Know Your School

(That the patrons may have better opportunity of really knowing their school this column will each week be given over to school news. It is the desire of the school executives that the patrons become better acquainted with the faculty, school methods and school aims.)

Upon the suggestion of Supt. B. J. Brannan a club composed of all the faculty members of the Sanderson Public Schools was organized last week to inaugurate a social and cultural program for the entertainment of the teachers. A program of speeches, musical selections, banquets, and dramatic numbers will be held monthly.

Supt. B. J. Brannan was unanimously elected president of the Faculty Club. Other officers are: vice-president, Mrs. J. A. McMillan, and secretary-treasurer, Miss Gladine Bowers. Miss Bonnie Cox was selected as program chairman, and Mr. Kelley Parker was made head of the social committee. The first meeting of the club is set for next Tuesday evening.

Miss Nancy Hunter Pettus of the University of Texas arrived Monday to supervise the initial steps of the 1929-'30 health program of the Sanderson School. Each child will be given a thorough physical examination, and remedial work will be prescribed for all physically deficient cases. Miss Pettus will remain in Sanderson a month planning and executing the health work.

With approximately 400 school children enrolled and a corps of eighteen well-trained teachers, probably the most successful year in the school history of Sanderson was inaugurated Monday morning, when a public program was held in the high school auditorium for the children, teachers, and citizens.

The hearty singing of the assembly and the earnest speeches of Supt. B. J. Brannan, Judge G. J. Henshaw, Rev. J. A. McMillan, Rev. W. M. Justice, R. E. Griffith, Mr. Joe Kerr, and Mrs. J. H. Lochausen, president of the Parent-Teachers Association, gave indication of an optimistic and enthusiastic vision of the school plans for the ensuing term.

With the addition of new courses, typing, biology, public school music, and physical education classes for both boys and girls, and three faculty members, the curriculum and the teaching force have been materially strengthened.

J. T. ROBISON, VETERAN STATE OFFICIAL DIES

Pneumonia Is Fatal to Land Commissioner

It was with regret that West Texas learned of the death of J. T. Robison, Land Commissioner which occurred last Saturday morning at New London, Conn., where the veteran state official was visiting his son.

Robison has held the office of Land Commissioner for twelve two-year terms. During this time he has served well and has done more for the land holders than anyone.

He is survived by his widow and two sons, Dr. J. T. Robison of New London, Conn., and Dr. J. M. Robison of Houston.

The body arrived in Austin Monday and funeral services were held there Tuesday.

Accepts Position With Wool Co.

John F. Robinson of Edinburg, Texas, well and favorably known to our citizens, has been employed by the Sanderson Wool Commission Co., as assistant Secretary-Treasurer and manager. Mr. Robinson was for many years a resident of Del Rio and held the office of sheriff there as well as many other public offices. The past year he has been with the Edinburg Chamber of Commerce. He and his family will move here about Oct. 1.

We welcome these good people to our city.

Reception For Teachers

An informal reception for the teachers of our school will be given tonight at the high school by the members of the Culture Club and the Parent Teachers Association. The public is cordially invited to attend this reception and to get acquainted with our school faculty.

BAZAAR

The ladies of the Altar Society will hold a bazaar on Saturday, Oct. 5, at the Bohman Confectionery, commencing at 11 a. m. Will have for sale cakes, pies, and many useful articles. All cordially invited to attend.

MISS MATTIE JACK BANNER

Miss Mattie Jack Banner will be Dutches of Sanderson at the coronation of the Queen of the West Texas Exposition to be held the night of Friday, Sept. 20, in San Angelo.

MILES SCANNELL KILLED

Well Known Immigration Man Found Slain

Miles J. Scannell, assistant chief United States immigration patrol inspector, was found slain Monday morning at Polvo near Presidio. H. B. Holmes, a fellow officer, found the body about 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Scannell and Holmes were on duty and Scannell had taken a position on the banks of the river at some distance from the other officer. At his failure to return after a reasonable length of time, Holmes went in search of him, finding his body with several bullet wounds in the head, lying in a small field only a short distance from the river bank.

The supposition, according to those who viewed the place where the attack was made, is to the effect that Scannell had arrested two men as they emerged from the river, had placed handcuffs upon them and was bringing them to join his companions when he was ambushed. His body was evidently beaten by his own gun (Winchester) and his pistol was gone entirely.

