Vacations Help Trees

Trees, like human beings, should be allowed to have a vacation occasionally, according to George P. Weldon, noted pomologist, Southern California's climate is too good for a number of varieties of peaches, apricots and apples, and if something happens to prevent the trees bearing fruit for one season they show renewed life and greater production the next season, according to Professor Weldon.

This "vacation" for the tree may be occasioned by a severe winter, which would cause the tree to lie dormant.

SYNOPSIS

Up the wild waters of the unknown Yellow-Leg. on a winter's hunt, journey Brock McCain and Gaspard Lecroix, his French-Cree comrade, with Flash, Brock's puppy and their dog team. Brock's father had warned him of the danger of his trip. After several battles with the stormy waters they arrive at a fork in the Yellow-Leg. Brock is severely injured in making a portage and Flash leads Gaspard to the unconscious youth. The trappers race desperately to reach their destination before winter sets in.
Flash engages in a desperate fight with a wolf and kills him.
Gaspard tells Brock of his determination to find out who killed his father. Tracks are discovered and the two boys separate for scouting purposes. Brock is jumped by two Indians and a white man and knocked uncon-scious. He is held prisoner, Gas-pard rescues nim while his captors sleep. Gaspard believes these men killed his father and is prevented from killing them by Brock. While out alone Gaspard is shot from ambush by an In-dian and kills his would-be slayer. While out on his trap lines Brock He is lost and his food gives out. His hopes are raised when he discovers a moose trail.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued -14-

For an instant, he paused, in doubt. He would rest his gun against a tree -if he could-had time. But suppose Flash lunged as he fired? It might be safer to lash him here. No, he did not dare. His hand shook like a leaf -he would only wound the moosewould need Flash.

So, weak with famine and excitement, Brock went on-on into the thick timber, nerves strung like bowstrings, straining uncertain eyes for the vision of a huge shape in the snow. Then, dilating his nostrils in deep sniffs of the air, Flash suddenly went Falling on the trembling husky, Brock seized his nose. "Shut up. Flash!" he gasped in desperation. "Steady, boy! Shut up!"

But the starved dog trembled where he crouched, wild to charge the beast whose scent was strong in his nostrils. With stiff fingers, Brock knotted the leash to a sapling, and left his dog, to make the stalk.

He had moved by a few yards when suddenly he saw a patch of black dimly between the dark green of two young spruce trees. Life bung on the pitiful hands which raised his rifle to his shoulder. His eyes blurred as the bead wavered past the open rear sight. Again he looked for his target.

The black patch was gone. With a groan the boy reeled, his fevered eyes peering desperately into the timber already blue with shadow. Then, to his flank, he saw a shape floundering in snow to its shoulders. It was the last chance!

Crouching, with elbow on knee Brock fired.

As the rifle shattered the stlence, a great gray and white shape, sinking to the shoulders at every leap, plunged "Flash!"

With all the strength he could summon, Brock ran. He had missedhardly seen his sights! "One more shot-only one shot!" he sobbed, as he shuffled after the dog, who had snapped his leash.

Brock reached the trail of the moose where the dog had joined it. Not a drop of blood on the snow! He had he said to the dog sniffing at the trail

Ahead, Flash yelped, hard in purmit of the fleeing beast. But the long legs of the moose would out distance the dog in the deep snow. It was all them over! They had lost! It was-the end ! Panting in his weakness, Brock tumbled forward over the broken rail left by moose and dog. Then, of a sudden, the yelps of the busky hanged to roars of rage.

