Know Your School

(That patrons may have better opportunity of really knowing their school this column will each week be given over to school news. It is the desire of the school executives that the patrons become better acquainted with the faculty, school methods and school aims.)

The school bond election, which will satisfactorily solve the Sanderson school situation in the ways of adequate space and equipment, is being voted today. Every qualified voter of Terrell county is expected to vote for an issue which is a determining factor of his happiness and prosperity. From good schools come good citizens.

Mrs. S. E. Nelson, second grade teacher, is the author of a book review on RACIAL ATTITUDES IN CHILDREN, by Bruno Lasker, which appeared in the October issue of THE TEXAS OUTLOOK, the magazine published by the Texas State Teachers Association. Mrs. Nelson wrote the review during her summer study at the University of Texas, Austin.

This review appears on page 53 of THE OUTLOOK. Any citizen wishing to read the article may secure a copy of the magazine from the superintendent's office.

The review considers the problems that a mixture of races in a schoolroom will produce and the efforts on the part of educators to secure the right racial attitudes toward our educational system.

Very few Sanderson parents are taking advantage of the opportunity to check the work of their children through the information available in the superintendent's office at the high school building. Weekly failing reports are compiled by all the teachers from the first grade through the eleventh, which means that you as a parent can check your boy or girl from week to week in the accomplishment of his or her work.

Report cards giving the grades for the work done in the first six weeks of school will be out the middle of next week. Should you doubt the marks given your child or should you care to question the situation in any way, feel at liberty to either call the school or make a personal visit to the school, so that these matters which involve success or failure may be studied from the earliest beginning of the school year.

Sanderson High School has taken another step which places it in the first-rate group of all Texas High Schools. THE EAGLE NEWS, the Sanderson High School paper, recently joined the Texas High School Press Association, which is an organization for the education of high school journalists. Through membership in this association Sanderson High School expects to win State recognition for the high quality of work achieved by the local school paper. The publicity given Sanderson through the school's contact with the association will be of unquestionable value in advertising Sanderson High School throughout the State.

Aged Ranchman Killed by Blade of Aeroplane

S. E. Couch, prominent citizen and ranchman of Ozona, was killed last Friday morning at Marfa when he stepped from his Ryan brougham monoplane, having flown there from Ozona.

He stepped from his plane and walked directly into the propeller of the ship, evidently having been somewhat dazed from the trip. Death was instantaneous.

Mr. Couch is survived by his wife and several children, Bert Couch, ranchman of this county being a son.

Burial was made in Ozona.

MOTORCADE TO ADVERTISE U. S. HIGHWAY NO. 90 AS THE SCENIC ROUTE OF THE SOUTHWEST

For months extensive preparations have been in progress for the trip from San Antonio to El Paso, beginning Oct. 21 at San Antonio, and only a few days remain until this long looked for event will be a reality.

Almost every town on the line will furnish a number of cars and travelers who will join the caravan the day it reaches their town.

Beginning at San Antonio, two bus loads, 60 people, will move west. Lunch will be taken at Uvalde; overnight stop at Del Rio; lunch on 22nd at Sanderson and the night spent at Alpine. Lunch at Van Horn 23rd, and on into El Paso at 6:25 p. m. Stop will be made at all points spreading the good news of U. S. Highway 90.

Accommodations will be arranged for at each of these places, and the number who will be in the party should be known as soon as possible. Each one will pay his own expenses, but must be arranged for in advance as there will be perhaps some three or four hundred in the caravan.

The motorcade will disband at El Paso, and pleasant side trip on return can be planned. You are expected. Don't miss this great opportunity.

ROTARY BANQUET

The annual Rotary banquet was held last Thursday evening at the Kerr Hotel. The school faculty, rotarians and a few invited friends were guests of the club. On behalf of the club, Judge G. J. Henshaw gave the welcome address. Alfred E. Creigh Jr., president of the club, acted as toastmaster and introduced the Rotarians. The faculty was introduced by Supt. B. J. Brannan. S. E. Nelson spoke the words of appreciation for the faculty. Several quartet numbers were enjoyed by O. H. McAdams, 'Stump' Duke and N. S. Jones. A vocal selection was also enjoyed by Miss Louise Noble, with Miss Robinson at the piano.

