Inventor Uses Radio to Direct Players.

Berlin.-Conducting an orchestra undreds of miles away has become ossible with a special type of plane for which the inventor, Dr. Erich Fischer, has taken out patents in all

Skeptics were in the majority when the papers announced that Doctor Fischer would proceed to Goettingen with several soloists and from there conduct the orchestra of the High School of Music playing in Berlin.

To every one's surprise, however, the experiment turned out a complete success, the orchestra in Berlin playing and the soloists in Goettingen singing with the same precision and accuracy as though all were assembled in a common hall with eyes glued to the conductor's baton.

The technique of this scheme, prom-Ising to become an incalculable time and money-saving expedient, is a simple one. Doctor Fischer seated himself at a plano which, though soundless for the human ear, accurately records and transmits to a highly sensitive microphone inside not only single tones, cords and templ, but also diminuendoes and crescendos, all of which were promptly wirelessed to the orchestra in Ber-

The tones of this scattered orchestra were collected in a common rereiver from where they were flashed y wire back to Goettingen and there released through the medium of several very elaborate and powerful loud speakers.

Expert engineers estimated that the time that elapsed between the conductor's cues at Goettingen and the return of the full orchestral reproduction from Berlin was less than the interval between a conductor's signals and his orchestra's response in the same hall,

Scientific Achievements May Be Relied On to NATIVES PUZZLED Reduce Hours of Labor

By PROF. F. W. BURSTALL, Birmingham (Eng.) University.

CONSIDERABLE section of the community appears to be under the belief that mankind is not quite so good as it wasin other words, not so fond of labor. I am very glad to think that that is so. Laziness is the reason for all the mechanical developments. The human frame is quite incapable of any serious labor. Humanity has been struggling to provide other means of doing the lagree with what the people of Santo work which it wants to do, and that is the bottom of the idea of the robot, or mechanical worker. The human is not really a working agent

The domestic service and servants, such as I was brought up to look to, are going to be nonexistent in the future and I am very glad to think that this slavery is going to be a thing of the past. Science is going to cut down the hours of labor. I venture to think that within a generation labor, such as the attendance on furnaces and work which by nature is hot and difficult, will be reduced to six hours per day, and perhaps five. This is sure to come,

Science is going to put into our hands the possibility of a heaven they were still puzzled. upon earth. There are no limits to what we can do, but I venture to think that unless the human makes up its mind which way it wants to go, then instead of being pleasant this will be'a curse.

Inefficient Distribution of Business Responsible for Enormous Losses

By DR. JULIUS KLEIN, Federal Bureau Director.

Merchandising distributors are pretty well at the bottom of the scale in terms of business income with an average profit of 2,2 per cent in 1925 in business as compared with 5.9 per cent for manufacturersand 12.5 per cent for bankers.

Thousands of business firms beckon disaster by the inexcusably wasteful sales method of "going national," that is, "spreading the line all over the country." This danger is courted many times merely to gratify the vanity of the firms' executives.

National distribution is an excellent policy for a commodity with a deservedly nation-wide appeal, but not so profitable in the long run for thousands which are less favored.

The fundamental philosophy of lowering prices, so as to increase consumption, of minimum margins of profits and mass turnover, which have been so conspicuous an item in the success of many of our industrial; undertakings, can be applied with equal effect to distribution. But such application is obviously impossible unless our distributors match our that when a mixture was run on the producers in the scrutiny of details in cost and the complete efficiency of their respective processes.

"Organized Vice" and War System Greatest Enemies of the American Home

By JUDGE FLORENCE E. ALLEN, Ohio Supreme Court.

Two great forces are threatening the American home; organized vice and crime and the war system. The home will never be really safe until organized vice and crime take their fingers off the throat of government and until the so-called Christian nations delegalize the institution of organized warfare.

The home is the root of all good things and I appeal to college graduates to join the movement to outlaw war and destroy the alliance between government and the underworld.

The home itself cannot be properly protected unless our governmental institutions are established upon the principles of justice. Chicago shows how the home is threatened when there is an alliance between government and the underworld.