The body was brought back to Marfa in an army ambulance where it was prepared for burial. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon in Alpine. Scannell, who is well known here having at one time been stationed here for several months is survived by his wife and son, mother, and several other relatives.

No trace of the murderer or murderers could be found excepting an empty cotton sack and a few frijoles. They doubtless crossed the river immediately.

Tax Rolls Completed

County Tax Assessor Jim Nanco completed the 1929 tax rolls this past week and at the regular meeting of the County Commissioners which was held this week they approved the rolls.

The largest valuation ever in the county was shown on the rolls, a total valuation of $5,547,317 being given while total taxes to be collected are $109,836.88.

The total tax rate for this year is $1.98 on the one hundred dollars valuation.

"Mr. Hilyer would like a word with your ludship."

Hugh rose, his jaw set. "I'll talk to him outside," he said. The door closed behind him, and we looked at each other, startled, uneasy. Nobody said anything. We were all thinking of the conversation going on in the corridor.

The tense silence lasted for perhaps five minutes. Then the door was reopened, and Hugh entered.

"Hilyer wants to talk terms," he announced. "In the circumstances, I didn't feel that we could afford to overlook any chance, and I have arranged that four of us will meet four of his crowd at Hilyer's house at three this afternoon."

"I don't trust the dog," I said immediately. "Why go to Hilyer's house? Why couldn't he talk here?"

"He said the way he could prove that he has a certain trick up his sleeve would be for us to go there. He also pointed out that we need have no fear of treachery, as we only need to leave word behind us where we were going. Hilyer seemed in a reasonable frame of mind. He said his crowd are sick of the whole business, that they as well as we are wasting time, and that we might as well compromise. What I am after is to feel out the enemy's position."

None of us could think up a valid reason for objecting to Hugh's strategy, so it was agreed that he, Vernon King, Nikka, and myself should keep the appointment at Hilyer's house. Betty said she would take Watkins and go for a sail in the Curlew, and we all approved, of her plan because we considered her safest on the water.

After luncheon we escorted Betty and Watkins to the Man-of-war dock, saw them off and then walked through Pers to Hilyer's house in the Rue Midhat Pash. As we approached, it from the corner, a big automobile halted in front of the entrance, and Hilyer himself, appearing in the doorway, ushering out a stout personage, whose frock coat, fez and predatory visage proclaimed the Turkish official. The man scarcely glanced at us, merely climbed into his machine and drove away.

We passed through a square hall into a salon which was a bizarre combination of rickety French period furniture and priceless, solid oriental stuff. Hilyer, Helene and Serge Vassilievich were lounging on a couch, smoking cigarettes and talking in low tones. The men rose as we came in. Hilyer with a swagger, the Russian with a frown that presently focussed on my face—it seemed he had never forgotten or forgiven the beating I gave him in the gunroom at Chesby.

Helene lay back against a pile of cushions, languorously at ease, beautiful as a tigress, a pleasant smile curving her faultless lips. Other than the smile, she made no move to greet us. "Sit down, won't you?" said Hilyer, automatically taking charge. "Glad you came. Did they see your friend Hilyer? Don't take my word for it, you chaps, but that man was Yousouf Mahkout Pasha, who is popularly known in this part of the world as 'The Grand Vizier's Jackal.' You probably do not see why you should be interested in him and his presence here today. The fact is, however, that his visit to this house was timed so that you should have an opportunity to see him. We particularly desired you to see him, knowing that you—ah—"

"—he smiled agreeably—"might be inclined to doubt the veracity of whatever we said to you.

"To cut a long story short, Mahkout Pasha is a particular pal of our fellow club-member, Hilyer. I don't mind telling you in on it that they've been in several deals together. Now, we owe you a bit on account. Last night, for instance, but I gather that you yourselves aren't able to ride clear on the strength of it."

He paused, and Hugh caught him up. "You have no right to suppose that, Hugh retorted sharply. "We aren't talking terms, you are."

"I notice you aren't refusing to discuss terms," said Hilyer with a glint in his eye. The fact is, you are stumped just as much as we are. We are plugging around the course, and neither one of us can jockey a horse clear of the field. It's a—nonsense. Gets nobody anywhere. Sensible thing to do is to lay cards on the table, and make a deal."

"Put down your hand," said Hugh evenly.

