to be left alone in the house with the drunken creature upstairs, and Alice Andover was obliged to remain, fixing herself up for the party as well as she could with Gay's face powder and electric curlers. They had tea to strengthen their shattered nerves, and at five o'clock tiptoed up to the bedroom to give him another potent draught of the cognac. He swallowed this time with less difficulty, and as he drank, to their horror, his eyes opened, eyes large and dark, Gay noticed even in that horrible moment, eyes now visionless, not seeing. When the muffled heavy breathing recommenced, they tiptoed from the room.

Alice Andover, because the opening of his eyes had frightened her, was freshly furious. She shook her fist at the door when it was safely locked behind her.

Flint Axes of Stone Age Found in Sweden

The 4,500-year-old-stock-in-trade of a Stone age peddler in flint axes has been found by some workmen in a gravel pit in the Swedish province of Soedermanland. The peddler's hoard consisted of a number of light-gray flint axes of exquisite shape and workmanship, evidently hidden in the ground by the trader, who seems to have wandered a long way from the south of Sweden to the hunters of the Soendermanland forests. The poor peddler seems to have met his death for he never returned for his axes that now are said to be the best find of its kind ever made in that part of Sweden. Almost every week new important

Mr. Merryweather had bought a new pair of shoes through the post. When they arrived he was entertaining a bachelor friend.

"You won't mind if I try these on now?" he asked his visitor, and proceeded to undo the parcel.

He slipped his foot into one of the shoes, only to withdraw it with a howl of pain. There was a large nail sticking up in the heel.

"You'll send them back at once, of course," said the visitor.

"No," replied Merryweather, "I don't think so. The nail was probably put there to keep one's foot from sliding forwards."—London Answers.

University Defined

American Universities and Colleges says that in the United States a university is an institution of higher learning comprising a college or colleges of arts, literature and science—historically the first part of the American university to come into existence—and professional colleges or schools of law, medicine, theology, etc. and especially a graduate school of arts, literature and science. In addilion to schools and colleges devoted to instruction and research, the university includes divisions of laboratories, libraries and museums and sometimes a university press and research institutes. No every institution which calls itself a university measures up to this definition.

ember, in the thick darkness of the early evening, that Ronald Ingram came again.

He entered hurriedly, his manner for the first time showing something troubled, something furtive. He glanced over his shoulder nervously, and closed the door behind him swiftly.

"I shouldn't have come," he began hurriedly. "But I had to. I came to Portland to close up some contracts, and I simply stole the time and made the trip over on the afternoon boat to see you. I must catch the first boat back. Short—but I had to see you. Gay, I have thought of you constantly. Your face has swum before my eyes, your voice rung in my ears, the light little touch of your fingers— He shook his head impatiently.

"Mr. Ingram," she said with pretty dignity, "please don't do that. I as sure you I do not like it."

U. S. BREAKS UP GANG OF ALIEN SMUGGLERS

Immigration Inspectors Nab Two Leaders.

Brownsville, Texas.—With the trial, conviction and sentencing to jail of Isaac Amram and Juan Samano on charges of smuggling aliens into the United States, it is believed by United States immigration authorities here that the two leaders of a far-reaching band of border lawbreakers have been disposed of, temporarily at least.

Amram, who is only twenty-six years old, speaks English, Spanish, French Greek, Italian, German and Turkish fluently and has a smattering of various other tongues and dialects.

Belief that the organized gang of alien smugglers operating from Reynosa had been broken up by the arrest of Samano and Amram was expressed by Brownsville immigration officers, who assert that through the activities of the organization many Greeks and Italians were brought to this side of the Rio Grande.

Leader Smuggled In. American immigration officials had ascertained from several Greeks and Italians, apprehended after they had crossed the river, that Samano was a member of the organization which had its headquarters at Reynosa and had been endeavoring for several weeks to effect his capture.