The dining room was tastefully and beautifully placed through out the room. Yellow Cosmos in vases adorned the banquet table.

Moves Into New Office

The local office force of the Texas-Louisiana Power Co., have been very busy this week getting moved and straightened in their new office located in the building formerly occupied by the Nance Motor Co., on Oak street.

The new office has been made very attractive and the two big display windows are very neatly as well as attractively decorated having on display a nice line of electrical goods.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Scoggins and little Ivy Yates of Corpus Christi spent several days here the past week with their son-in-law and father, J. E. Yates and wife. These visitors and Mr. and Mrs. Yates spent the week end in Alpine visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Yates.

"It's not your fault, old man," I said after a moment's silence, trying dismally to be cheerful.

Betty stared wildly from one to the other of us.

"You all make me tired," she exclaimed. "Why should we give up hope? How long have we looked, so far? What—Oh, let me by! I must think!"

She brushed by me into the fake passage, and the echo of her footfalls reached us as she ascended to the garden.

"We might as well follow her," said Hugh. "I'm awfully sorry, you chaps. You risked your lives for this rotten show. My poor deluded ancestor! I expect most of those buried treasure stories are bunk anyway."

"I saw it by accident," bubbled Betty. "We went up a long way to where the roof gets much lower, and we heard water rushing ahead of us. So Hugh said we ought to turn back. My light just happened to catch on this piece of stone here as we passed it. There was one row of letters quite clear, but the others were all overgrown with this slimy stuff. What does it say, dad?"

"It's Greek, right enough," added Hugh, still scraping indignantly.

"I can make out a word here and there, but it doesn't seem to be the same language I boned at school. Just a moment, sir, and I'll have the whole inscription cleared."

I peered over their shoulders at the deeply-carved lines of angular characters.

"What good can it do?" asked Hugh heavily.

"There's an important point in it, which nobody has appreciated up to this time. It becomes doubly important in view of what we have just seen."

"The elided portion!" exclaimed Nikka.

"Exactly! Look!" And she spread the paper before us. Hugh had faithfully copied his uncle's translation of the old Latin, setting down also the several lines of dots by which Lord Chesby had indicated the words which had been smudged out by moisture and handling at some past time. They appeared, up to which, at the conclusion of the explicit directions:

"Underfoot is a red stone an all square. Raise the—"

And then nothing distinguishable until the concluding line of farewell.

"Well!" demanded Betty triumphantly as we all studied the cryptic dots.

Hugh shook his head. "My surprise was called forth by the unusual form of expression. These inscriptions always follow a certain set phraseology, but this one is strikingly different."

"By gum," groaned Betty inelegantly. "Isn't this the limit?"

"Read it anyway," I urged. Hugh was beyond words.

"It says," began King, "and mind you, I am translating roughly—"In the year after Christ 1185 and of the indication 2, Andronicus, the Scepter Wielder, Christ-loving Emperor of the Romans, built this drain new from the tide level."

He broke off.

"So far it is no different from thousands of other inscriptions we might find on the city walls, aqueducts, cisterns, churches or other public works. But now comes the part I cannot understand: 'If there were tongues, many might praise him.'"

"If there were tongues many might praise him," repeated Betty.

"What does it matter?" said Hugh dispiritedly. "We're not interested in whether or not the subjects of the Emperor Andronicus were anxious to praise him. I could curse him for putting a cock-and-bull story on my foot-lab ancestor."

"If there were tongues many might praise him," repeated Betty again.

"And it was the Emperor Andronicus! The same, daddy? The one in the instructions speak about?"

"Manifestly, my dear, the date certifies to that."