"The treasure is somewhere around Tokaj's house," answered Hilyer promptly. "That's certain. To get to it you've got to get into Tokaj's house. What's more, you've got to be able to stay awhile in Tokaj's house. And you can't do it. You have," got a chance of doing it! But let's suppose a miracle happened, and you found the chance." He dropped his cigarette, and leaned forward, driving his clenched fist into his palm to emphasize every word. "Still, we've got you stopped. How? Hilyer's friend, Mahkout Pasha. We've made arrangements with him, whereby in the event that we give up hope of any better deal, we denounce you and your treasure to him. He will then convey the information to the imperial government, and in return for his public service and for our assistance, he and we will be presented with a stipulated percentage of the treasure, as recovered."

He sat back on the couch, and tossed his knees.

"Those are good cards, providing they are played right," Hugh admitted. "But how is the imperial government going to secure the treasure's location from us?"

"If they don't secure the information, nevertheless you won't get the treasure. To be quite plain with you, our plan, in the event of the contingency I have outlined, would be to give you an opportunity to get to the treasure before calling in the government."

"Yes, that would be the way to do it," said Hugh, nodding impersonally. "What's your proposition?"

"Seventy-five per cent to us, twenty-five per cent to you."

Hugh laughed at Hilyer's offer. "I thought you wanted to talk business," he jeered.

Helene tossed away her cigarette. "You're playing it too fine, Montey," she remarked. "Will you talk on a fifty-fifty basis, Lord Chesby?"

Hugh turned to her. "I don't know," he said frankly. "I want to think it over. I'll admit that by calling in the Turkish government,

"The Fact Is You Are Stumped Just as Much as We Are."

you could stall me—and yourselves. But how can I trust you? What guarantees can you give us?"

"No guarantees we could give you would be binding," she answered with an insolent smile. "What's more, we don't have to give guarantees. We hold the whip-hand. You've no alternative but to trust us. As to thinking it over—" she flung a glance at Hilyer, who nodded—"come back tomorrow. We'll give you that long."

"I'll take as long as I choose," returned Hugh, with a flash of temper. "And understand me, I mean what I say when I tell you that any compromise between us will be based on what we consider satisfactory guarantees."

Hilyer yawned lazily. "Don't like it, do you? Doesn't feel comfortable to be spurred. Well, suit yourselves. So far as we are concerned, remember, we'd rather come to terms with you. We stand to get more out of you than from the Turkish government. But if you try to trick us we won't be beyond denouncing you, even at the cost of losing any share at all."

"That goes," added Helene de Cespedes, rearing, her little body erect, all pretense of languor gone. "You people are backing a losing game. The cards are stacked against you. You lose, no matter what you do."

"We'll see about that," said Hugh, rising, a spot of red on each cheek bone the one sign of the white-hot anger that seethed within him.

"Must you go?" asked Hilyer, his "aw" resumed. "Au voir, then. Hilyer, will you see them out?"

CHAPTER XII

Our Backs to the Wall

Hilyer bowed us out, his smirk more tigerish than ever. It seemed to

Tragedy and Comedy in Alchemists' Dreams

Tragedy in England, comedy in Germany ended the researches of alchemists for the means of turning baser metals into gold and silver. In England James Price claimed to have found a way of causing the conversion. He even demonstrated his experiment before a large group of celebrities, including King George III. When requested by the Royal academy, however, to exhibit his method to them, he showed a disinclination to do so. Finally, however, he was persuaded. When only three members of the academy arrived on the day appointed, Price swallowed a quantity of the strongest poison known at that time, and died.

A contemporary theologian, named Semier, in Germany, placed a so-called panacea, the Salt of Life, in a jar with a stone. He later found flakes of gold on the stone. He entered into a series of debates with famous chemists of the day, but failed to convince them that he had analyzed the substance and found it to be gold. They analyzed us that he had a perfect right to enjoy our departure. We felt that we had come off distinctly second best.

"Score for them," remarked Hugh, as we shook the dust of the Rue Midhat Pasha from our shoes. "We're chivvied, dished."

"They won't do it," I objected. "And if they did, it wouldn't get them anywhere."

"You're right," assented Hugh. "But there's the delay. This is expensive, Jack, and we can't hang on forever. If we could wear them out, why—"

"You are both wrong!" exclaimed Nikka energetically. "You must remember that you are in Constantinople. Things don't happen here as they do in Europe."

"Constantinople is in Europe," I objected—and promptly felt like the fool the remark demonstrated me to be.

Nikka favored me with a withering glance of contempt.