Amram stated he was smuggled across the river at Reynosa two years ago, Samano aiding him; that he went to New York, where he was employed as a musician, and later came back to the border and became a member of the Reynosa band.

Problem of Empty Church Pews Calls for Most Serious Consideration

By REV. DAVID HOWIE, Cleveland (Congregationalist).

THERE are three fundamental reasons for nonattendance at religious services, though many excuses are put forward as to why men absent themselves from the public worship.

In a survey by the Federated Churches a few years ago, it was estimated that two-fifths of the population on the West side of this city were not affiliated with any church.

One reason why men stay away from church services is because their parents did not set a church-going example before them.

A second vital reason why so many men stay away from church is because so many church members have so little interest in the church services. It is the men of the church who represent the church to the men outside the church membership.

With all its faults, this age in which we are living appreciates reality and consistency. The man who does not go to church is looking on, and is influenced by the church member's interest, or lack of interest, in the church's services.

The third fundamental reason why so many stay away is because they misunderstand the purpose for which they are there.

These reasons are not the excuses that men always are, I believe, the reasons which principally account for many. Church folk should face the facts if they are in that situation.

American Legal Training Lacking in B of the Highest Importance

By DEAN GRAFTON ROGERS, University of C.

The apparatus for educating American lawyers is heterogeneous muddle. We are admitting men to practice preparation. The typical man seems to have about one year of legal work and two years of reasonably good law school.

He enters the bar with little information in legal and social and political experience of the race. He enters moreover, possessing no closer contact with the actual lawyer than an apprentice carpenter would have if he or square in his hand, but had read and heard about the profession.

Both the English and the French systems contemplate a general cultural education, while the American system vocation before it trains the mind. Furthermore, the law pays too much attention to the private side of law practice to its public side.

I am not convinced that the American lawyer is a critic and as far-seeing a public adviser as his brother across the water.

Necessity for Stressing the Spiritual of Education

By RABBI A. M. HERSHMAN, Detroit

If religion is anything it is everything. All education is significant. It is with that belief that the young Jew reconciles science and religion.

But much as these earnest people who somehow twinkle into the eyes, who feel that their faith has lasted for years and will continue to survive, especially in a lazar, where they have freedom of worship—much as the young people do not need to be saved immediately and do admit that there is no reason for not making assurance for not working in subtle ways to solve the problems of orthodox Jew.

Urgent Need for Devising Method to Overcome Supply of Labor

By FRANK A. RUSSELL, Economic Author

In this modern age of speed we are overstepping the bounds of science and inventions, while good in a way, new and severe burden on the human race by eliminating preference to machine power. Unemployed are walking every city and town. They have no means of support.

There should be a way to absorb the oversupply of labor. We need highways, since we have made the automobile a common carrier. The price of a first-class battleship could easily be invested in good, broad, substantial highways, a lasting benefit to the people, instead of a battleship that could be destroyed in a few minutes. It would be money well spent and would start currency circulation all around.

America is great enough to do these things, and here is the opportunity to relieve a great burden and receive from the masses gratitude such as common people can show.

Three Requisites for the Man or Woman Who Would Advance in Life

By DR. DAN F. BRADLEY, Cleveland.

Imagination, curiosity and humor are three characteristics for the man and woman who will advance continually. Ninety-five per cent of life is delightful. Growing up is glorious and you will always have the enthusiasm of life facing you.

The world has always been growing up and man is like the world. We are always in a period of transition and transition periods always involve certain unpleasantnesses, but there are more pleasures.

We have seen the world grow up from the period when crime had to be paid for by physical pain. We have seen the world graduate from the idea that sin is vulgar. And we are ever searching for a more ethical standard.

FAMOUS BELL BACK IN SAN FRANCISCO

Used in Early Days to Call Out Citizens.

San Francisco.—Priceless relic of early days in San Francisco, the Vigilante bell that used to summon the people to council and war at Fort Gunnybags, here in the '50s, has been hung in the marine department of the chamber of commerce, a gift to the chamber from the First Baptist church of Petaluma.