"Then there must be something in it," she insisted. "If there were tongues many might praise him. Don't you see what it means? There were no tongues to praise him. This work was not known at the time. Why? And why was he able to keep it a secret?"

"He may have murdered all the workmen," replied her father slowly. "He was a singularly bloody tyrant, according to the contemporary historians."

of the dungeon? I cut in. "If they wanted to get into the drain—"

"But no man who had hidden a treasure in the drain would have relied on a drainage grating in a dungeon for means of access to it," answered Betty.

"That dungeon was a place for getting rid of special prisoners," interrupted King. "When the drain was actively in use, the water must often have backed up into the dungeon. I agree with Elizabeth that an emperor hiding a vast treasure would not have utilized the grating for access to it."

"I am on Betty's side in this," he said. "At the least, she has given us something definite to work on. Now, if you will take my advice, Hugh, you and Professor King, with Betty and Jack to help you, will be the treasure-hunting squad. I had best remain here to act as expeditionary Halson officer with Wasso Mikal and his people at need. And if you don't mind, I'll need Watkins as galloper."

Every one agreed to this plan, and the four of us immediately descended into the passage again. King made a careful study of the stonework, in which I assisted him, with a view to ascertaining beyond any doubt whether there was any sealed opening in its walls. Both of us considered this the logical first step, but Hugh and Betty wearied of so unexciting a task and left us to explore the upper end of the drain.

We had been at this for rather more than an hour, without the faintest hint of success, when we were interrupted by a hail from Hugh.

"Professor! Jack! Come here!" "Oh, dad," called Betty, "here's a funny inscription on the wall."

We dropped into the water, and waded inland for some twenty-odd paces to where they were standing, with their torches bearing on a patch of marble set into the rough face of the right-hand wall. Hugh was working with his knife-point, scraping away the moss and fungi that partially obscured the letters.

"I saw it by accident," bubbled Betty. "We went up a long way to where the roof gets much lower, and we heard water rushing ahead of us. So Hugh said we ought to turn back. My light just happened to catch on this piece of stone here as we passed it. There was one row of letters quite clear, but the others were all overgrown with this slimy stuff. What does it say, dad?"

"It's Greek, right enough," added Hugh, still scraping indignantly.

"I can make out a word here and there, but it doesn't seem to be the same language I boned at school. Just a moment, sir, and I'll have the whole inscription cleared."

I peered over their shoulders at the deeply-carved lines of angular characters.

The stone was about three or four feet square, and below it was another similar one. Above the lettering was an elaborately scrolled cross. From it my eyes caught my uncle's face, and were held at once by the astonishment I saw mirrored there.

"Most amazing!" he muttered to himself.

"What is it, dad?" clamored Betty. "But it can't be," he said, shaking his head. "Quite extraordinary! Dear me, I never saw this formula before."

"For Pete's sake, tell us!" I implored. "It says nothing about the treasure, by dear boys," he answered sadly. "My surprise was called forth by the unusual form of expression. These inscriptions always follow a certain set phraseology, but this one is strikingly different."

"By gum," groaned Betty inelegantly. "Isn't this the limit?"

"Read it anyway," I urged. Hugh was beyond words.

workmen," replied her father slowly. "He was a singularly bloody tyrant, according to the contemporary historians."

"Exactly," triumphed Betty. "And why would he have murdered them, in order to keep this work a secret? You see, he built the drain new from the tide-level, probably to this point. That means there was a drain, but it needed repair, and he seized the opportunity to hide his treasure. Hugh, where are those tools? I'm going to get this stone out of the wall."

It was as hard a job as we tackled, despite the softening of the mortar by the moisture of the ages; but after two hours, Hugh and Vernon King were able to pry the slab loose and it fell out with a mighty splash. Hugh thrust in the end of the crowbar, and when it was pounded it rang hollow. The three of us who had two arms apiece went at it with a will, and I was dispatched for reinforcements.