"We are not talking in terms of geography, but of human nature," he said. "This is the Orient. You ought to realize that, Jack, after what you have seen with me. And in the Orient, and especially in Turkey, such a graft deal as Hilyer made with Mahkout Pasha would not excite any interest, much less condemnation. It's the regular thing."

"You forget the allied high commissioners," interrupted King.

"No, I don't. They can go only just so far. Their position is delicate enough, without imperiling their prestige by interfering in what would be strictly a question of Turkish internal government. They'd know that a windfall such as this treasure would be used simply to further Pan-Islamic intrigue and bolster the coffers of the Nationalist government at Angora. But for that very reason they wouldn't interfere. I tell you, it would be the height of bad luck for us if the struggle for the treasure took on a political tinge. It would be fatal. We might as well pack up, and go home."

"Guess you're right," assented Hugh thoughtfully. "It looks as though we were pocketed."

"What puzzles me is why they didn't try something like this before," continued Nikka. "I fancy they wanted to be very sure of their man first."

"Surely, they won't have told him!" protested King.

"Who? Mahkout? Oh, no. They're too wise. No, they've simply explained to him the general proposition and arranged tentative terms. They won't trust him any farther than they have to."

"Is it your idea that we've got to accept their offer?" asked Hugh.

"It is my idea that we've got to use our wits, and act quickly," said Nikka.

"But you can't trust them," I cried. "Helene as much as told you so. We've got the stuff out—"

"If it's there, then, and they would think nothing of jumping us, either by force or by some d—d trick."

"They might even stage a fake hold-up on the part of a government agency," Nikka added cheerfully.

"In plain language, their proposition is: heads we win, tails you lose," said Hugh.

"Yes, supposing you permit them to take the lead, from your hands," agreed Nikka. "However, I am reminded of a memorable address I was once privileged to listen to as a soldier of the Legion. A general named Foch read us a citation, and then told us how to go on winning more. I have noticed, he said, that it is the soldier who attacks who wins battles. The initiative is the price of victory. Never permit your foe to assume the initiative. Attack! Always attack!"

"True," assented Hugh. "And we've been able to stall their gang so far by taking the initiative."

"But if we can't?" inquired King. "Optimism is all right, but—"

"Optimism is all we've got," interrupted Nikka. "We have our backs to the wall. This is the time to fight, if fighting will get us anywhere."

"If it will!" echoed Hugh.

"That's what we have to decide," said Nikka. "You can't work out a problem like this in the street."

We walked the remainder of the distance to the hotel at a breakneck gait. As we entered the lobby one of the clerks came from the office and accosted Hugh.

"Your messenger would not wait, milord," he said. "Mees King had not returned. Indeed, she has not yet returned."

"My messenger?" repeated Hugh, with a startled look at us.

"Yes, milord. He said he must see her. When I told him she had gone out he left your letter for her, with instructions that I present it as soon as she came in."

Hugh's face creased into grim lines. "Very well. As long as she has not yet returned, I will take it back."

The clerk went to the mail desk, and plucked an envelope from Betty's letter box. Hugh thanked him, and turned it over in his hand. It was addressed in an extraordinarily scrawling hand to "Miss King." In the lower left-hand corner was written: "My messenger."

"But it looks nothing like your handwriting," exclaimed King. "I am at a loss to comprehend how persons so adroit as our opponents have demonstrated themselves to be could hope to secure success by means of such a shallow trick."

"We'll see," returned Hugh brusquely, slitting the envelope.

It held a single sheet of paper. On it was written in the same scrawling hand:

Dear Bet: I've broken my arm, which explains this abominable writing. I never could do anything with my left hand. Don't worry. I shall be fit in no time. Can you come with the heater, or if that is not convenient, with Watkins to the house in Sokaki Masveri? It's important. Can't write any more. HUGH

F. S. The others are all right. The heater isn't wait.

"Can you beat that? I gasped.

"Exceedingly ingenious," murmured King. "Dear me, how fortunate it was that we returned when we did."

"We mustn't leave anything to chance, though," said Nikka quickly. "You can't tell what other steps they may have taken to trap her. We had better go down to the dock at once."

Hugh glanced at the clock.

"Yes, she'd hardly be back yet," he muttered. "One moment, I'll leave word at the desk that she is not to go out, no matter what message she may receive, until we return."

He rejoined us at the door, and we all entered a taxi which Nikka had impounded. Nobody said anything, but while we were jolting into Galata Hugh produced his automatic and made sure it contained a full clip. At the dock there was no sign of the Curlew, and the late afternoon sunlight failed to reveal her stubby little hull amongst the shipping in the Golden Horn. None of the dock attendants had seen the launch or anything of Betty or Watkins since we had waved goodbye to them before three o'clock.