LEADS ORCHESTRA IN ANOTHER TOWN

Inventor Uses Radio to Direct

Berlin,-Conducting an orchestra undreds of miles away has become essible with a special type of plane for which the inventor, Dr. Erich Fischer, has taken out patents in all countries.

Skeptics were in the majority when the papers announced that Doctor Fischer would proceed to Goettingen with several soloists and from there conduct the orchestra of the High School of Music playing in Berlin.

To every one's surprise, however, the experiment turned out a complete success, the orchestra in Berlin playing and the soloists in Goettingen singing with the same precision and accuracy as though all were assembled in a common hall with eyes glued to the conductor's baton.

The technique of this scheme, promising to become an incalculable time and money-saving expedient, is a simple one. Doctor Fischer seated himself at a plane which, though soundless for the human ear, accurately records and transmits to a highly sensitive microphone inside not only single tones, cords and templ, but also diminuendoes and crescendos, all of which were promptly wirelessed to the orchestra in Ber-

Here each player was equipped with a headphone, the various groups of instruments, as strings, wood-winds, brass, etc., each being installed in separate rooms.

The tones of this scattered orchestra were collected in a common receiver from where they were flashed wire back to Goettingen and there released through the medium of several very elaborate and powerful loud speakers

Expert engineers estimated that the time that elapsed between the conductor's cues at Goettingen and the return of the full orchestral reproduction from Berlin was less than the interval between a conductor's signals and his orchestra's response in the same hall.

Scientific Achievements May Be Relied On to NATIVES PUZZLED Reduce Hours of Labor

By PROF. F. W. BURSTALL, Birmingham (Eng.) University.

CONSIDERABLE section of the community appears to be under the belief that mankind is not quite so good as it wasin other words, not so fond of labor. I am very glad to think that that is so. Laziness is the reason for all the mechanical developments. The human frame is quite incapable of any serious labor.

Humanity has been struggling to provide other means of doing the work which it wants to do, and that is the bottom of the idea of the Domingo thought when Herbert Kreig- manufacture of all artificial silk linrobot, or mechanical worker. #### Inefficient Distribution of Business Responsible for Enormous Losses

By DR. JULIUS KLEIN, Federal Bureau Director.

Merchandising distributors are pretty well at the bottom of the scale in terms of business income with an average profit of 2.2 per cent in 1925 in business as compared with 5.9 per cent for manufacturersand 12.5 per cent for bankers.

Thousands of business firms beckon disaster by the inexcusably wasteful sales method of "going national," that is, "spreading the line all over the country." This danger is courted many times merely to gratify the vanity of the firms' executives.

National distribution is an excellent policy for a commodity with a deservedly nation-wide appeal, but not so profitable in the leng run for thousands which are less favored.

The fundamental philosophy of lowering prices, so as to increase in Restoring Ceiling consumption, of minimum margins of profits and mass turnover, which have been so conspicuous an item in the success of many of our industrial undertakings, can be applied with equal effect to distribution. But such application is obviously impossible unless our distributors match our that when a mixture was run on the producers in the scrutiny of details in cost and the complete efficiency

Socratic Method of Workers' Education Productive of Splendid Results

By ARTHUR GLEASON, Economic Authority.

The way a group of grown persons best educate each other is in the method used by Socrates and his friends. It is the way of endless disassion centering on one subject. It is almost the hardest work in the world, but the results are sometimes amazing. A grown man discovers he is beginning to grow again. Endless discussion about one subject h cannot maintain itself on words. It dies away unless it feeds on knowl edge and finally interpretation. It reaches out for facts and then for the roats, either or both, together or sep- meaning of them. In modern terms, this Socratic method means a class arately, are worn the year around in of from five to twenty-five, who read books, listen to talks, and ask questions. They take to themselves a like-minded teacher, who is a good fellow, and together they work regularly and hard. This is the heart ing to wear straws, no dead line when of workers' education—the class financed on trade-union money, the teacher a comrade, the method discussion, the subject the social sciences winter, but there are plenty of men the aim an understanding of life and the remolding of the scheme of here wearing straws on Christmas things. Where that dream of a better world is absent adult workers' education will fade away in the loneliness and rigor of the effort.