Nikka refused to come himself, but he sent Watty, and the valet helped in the final act of demolition. By the end of the afternoon we had smashed through an embrasure nearly three feet high and four feet long, and Hugh nominated Betty for the honor of leading the way into the dim passage which abutted on the hole.

The rest of us crawled in afterward. My uncle and Watkins boosted me up, for my bad shoulder hindered me.

The passage was seven feet high and four feet wide. It led straight back between brick walls into a large chamber the roof of which was upheld by brick piers. The place was musty, fetid even, and very damp, but as our torches struggled through the darkness the rays were captured and joggled by glistening, sheeny heaps that were stacked against the piers and walls. Betty started forward involuntarily. There was a stirring sound, and then a tiny twinkling that died away in a faint murmurous s-s-sh.

"It's gold!" she cried.

We flashed our torches right and left. It was true. Great golden piles sloped away from us. The fragments of the bags that once had held this wealth projected from the multitude of coins. At the end of the chamber the piles mounted to the roof. There were stray rivulets of gold that trickled almost to the mouth of the passage. To the left stood several tiers of ancient chests. The first yielded at once to the point of Hugh's knife.

The rotten wood cut like cardboard. When he flung the lid back it fell apart, but we scarcely noticed it for the dazzling, glamor of the gems that seemed almost to fight to escape from their centuries-long imprisonment.

Jewels and jewelry and massive plate were heaped in indiscriminate confusion, huge saivers, cups, chalices, amorphous, bracelets, armlets, amulets, brooches, necklaces, rings beyond number—and running in and out of the set stones, the endless profusion of unmounted gems, diamonds, amethysts, rubies, opals, pearls, sapphires, topazes, garnets, turquoises, emeralds, and others I could not name.

I picked up what had been a king's crown, a barbaric beehood of crude unalloyed gold, red and soft, set with enormous uncut stones. Next to it was a chased bracelet that might have come from the goldsmith's shops of Athens in the classic age. The quantity of precious things was almost inconceivable. And this was but one of a score of chests.

King stooped and scooped up a handful of gold pieces from the floor, broad, finely minted, bearing the double-headed eagle of Byzantium and the busts and figures of dead-and-gone emperors.

"Was there ever such a find?" he muttered. "What a chance for the numismatists! See! Here is a by-sant of Artavados the Usurper. I never saw one before. It was not known that he had coined money. And here is the likeness of Arcadius, first of the Eastern emperors."

Betty threw her arms around Hugh, as shameless for the moment, as Kara.

"Oh, I'm so glad!" she murmured. "It's as much as you thought it would be, isn't it?"

Hugh was dazed.

"As much! By Jove, sweetheart, I never dreamed of anything like this! I—really, you know, I didn't honestly believe in it before. I used to pretend to make myself carry on. I told myself it was up to me to see the thing through on Uncle James' account. But—this! I say, professor, how much do you suppose there is here?"

Vernon King swept his torch in an arc around the chamber, the extreme confines of which were shrouded in shadow.

"I am no fiscal expert, my dear boy. It would take a committee of jewelers to assess those chests alone. As for the gold, I have seen the treasury vaults in Washington, and gold mounts up fast when you run into the thousands of pounds avoirdupois. Just as a wild guess, I might hazard a minimum of $100,000,000, £20,000,000 at normal exchange."

"But it can't be!" I protested, the sweat beading my forehead at the thought. "Why, it's ridiculous. They didn't have wealth on such a scale in those days."

"Not at all, Jack," returned my uncle, his scholar's pride aroused. "You must remember that you are reviewing here the hoard accumulated by a Roman emperor, one of the last rulers before the definite inflation of the empire's final collapse. It was then still by far the richest country of which we have any record. According to Benjamin of Tudela, the Jewish traveler of the Twelfth century, the revenue received by the emperor from the city of Constantinople by itself amounted to 7,000,000 nomismata, or in the neighborhood of $20,000,000."