Stirring memories of those times which tried the hearts of San Francisco's best men and the necks of her worst were recalled when Robert Newton Lynch, vice president and general manager of the chamber, announced the presentation. It was through his efforts that the bell was brought back here.

The bell was purchased in 1866 by the Vigilante committee, of which W. T. Coleman was then president. It was bought from a Boston firm of metal workers, Conroy & Connors, weighed 1,100 pounds, and cost $1,500. It is bronze.

Hung in the steeple of old Fort Gunnybags, it sounded the death knell of many a reckless villain, proclaimed peace and victory to the upright and

NEEDLES AGAIN

"It's a good thing, though," said one of the pine needles, "that we're not used for sewing."
"I'd hate to go into a sewing basket."
"I'd hate to go into that great big knitting bag," said another pine needle.
"Goodness only knows all that may be in that bag. I've never seen such a big one."
"Oh, I'd be frightened if I ever I were put in a bag like that."
"But in a sewing basket," said the first pine needle, "it would be far worse."
"I saw scissors there with which the person cut all sorts of things—and suppose I were cut in little pieces!"
"I might bump straight into that pair of scissors in the dark and instead of saying,
"How-do-you-do," the scissors would probably cut off my head, or some part of me. I have no special head of course."
"Oh, that knitting bag would be so dreadful because it could hide so many things."
"Gracious! It might even hide a small furnace or an open fireplace, or anything."
"I don't believe it could hold a fireplace," said the first pine needle.
"It would be dangerous, for the bag itself might catch fire."
"I wouldn't be any too sure of that bag," said the second pine needle.
"I don't like the looks of it."
"I am sure I wouldn't trust it for a moment. It might be made like a grate so it couldn't catch on fire, but would make everything else catch on fire that was put in it."

"There are no far-ees coming from it now."
"It might not be lighted."
"Oh, well, we're not going in those bags because we're not sewing and knitting needles," said the first pine needle.
"I'm very, very glad," said the second pine needle. "I like the wild and free life, the pine trees and the wind, the snow and the rain, and the sunshine and the beautiful out-of-door world."
"But I would never like to live a life in a knitting bag or a sewing basket."
"I can imagine nothing more dull in all the world. Nothing, absolutely nothing could be more dull."
"To be surrounded by half-made pieces of work," said the first pine needle, "and pin cushions and thread and a thimble. I feel sorry for those other needles."
"So do I," said the second pine needle, "but we needn't be ashamed of them, for most assuredly they are not any relatives of ours."
"Not even distant cousins."
"And all the pine needles felt happy, relieved, pleased and contented."

LOVELY LACE-LADEN LINGERIE; HATS OF LACE OR LACY STRAW

THAT simplicity is the best policy may apply to millady's daytime apparel, but it does not, this season, extend to her wear for slumberland and her dainty undergarments. While the practicality of tailored lingerie is recognized, and the well appointed wardrobe should always include a dependable supply, still when it comes to present prevailing sentiment, fancy is turning to underthings whose enchanting colors and enrichment of lace bespeak a super-loveliness.

As to the colors most in favor at the moment it seems as if certain shades of blue are in the lead, such as turquoise and the very new and popular fido blue. Nile green and peach are also well liked. Brides are mostly choosing either white, cream or some one or the other of the new pinks for their trousseau lingerie.

Not only is lace lending its beautifying presence to a generous degree, but it is most ingeniously employed. It refuses to confine itself to conventional yokes and hems, but inveigles itself into the scheme of things in most unexpected and whimsical ways.

In some instances the garment is so lacy that it almost if not quite becomes a half-and-half proposition of lace and material. There is a tendency to apply motifs of lace in an elaborate way, cutting out the material from underneath.

A new note is sounded in that deep ecru laces often take the place of the usual white or cream. These darker toned laces are employed not only for the pastel-colored garments, but they trim white as well. Especially effective are the ecru laces on white satin and this combination is proving popular for bridal sets.

