OIL NEWS OF TERRELL COUNTY.

This county has been visited quite a number of geologists and oil men in the past 30 days; most of them are still in the county and are reported to be working quite a bit of territory within a radius of 20 miles from Sanderson.

Rock Pecos Trust, Hamilton, Tex., expects to resume operations within a couple of weeks. When this well shut down the Miller reported that he had encountered a good showing of Operations will be resumed in the near future on the Big Bend well on section 155, block D, in this county.

A test well for oil and gas in block D-6 about a mile and half north of the Rio Grande river, this county will be started in the near future by C. T. Smith, Parkersburg, Pa.

Julian Basset, a prominent land ranchman of San Antonio here a few days ago and reported that the Val Vert Oil Co., encountered a strong showing of gas in their well just across the Terrell county line, several miles east of the well being drilled in this county by the Sham Corporation of Texas.

Mr. Remington of Columbus, Tex., of the Pure Oil Co., made a reconnaissance survey of the Stansell ranch in 1925 during the months of June or July, and it is reported that he recommended that the Stansell ranch be leased for oil and gas.

A. D. Wade, a mining and petroleum engineer made a report on the territory situated in the vicinity of the Stansell, Nichols and Gatt ranches in 1925 and his report said that oil and gas should be encountered in paying quantities a depth of 2800 feet.

MEXICAN SUPPER AT HIGH SCHOOL

A Mexican supper for the benefit of the High School Athletic Fund will be served from 4 o'clock to 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening, February 16, at the high school building. The supper is being sponsored by the high school students to pay the expenses of the basketball boys for out of town trips, including their stay at Alpine next Thursday and Friday when the district championship is determined.

The menu for the evening will consist of enchiladas, chili, and tortillas. Coffee will be served with each supper. Cakes, pies, and candy will be on sale.

The regular price for the supper is 50c. Children below the sixth grade will receive 35c rates.

The Presbyterian Church.

This church will hold its regular services Sunday. At 11 o'clock a special sermon bearing upon the religious life of George Washington will be delivered on the topic, "Was the Father of His Country a Reprobate?" Recent writings are telling us that Washington was anything but religious—that his biographers stretched the truth in telling about his good character. May be they did. And maybe they didn't.

"Is Sin a Fact or Fancy?" That question will be asked and discussed in the evening sermon, held at 7:30.

The Sunday school opens at 10 a. m. Every one who is on time will share in a surprise. Bring some one with you. A warm welcome awaits everybody.

J. A. McMILLAN, Minister.

STUDENTS MEETING IN A TEMPORARY BUILDING

Only ten days after the fire of January 23rd which destroyed the administration building of Abilene Christian College the students of A. C. C. are meeting classes in a temporary building built to meet the emergency, friends of the institution will be glad to know. During these ten days workmen worked through sleet and rain to finish the needed accommodation. In the meantime students met classes in dormitory rooms and the gymnasium so that, after the fire, only part of the classes of one day failed to meet.

The trustees are rushing plans to finish seven new buildings on a new campus east of Abilene. Three of these buildings, a $150,000 administration building and two large dormitories, are under construction now.

Wednesday Bridge Club

Mrs. Clyde Griffith was hostess to the members of the Wednesday Bridge club at her home last week. The Valentine motif was pleasingly carried out in the decorations and refreshments.

There were three tables of players that enjoyed the afternoon playing bridge. Mr. Annie Ware made eight score and was given two decks of bridge cards as her prize. A valentine box of candy was the second high score prize that went to Mrs. Max Bogusch.

Refreshments of shrimp salad, cake and coffee were served.

NIGHT BRIDGE CLUB

Mrs. L. H. Lemons was hostess to the members of the Night Bridge club at her home last Saturday evening.

Following the playing of several interesting tables of bridge scores were added. Mrs. Frank Robertson made high for the ladies and was given a pair of silk hose as her prize. A tie was the men's high score prize that was won by R. S. Wilkinson. A social course was served.

Robt. Doak Improving

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Doak Jr., and his mother Mrs. R. L. Doak, have returned from Del Rio where they have been the past two weeks due to illness of Robt. His many friends are glad that he is now able to be up and hope that he will soon be entirely well.

Rev. McMillan Occupies Pulpit in Del Rio

Rev. J. H. McMillan of the Presbyterian church held services in Del Rio Sunday while Rev. Herbert G. Markley of Del Rio took Rev. McMillan's place here.

INFANT DIES

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon by Rev. Owen of the Baptist church for the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Stevenson.

Mrs. J. W. Happle and daughter, Miss Mary Alice, who have been in Los Angeles, the past year, returned home the first of the week.

Paint Plane Guide on Sanderson Building

The Pasotex Petroleum Co., has painted on their warehouse here the name of our town; this was done in order that aviators making their flights along the S. P. route would know their location. Those who painted the sign, however, either did not know how to spell Sanderson or unintentionally left out the letters "er" and painted it Sandson. We appreciate the Pasotex Company's efforts and motive in painting this sign, but at the same time we would like to see our town advertised by its right name.

RANCHES SOLD

The past two weeks has seen several ranches in this part of the country changing hands.

Leo Bishop of Carta Valley has just recently purchased a 17½ section well improved ranch near Dryden from J. E. White of Del Rio. This land extends from about five miles from the highway and has several miles of river front. It is understood that Mr. Bishop paid $6.25 per acre for the land. He was given immediate possession of the ranch and is now busy moving his stock to the ranch.

The John D. Ogle ranch of about 9000 acres, located sixteen miles south of Dryden, has been sold to John A. Martin of Sonora by George W. Baker who recently bought it from Mr. Ogle. The price paid was $4.50 an acre and possession will be given as soon as the papers can be completed.