"Benjamin and other later authorities, Andreades, Paparrhagogos, Kalligas, assert the revenue derived from the remainder of the empire to have represented five times this sum. At the most moderate computation, the total revenue of the empire must have exceeded $120,000,000. It was probably very much more. In addition, the wealth of the individual citizens and nobles was enormous. The Emperor Andronicus, with whose efforts we have to deal here, had two years to milk the country's wealth. During those two years, he not only absorbed the taxes, but confiscated the wealth of more nobles than any ruler prior to that period."

"I should not be greatly surprised if the contents of this chamber was discovered to exceed $125,000,000. Andronicus was possessed with a mania for accumulating a treasure for rebuilding the empire. If he—"

"If you aren't very lucky, Hugh, you are going to lose all this stuff just because you were lucky enough to find it," said Nikka's voice behind us.

We turned to confront him. Kara's dark, passionate face was at his shoulder. Her eyes drank in the picture, and she stood on her tiptoes to whisper in Nikka's ear.

"No, thank you, my dear," he answered dryly. "She suggests that I give her my knife, and that between us we clean up you people. Boldly enough, she is not alone in possessing that idea. Who do you suppose is upstairs?"

"Mrs. Hilyer," I exclaimed.

"Right. But she's not alone. She came back with Mahkoul Pasha. I've got them both safe under lock and key, with Wasso Mikal's knife at their throats. Still—"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Out of the frying-pan into the fire, your luddishness," remarked Watkins glumly. "Sure I was, this was too good to last."

CHAPTER XIV

Antiques, Statuary, Chgs. Pd., With Care

Reluctantly and with many a backward look, we retired from that glimmering vault of wealth, and climbed to the atrium. We were all soaked to the waist and suddenly conscious of the fatigue of the last two crowded days. Personally, I felt that I had reached the limit. I didn't care what happened. I thought that we were in a hopeless fix. Vernon King was equally morose. Betty was ready to weep. Nikka was sardonically amused at our ill-luck. Kara was indifferent, so long as Nikka refused to embark upon a scheme of wholesale murder in order to impound the treasure for themselves alone. Watty was tiredly hopeless. Only Hugh squared his jaw and said nothing.

"I'll have the precious pair fetched in if you like," volunteered Nikka as we sat about the room. "But I don't see the use. I've talked to them, and I can assure you they aren't in a mood to be agreeable. Mrs. Hilyer is consumed with revenge. She isn't thinking of anything else. She just wants to get back at us. Mahkoul is politely threatening. He figures that he has us on the hip because of the killings last night—murder of his imperial majesty's subjects and all that. He talked about international complications, and lawlessness."

Printer Also Had a Proposition to Make

It seems that a printer somewhere down in Texas got slightly peeved at a letter from a doctor who wanted bids on several thousand letterheads and statements, different sizes, different grades of paper and printed in various colors; with the request that the forms be kept standing for possible reprint orders.

So Mr. Printer diagnosed the case carefully and answered something in this manner:

"Am in the market for bids on one operation for appendicitis—one, two, and five-inch incision, with and without nurse. If appendicitis is found to be putting, want quotations to include sending same back and canceling order. If removed, successful bidder is expected to hold incision open for about sixty days, as I expect to be in the market for an operation for gallstones at that time and want to save the cost of cutting."—Forbes Magazine.

ONE PRESCRIPTION MADE FAMILY DOCTOR FAMOUS

Seldom has any single act been of greater benefit to mankind than that of Dr. Caldwell in 1885, when he wrote the prescription which has carried his fame to the four corners of the earth.

Over and over, Dr. Caldwell wrote the prescription as he found men, women and children suffering from those common symptoms of constipation, such as coated tongue, bad breath, headaches, gas, nausea, biliousness, no energy, lack of appetite, and similar things.

Demand for this prescription grew so fast, because of the pleasant, quick way it relieved such symptoms of constipation, that by 1888 Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it put up ready for use. Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is always ready at any drugstore.