We waited a while, thinking they might show up, but after six o'clock King became nervous and persuaded us to return to the hotel. There, too, there was no word of them, and we began to worry in earnest.

We taxied to the dock a second time. The Curlew was nowhere to be seen.

"Perhaps it would be advisable to hire a boat and search for them in the Marmora," suggested King. "Their engine may have broken down."

"We had better split our forces," Nikka objected.

"Engine trouble would never bother Betty, Hugh said. "Still, I don't like it."

"We are probably worrying about nothing," I said. "After all, it was a blessing in disguise that she stayed out so late. It insured against her being caught by that note in case we hadn't intercepted it."

"I'm not interested in 'if' and 'had' snapped Hugh. "I don't like this delay. Those devils of Toutou's are capable of having an extra trick in reserve."

"I vote we go back to the hotel," proposed Nikka; "maybe I can pick up one of my gypsies. We could start them out on the trail."

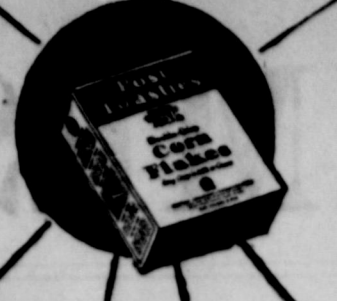

Nikka's suggestion did not make anybody any happier. It indicated that he, like the rest of us, was commencing to take the situation more seriously than he cared to admit openly. But we climbed into the smelly taxi for the fourth time, and were jounced up to Pera. The hotel people regarded us with some amazement when Vernon King again inquired for his daughter. No, she had not returned. Was anything wrong?

King hesitated, looked at us. It was hard to know what to say. Something might be wrong. And yet the chances were that the only thing wrong was a cranky motor. We didn't want publicity. We couldn't afford to attract unnecessary attention. Our party was sufficiently conspicuous, as it was, and was taken for granted and let alone because it included an American millionaire archeologist and an English milord, both of whom, by all the rules of the Orient, were naturally assumed to be harmless lunatics.

"No," he answered at length, "I think not. My daughter has a reliable servant with her. I am simply anxious for her return."

Wishing to Be Unselfish

One of the faculty members of Indiana university entertained relatives recently with a chicken dinner. Puzzling the courts in France is an odd situation where a man is accused of hoaxing experts and public by burying so-called prehistoric relics in a field. 94% OF THE TIME IT'S UNSAFE TO TRUST THE WEATHER

*Study of U. S. Weather Bureau Reports Shows
 Only 19 Days a Year Average in United States
 When Outdoor Temperatures are Safe for Food Preservation*

Mother Nature is a poor guardian of perishable foods. Back-porch and window-sill makeshifts for food preservation are unsatisfactory, insanitary, unsafe. Study of United States Weather Bureau reports shows that only 19 days a year on an average in the United States afford outdoor temperatures that are safe for perishable foods. Ninety-four per cent of the time it is too warm—too cold.

Trusting to these makeshifts is not an economy. The food spoilage—a little here, a little there—amounts to a staggering loss at the end of a year.
 And the menace to health lurks always in these perishables that are improperly preserved.

Health Authorities, everywhere, recommend adequate artificial refrigeration the year around as the only safe and satisfactory way to preserve perishable foods. Take this step now to save money and safeguard the health of your family.

Traffic cop gets summons

Even he can't get away with it

"DON'T try to put anything over on Nature," is the way a cop would express it. "Sooner or later she'll get you. Give you a ticket and lay you up in a place where you'd rather not be. Even cops can't get away with it. Like everyone else, if they don't pay attention to the warnings they get a summons that lands them in the doctor's office."

"What the doctor advises is Nujol. Says Nujol will regulate you just like you regulate traffic. Keep things from getting in a jam. And the doctor is right. Just ask the healthiest men on the Force. If they need Nujol—with all the exercise they get—what about the fellows that roll by in their cars?"

"Just take a tip from me. You may have the best intentions in the world. But everybody gets tied up at times. Nature can't always take care of things without help."

"Our Medical Chief tells me that Nujol isn't a medicine. It contains absolutely nothing in the way of medicine or drugs. It's simply a pure natural substance (perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Avenue, New York), that keeps things func-

Red Men Use Airplane to Reach Their Traps

British Columbia Indians, who a few years ago forsook dog teams for automobiles, have gone a step farther. The red man has become air-conscious. At least one brave has his own airplane and two others are in training for pilots' licenses.