George W. Baker and Lee McCue of Del Rio recently sold 10,000 acres of the Charles Downie ranch to H. C. Goldwire of Del Rio. The price paid was $9 an acre; the land is on the west side of the Fort Stockton highway and runs up to within a mile of town. Possession is to be given at once. Baker and McCue bought this tract of land only a few months.

Bridge Party

Mrs. Cecile Fletcher entertained the Cactus bridge club on Thursday afternoon, at her home. Valentine motif was artistically carried out. High score was received by Mrs. Tina East, who was presented with a casserole. Mrs. Lorette Robertson, on receiving second high score, was presented with six custard cups.

Delicious refreshments of chicken salad sandwiches, olives, angel food cake, and coffee were served to the following members present: Mesdames Elouise White, Ida Bodkin, Tina East, Lorette Robertson, Evelyn Buchanan, Jewel Yates, Mabel Henshaw, Eva Stansell.

Rev. H. G. Markly of Del Rio was a welcome visitor at the Times office last Saturday. Rev. Markly held services here in the Presbyterian church Sunday.

M. H. Goode Jr. is the proud owner of a new Hudson sedan which he purchased the first of the week from the Nance Moto Co.

What Accounts Are Profitable

Contrary to general opinion, banks do not make 6 per cent profit on each deposit made in a checking account. A general average of profit is 4 per cent and from all deposits 15 per cent must be deducted as a cash reserve.

In banking circles, it is generally accepted as truth that accounts whose balance falls below $200 are an expense to the bank.

In view of this, our service fee of 50c per month for accounts whose balance falls below $50.00 is just and reasonable.

IT'S ALL TRUE

—when you have the right radio

RADIO does bring the city "up close." It does mean more to farm families than to anyone else. BUT you've got to have a good radio. Radio that reaches out. Radio that sounds natural. Radio that's always ready when you are. The best evidence that Atwater Kent Radio is good radio—that it really does the job as everybody wants it done—is the fact that it is and has been for a long time the best seller in both the city and the country. After listening, after comparing prices, most people want it—because they find it's the kind they want.

From a lamp-socket or from batteries

Some homes have electricity, some haven't. Either way, you get fine Atwater Kent performance and proved dependability. If you do not happen to have power from a central station, you can enjoy the broadcasting with the improved, powerful 1929 Atwater Kent battery set. It, too, is perfected. The main thing is: Don't wait. The air is full of wonderful programs—today—tonight—and they're meant for you. Get what's coming to you—as more than 2,000,000 other families do—with an Atwater Kent.

"I am so grateful for what Milk's Emulsion has done for me that I am writing you this letter.
"I had a terrible cough and for four months was so weak that I had to rest on the bed several times while dressing. In fact, after putting on one stocking I would have to lie down and rest before putting the other on. People thought I had tuberculosis, but they don't think so now. I was so weak that I could not care for my baby, who was not getting sufficient nourishment to give him any strength. But after taking your Emulsion for a few months I regained my health and now I weigh 145 pounds. My baby is one year old and weighs 30 pounds. We are both in perfect health and we thank Milk's Emulsion for it.

TURKEY MAY LOSE PRETTY FATIMAS

Name Reform to Be Undertaken by Ghazi.

Angora, Turkey.—Fourteen million Turks are in frantic search of a family name. Warning signals have been up for some time that the ghazi was contemplating a name reform and now a commission has been formed to frame a law.

All the Fatimas, Mustaphas, Husnians and Hassans of this land where family names have never existed will be obliged to concoct a Turkish counterpart for Smith, Jones and Brown, and tag it to their given names.

The confusion arising from the fact that hundreds of thousands of women are all called by the same name of Fatima and hundreds of thousands of men by the same tag, Mustapha, has brought about this next occidental reform of champion reformer Kemal.

In prescribing family names for his Turks, the ghazi is once again flouting Koranic precept. It is said that the reason for the absence of family names among the Moslem Turks is to be found in a verse from the Koran which exhorts: "Be not proud of your father's, your grandfather's or your ancestors' names. It is what you are yourself that counts."

Woman Chemist Delves Into Mystery of Coal

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The value of a lump of coal is engaging the attention of Milada Friedlova, twenty-four, research chemist from Czechoslovakia. Miss Friedlova devotes nearly all her time to the study of coal analysis and heat experimentation at Carnegie Institute of Technology. She spent nine years at the University of Prague and the last four years has been doing chemical research work in the state higher industrial school of Prague.

The young woman was among the forty or more graduates sent to the United States under the auspices of the Masaryk Academy of Work and the American-English Council for Research in the mutual interest of the homeland and the country visited.

She is an attractive brunette and has translated several scientific Czechoslovakian publications into German and English.

Writer Is Sponsor for Big Turnip Marathon

Orlando, Fla.—Katherine Holland Brown, who won a $25,000 magazine prize in the latter part of 1927 with her novel, "The Father," believes that there are other things in life than the business of being a successful novelist.

One, she believes, is conducting turnip-growing contests among the negroes of Orlando, where she maintains her winter home, and in five nearby towns. Miss Brown offered prizes for the best "back yard" turnips grown within a limited time upon the premises of the contestants in Orlando. She based her awards upon the decisions of a trio of judges. The plan received approval of interracial welfare workers, and coincidentally with her work on another novel and a group of short stories, the author is conducting turnip contests in five towns in central Florida.

Chromium Reflector for Auto Headlights

Washington.—Chromium, which can be electroplated on steel and is more permanent than nickel, has been found particularly suitable for reflectors in automobile headlights after an exhaustive research made by a bureau of standards.

The research, undertaken to study the reflecting power of chromium, was extended to cover not only light in the visible portion of the spectrum but also the ultraviolet and Infra-red. As a result it was found that chromium has much higher reflecting power than nickel in the ultra-violet and since it is less affected by ultraviolet rays, it is more useful as a reflector of these rays.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

VENEZUELAN EXILE WORKS IN GOTHAM

Girl Driven From Country for Political Reasons.