Normans Should Speak Up

Normans with William the Conqueror and his comrades at the battle of Hastings have many descendants and two French professors have been commissioned to trace them so that their names may be placed on a tablet which soon is to be erected in the castle of Falaise, where the duke of Normandy was born.

Fairhaven, Mass.—"I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life and I think it is a wonderful tonic. When I feel nervous and run-down my husband gets me a bottle right away. It is a great help to me and I think that if other people would only take it when they feel all run-down and take it as the directions say, they would find it a great benefit. My worst symptoms were nervousness and tired feelings. I could not sleep nights and I did not care about my work. I was so nervous I would cry if anyone looked at me."—Mrs. ADA BESSIE, 198 Washington Street, Fairhaven, Mass.

A Prosperous Country Drivers and Walkers Why Industries Grow Flying for Pasture

Uncle Sam continues to prosper, in spite of increasing expenses. In three months ending September 30 he collected more than one billion dollars, and $128,000,834 more than he collected in the same three months a year ago. It's a big, rich country, with one single city spending in a year as much as the United States used to spend before the war.

Bootleg whisky, "home brew" and automobile accidents are related. Drunken drivers kill many. Everybody knew that.

Now Doctor Norris, chief medical examiner of New York City, says that "drunken walkers" cause accidents for which the automobile industry is blamed.

Doctor Norris urges that reckless walkers be fined and adds, "Twenty-five per cent of adults hurt by automobiles are intoxicated."

An observer of high finance says industry progresses rapidly "because sons of very rich men play polo and golf, neglect business inherited from their fathers, and allow able men to extend and develop the business."

That is true in some cases. No Vanderbilt runs the New York Central railroad, no Ryan manages street car lines, no J. J. Hill descends an unbroken line of railroads in the West. But it isn't true always.

For instance, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., not conspicuous on the golf course or polo field, runs successfully the biggest business in the world, turned over to him by his father, now past ninety.

And the American Tobacco company is run with an extraordinary success, to which its competitors will testify, by a very young man, George W. Hill, who inherited the job from his father.

Here and there young men inherit ability and ambition with great wealth, but not often.

It is easy to succeed in spite of poverty. It is difficult to succeed in spite of wealth.

The Canadian government bought a herd of 3000 selected reindeer and will drive them from Kotzebue Sound in Arctic Alaska to the east side of the Mackenzie Delta in northwest Canada.

SARGON SALES TOTAL MILLIONS; SET RECORDS

If you were told that literally thousands of well known men and women had stated publicly that a single medicine had relieved them of health troubles after all other medicines and treatments had apparently failed—it would sound impossible, wouldn't it?

Yet that is Sargon's wonderful record.

So great has become the demand for Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills that the Sargon Laboratory has been forced to increase its capacity, from 8,000 to 45,000 bottles daily.

"Phenomenal and bewildering," is the way one of the big drug jobbers of the country describes the marvelous demand.

One big New York firm with wholesale branches in leading cities, is selling at the rate of more than one million bottles a year—or to be exact, 908,184 bottles in the past eight months.

Introduced in California in April of this year, the people of this State alone are now using it at the rate of more than one million bottles per year, or an average of one bottle for every family in the State; and so it is everywhere.

Why this enormous and ever-increasing demand for Sargon?

The answer is this: Sargon is a new kind of medicine. It is different from any other medicine you have ever taken because it is based on new and remarkable discoveries in the field of modern medicine which have completely overturned many old moss-grown theories we have known for a lifetime.

That is why people everywhere are looking on Sargon as the one great outstanding health-giving remedy of the age. No wonder it is called the medicine with a million friends.

Mrs. A. M. Owens, of 1716 Taylor St., Rt. 3, Box 34, Little Rock, Ark., says: "I was so weak I couldn't walk across the floor. I had spent a fortune trying to get well and would be in my grave if it weren't for Tanlac. Now I eat, sleep fine and have gained 22 lbs."