"Organized Vice" and War System Greatest Enemies of the American Home

By JUDGE FLORENCE E. ALLEN, Ohio Supreme Court.

Two great forces are threatening the American home; organized vice and crime and the war system. The home will never be really safe. until organized vice and crime take their fingers off the throat of government and until the so-called Christian nations delegalize the institution of organized warfare.

The home is the root of all good things and I appeal to college graduates to join the movement to outlaw war and destroy the alliance between government and the underworld.

The home itself cannot be properly protected unless our governmental institutions are established upon the principles of justice. Chicago shows how the home is threatened when there is an alliance between government and the underworld.

Auntalmiry, flushed and radiant with excitement, was the first to arrive for the party. She was joyously pleased rt the unusual tenderness of Alice Andover's greeting, and took her all about the room to point out to her. with shy pride, how cleverly she had managed things, explaining all the little economies she had used, the uses to which she had resorted, in er desire to make least money go thest. Alice was sympathetic, soitous, warmly approving, but kept iways one sharp and terrified eye apon Gay, both of them in a panic of tear lest the creature upstairs regain his cober senses and spoil the party for which Auntalmiry had worked so

At Gay's direction, Auntaimiry took up her position by the window, with Alice Andover and Gay on either side, and pressed the electric button which set the solitary pine a-sparkle with colored lights from top to bottom, flashing a brilliant holiday greeting all over that end of the island.

"It is the last invitation," she cried. and her thin little voice quavered with excitement. "Come to my party, come to my Christmas party! Everybody can see it. It will gulde them up the hill. How the children will laugh! It is very nice, Gay."

The island trooped to the party in a body, a long stream pouring up the hill through the snow, so that all in a moment it seemed the Lone Pine was a-surge and a-throb with it. There was much laughter, much shrill squealing, the piercing staccato of children's voices, the high nervous laughter of young girls, and deeper older voices, calling loud and cheery

"If this babel doesn't wake him up, he might as well be dead," whispered

Alice Andover. "I'll go and havve a look," said Gay. "It is enough to bring the trees to Gay distened outside the bedroom door a moment, hoping to hear the muffled heavy breathing that presaged the sleep of their unwelcome guest. But with the din from below she could hear nothing, so she opened the door quickly and stepped in. The room was wrapped in silence, atter and heavy, and in the durkness she could not distinguish the shadow by the window-seat that was Buddy Bridges. She pressed the button that flooded the room with light and showed in a flash its emptiness. The rugs lay in a rumpled heap upon the floor, but Buddy Bridges was not there.

The window was open. Gay ran over and looked out, but in the shadow of rocks and trees by the house she could distinguish nothing. Her eyes awam giddily.

"Such-a Christmas," she stammered. Already with that vividly creative mind of hers she could see him lying on the rocks, a bleeding mangled shape, Auntalmiry's son. Suddenly she was afraid to be alone, and ran downstairs. Alice Andover awaited her coming at the foot of the steps. She rend fear in Gay's eyes.

"What now, good heavens, what

"He is gone. He is not there." "Gone! Gone where? Gone how?"

"Come: Let's look." In the joyous confusion that reigned about the Christmas tree, with Santa Claus noisily distributing the pretty gifts. with the burble of his bells, the laughing voices, the crackle of tissue paper, and the treble of children's voices over all, they went out unnoticed. And with an electric flashlight, looked beneath the window for the crushed and bleeding-

Yes, he had certainly dropped down into the bank of snow. There were many signs of tramping, footprints, but the white snow bore no stains of red. And Buddy was not there. The outraged divinity whose patience still infinite had guarded Auntalmiry's boy that night.

So they went back, with what nonchalance they could muster, and loined the merriment within. But Gay was sick at beart. Everybody had come to the party, the Captain was there, the two ministers were there, even Buddy Bridges had come home. But Rand came not.