New York.—Ten weeks ago Carmen Gil Martinez, a fragile girl of nineteen, was the glamorous heroine of a youthful revolt against dictatorship in Venezuela.

Today she is a New York factory girl, doing embroidery for $15 a week. She was snatched by police from the home of her parents and exiled from her native land. She had protested against the sending of college boys to slave beneath the tropic sun as convicts on the fever-infested roads of the Venezuelan jungle because they had demonstrated against the dictatorship of the aged president, Juan Vicente Gomez.

It is mid-October in the capital city of Caracas, which for many months has been seething with student rebellion that violence cannot quench. Just now it is especially boiling, for within the week 300 boys, many in their early teens, have been sent to the road gangs. Their offense? Signing letters of protest against the political imprisonment of others.

Girl in Pulpit.
The last notes of Sunday morning's nine o'clock mass have just died away in the great church of San Francisco. Before the worshippers can leave their pews the slim figure of a girl springs forward into the pulpit. Over her short black hair is the black cap of students, a tight beret.

Students recognize her. See, it is Carmen!
"Brothers!" she cries. "Now pray with me for the lives of those students that are dying now upon the roads, of heat and starvation! Pray with me for the end of this tyranny of Gomez that for the last 20 years has slain us!"

The congregation falls upon its knees, and from a thousand throats rushes an impromptu litany. A priest stands motionless in surprise, but now he cries:

"Not so loud! They will hear."

Breaking away from the admiring students, she goes home and stays all day with her mother. Her father, a traveling salesman, is away. In the morning policemen come. Two sit inside the house. Two stand outside. They stay for two weeks, two weeks of suspense. What will be done to Carmen? They can't put her in a road gang.

Exiled from Country.

At last the word comes. She must leave the country. The government has bought her a ticket on the Red D freighter Lara, sailing, October 28 for New York. It will give her the $50 required to pass Ellis island.

"But she cannot go alone!" cries Senora Gil Martinez, her mother. And so after some argument it is agreed that the government also shall pay the way of her brother, Guillermo, twenty-three, as a chaperon.

"I am sorry to see you go," says Rafael Maria Velasco, governor of Caracas, courteously. "I hope I shall see you some time in New York."

"Oh, when you are thrown out I shall return," says Carmen.

Carmen did not tell her story this way. She speaks no English. It came forth in fragments through the broken English of her interpreter, Amadoro Penco, one of the thousands of young Venezuelans who have left their country because of political discontent. When Carmen and her brother arrived in New York she had a letter to Penco. He took them to live in his home. He got Guillermo a job with him, polishing brass. Carmen went to work with other Spanish girls in an embroidery place nearby, the first South American girl exiled from her country for political reasons.

Employee Loses Teeth; Company Loses Lawsuit

Poplar Bluff, Mo.—An attempt to demonstrate to a jury that rubber his company produced was of high quality cost Edward Babcock two front teeth. A St. Louis rubber company was being sued for selling alleged rotten rubber. Babcock placed one end of a piece of rubber in his mouth and asked a jurymen to pull on the other.

He did, and two of Babcock's teeth rolled across the courtroom floor. An outbreak of laughter came from spectators in the courtroom as Babcock opened his mouth and disclosed the gap.

Incidentally, the rubber company lost its case.

Ice Cream Now Popular Dessert in Switzerland

Washington.—Switzerland has ratified America's choice of ice cream as a national dessert. The Commerce department has been informed by its Swiss representative.

Before the war ice cream could be obtained only in the better restaurants and clubs of Switzerland. Among the common people it was almost unknown.

Then several big dairymen started a campaign to popularize this American dessert. As a result, Switzerland now consumes 135,000 gallons, or an estimated per capita quota of one-eighth quart, each year.

Denver Boy is a Winner

Every mother realizes how important it is to teach children good habits of conduct but many of them fail to realize the importance of teaching their children good bowel habits until the poisons from decaying waste held too long in the system have begun to affect the child's health.

Watch your child and at the first sign of constipation, give him a little California Fig Syrup. Children love its rich, fruity taste and it quickly drives away those distressing ailments, such as headaches, bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness, feverishness, fretfulness, etc. It gives them a hearty appetite, regulates their stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord. For over fifty years, leading physicians have prescribed it for half-sick, bilious, constipated children. More than 4 million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it.

Mrs. C. G. Wilcox, 385 1/2 Wolf St., Denver, Colorado, says: "My son, Jackie, is a prize winner for health, now, but we had a lot of trouble with him before we found his trouble was constipation and began giving him California Fig Syrup. It fixed him up quick, gave him a good appetite, made him sleep fine and he's been gaining in weight right along since the first few days, taking it."

To avoid inferior imitations of California Fig Syrup, always look for the word "California" on the carton.

A thrifty baker always sells what he kneads himself.

What Doctors Think of the Laxative Habit

In all history, no Indian was ever known to have constipation. Nor need YOU. He chewed the bark of a tree called cascara. Today, we have the candy Cascaret.

Cascaring the bowels never forms a laxative habit. If already formed, an occasional Cascaret will usually break the habit. For cascara strengthens the muscular walls of the bowels, and their need of any aid at all grows constantly less. What other cathartic has this characteristic? The writer knows of none.

An evacuation brought gently about by cascara will, nine times in ten, be followed by full functioning of the bowels on the morrow—and for days after. For there is no REACTION as with sickening salts, or any of the man made purgatives that go through one's system like a bullet.