ALY C

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1116 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow, we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puffy."

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully."

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way. Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

Mrs. Ollie Walker

Houston Lady's Skin Nice and Clear Now

"My complexion used to show how bad I felt. Now it shows that I am free from those depressing headaches and nervous spells," says Mrs. Ollie Walker, who lives at 2424 Morse St., in Houston.

"I suffered from constipation. I might say all my life. I couldn't throw off the wastes and they gave me headaches, and a very sallow complexion. Ever since I started taking Nature's Remedy, all that is gone. I reckon the real reason is that NR Tablets are so pleasant to take that I continued taking them long enough to get results."

NR Tablets are so effective because they soothe, sweeten and stimulate the stomach and bowels. Then the starch and sugar wastes from the food you eat can't remain in your system to form the acids which sour your stomach, bind your bowels and rob the blood of the red corpuscles. It must have plenty of it to keep you from losing weight and strength, and from becoming bilious, headachy, dyspeptic and rheumatic. Get a 25c box of NR Tablets at any drug store.

NEW WOOLENS LURE MILLINERS; VELVET EVENING WRAPS IN STYLE

LIKE everybody else who has anything to do with fashions, milliners have not been able to resist the lure of the new woolens, such as are bringing lasting glory and renown to the textile arts.

There's no smarter way to "start" the season than to hat and scarf oneself in some one of the other tweed, broadcloth, or jersey "sets" which are the new note in early autumn collections.

In their zeal to make the most of a good thing, Paris modistes are utilizing

No more brilliantly colorful scene can be conceived of than that of a galaxy of lovely women mantled in gorgeous evening wraps whose moods and modes were never so enchantingly whimsical and versatile as the new collections reveal them.

Regarding favored materials for the evening cape or coat, it is a significant fact that with all the allurements of other weaves, the compass of fashion keeps pointing steadily to velvet. No doubt the delectable colorings for the new velvets have much ing every inch of the new woolen materials even to their selvages. That a selvedge can be very decorative is clearly illustrated in many of the new toques which are made up after the manner of the one shown to the right in this picture. This model is fashioned of a handsomely colorful loose woven tweed, the selvedge of which is so manipulated as to form the trimming. A pocketbook, made of the same tweed, completes this most intriguing millinery ensemble.

A sports fabric in gray and navy blue was the inspiration for the fetching hat-and-scarf set shown to the left. The hat combines the nonchalant lines of the tam, and the popular beret. It is part of the feature of these nifty sets that the hat fit very snug and to do with their prestige. No matter what tone or tint of the evening gown there is a complementary color awaiting it in the velvet realm. Which is exactly what fashionists require to add them to play up color values in the ensemble effects which are considered as important in the realm of evening costume as it is in that of apparel for the daytime wear.

Then, too, velvet yields with consummate grace to manipulation of all sorts, particularly shirring such as is so lavishly employed this season. Particular stress is given to furless wraps, which make intriguing working of the material itself their outstanding attraction. Collars especially are fantastically designed, some trending to Medici types, others puffed and shirred in becoming huge rolled effects.

The charming cape-coat in the picture below is typical of the youthful silhouette given to many of the new that the scarf be worn tight up about the throat, just as you see in the picture.

Another medium for the hat much employed for the new models is suede, also finished kidskin, which comes in all fashionable colorings. One sees, for instance, a molded-to-the-head shape of gray glove-kid, which is deftly interworked with velvet or some other material such as yardage felt or angora knit scarfing. The hat below in the circle is of gray kidskin with darker gray velvet shown in the facing that turns back at the front.

A novel turban is shown to the left, in which wisps of tan fur is caught through the black velvet of the hat to give a striped effect.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BIRDS' THOUGHTS

"We dress so much alike," said Mr. Vesper Sparrow, "and I think it is so nice that we do."

"We both like the same sort of a suit or costume. We both like brown and gray and white in our feathers, and we are both very fond of having our outer tail feathers of white."