Flash had caught him! Clutching his rifle the boy kept on, oping, still hoping for one last shot He broke through the thicket to gasp in amazement. Rearing in the snow, a young bull, his horns still in the spike. ashed with his great forefeet at the dog who leaped around him. Hafr stiff, eyes bloodshot, his breath escaping from dilated nostrils like the exhaust of an engine, with his shar: hoofs the bull flayed the air as the dog lunged in and out. And then, as the desperate beast tried to rise on his hind legs and fell back helpless, Brock

"Hamstrung! Flash, boy, you've saved us with your teeth!" Mercifulry Brock ended the fight server. with a bullet through the beast's orain. As the animal fell, blackness closed on the vision of the exhausted boy, and he fainted. The starving busky, mad with the taste of blood, tore savagely at the throat of the moose, then at the sight of the crumpled figure of Brock, ran to him with a whine. Slowly the biting air revived the youth whose desperate exertion had sapped the last ounce of his stamina. He got to his feet while the dog went back to his

But the dusk was close and there was no time to lose. Leading the reluctant dog from his quarry, Brock. delirious with joy at his luck, went back for the sled. And there, in the swamp, within easy reach of the meat which would thicken his blood and give him back his strength while he rested, he built a fire and made camp.

But Brock was wise, and sitting by his fire with the gorged Flash, he dragt, at intervals, a small cup only. of the broth from the simmering pot of moose broth. "ull well he knew the danger of filling a starved and weakened stomach, and that nightcraving it though he did-he touched no meat.

"We'll see home, now-Hungry House and the family. And old Gaspard, what'll be think has become of us. Flash?" be rambled on in his joy. to the dog at his side. "But we're lost-we've got to find the river, old We'll camp right here, feedin' on that bull, 'til Brock gets his legs back, then we'll take a hundred pounds of meat and circle northwest, what?" Then the boy leaned and buried his hooded face in the gray mane of the dog who grunted with contentment at his side.

For days Brock camped beside the frozen moose meat, while his strength returned. As his endurance increased he climbed the nearest ridges to search the horizon for a familiar landmark.

"Ham-Strung! Flash, Boy, You've Saved Us With Your Teeth!"

but to his bewilderment and chagrin, found none. In the end, he was forced to the realization that, instead of being south of the headwater lakes and the river valley, he must have worked to the west, in the two days' blizzard.

Taking a hundred pounds of meat, a neavy load for the husky traveling across country, Brock turned southeast. In the hollow of his arm he carried his uncased rifle, for he was now sure he was well beyond the big lake, in the enemy's country. Constantly, as he traveled, he watched his flanks and back trail, for the memory of his capture was still vivid.

Brock camped that night in a country still unfamiliar, but the next day at noon, from a barren hill, he sighted, far to the east, the well-known ridges circling the great lake. As the short day waned and he looked for a camp ground, suddenly he came to a dead

"Now what is he after, I wonder?" said the curious boy, aloud. "He's given me up as wiped out, I'll bet, and has gone on a man bunt." (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Devise Dance Notes Like Sheet Music

Twenty years of experiment on the part of the leader of the foremost German school of cythmic dancing, Rudolph von Laban, have resulted in a new standard "choreography" which is receiving attention from Berlin's critics of music and dancing.

It is claimed for this system of dancing notation that all forms of movement can be read as easily as a sheet of music, after a few hours' study. The five parallel lines upon which the signs are printed resemble those of a musical score. But dashes and curves, arrows and dots, take the place of ordinary notes.-London Ob-

SCHOOLBOY WINS BOUT WITH BEAR

New York Lad Catches Beast During Recess.

Ellenburg Center, N. Y .- Twelve year-old Owen Le Claire of this village has shown local hunters something in the way of a novelty by capturing alive a 52-pound bear.

It all happened in this way: The Bigelow school had let out for recess one afternoon when young Owen spied a bear in a nearby piece of plowed ground. Two other boys and a little girl of ten years responded to the discoverer's hunting cry, well known in these parts, and together they started the memorable chase which ended in the capture of the

The beast put on full speed ahead to evade the wild, unarmed pack of pursuers. It became entangled temporarily in a barbed wire fence, but before the youthful horde was upon it it managed an escape and fled over a small stream. Owen caught up with young bruin at this point and hopped upon its back. He was bested in the the king. encounter at the price of most of his clothes, but continued his attack.

Bruin climbed a tree, followed closety by the Le Claire boy, who had paused only long enough to pick up a piece of stray wire. The boy wound the wire around the bear's neck and anchored it to a limb of the tree, after which he descended for more wire.