Physicians tell us cascara is the ideal laxative—and the tongue tells us candy Cascarets are its ideal form. At least a million people know this; what a pity there are any who don't! Especially parents; because children love to take a Cascaret. After which, for days-on-end, the bowels will be seen to work of their own accord.

The only habit from cascara is that of regularity! Cascarets tone and train the bowels. But at the first sign of returning sluggishness an other Cascaret is as effective as the first.

There isn't a druggist who hasn't Cascarets, so WHY experiment with laxatives!

THE DOUBLE CROSS

By A. E. THOMAS

Copyright, By Dodd, Mead and Company, Inc. W. N. U. Service

THE STORY

Jim Stanley, wealthy young New York business man, unable to concentrate in his dictation to his desk audiotape, has the machine taken to his home, intending to finish his work there. Rollin Waterman, his business partner and closest friend, comes in. Both men are awkwardly in love with Doris Colby. Stanley proposes they toss a coin to determine which of them shall, this evening, first ask her to marry him. Waterman wins. Nina Morgan, Waterman's secretary, also his mistress, has overheard his conversation with Stanley and suggests Waterman's plan to desert her. Waterman tells her he is practically penniless and must make a rich marriage. He urges Nina to go to Doris and tell her she (Nina) has been wronged—but by Stanley. The girl consents. Doris admits to her father her interest in both Stanley and Waterman, but is unable to make up her mind which to marry. Nina goes to Doris with her story, securing a promise that Doris will not reveal the source of her information. She convinces Doris of Stanley's duplicity, and leaving her broken hearted, and realizing that it is Stanley she really has loved, Waterman that evening asks Doris to marry him, and she accepts him. According to the arrangement, Stanley accepts the situation, and as a wedding present gives his share of the business to Waterman.

Looking back upon that night in after years Stanley could never remember exactly how it passed. He had a confused recollection of the streets of New York gleaming wet and lambered under the lamps—a panorama of faces at the club, sounds of more or less familiar voices, the flick of cards, the tinkle of glasses—a night of troubled dreams and restless sleep, of pacing to and fro, of the pale advent of dawn through his eastward-looking windows, a busy breakfast scarcely touched, the sound of the early church bells pealing over the chimney tops, automatic donning of his clothes—finally the office.

Nothing in New York is so greatly changed in outward aspect as the business district on Sunday. All this struck Wilson forcibly as he walked leisurely southward from his two-room apartment in Greenwich village on his way to keep this most unusual appointment with his employer.

He found Stanley already at his desk, engaged in sorting out a heap of papers.

"Sit down for a bit, Frank, I'll be ready for you in a moment." Immediately Wilson knew that something unusual had happened. When Stanley was concerned he had an extra sense, for Stanley was his god. The younger man some years before had rescued him from the heap of human wreckage wherein he struggled, like a sort of human jackstraw, and had given him for the first time in his life a sense of security and peace. It had been done originally upon a whim, but it had been the best thing that had ever happened in Wilson's sordid, unhappy life, and it had also been a very good thing for Stanley. Few men are so lucky as to possess the concentrated, whole-hearted unselfish devotion of another human being. In Wilson, Stanley possessed this jewel. And to do him justice, unobserving though he was in many ways, he knew it.

To Wilson, Stanley was just about the whole of life. Stanley was his guide, philosopher and friend, and as such he had devoted his life to the study of that friend. Therefore it is not strange that he could neither instantly from Stanley's voice and manner the conviction that something was wrong. He sat down feeling rather queer. In a moment Stanley pushed away the heap of papers.

"Frank," he said, "I want you to know from me before you hear it from anybody else, that I am going to quit the business." He waited, but Wilson said nothing—he was too shocked to speak.

"Yes," said Stanley, "I have had enough of it. It bores me. I want a change, a great big change, and I'm going to get it right away. I'm going to quit the business. What's more, I'm going a long way off—to India, to be exact."

"India?" said Wilson, finally finding his voice. "Why India?" "Why not? Anything wrong with India?"

"No," said Wilson vaguely, "not that I know of. I don't know much about it."

"Neither do I," said his employer, "but I mean to. One thing I do know about it—it's a—different from New York, and that's the main idea."

"But I haven't asked you to give up your Sunday and come down here to the office merely to tell you this. I have asked you here to tell you that during my absence I want you to remain in my personal employ. As you know—no one better—the affairs of this firm are not a part of my business. I shall need some one to represent me while I am gone, and I have selected you."

"Mr. Stanley" gasped Wilson. "Yes," went on the other, "if you will be so kind. You've been with me for five years now, and no man ever had a more intelligent or a more devoted servant—I use the word in its best sense. If it weren't for you I couldn't go away as I am going, but I know that with you on the job I can go in perfect security."

"But," objected Wilson, who had now recovered his ability to think, "I should fancy that perhaps Mr. Waterman—"

"Not at all. Not at all. Not that under some circumstances I might not have chosen him for this responsibility, but, as it is, I think not. You see he will have enough to do to run this business."

"Oh—he's going to run the business?"

His Stanley been less intent upon his own affairs he would have found

"You See, After Tomorrow, the Business of This Firm Will Belong Entirely to Waterman."

"Yes, I've arranged with Atherton & Brownell over the telephone to send their head clerk to the office this morning. We'll go over all the books with him, so that when the office opens tomorrow morning, the necessary documents can be drawn up and the whole transfer of my interests can be completed before the close of business tomorrow afternoon."

"Isn't this," said Wilson feebly, "rather rushing it?"

"Perhaps, but under the circumstances it is necessary, because I leave on Wednesday."

"How long are you to be gone?"

"I have no idea. I shall stay until I am homesick, if ever that happens. Now I suppose that for a time you will have to stay on here in this office. For the moment there is no substitute for you. You really know more about the details of the business than anybody in the place, including both partners. Waterman will need you for a time. In the course of a few months doubtless he will have been able to break in somebody else. When that happens, if you wish, you may leave the office and devote yourself entirely to your affairs. Of course you'll have to rent an office of your own in some building convenient to the Street. But I needn't go into details about that. Your judgment is bound to be good."