Every spring in the northern sections of the province the red men leave their village for the trapping grounds. The trapping grounds are getting further and further away. In the middle of April four trappers at White Horse, Yukon territory, chartered a plane to carry them to Wolfe lake, a distance of 150 miles, into northern British Columbia. In less than two hours the Indians were landed within a short distance of the field of operation. The four were just the advance guard. Others followed till the air-taxi business became quite profitable.

Dispute Over Hand Organ

The centenary of the hand organ occurs this year, but there is some dispute in Italy as to whether notice should be taken of the event. In Florence the musical newspaper, Le Staffile, has come out strongly in favor of a fitting celebration, but in Rome La Tribuna is against it. The former believes that the hurdy-gurdy represents the lowly, and popularizes the Italian opera, La Tribuna wishes to banish forever the "organetto" and the outstretched palm of the attendant monkey.

Rich From "Hot Dogs"

The making and selling of "hot dogs" is fast becoming one of America's big industries. This year, it is estimated, 400,000,000 pounds of these toothsome sausages will be fed to the American public in sandwiches. One stand at Coney Island last year averaged $15,000 every week-end through the season. The proprietor, known as "Hot Dog Joe," took his family to Italy, where they lived in affluence through the winter.

Oranges from America are now more popular in England than those from Spain.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE PROUD DUCK

One day not long ago, Sir David Duck, a proud and fine duck, quacked and quacked and wobbled about and made a great fuss.

All the ducks came around, as did most of the other barnyard creatures. "What is it that you have to say, Sir David?" they all asked him.

"Have you something to tell us, Sir David?"

Now Sir David was very fond of his name or title. He liked to be called by such a name and have all the barnyard creatures think he was very fine.

"Yes, I have something to tell you," said Sir David. "All gather around me."

They all gathered around him.

"I will tell you what I have to tell. The news has just reached me. I heard some men talking."

"I heard them and I listened, and that is always a very sensible thing to do."

"Gars weren't given creatures to see with any more than mouths were given people or creatures to hear with."

All the barnyard animals looked at each other and said:

"Oh, isn't Sir David so very, very wise?" He nodded as if he agreed with them, and continued:

"Yes, I listen when I hear and I hear when I listen, and I eat when I take food, and I take food when I eat."

"I speak with my voice and walk with my legs and feet."

"Very interesting, very interesting," said the other creatures of the barnyard.

"And I heard these two people talking, as I have already begun to tell you."

"Listen," they all said, "Sir David Duck is about to get to the point of his story."

"These two people were men," Sir David continued, "both were men, for when I say two men, it means the same as when I say that both were men."

"All Gather Around Me."

"How very wise," they all said. "He has more than one way of saying something."

"And these two men," Sir David went on, "were telling about us and our ways and of the family of wild ducks and their ways, and do you know, they had everything quite correct."

"There was not anything I could tell them that they did not know."

"They must have known a great deal," said the others of the barnyard, for Sir David acted in so proud a way they thought he was very much wiser than he was.

He had a manner about the way he held his head and spoke that made them think he must be very wise, and he never told them it was not the truth.

So when his important news was that the men knew all about ducks and were really up on the subject of ducks and that he could not tell them anything, he was impressing them with the wonderful people he had heard talk.

Oh, Sir David was a proud, proud duck.

If you could have heard him quack-quacking, you would have said so; and you would have said so, too, if you could have seen him as he walked around the barnyard.

Oh, yes, I am sure you would have been impressed by Sir David Duck as well as were the others.

I am quite certain of it, for I was impressed by him myself.

Very, very much impressed.

An Accommodating Lad

Little Albert came home one evening with his clothes full of holes.

"What in the world has happened to you?" cried his mother.

"Oh, we was just playin' grocery store," replied Albert, "and everbody had to be somethin' so I was the cheese."

"Well, I do, mummy, but this one's full of splinters."

OLD DOCTOR'S IDEA IS BIG HELP TO ELDERLY PEOPLE

In 1885, Dr. Caldwell made a discovery for which elderly people the world over praise him today!

Years of practice convinced him that many people were endangering their health by a careless choice of laxatives. So he began a search for a harmless prescription which would be thoroughly effective, yet would neither gripe nor form any habit. At last he found it.