The garments in this picture express hats that touch of the exquisite which is so dear to the feminine heart. At garden party and formal summer scenes, one beholds the Tuscan straw picture hat exploited as it has not been for many and many a season past. One of the entrancing lacy Tuscan straw hats, a Paris creation, by the way, is pictured in the lower left corner of this group. It has a banding of pastel satin. It is just such extreme types as this which are an swering the call of picturesque summer frocks, for hats to wear with them, which shall accent the spirit of ultra-charm and femininity.

It is interesting, too, to discover that Tuscan braid has also entered the realm of sports millinery. To be sure, not in such emphatically lacy a form as the dresser modes adopt, but nevertheless the openwork theme is expressed in a discreet and appropriate way. There is the smart vagabond sports hat shown in the bottom oval, too, is of Tuscan straw, being an open patterned braid sewed row and row.

If hats are not of lacy straw, then they are very apt to be all of lace. Daintiest of white all-over lace makes the "hat beautiful," as shown in the group at the top to the left. Cloches of lace like this one and similar to the one with the ribbon trim centered the trend of the new lace trims. The nightgown to the left is silk, white indestructible voile is the chosen material for the chemise combination. Each of these models accent the waist-line.

It is difficult to imagine anything in the name of millinery more lovely, more stylish, or more flattering than

Letter-Writing de Luxe

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright.)

CHARLEY BENTON'S weakness was bashfulness in the presence of ladies. He was fully aware of his failing and so far overcame it that people began to say: "How completely Charley Benton has gotten over his bashfulness." But in the presence of one young lady his old weakness reasserted itself and she was the one person in the world in whose presence he felt he should not be bashful. Her name was Marian Gray.

He had been in love with her for some time and got along very well in his courtship until he came to popping the question.

One day, as Charley was passing a book store where shop-worn books were exposed for sale on a little stand outside, his eyes caught the title: "The letter-writer de Luxe—how to put your thoughts on paper." He picked it up and examined it. The book opened as if by magic to a page whereon was printed "The proper form of a letter from a bashful young man in proposing to his sweetheart." He read the letter printed below it carefully. It was not just what he had been trying to say so many times to Marian; but it seemed to cover the ground.

That night he studied the form-letter carefully, tried to make some alterations in it, gave up the attempt, copied it verbatim and sent it off to Marian. "The dear boy! At last!" said Marian to herself as she glanced through the missive. Then her brow contracted and she became thoughtful. That does not sound a bit like Charley," she thought. "What do you suppose—?"

A few minutes later she was in consultation with the parlor-maid. "Annie," said she, "have you got such a thing as a book showing you how to write all sorts of letters?" "No, Miss Marian, I haven't; but the cook has one that has just beautiful letters in it. They are just wonderful; the way they are set down."

"Ask the cook if she will lend it to me for an hour or so," said Marian.

Marian looked over the book. Yes, there it was, on page twenty-three: "Letter from a bashful young man in proposing to his sweetheart"—word for word as Charley had written it. Marian turned over the pages until she came to what she was looking for—she knew it must be there—"Letter from a young lady in accepting the proffered hand of her lover." She giggled and chuckled, reading over the stilted and preposterous "form-letter" which took up a whole page. She looked at the number of the page. It was twenty-seven. Then she went to her desk, took a sheet of note paper and wrote "Dear Charley: Yours received. For reply see page twenty-seven, 'Letter-writer de Luxe.' Marian."

She expected that Charley would be proud early the next evening and was prepared to rush into his embrace and laugh with him over their little comedy. But Charley Benton did not come. Another night came and no Charley.

Marian was perplexed; she was angry. Well, if Charley Benton wanted to take offense because she had repaid him in his own coin—let him. "But I'll just have an explanation of his outrageous conduct, anyway," she said. She was to dine at the Bottsford's Wednesday night; the Bottsford's were great friends of Charley's—he was sure to be there.