"I don't know how to thank you, sir."

"Don't waste your time on such silly business. If there is any balance of gratitude in the matter it's all on my side. I have taken you a little too much for granted. I am afraid, but as I look back upon the last few years, I suddenly realize all that your intelligent devotion has meant to me. I'm not going to thank you for it, I'm just going to hope that what I am doing now will make you see once and for all how much I appreciate it."

The little man rose and turned away. The truth was that he was and you may do precisely as you please.

"I shall, of course, give you my power of attorney, and the first thing tomorrow morning we'll go to the Gotham Trust company and arrange things so that you shall have access to my box in the safety deposit vault. I don't know yet exactly what my forwarding address will be, but that I can always send you by cable."

"Oh, yes, and another thing. I shall give you a salary in keeping with the new responsibilities which you will have to shoulder. I've been thinking that perhaps ten thousand dollars a year might be all right, if that's satisfactory to you."

The little clerk, with a gesture so unusual that it indicated the depth of the perturbation with which he suffered, ran both hands through his grizzled hair.

"Ten thousand a year!" he gasped. "For the first time Stanley smiled. 'What's the matter,' he said, 'isn't it enough?'"

"Ten thousand a year," repeated the other. "Why, it's ridiculous."

"Well," grinned Stanley, "make it twelve."

"That wasn't what I meant at all, sir. Never in my life have I dreamed of so much money."

"Well, don't dream now. Take it and shut up about it. I'm not exactly a poor man—nobody knows that better than you. For the management of such a property as this, ten thousand a year is little enough—so we'll say no more about it. Your salary begins tomorrow—in addition to which, of course, Waterman will continue to pay you your present salary as long as you remain with him."

But the little man continued to stare at his employer with open mouth. Ten thousand dollars a year! When he first met Stanley he had been employed as a cashier in the Bon Ton restaurant at Third avenue and Forty-sixth street, and he got each week the munificent sum of twenty dollars and his food—and very poor food it was.

Nevertheless, overwhelmed as he was at his sudden rise to affluence, the little clerk's heart sank within him, for he loved his employer and he knew instinctively that something had gone very wrong with him. Instinctively, too, he connected it with Waterman. He hazarded a question.

"I hope, sir, that nothing has gone wrong?"

"Wrong? No—no indeed. I'm just bored, bored with business—sick and tired of New York. I want a change—I'm going to get it. That's all."

Wilson was not convinced. A man may laugh and chaff and even sing but he cannot fool his dog. If he is unhappy the dog knows it, and Wilson knew that Stanley was unhappy. But he did not pursue the point further, reflecting that it would not be long before he learned the truth.

"Well, sir," he said, "I'm going to miss you, if you'll allow me to say so. You're about the only friend I have in the world, you see."

"Thanks, Wilson, thanks. I shall miss you, too, but the knowledge that you're here on the job will nevertheless make me very happy."

"I don't know how to thank you, sir."

"Don't waste your time on such silly business. If there is any balance of gratitude in the matter it's all on my side. I have taken you a little too much for granted. I am afraid, but as I look back upon the last few years, I suddenly realize all that your intelligent devotion has meant to me. I'm not going to thank you for it, I'm just going to hope that what I am doing now will make you see once and for all how much I appreciate it."

The little man rose and turned away. The truth was that he was very near to tears. Stanley saw it, and did the tactful thing.

"Well, come now, we've got a lot to do," he said briskly. "Let's get at it."

A little before this time Rollin awoke. The first thing he was conscious of was that his head ached abominably—the next thing was that he knew perfectly well why. Conscience, as he left the Colby house the night before, of an overwhelming need of some sort of refuge from the torment of conflicting thoughts that were sweeping over his brain, he had found that refuge in a way that of late had grown increasingly common. In short, he got drunk.

In spite of his throbbing head, he could not suppress a feeling of satisfaction as he realized that so far his schemes had succeeded to a perfection he scarcely dared to hope for. Not only was he engaged to Doris Colby, with all that meant in the way of social prestige and pecuniary advancement, but most unexpectedly he found himself, as the result of Stanley's generosity, the sole possessor of a valuable business in which previously his ownership had been nominal. It was too good to be true.

Nevertheless, self-centered as he was through the years of growing and habitual concentration on his ego, he was even now conscious that for this success he had paid a heavy price. Nor was the payment complete. There would be further installments. There must come a time, he vaguely guessed, when Doris must acquire some inkling of his character. There were certain heavy obligations which he must shortly meet. Most of these he expected to be able to discharge through the profits of the business of which he was now sole owner. There would be further installments of the debt that he was to be paid to Nina Morgan. If Nina Morgan was under few illusions regarding Waterman's character, Waterman was under even fewer illusions about hers. He called her a business woman, and he knew that she was all of that. She would demand her pound of flesh. "Well, he would pay it. On the whole, as he mentally balanced his books, he was not ill-pleased with the situation.

For the most part he was not a conscientious rogue. It was vanity and not evil purpose that had brought him to this pass. He had been born with Rolls-Royce tastes and a flivver income. He was gifted with uncommon good looks, great surface charm of manner, a conspicuous position in society, and he had for years strained every point to live up to them.

He had always been a front-page character and he loved that position. Wherever the limelight fell there was Waterman. The sailing of the newest, fastest liner on her maiden voyage, the debut of the latest operatic star, a Duse first night, exhibitions of visiting royalty—no such function passed without the decoration of his presence. If anyone had a social shop window to decorate he used Waterman if he could get him. All this was breath to his nostrils, but he had found no way in which to make it remunerative.