Over and over he wrote it, when he found people bilious, headachy, out of sorts, weak or feverish; with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy. It relieved the most obstinate cases, and yet was gentle with women, children and elderly people.

Today, this same famous, effective prescription, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is the world's most popular laxative. It may be obtained from any drugstore

Signs That Intrigued

The hotels or inns of ancient days supplemented the oral protestations of "mine host" with signs that made it clear why the place was known as the Inn of the Four Sisters, or the Inn of the Elephant, or what you please. When you saw painted on the wall of a wine shop at Ostia, a beautiful two-handled cup, and read below it "Bibe quod siles" ("Drink, because you may be thirsty") one's dust-clogged throat would want to sample whatever wine the keeper of the Ostia might have.

Sweet Lemons Promised

Sweet lemons may take their place beside oranges and plums as a table delicacy. A new variety, as large as grapefruit and sweet enough to eat without sugar, has been developed by growers in Porto Rico.

Another unusual quality of the fruit is a sweet, penetrating odor. The lemons are being used as perfume in linen closets on the island. Cultivators of the new fruit claim that the flavor lasts as long as two months.

SCHOOLS OPEN

Sanderson public school opened Monday morning for the 1929-30 term with a very interesting program at the high school auditorium. At this opening was a large number of patrons thus showing that a greater interest was being taken in our school. This year there is a big increase in the enrollment of students both in the grades as well as the high school. Interesting talks were given by Supt. Brannan, G. J. Henshaw, Revs. J. A. McMillan, W. M. Justice and R. E. Griffith, Joe Kerr and Mrs. Lochhausen who is president of the P. T. A.

Additional courses have been added to the curriculum this year thus materially strengthening our school courses. There are a corps of eighteen well trained teachers that make up the faculty this year.

AS IT LOOKS TO ME

By Jack Ainslie

THE NEW ERA

This is the era of noise, neuroasthenia, and insomnia. Forest, field and countryside alike have fallen before the whirling, swirling, swishing rush of this machine age.

Groggy and punch-drunk from the rushing, two-fisted attack of modern civilization, quiet has taken the count and repose has tossed the towel into the ring. As a consequence, the whole country has become a vast factory for the manufacture of haste, hubbub and heart disease. Even down on the farm the honk of the Cadillac has replaced the honk of the gander.

In fact, the only way one can nowadays snatch a moment of real quiet or enjoy a little solitude is by taking a general anesthetic. That is the reason operations have become one of the popular indoor sports and for the flourishing condition of the other market.

Someone has been quoted as saying that the thing this country needs most at present is a good 5c cigar. It needs more than that. It needs a quiet, peaceful place in which to smoke the cigar.

To be sure, the American people are having a high, wide and handsome time of it. But when one insists upon dancing a jig he must always pay for the fiddling!

Court House and Jail Bids Rejected

At their regular meeting this week, the Commissioner's Court rejected all bids that were submitted for the remodeling and rebuilding of the court house and jail. In all there were ten bids submitted, the lowest including all sub-bids being a little over $65,000. Of the general bids not including heating, wiring, etc., W. O. Stephenson of Floresville, Texas, was the lowest bidder, and C. M. Breeding of this city was the next lowest. Bids will probably be called for at a later date.

Another Arab War Senate and Sugar The Feminine Mind Mystery of Finance

ANOTHER war has broken out, following wholesale murders in Palestine. Jews and Arabs are boycotting each other in business. The Anglo-Palestine bank refuses bills of credit to Arabs. The latter boycott the Rutenberg Electricity company and the Jewish bank.

British airplanes start real work, with Arabs killed and wounded, their friends convinced that Mohammed is not as powerful as was supposed.

Christians are as much interested as Jews in the outbreak. Once a religious war starts, the Mohammedan fanatic enjoys equally the murder of a Christian or a Jew. If anything, the Arabs might favor the Jews, to whom they are racially related. From the Jewish religion Mohammed borrowed much for his Koran.

It has been said that the Koran was written by an educated Jew for Mohammed, who probably could not write, although he certainly could fight.

The senate is discussing tariff. One hundred and twenty million Americans who eat sugar, beet sugar men, Louisiana sugar men, sugar growers of the whole world, are interested in sugar.

A high sugar tariff really means protection, a national subsidy of many millions, for employers of Asiatic labor in Hawaii and the Philippines.

Sugar comes duty free from those places, belonging to Uncle Sam; Asiatics do the work. Their employers get the profit. Not much of it will go to sugar growers on this continent.