"They can be seen when we fly and I think they look very smart and stylish."

"I think so, too," said Mrs. Vesper Sparrow. "You know we're sometimes called Grass Birds and Grassfinches, and we belong to the big Finch family."

"Those would all do as names for us," said Mr. Vesper Sparrow. "We do love the grass."

"We have our nests of them which are always laid in the high meadow grass."

"We don't care about digging worms out of the ground but we love the insects of the meadows."

"We are smaller than the well-known English sparrow, and our name is indeed well chosen, though then again it isn't."

"I mean the name we are almost always called by—the Vesper Sparrow."

"Why is our name well chosen and then why isn't it?" asked Mrs. Vesper Sparrow.

"Named the Vesper Sparrows."

"That is rather confusing to me."

"We are named the Vesper Sparrows because we sing more often in the late afternoon when evening is approaching than at any other time."

"And our voices are at their best then, too."

"Vesper, you see, means late afternoon or early evening."

"Yes," said Mrs. Vesper Sparrow, "now I see why we are well named."

"But you also said we were not well named. Will you tell me about that?"

"I will," chirped Mr. Vesper Sparrow. "When the other birds sing they choose the morning for their big concert."

"Now we like to sing in the early morning, too!"

"We always join in with the early morning singers."

"But we sing later in the afternoon than the others, except the rosebreasted grosbeak family, and they love to sing in the early evening as we do."

"I'd say," Mrs. Vesper Sparrow remarked, "that we were both—morning and evening singers."

"Just what we are," said Mr. Vesper Sparrow. "We're a little bit like the meadowlarks, too, though."

"How are we like them?" asked Mrs. Vesper Sparrow.

"Sometimes we sing when flying," Mr. Vesper Sparrow said. "And they do that."

"Then too, the meadowlarks are very careful about hiding their nests and keeping their birdlings safe in the grassy nest, with grass covering over and around the nest."

"We fly away, and so do they, when we think danger is near—not because we want to desert our young—oh, never, never."

"Never, never," said Mrs. Vesper Sparrow.

"But simply to keep people from knowing where our nests are. There are some creatures," continued Mr. Vesper Sparrow, "who will rob nests of eggs before the birdlings have come out."

"They think they are making collections! What do they want of eggs?"

"Do they want little shells which don't really mean anything to them at the expense of breaking the hearts of the mothers and the daddies?"

"Would such creatures like to have their brothers and their sisters stolen away from them—out of their cradles? I should say not!"

"Would they like to have collections made of their sisters and brothers? Not for a minute."

"There are enough things to collect. Stamps and pictures and stories and real pets to be cared for—but not the eggs of birdlings."

"But I have heard that people are getting over their cruel ways."

And Mrs. Vesper Sparrow felt very much better about it, very much better.

When Babies CRY

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

A Word of Appreciation

To the Princess Management:

The editor of the Times has kindly given me this space in which to express to you my appreciation of the entertaining evening spent at the Princess Theatre opening last Friday. The auditorium is beautiful, the wall finish and the lighting effect very unique and attractive.

There was a good program, the singing and speeches demonstrating that many of your people are talented, and the number given by the young ladies of the high school was excellent indeed, showing painstaking and careful training. The wedding by the little folks was splendid, and the pictures absorbed one's interest from start to finish. Altogether the entire program was much better than many I have seen in some of our larger cities.

New Princess Opened

Last Friday evening the new and better Princess Theatre opened its doors to the public when an interesting program, sponsored by the High School Athletic Association, was given. Addresses were given by Supt. B. J. Brannan, Rev. J. A. MacMillan and Alfred E. Creigh Jr. Miss Louise Noble also sang. The chorus of high school girls sang and danced "The Wedding of the Painted Doll," with several of the grammar school children impersonating the characters in the song. On the screen the picture, "Our Modern Maidens" was shown.

Continuous Show every night from 7 to 11.