His telephone tinkled at his ear. Turning on his elbow he took the instrument from the little maple table which stood beside his bed and the voice of Doris said:

"No," He Said, "I've Been Awake Some Time."

"Good morning, Rolly, did I wake you?"

"No," he said, "I've been awake some time."

"I am just leaving the house to go to church, and I thought perhaps you might meet me at the door when the service is over."

"Splendid, splendid. I'll be there, and if you're not doing anything for lunch, we might lunch together at the Ritz."

"All right," she said, "St. Bartholomew's you know—not far from noon—unless the sermon's unusually long."

"I'll be there," he said, and hung up. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

"The Father of His Country"

Launcester: Gedrukt ben Francis Bailey,

Continued from the Pennsylvania German Almanac, printed in 1779, which made the first known reference to Washington as "The Father of His Country."

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

How did it happen that George Washington came to be known by the name of "The Father of His Country"? The obvious answer to that question is, of course, that a new nation, grateful to the man who had led it safely through the dangers of a revolution against its former rulers, looked upon him as its parent and appropriately elected him as its first President.

But the fact remains that Washington was known by that title two years before the struggle for liberty had been won and at least ten years before he was called to the highest executive office. To a Pennsylvania German almanac, published in Lancaster, Pa., by Francis Bailey in 1779, belongs the honor of first applying that title to Washington. The frontispiece of this almanac was a crude woodcut of a scene in which appeared several symbolic figures. In the upper left hand corner of the drawing is shown Fame as an angel, bearing in one hand a medallion of Washington with a laurel wreath upon his head and in the other a trumpet from which comes the words "Des Landes Vater"—"The Father of the Country."

Just how widespread became the use of that title as the result of the publication of this almanac is unknown, but in 1781 it was used again by Count Dumas, a French officer in Rochambeau's army. In that year George Washington had gone to Newport, R. I., to confer with General Rochambeau. Although the inhabitants of that colony had suffered terribly from the ravages of the war and were desperately poor, they desired to give the commander in chief of the Continental army an appropriate reception. To help those who had been too impoverished by the war to purchase candles with which to light their windows in his honor, the council ordered that these be given to them free. The parade in honor of Washington is described by a contemporary writer as follows:

The procession was led off by thirty boys, bearing candles fixed on staffs followed by General Washington, Count de Rochambeau and the other officers, their aides and the procession of citizens. The night was clear, and there was not a breath to fan the torches. The brilliant procession marched through the principal streets and then returned to headquarters. On reaching the door, Washington waited on the step until all the officers and their friends had entered the house; then, turning to the boys who had acted as torchbearers he thanked them for their attention. This was glory enough for the young patriots.

After his conference with Rochambeau, Washington prepared to return to his headquarters near West Point and Count Dumas was appointed by Rochambeau to escort the general from Newport to Providence. In his memoirs, Count Dumas tells of the incident and records the use of the term "father of his country" as follows:

We arrived there at night on March 13. The whole of the population had assembled from the suburbs. We were surrounded by a crowd of children carrying torches, reiterating the acclamations of the citizens, all were eager to approach the person of him whom they called their father, and pressed so closely around us that they hindered us from proceeding. General Washington was much affected, stopped a few moments and, pressing my hand, said: "We may be beaten by the English; it is the chance of war, but behold an army which they can never conquer."

In connection with the use of that term in referring to Washington it is interesting to note that a recent biography of Washington has been published by the Bobbs-Merrill company under the title of "The Father of His Country." It is written by William E. Barton, noted as a biographer of Lincoln, and in his chapter, "The Influence of Washington," Barton makes some interesting comparisons between these two great men as follows:

He loved his country and he was capable of loving every part of it. He was born in the South, but we do not think of him as a southerner. He spent his life in the East, but few men of his generation had so much faith in the West or strove more earnestly and intelligently to bind East and West together by roads and canals. Halfways, of course, he did not know about, but he would have been interested in them. There is something of close kinship in Washington's eagerness to build a great national highway from the coast to the interior, and Lincoln's great hope of seeing the completion of the Union Pacific railway. Indeed, there are many striking similarities which these two men had in common.

Washington believed in education, and sought to secure a large American university. This country, as he believed, needed intelligent citizens, and well-trained leaders.

He believed in peace with all nations, and he sought to secure that peace by justice and honor. But he was a man of courage, and when national existence or integrity was at stake, he risked his life and his fortune for his country.

Lincoln was born in poverty and spent nearly all his life as a poor boy and man. Washington was born in comfort and became a man of great wealth. Lincoln overcame the handicaps of poverty; Washington was at once the greatest of warriors and the greatest of peace-lovers.

While none of the detailed descriptions of Washington describes him as a man the details of whose appearance could be accounted marks of beauty, he had a certain symmetry that made him nothing less than handsome in his impressiveness.

Washington and Lincoln were nearly of a height. We do not know what Lincoln measured in his stockings, and he was proud to add the height of his boot-heels to what would have been a possible gymnasium stature. He called himself six feet and four inches in height and probably in his stockings was a little over six feet and two inches. Concerning Washington we have no precise measurements and a somewhat widely varying series of statements. He probably was just about Lincoln's height. Lincoln at his heaviest weighed about one hundred eighty Washington was about two hundred. Washington was spare and Lincoln always thin. Both had narrow chests. Neither had a large head in proportion to his body, and that of Washington, while about the size of the average head, seemed small because his body was so large. Both men carried their heads well, on finely poised necks. Washington had enormous feet and hands; Lincoln's feet were about the size of Washington's but his hands were much smaller. Washington's largeness showed itself in the bulk of his bones and the prominence of his joints. Lincoln's joints were not unusually prominent, but his bones were very strong in proportion to their bulk. Both men were essentially physically and retained their strength into later years.