Our friend Cuba, good customer and neighbor, would be ruined by a high tariff, if anything could ruin so plucky a people.

Johnny Goodman, twenty-year-old golfer from Omaha, put Bobby Jones, king of golf, out of the amateur championship. Verily, "He hath put down the mighty."

Young Mr. Goodman represents a part of the country that has staying power, and you will hear more of him.

The International Congress of Psychology learns that married life brings the male mind closer to the feminine mind.

Investigation of "sex differences primarily non-intellectual," said Doctor

Erman, shows that married life weakens "mental masculinity."

Naturally and fortunately, men were once all cannibals, all murderers, all thieves. To meet a stranger was to kill him or run so that he would not kill you. Women had to change that gradually, in their husbands and in their little boys also. They have done it, partly. Much work remains for the feminine mind.

Finance is a mystery, understood least by the man who thinks he understands it.

Britain lent millions to France, and France now is drawing gold from London, worrying the Bank of England.

The French lend money on call at 2 1/2 per cent, while complaining of poverty caused by the war. This richest country in the world lends call money at from 9 to 20 per cent. A French business man can borrow money on time loans for 3 1/2 per cent. American business men pay 6 to 8 per cent.

Today the stock gamblers and investors probably will start again cheerfully. August was a great month. Two hundred and forty representative stocks increased in value by four thousand, four hundred and sixty-five million dollars.

Mrs. Fannie E. Pierson, dead at ninety-two, was enrolled for several courses of study at Columbia university. She had been a student all her life and died studying.

To certain human beings, of the ruminant type, that will seem humorous. But if, as is alleged, a human being is an immortal soul, should not that human feed the mind as well as the body to the very last. We all eat at ninety-two, if we reach that age.

Colonel Lindbergh says a flyer must have some imagination to get him out of trouble—not too much imagination, which might distract him from his flying. And the first-class flyer must not know what fear is.

Lieutenant Doolittle possesses the necessary requirements. While showing what an airplane could do, above the Cleveland airport, he stripped the wings from his plane and jumped at 2,000 feet with his parachute. He immediately asked for a new plane and went up to compete in "upside-down" stunts.

Mussolini is delighted with his new baby, Anna Maria. Well he may be if he wants his power handed on to future generations. The father's qualities are inherited by the daughter, as shown by Galton's studies in heredity. What an interesting life that little baby will have, and what a tragic life she may have.

Good Rain Falls

Rain began falling in Sanderson and surrounding territory late Saturday evening and was followed by good rain on Sunday night and Monday. In fact most every day it has rained here in town and was gladly welcomed as it was very dry and dusty. Reports reaching from the various parts of the county are to the effect that in some parts a good rain fell while in other parts it has not even so much as sprinkled. The Sanderson canyon has been running for several days and traffic was held up just west of town for several hours Tuesday due to high water. A considerable drop in temperature was felt early Tuesday morning, and it has been some what cooler since.

It is the general belief that before the rain is over that the entire county will have experienced a good rainfall which will put the ranges in fair condition for the winter.

SCHOOLS OPEN

Sanderson public school opened Monday morning for the 1929-30 term with a very interesting program at the high school auditorium. At this opening was a large number of patrons thus showing that a greater interest was being taken in our school. This year there is a big increase in the enrollment of students both in the grades as well as the high school. Interesting talks were given by Supt. Brannan, G. J. Henshaw, Revs. J. A. McMillan, W. M. Justice and R. E. Griffith, Joe Kerr and Mrs. Lochausen who is president of the P. T. A.

Additional courses have been added to the curriculum this year thus materially strengthening our school courses. There are a corps of eighteen well trained teachers that make up the faculty this year.

AS IT LOOKS TO ME

THE NEW ERA

This is the era of noise, neurasthenia, and insomnia. Forest, field and countryside alike have fallen before the whirling, swirling, swishing rush of this machine age.

Groggy and punch-drunk from the rushing, two-fisted attack of modern civilization, quiet has taken the count and repose has tossed the towel into the ring. As a consequence, the whole country has become a vast factory for the manufacture of haste, hubbub and heart disease. Even down on the farm the honk of the Cadillac has replaced the honk of the gander.

In fact, the only way one can nowadays snatch a moment of real quiet or enjoy a little solitude is by taking a general anesthetic. That is the reason operations have become one of the popular indoor sports and for the flourishing condition of the other market.