Yes, Charley was there and when the little party assembled just before dinner was announced the two victims of letter-writing de Luxe greeted each other politely but coldly. There was no chance for an explanation just then, but Marian just longed to ask him a few questions—and tell him a few things. She maneuvered Charley into a quiet corner and opened fire. "May I ask," said she, "merely as a matter of curiosity, why you paid no attention to my note regarding your offer of marriage?"

"I was afraid," replied Charley "that I could not satisfactorily fill the position which you so kindly offered me."
"I had some doubts on that score myself," said Marian, "but I decided to take the chance."
"I should advise you to keep your present cook," said Charley.
"My present cook?" cried Marian. "What has my cook got to do with it?" and she went on without waiting for an answer: "You sent me a letter copied verbatim from 'The Letter Writer de Luxe' and I replied by referring you to page twenty-seven." "You did," said Charley frigidly, "and page twenty-seven contained a form-letter headed: 'Reply of a lady accepting an application for the position of cook in her household.'" "It did not," cried Marian, "it contained 'A letter from a young lady in accepting the proffered hand of her lover.'"

"They gazed at each other for a moment in silence. Then a light broke upon Charley. "Was your cook's 'letter-writer' a new edition?" he asked. "Yes," was the reply. "I remember it said 'Newly corrected and enlarged' on the title page." "And mine was an old one," said Charley. "That's it, the numbering of the pages wouldn't correspond. Oh, Marian!" "Oh, Charley!" Curtains.

Forget last year's jelly failures
This year you have PEXEL

PEXEL jells all fruits. Requires less boiling. Obtains more jelly. Does not change the most delicate flavor or color of any fruit

EVEN if you've had a dozen failures—or if you never made jelly before—you can make jellies successfully with Pexel. Just add it to fruit juice and bring to full boil. Then add sugar. Bring to vigorous boil once more. Take kettle from range. Skim. Pour into glasses. That's all—it will be jelled as soon as it is cool.

When you use Pexel, its price—30c—is repaid from one to three times. Time and fuel are saved. You make more jelly because fruit juice, sugar and flavor are not wasted by prolonged boiling.

Pexel is a 100% pure-fruit product. It is absolutely colorless, tasteless, odorless. It is a powder, not a liquid. Keeps indefinitely. Just as effective in any season with bottled juices or unsweetened canned fruits.

Get Pexel at your grocer's. Only 30c. Recipe booklet with easy-to-follow directions in every package. The Pexel Company, Chicago, Ill.

Here are a few examples of how much jelly Pexel makes:

- 4 1/2 cups strawberry juice, Pexel, 8 cups sugar make 11 glasses of jelly.
- 4 1/2 cups raspberry juice, Pexel, 8 cups sugar make 11 glasses of jelly.
- 6 cups currant juice, Pexel, 10 cups sugar make 14 glasses of jelly.
- 4 1/2 cups grape juice, Pexel, 7 cups sugar make 10 glasses of jelly.

Archeological Find

A church underground which may prove to date from Roman days has been discovered by Rev. E. P. Gough, vicar of Chilton, Cambridgeshire, England. Mr. Gough and his son, hearing an old villager say when he was a boy he used to play in a crypt under the old church, now fallen down, began to excavate and found an old flint rubble church. If it is Roman it is the only complete specimen of a Roman Catholic church in the country.

A leading man really has some excuse, if everybody finds his presence entertaining.

A good many trains of thought are unable to get off the sidetrack.

Beas in Hard Luck

Hassan Effendi, who prided himself as being the Boas Hummel of Scutaria, has been arrested and sentenced to a week's imprisonment on the charge of wearing the baggy trousers known as chivalars, universally worn under the old regime, but prohibited recently by law of the new republic. The indignant dandy has carried the case to the Court of Appeals, alleging that he wears no antique chivalar and that the trousers which roused the suspicions of an ignorant police are actually the latest cry in civilized garb, imported from the United States as "charleston" trousers.