Each of these men, called to high and perilous responsibilities in an hour of national peril, faced dangers, misunderstandings and misrepresentation. Each of them remained true to his convictions and unfalteringly loyal to his country. Each of them was loyal to conscience, sincere, religious, sympathetic, courageous, patriotic and public-spirited.

Of the influence of this "father of his country" upon the nation which he founded and as a final tribute to the greatness of the man himself, Barton writes in the same chapter as follows:

American education was certainly not established by Washington nor is he the foremost example of it; but his was an early and emphatic influence in favor of the development of education in America itself. That should train our national leaders and enable every American citizen to think and act intelligently.

In all his transactions with the government, as private citizen, as soldier and official, no act of Washington fell below the high standard of honor which was inherent in his character. His personal integrity and his public probity were of the highest quality.

The influence of Washington is still to be found in the traditions that belong to the Presidential office. With modifications such as have come naturally through the years, the dignity and influence of the office of the President is what it is in no small part because Washington established its precedents and wisely thought out its customs.

The relation of the United States with other nations are very largely what they are because of the wisdom of Washington in his definition of the American attitude.

The United States after long struggles with sectionalism and divisive issues, have come to see more and more that Washington's vision of a great and completely united republic is America's true ideal.

It is interesting to realize the high esteem of George Washington in other lands than ours. In Great Britain he is honored almost as highly as he is in America. In Europe, and throughout the world, his name is known, and newer republics have found inspiration in his character and wisdom.

America has other and more recent heroes and there will be more in generations to come. But he stands and will ever stand, as a noble embodiment of all that in his generation was worthiest in American character. His honor is undimmed, and his name takes on added luster with the passing of the years. Few nations have such a name to stand at the head of their lists of national heroes. America and the world will ever venerate the name of George Washington, the father of his country.

The Rocky mountains are fairly new. Scientists know this because they are so steep. Old mountains are more worn down and have lower forms. The growth of mountains is slow. They are not pushed up suddenly in some grand cataclysm, but rise a few inches in 1,000 years.

Soap Danger
Soap flakes and soap powders, being extremely explosive, take their place as the latest industrial hazard, says Science. It has been found that certain kinds of soap dusts when suspended in air are more violently explosive than most other industrial dusts. These soap dusts are easily ignited and explode violently, accompanied by much flame and large quantities of heat. This is in spite of the fact that soap is a compound of semi-organic nature and that sodium compounds in general have a cooling effect on the flames of explosives.

HUNT FOR EARLY AMERICAN LIFE

Prehistoric Man May Have Lived in This Country.

Denver, Colo.—Scientists are digging into the earth in many sections of the western plains country, seeking more light on fairly well established contentions that prehistoric man existed in America millions of years ago.

The work being done contradicts to a great extent the common belief that the life of man in America did not approach the antiquity found in Europe. Harold J. Cook, honorary curator of paleontology at the Colorado museum of natural history, gave a synopsis of recent scientific achievements in this region when he addressed the Colorado-Wyoming academy of sciences at Denver university.

"During the Pleistocene age we have ample evidence that various races of bison invaded America from Asia," he said. "In fact, Asia is now generally admitted to have been the center of development and dispersal of mammalian life throughout tertiary times.

"Now, with all these things in mind, is it not logical to believe that early man, developing under such conditions, could migrate into America quite as well as the game he hunted, at any time they could get there?" Following out this line of thought, Doctor Cook told of recent discoveries tending to substantiate the theory. At the town of Colorado, in southwest Texas, were found skeletons of a new type of extinct, flat horned bison, and remains of two races of elephants, a large camel, various extinct horses and other typical Pleistocene mammals.

"In taking out an articulated skeleton of one of these flat horned bison," Cook said, "representatives of the Colorado museum found three arrow heads definitely associated in the matrix with it and under conditions that preclude the possibility of error. They were undoubtedly shot into that very buffalo."

At about the same time fossil remains of a large extinct bison were found near Folsom, N. M. "The American museum, New York, was invited to participate in the work this last summer," said Cook, "and did so. Here, associated with the bison, sixteen flint points were found of an absolutely new type and of the finest grade of workmanship known in flaked stone.

"Fortunately, four of these were exposed undisturbed in position where found during the course of these excavations. There is no question of definite association here of these flint points with a race of extinct bison."

Heligoland.—This little German island, English North sea outpost until 1890, has lost 13,000 square meters swallowed up by mountainous waves when recent fierce gales caused havoc along the west European coast as far as Norway.

The damage done here and to the neighboring East Frisian island chain has led the Prussian survey department to appoint a commission to make a scientific study of the whole coastline to ascertain if there is any dangerous acceleration in the gradual subsidence of the German North sea shores.

Documents Prove Origin of Vatican Art Works

London.—A small but valuable collection of manuscripts relating to work done by eminent Italian artists for the Vatican is to be found in Soho, the foreign restaurant quarter of London. They are the property of Barberi, the padrone of the Taverna Medicea.

So precious are these manuscripts that Barberi exhibits them rarely. They bear the signatures of such illustrious artists as Bramante, Donatello, Mantegna, Raphael and Pietro della Francesca. All were acquired by their owner in London during the World war.

The most important was written by Michelangelo in Italian. It is his agreement to erect the tomb of Pope Julius II in St. Peter's, and is dated 1513.

Help Kidneys By Drinking More Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Help Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes, sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation.

Daddy's Evening Party

"Oh, look," said Peter Gnome, as he arrived at the Brownies' place for their party, "here are great enormous snowballs all ready for some sort of a game."

"They're certainly too big for a snowball fight," said the Elves. "Yes, laughed all the Gnomes, "it would take about ten of us to lift one of them."