"Well, well," boomed Santa Claus well, well! Here's another present for little old Auntalmiry! Aunt al-

ing Joyous call, the door opened, and stood there, soft hat crushed low on his forehead over the big dark eyes, collar turned up about his chintall, thin, and weak, very pale, Buddy Bridges. Santa Claus, with little Auntalmiry still in his arms, turned as the others did, to look at this one who came so unceremoniously into the party, his face alone unsmiling, set and grim,

He crossed without a word into the center of the room, walked swagger ingly, perhaps to hide the fact that he could not stand erect without swaying weakly, and stood before Santa Claus, with Auntalmiry in his arms. It was she who moved first, moved vaguely, slipping to the floor, and then, not seeming to walk, seeming to float rather, she was beside him, her eyes riveted to his eyes, haggard and darklined, and her fingers crept softly up his coat toward his face, touching the curve of his chin uncertainly, inquiringly, as though it were by feeling she would be convinced.

"Almiry, come away," broke in Alice Andover harshly, but it was plty that hardened her voice. "Come away. He's drunk."

"It's Buddy." Auntalmfry said faintty. "It's Buddy. It is Buddy."

"Come away, I tell you; he's drunk." Then suddenly Buddy Bridges "Drunk," he shouted weakly laughed. but with derision in his voice. "Oh, t's you, Alice Andover, up to your old tricks! Drunk! So that's what you thought. Well, I thought you were cruby, the pair of you, stuffing me up with cognac, locking me in-I'm not drunk, mom, I'm sick. They couldn't tell the difference."

Ever, eye in the bright, disordered, rowded room was intent upon Buddy Bridges, who held his mother in his arms, and laughed with her, wept with ber, and talked to ber in a fond weak voice. "Sick as a dog. In the bospital-weeks. Weak as the dickens. I was in the hospital when they told me you were here. I got out of bed -knocked two internes down-sick as was. Came on here-clear from California, mom. Twice I fainted away, and when I came to, they had me off the train and in hospital again. But as soon as I got my wind, I beat it again. Came on. Drunk! [sn't that like her, mom? I'd know in a minute it was Alice Andover! You haven't changed much, mom-a little." How his eyes caressed her! "Twentyfive years, mom. Not a word from you in twenty-five years. I wouldn't have believed it, mom. It was-notjust-like you. Was it because they sent me to the pen, mom?"

"The-the pen, Buddy? The pen?" "Oh, hush, you fool," begged Alice Andover.

"In Jersey. Twenty-five years-" "Buddy, you don't mean the penitentiary-Buddy-"

"Mom, didn't you know it? Didn't you ever know it?" "Buddy-"

"Mom, you've just forgot. You knew it. You must have known it. t was in the papers- Is-is she all right?" he asked falteringly of all the room. "You must have known it."

Alice Andover was tall and fine in her dignity. "Yes, Buddy Bridges, we knew it. We all knew it. But nobody told her. Almiry never knew to this day---'

Alice Andover's dignity was simply killing. "On our tsland, Mr. Bridges," she said greatly, "we tell one another no news unless it's good news. There was nobody here low-down enough to tell Auntalmiry that her son had gone

"Aw, mom, it wasn't much. A roughhouse, a row over a game. You know I was always quick in a scrap. It wasn't much. But a man was hurt. So they sent me up for it. But, mom, since then, everything fine and dandy. No nonsense since. Got a fine woman, got three nice kids, made a lot of money- Great, mom." And then, suddenly, mercurial man as he had been a mercurial boy, he glowered, glowered with sudden anger around the room. "See here," he demanded sharply, "who sent me that papermarked Portland paper-that told me ago! One of you sent me a paper-

U. S. Grant Won Bride While Fording River

Tears came to her eyes. What was the success of y merry party to her, when Ra had not come, and she knew not where he was?

In her heart she knew that Rand had not remained away of his own volition, that something had kept him against his will. He had pledged her to solemn secrecy in regard to bis movements, but his prolonged absence without word or reassurance terrified her greatly. She sank down into the window-seat and looked out. The tall, gayly lighted pine was hateful, garish to her saddened eyes. Impatiently she pressed the button, and the billslope was plunged into darkness.

"It-It's that d-d old clubhouse," she said bitterly. "I have a big notion to-to burn it down."