Attaching the second piece to the leg of the struggling cub, the boy climbed down and pulled the animal after him. Once on the ground it became a contest of endurance. But the feeling of conquest was upon the boy and he won.

Once home he was offered $50 for the bear. His reply was, "Not after that 'rassle.' I ain't gonna seil it." The beast, still in an ugly mood, was put into the Le Chire barn;

Laboratory-Made Snow

to Aid Meteorologists

Los Angeles.-A discovery expected to be of value in the study of meteorology has been announced by Dr. John Mead Adams, associate professor of physics at the University of Callfornia. It is the making of snowflakes in his new laboratory in the physicsblology building, on the new campus, While the task may seem comparatively simple, yet Doctor Adams began his work six years ago, entering a field which up to that time had not been touched by scientific investigation.

The apparatus used in the successful production of the white crystals includes a little glass tube, surrounded by bottles of gurgling water, a thermos jug, long colls of wires and rubber tubing, a cooling apparatus and a resistance instrument. As the snow crystals are formed they drift down upon a black cloth, properly cooled to preserve them for a sufficient time to allow for a microscopic study and for photographing.

Doctor Adams believes that snow crystals are built up from some smaller crystals through the action of kinetic or electrical energy. But as yet he has discovered no definite proof of this during his experiments.

to Gain $295 for Study Portland, Ore.-His lifetime filled with service for $295 in cash is what Robert W. Nealey, twenty-one-year-old orphan offers some benefactor, taking his tip from olden times, when apprentices were bound to their employers.

Nealey wishes to study electricity. A school which he has picked out asks for $295 for a three-month course. "If anyone will put me through school, I'll be his slave for the rest of my life," declares Nealey. "I'll continue the study of electricity if he desires, or do anything else."

GEOGRAPHY CHANGES ARE MADE IN 1929

Boundary Settlements and Some Strife in Year.

Washington. - Important boundary changes, many settlements and some conflicts occurred during 1929.

A summary by the National Geographic society shows shifts of boundaries, populations, and sovereigntles of the past year. "Important events in the field of world real estate," says a bulletin of the society, "were the establishment of the Vatican city, the settlement of the Tacna Arica question with a division of the territory between Chile and Peru, the Mukden government's pledge of alliance to the central Chinese government at Nanking, the challenge to Russian railroad control in north Manchuria, Great Britain's approval of a plan to turp lraq from a mandate into an independent nation, and the coup d'état in Jugoslavia by which ministerial government was replaced with a dictatorship administered by South American Adjustments.

"Marked progress in settling trritating boundary questions was made in South America. In addition to the Tacna Arica settlement, war in the Chaco region between Paraguay and Boliva was checked by mediators. The mediators studying the question of which side was responsible for the clash have asked permission of the respective nations to pursue the inquiry deeper into the larger question of a possible boundary. Brazil is busy settling boundary questions on all sides.

"Coincident with the declaration of dictatorship in Jugoslavia the name, Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, was stricken out and the provincial boundaries were redrawn. Along the Rhine, the allied forces of occupation were cut down, 25,000 soldiers having been withdrawn in the last few months. With the evacuation of Wiesbaden, all British troops have left the Rhine. Basel, Switzerland, on the upper Rhine, was selected as home of the new International bank. Landbound Czechoslovakia acquired a seaport in 1929 by purchasing port rights from the free city of Hamburg, Germany. Poles are reported to be buying up land of many Germans who are migrating to Germany proper from East Prussia, the German province separated from Germany by the Polish corridor.

"Little Monaco staged a Graustarkian revolt by which the indignant citizens (who pay no taxes) wen additional constitutional rights from the reigning prince. On the northern limits of France the autonomy movement in Alsace was frowned upon by the government.

Saar Case Still Pending.

The Verailles treaty calls for a final decision on ownership of the Saar and its iron mines by a plebiscite in 1935. This plebiscite may be abandoned if Germany and France can reach a preliminary agreement which is now a subject of discussion.