"Let's see just how heavy one of the snowballs is," said the Elves. "All right," said the Gnomes. They started to move the snowball. It was very, very heavy.

"It seems to me," said Peter Gnome, "that I feel something moving in this snowball, and I hear a queer sound."

"Look! It's going to burst." The snowball did burst. And what should come rolling out of it but Billie Brownie!

"Well, of all things," said Peter Gnome, "to think that I should take hold of the snowball in which you are hiding."

"Are there other Brownies in the other snowballs?" asked the guests. They had been wondering why the Brownies hadn't come forth to meet them before.

"Look and see," said Billie Brownie, laughing. "It seemed strange to see that you had made so many of these great big snowballs, but now I see that every one of the Brownies is hiding that way.

"Did you hear us talking?" And Peter Gnome went on chatting about their surprise in not finding the Brownies around, and then the still greater surprise when Billie Brownie fell out of one of the snowballs.

Of course Billie Brownie was delighted to hear that their joke had been such a good one and that they had really surprised the Elves and the Gnomes so much.

Then the different Brownies came out of the snowballs.

"We have to put the snowballs back again," said Billie Brownie, "as we're going to use these as our picnic tables."

They put them back again, covering up the places where the Brownies had hidden, and they used these huge snowballs for their picnic tables.

Well, the Gnomes and the Elves had a great deal to say about the surprise the Brownies had given them.

In fact the snowballs and the great surprise were talked about in Brownieland and Fairyland for days and days and days.

It was such a huge, unexpected surprise.

The party was such fun, too, and it was almost the last one of the season.

Dog Saves Child

In one of the garden suburbs of Budapest, Hungary, a motor lorry was going along at a brisk pace. A man coming from the opposite end of the road saw it from afar and told his dog to beware of it. The dog walked by his master's side till the danger should have passed. But before that time something occurred which changed the whole situation.

Through an open garden gate a child's ball shot out, and the child, all unaware of the approaching lorry, came running after it. For a horrible second it seemed that the vehicle must pass over it, but one sharp word of command sent the dog dashing to the rescue. Catching the child's frock in his teeth, he hurried it with all his force out of the motor's way; but unfortunately he was unable to save himself.

Got Eggs When Milking Little Bernice dearly loves to visit her grandparents, who live on a farm. She arrived early in the afternoon and that evening she hurried out with a little pail "to help Uncle Dan milk." On her way she saw her grandmother feeding the chickens. Changing her mind, Bernice went over to the hen house.

Soon she came running to the house, greatly excited. "O, look, Aunt Emma," she called, "I went milking and got three eggs."

Uncle Jack knew Jane lives with her uncle and aunt. "I am going to get a pair of roller skates," she told her nearest neighbor. "Oh," Mrs. W. said, "has your Aunt Nan said you could have skates?" "Well, no," Jane replied, "Aunt Nan said I was too little, but Uncle Jack said, 'Oh, I guess she's big enough.'"

Don Quixote in Action
Don Quixote fights with his shadow, rides his horse and "performs" numerous other stunts in wooden figures that a New York artist has carved, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The units are jointed so that they can be posed in many positions, and the models reflect much of the humor contained in the story.

Nature's Provision
Some scientists say that the eggs of birds are of various colors for identification. These colors are not so noticeable where birds nest by themselves, but where birds nest in colonies great varieties of color and pattern are observed.

The ideal, delicious food for children

LEADING doctors, interested in the welfare of children, recommend delicious Karo as the ideal energy food for growing children—

Because it is so easily digested—and supplies quickly the energy growing children need daily.

Karo, these doctors have found, does not cause a child to develop an abnormal taste for sweets—

Nor does Karo spoil the digestion or appetite. There are 120 calories per ounce in Karo—almost twice the energy value of eggs and lean beef, weight for weight.

The mother of the large family finds Karo very economical too—costing much less than many other staple foods.

Serve plenty of Karo—keep the children strong, healthy and happy.

Church of Christ Notes.

The work of the church is moving along profitably and agreeably. In either speaking or writing I think one should provoke good wholesome thoughts. We may in this life be approved of men, but Paul tells who will be approved God. 2 Tim. 2:15.

The complex nature of man requires four essential elements to complete his education and cause him to stand approved of God. Any education is incomplete which fails to take into account man's whole nature. The four elements considered:

1. A Body. "A body thou hast prepared me." He. 10:5. This Scripture is applied to Jesus, but God gave us a being and is the Father of our spirits. He. 12:9. A body requires food, exercise and rest. Physical culture has a vital place in the scheme of correct living. The laws of hygiene should be known and observed. A man may have all the elements that contribute to a healthy body and then be nothing more than a street luller or prize fighter, or college athlete. Physical culture alone is not sufficient.

2. A Mind. Usually this part of man's nature is looked after with care. Thousands of school houses and millions of dollars spent each year for education is proof that both parent and state are training the mind of the young. But when this is done we may have only an educated criminal. Law enforcement officers must now match wits with criminals equally brilliant. A boy or a girl with a perfect body and a trained mind may be a menace to society. The noted Franks murder case is an example. Two brilliant moral perverts killed an innocent child just for a thrill. More is needed than mental and physical culture.

3. The Moral Nature. This must be sustained and safe guarded or one may be a travesty—a menace to good people. The thief, the liar, the moral pervert are all detestable to sober minded and right thinking people.

4. The Spirit. This is the part by which man is directly related to God. How sad to neglect this nature. Learning millions of earth neglect their spiritual nature, who are otherwise well educated, but God's approval can not thus be obtained. The only reliable source of how to take care of his spiritual nature is found in the Bible.

The workman is not allowed to change the plan of the Great Architect. The blue print on the plan of salvation is from an authorized architect and the penalty for making any change is great. Lock well into your Bible and prayerfully consider.