With the passionate words came sudden determination. She could not bear this anxiety, she must know the worst, however bad it be. She would slip into the forest, and reconnoiter. Rand had sternly ordered her to keep, entirely out of the woods and away from the Little club, but Gay, in an emergency like this, and goaded by her fears for him, was not one to be balked by obedience. If she found the gang in the Little club, she would call the police, immediately, have the place raided, and demand Rand of them. In her thoughts, vividly, she saw the slim worn face, the shapely strong hands of the one who had come to her on the waves in the Little cove. Almost she saw Rand's face, like that, with the merry eyes closed, the mocking lips set hard, swept by salt water.

"Oh, no," she cried faintly. Then she sprang to her feet, and pounded hotly up the stairs. She was feverish with excitement now, her face flaming, her lips parched, her eyes tingling hot. But her slender, strong hands were like ice.

"If they catch me, I do not care," she told herself hotly. "I've got to find him." She could not bear that recurring, evanescent vision of Rand's face on the winter sea.

The cold fingers tore her party dress from her, pulled on heavy slik and woolen undergarments, her thickest woolen stockings, stout boots. She donned her warmest blouse beneath the fawn-colored suede wind-breaker, and bloomers beneath her heaviest knickers. The leather cap she pulled down to her ears, caught up her leather fur-lined gloves, and then her darkcolored slicker enveloped all.

"If they see me, they'll think I'm a man," she said sturdily to her stout reflection in the glass, "with this cap, this slicker, these boots."

Schooled by the experience of six months on the Island, Gay slipped a flashlight into one pocket, and her pistol in the other. She was trembling all over.

"But I'm not afraid," she said firmly. She pressed the last electric button, and the cottage merged into the darkness that covered all the coast. She opened the door gingerly an inch at a time, listening intently. The island was asleep in the darkness. There was no moon; the stars, re note and cold, were pin-points of ice.

She did not besitate. She quite conertainty. Not daring to use her form of starvation and freezing flash, she made her way through the in the snows of the high Sierras. But for all the strength of her young arms, for all the power of her stubborn will, she could not so much as stir the smallest of the rocks, which were now deeply wedged into the frozen soil, packed solidly, presenting a firm and immovable barricade to entrance under the plazza.

Thus balked, she stopped a moment to consider. One thing was absolute, she would not go home. But she was puzzled as to wise procedure.

Tempted for a moment to fire her pistol into the air, hoping that fear of a raid would draw the gang from the shelter of the clubhouse, second thought convinced her it would be sheer foolhardiness. At last she decided to go down into the cove, to examine the great door and look for a light beneath the window curtains. Getting into the cove itself was very ifficult, for the crevices among the rocks were covered with snow, and she was obliged to claw her way along. hand over band, sounding with her feet for standing ground. Down, down, she slid, from rock to rock, from snowy crevice into snowy crevice, kicking, holding on with both hands like grim death, down, lower and lower, until she attained the level beach of the cove. She moved warfly now, feeling the great helplessness of her position. In the woods she could at least run for cover. Here in the cove she was at the mercy of whoever might come upon her. Softly, keeping in the shadow of the rocky cliffs, she crept to the clubhouse door.

She ran her hand over the locks carefully, and then softly turned the knob. Well ofled, silently it moved beneath ber hand. The door to the Little ciub was open.

In the annals of the historic "Days of '49" there are no more thrilling stories than those of two different groups of homeseekers whose sufferings on the overland trails to California have immortalized the names of the "Donner party" and the It is a curious coincidence that both

On April 15, 1846, 31 men, women and children who coast, set out for the Golden West. F. Reed, but it took its name from the Donner brothers, George and Jacob who were neighbors of Reed. Of the 31 in the party, 16 were children. among whom were two little girls. Eliza Bonner and Virgina Reed, who later wrote stories of their journey which have become classic accounts of this expedition, Eliza Donner's description of the equipment which her father and uncle provided for the long journey is as vivid a description of the "covered wagon" era in American history as can be found anywhere. In one wagon were the seed and farming implements for use when they reached California and with these the laces, mustins, satins and velvets to be used in trading for land. In the second were the supplies for the journey, the food, clothing and camp equipment, as well as various bright colored garments, beads, necklaces, mirrors and the like, to be used in making friends with the Indians along the route. The third wagon was the family "home on wheels" and it, as well as each of the other two was drawn by three yoke of oxen.