"Premier Briand publicly lannched the 'United States of Europe' plan at Geneva. Economic welding of the continental nations is going on rapidly through the development of industrial cartels which serve to puncture tariff walls.

"In Asia, the Manchurian question, precipitated by the seizure of the Chinese-Eastern railway and the expulsion of Soviet railroad managers, may soon be settled.

"The United States and Canada signed a treaty permitting increased diversion of water from Niagara Falls for power development. In Central America the United States has assigned a corps of engineers to survey the route for the proposed Nicaraguan canal connecting the Caribbean sea and the Pacific. Guatemala and Honduras are trying to reach an agreement over the disputed El Cinchado territory.

"New territory was added to world maps by the discoveries of the Byrd expedition. Commander Byrd claimed for the United States Marie Byrd land, which lies outside territories to which Great Britain has advanced claims. In the Antarctic, also, Norway occupied an Island in the Roald Amundsen sea for a whaling station. naming it Peter I Island.

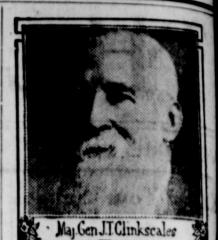

"In the Arctic the Soviet government publicly proclaimed its ownership of Franz Joseph land. Norway has now definitely occupied Jan Mayen Island, north of Iceland, and on the Island Norway has established a meteorological station. Spitsbergen and Jan Mayen have been included under the new official name Svalbard."

Peiping Residents Object to Cow's Stomach Street

Peiping. - Residents on "Cow's Stomach street" (Niu Tu Tsu) in Peiping have decided that in modern China the name of this street should be changed. They have petitioned the municipal authorities, asking them to change the name of the street to "Big Praying court," as more suitable to the glories of their district.

Adventurous Seal Shot Nibbling Decoy Duck

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any goodpharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer. irritate, thus often relieving bladder

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone: makes a delightful effervescent lithinwater drink which millions of men-and women take now and Nien to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kfdney disorders,

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome Callfornia Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's maryelous to see how billious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breatl clears up, cofor flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, en ergetic again. A Western mether Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Ne braska, says: "My little daughter Roma Lucle, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried abou her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way i improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

WAGE FIGHT TO SAVE ANCIENT COURTHOUSE

St. Louis, Mo .- Although St. Louis' stately old courthouse, where the only decision freeing a slave was ever returned, will soon be abandoned, it may still be retained as an historic landmark, even though it will be stripped of its official dignity.

The courthouse, which was once "the best in the west," has been replaced by another, a bigger and better one, and now official St. Louis is about to forget the old edifice.

The heirs of the donors of the site where the old courthouse stands, however, are not so forgetful, and, with an array of legal talent among them. they are preparing to recover the property which their ancestors once gave to the city.

Property Given in 1822.

The recovery of the property, though valued at more than $1,000,000, is not for commercial possibilities. Instead the descendants of the once owners of the ground want to insure the old structure against the possibility of its being razed.

The site, which is to be the basis of the suit for the recovery of the property, was given to the city of St. Louis in 1822 by two leading citizens of that period, J. B. C. Lucas and Auguste Chouteau. In assigning the property to the city they specified that it should always he used for the site of the County court

Accuses Daughter of Fraud in Mortgage Case

Boston.-A mother accuses her daughter of gross fraud in a bill in equity filed recently in the Middlesex Superior court at East Cambridge.

Mrs. Alice S. Parker of Everett. through her attorney, Jennie Loitman Barron, asserts in a bill of complaint that her daughter, Mrs. Fannie A. Moses, and the latter's husband, Samuel R. Moses, both of Everett, fraudulently obtained a discharge of a mortgage on land in Everett through deceit practiced on her, and asks the court to set the discharge aside.

The mother says that about September 24, 1925, her daughter obtained title to land at Kenwood road and Shute street in Everett, giving a promissory note. Mrs. Parker recites that on certain representations made to her a few months ago which constituted fraud, she executed a discharge of the mortgage she held. She further says no consideration was ever paid her for discharging the mortgage, and asks the court to en-Join her daughter and her daughter's husband from transferring the land.