For several weeks the fourney was uneventful. On May 19, the Donner party fell in with another emigrant train, commanded by Edwin Bryant, consisting of 98 fighting men, 50 women, 46 wagons and 350 cattle. The addition of the Donner party to this caravan made it so large that it was divided into two parts for convenience in traveling and an organization with the proper officers to direct its affairs was formed. By the middle of June the emigrant train was making its way through Nebraska and nearing Fort Laramie, which they reached safely and stopped to repair

Although several of the party (mainly the older ones) died and were buried along the trail, the party reached Fort Bridger without undue disaster Then when it was near the Great Salt lake the emigrant train divided, the larger portion deciding to keep to the old road to California while the in all, made the fatal decision to atshorten the route to California by 300 miles before it rejoined the Fort Hall emigrant road on the Humboldt river it had made a mistake, for the emigrants were seven days in reaching Weber canyon and then found that they must make their own trail by cutting their way through heavy underbrush and making a road as they went. While they were struggling through the Hasting Cut-off they were joined by the Graves party, another Illinois group which had set out from their homes near what is now Lacon. Ill., at about the same time as the Donner party had started. The Graves party consisted of W. F. Graves, his wife and eight children, his son-in-law, Jay Fosdick, and a young man named John Snyder, and they were to play a prominent part in the tragedy that was so soon to follow. No less dramatic than the stories of Eliza Donner and Virginia Reed is the account of the Donner tragedy as given from the viewpoint of the Graves family and recorded in an old book "Records of the Olden Time, or Fifty Years on the Prairies" by Spencer Elisworth and printed in Lacon, Ill., in 1880. After making their way at last through Weber canyon, the combined party found, itself facing a desert They had been told it was only 40 miles wide and they took what they thought was an ample supply of water. But the desert proved to be more than twice that distance across and for two nights and a day they struggled across the dreary alkali waste, suffering from heat and thirst by day and from cold at night. When the third day came and the unending des ert still stretched before them, one of the party went ahead in search of water, leaving instructions for the drivers to unhitch their oxen and fol low if the cattle began to give out. All of the, wagons except one, had to be abandoned and eventually the party emerged from the desert and approached the mountains. Then it was discovered that their food suppiles were running low and California was still hundreds of miles away. By this time, too, dissension had arisen, in the party and a dispute between Reed and Snyder resulted in the killing of the latter. When they finally reached the mountains it was to find that the many delays had brought them even greater dangers. For the early snows had begun to fall on the Sterras and crossing the mountains would be impossible. So with heavy hearts they turned back to a cabin on the shores of a lake, since known as Donner lake, which had been built by a party of emigrants two years earlier, built more cabins and prepared as best they could for the win-

A series of storms piled up the snow until it was 14 feet deep. The food supplies were almost exhausted and when the last of the cattle had been killed and eaten the emigrants were reduced to eating the hides. which when boiled, were little more than masses of glue. Several attempts were made to push across the mountains and seek relief in the California settlements on the other side, but all, except one, falled. A "forlorn hope" ion, of ten men and five wom set out and although eight of the men perished on the way, the survivors finally reached Sutter's fort.

A relief party was immediately sent out by Captain Sutter which cached a supply of food along the way and arrived with only a small amount of provisions which were doled out to the famishing members of the party. On February 22 a party of 23 started out to cross the mountains and after struggling through the snow found that wild animals had destroyed the cache of food. Fortunately, another relief party from Sutter's fort reached them in time to save them from starvation.

In the meantime scenes of almost indescribable horror were taking place among those who had remained at Donner lake. Faced by the alternative of starving to death or resorting to cannibalism the wretched survivors chose the latter and it is in the account of the Graves family, as written by Elisworth, that the harrowing details of what took place then are revealed. More relief parties eventually arrived and by degrees the remnants of the party made their way over the snows of the mountains down into the valley of the Sacramento and to Sutter's fort.

Starvation and the cold had exacted a fearful tell. Forty-two of the 83 members of the party who had been overtaken by winter in that terrible camp had perished. Only 18 of the original party of 31 which had teft Springfield ever reached California, Descendents of some of the survivors still live in California and in 1918 had a part in dedicating a monument on the spot near Donner lake where many of the party perished. It is a monument to the dauntless ploneer spirit which carried the survivors of the historic Donner party through horrers and privations such as few human beings have experienced to death-

VETERAN IN SERVICE PLANS ANOTHER TRIP

U. S. Geologist Explored Alaska 25 Years Ago.

Washington .- One of the veteran explorers and geologists of the geologcal survey, Frank C. Schrader-the man who pushed up through the heart of unknown Alaska a quarter of a century ago and was at Nome when the blg gold strike was getting under way-is preparing to go out into the field for further research this year, at the age of sixty-eight. Montana min ing districts will likely claim his attention this summer. The West is familiar ground to him, for his duties have called him to Idaho, Nevada Utah and California.

Mr. Schrader has been in the government service since 1891, having been born in Sterling, Ill., October 6. 1860. He is one of the oldest employees in the Interior department.

A whaleboat was secured at Point Barrow, and then south and west Mr. Schrader and his party went to Cape Lisburne and then through the famous Northwest passage by collier to

In that memorable trip, which opened up interior Alaska to science and the better use of mankind. Mr. Schrader and his party encountered many types of landscape. On the Endicott plateau they found valleys 3,000 feet deep, and adjoining this plateau they traversed gently rolling country along the Anaktuvuk plateau. Then came the coastal plain, 100 miles to the Arctic ocean, featuring soft rocks and silt, with beds of coal running through them and creeping willows on the shore of the Arctic ocean.

In 1896, on a trip down the Yukon river below the mouth of the Tanana river, in a great bank of silt. Mr. Schrader found the remains of a great mastodon with 11-foot tusks. As he was then traveling in a rowboat the tusk was too weighty to be trans ported, so he sawed off a piece, and this is now reposing on the mantle piece of his home. The point where the mastodon was found was not far from the site of the present town of Fairbanks, but there was no town there in those days.

HANGING ON

"You see, dear loves," said Mother Bat to her little ones, "in the nighttime we can see quite clearly-as the owls and other wise birds can.

"In the daytime we sleep. That is when people are awake. But at night they are often going to bed in the summer time with their windows wide open and their lights turned on.

"They have light at night, too, not sunlight or daylight, but light made by some of these same people, electric light and gas light and lamp light and candle light.

"Anyway they have to have light when they go to bed! Fancy how stupid! They like to see by light! Just imagine!"

All the little bats shook their wings and shook their heads, and said: "Just imagine!"

"Sometimes," continued Mother Bat, "I suppose members of our family have grown nervous. "They have gone toward the light because it has frightened them, and then they have gone into those lighted rooms-quite, quite by mistake and from nervousness. "They can't see when they get in

They had learned to attach themselves to their mother's fur, so when she went off flying she could carry them all with her until they became so big they could go by themselves.

And do, children and grownups, learn the lesson Mother Bat taught. Don't chase frightened bats, don't hurt them and make them suffer with fear and pain, but put out your lights when a bat comes in the room on a summer night and very soon the bat will fly out of the window to free-

Each player writes a short sentence of about four words on a slip of paper, all slips being the same size and shape. The papers are then folded, collected, and turned over to a helper. He hands one to the magician who presses it firmly against his forehead without unfolding it. His eyes are closed. After a moment, he announces any sentence that occurs to him and asks who wrote it. Another guest, who is his helper and who did not write a sentence, answers that the sentence is his. The magician then looks at the paper to verify it, but in reality reads the next paper which he then holds on his forehead and can give accurately. One of the players, astonished, admits having written it, This is continued until all the slips have been read.

There Are No Miles in a Bottle of Ink!

Remember this when you buy tires. A million mileage guarantees won't make a tire wear better.

You'll save money and trouble by investing in GOODYEARS. More people ride on them today than on any other kind and this has been true for the past eleven years. Isn't that one fact alone a sufficient guarantee to their quality? Isn't it proof enough for you to use them too?

> They cost no more than ordinary tires.
