Dr. Robertson In Narrow Escape

Dr. P. F. Robertson escaped what might have been a very serious accident Monday morning of this week. The Dr. was in his car driving toward Dryden, in some way while turning out to pass a car he skidded, probably caused from loose gravel, losing control of the car and turned completely over four times so different ones tell us who interviewed the situation. Mr. John Taylor who was only a short distance away was the first to the scene of the accident. The Dr. was still in the car and conscious although pretty badly shaken up and a number of cuts on the face, head and several places about the body, but fortunately was not hurt inwardly. The car was a new Ford coupe, while it is not a wreck, the body was pretty badly disfigured and the glasses were broken out, with the exception of the windshield. But with little repair it will be good as new. The Dr. accompanied Mr. Taylor on into Sanderson where he had his wounds dressed, and as he goes to press a report from him states that he will soon be able to be in his office again.

True Friendship, Blooms Sweetly

Friendship is a flower that blooms at all seasons of the year. She may be seen flourishing in the snow-capped mountains of the north, as well as in the more favored valleys of the sunny south. Everywhere cheering us with her exquisite and indiscribable charms. No surveyed chart, no national boundary line, no rugged mountain or steep decline can limit her growth. Pure, disinterested friendship, is a bright flame—a boon to society emitting none of the smoke of selfishness and seldom designs to tabernacle among men.

True friendship blooms sweetly in the soil of a noble heart.

There she finds a perennial summer, a never-ending season of felicity of joy to her happy possessor, casting a thousand rays of hope and joy and sunshine all about her.

But as beautiful and delightful and charming as she is, she can never be more delightful, more beautiful or more charming than her twin sister, who wears an assumed name, not with deceit, but with dignity; and in her arms you will always find a supply of beautiful white robes, and with blushing cheeks and charming modesty she reaches up and throws the mantle of charity about the less charming traits of her friends, and then swings along with a son of praise for the noble traits kissed by the dews of heaven rendering the soul fit for the association of angels. Now her assumed name is charity, but her real name is love.

She travels hand-in-hand with her sister, friendship, charming us with delight.

But when friendship forsakes the human heart, her sister, Charity, goes with her, and despondancy follows as logically as the night the day. Read Ps. 55:12-14.

Ain't it fine when things are going Topsy-turvy and askew To discover someone showing Good old-fashioned faith in you? Ain't it good when life seems dreary And your hopes about to end, Just to feel the handclasp cheery Of a fine old loyal friend? Gosh! one fellow to another Means a lot from day to day, Seems we're living for each other In a friendly sort of way. When a smile of cheerful greetin' Means so much to fellows sore, Seems we ought to keep repeatin' Smiles an' praises more an' more.

All the surrounding country has been favored with considerable rain, in some places the rain has been quite heavy. All ranch roads have been pretty badly washed and No. 90 highway east of Sanderson has been most impassable a part of this week. All trains from the east have been from one to five and six hours late. A lot of railroad track was washed out east of Del Rio.

Best Town In Southwest Texas

Sanderson is by far one of the best towns in Southwest Texas. We did not say one of the largest but we do say one of the best regardless of size. We have more wide awake business firms in our little city than you will find in many other cities twice or three times its population. Sanderson can also boast of having a larger per cent of sociability than most towns of its size and even much larger places.

Sanderson is the county seat of Terrell county, and is situated in one of the best ranch countries in the entire state of Texas. The government reports this section as one of the best goat and sheep producing counties in the United States. The ranchmen in this section also deal in cattle, but not quite so extensively as sheep and goats. Anyone visiting the ranch country the last few weeks would surely envy the ranchman, as things in general are surely looking fine since the heavy rains in all sections of the county.

Sanderson does not only boast of being in the best ranch section in the entire country but we can also boast of being both passenger and freight division for the T. & N. O. Railway, located half way between El Paso and San Antonio. Our population is made up of a most sociable and broad-minded class of people, retired ranchmen, railroad people and a class of business men and women that you would be glad to meet up with in any locality.

We now have under construction one of the best high school buildings in the southwest, under contract of Eagle Pass Lumber Co. The work on this building is being pushed and will be completed for the coming term of school.

We also have the new court house which is well under construction and which is being built by a home man, and a very able contractor, C. M. Breeding, and which will be completed in ample time for the cold weather. Mr. Breeding also holds the contract for the new Mexican school which is under construction.

In looking over the Times and reading the advertisements you will readily see those who are really interested in the town in which they live and are not only just existing. All wideawake business firms advertise, or at least take their home paper. Think this over you that do not advertise with your home paper, let us work together. No business firm can prosper without co-operation.

The writer wishes to state that any time she can be of benefit through the columns of the Times to help build up the business of Sanderson in anyway possible we are more than glad to do so. We have gotten our share of patronage during our now nearly three months we have had the Sanderson Times and wish to say that we surely appreciate those giving us work and sending work our way.

This week we printed campaign cards for J. I. Daniels, candidate for sheriff and tax collector of Terrell county. Mr. Daniels is no stranger to the voters of this county, having been in business here for the last four or five years, and has a large scope of friends who will support him in the coming election. The Times believes that you will be making no mistake should you cast your vote in the election this fall for J. I. Daniels.

Terrell County Oil Activities

The Transcontinental's Goode No. 1, on the M. H. Goode ranch, the W. J. Banner Pecos River bed test on the Banner ranch, the Big Bend Oil Corporation's test, on the Carpenter ranch; the Keck Pecos Trust and Trans-Pecos Development tests on the Hamilton ranch, and the two formation tests on the Stansell & Jones ranch are all reported to be plugging away endeavoring to encounter the real producing zones.

A large number of people from California, Colorado, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania Oklahoma and other states are here now watching oil developments, and endeavoring to purchase oil and gas leases and royalties in practically every portion of the county.

More geologists for major and independent companies are now stationed in the county. Some of them expect to be working in the field for the next six months.

Mrs. Mary Sue Mayberry, a niece of Mrs. J. F. Brown, arrived in Sanderson Sunday of this week and will spend a month here. Mrs. Mayberry is from Crystal City, Texas.

Ranchman Picnic Enjoyable Affair

One of the most enjoyable affairs of Terrell County is the ranchman's picnic given each June on the Allen and Hardgrave ranch at the Garrett Bean well.

This event took place on June 10th of this year, and was attended by about one hundred and twenty-five ranch people. The day was very unfavorable weather, with a slow drizzle of rain, but the attendance and picnic enthusiasm prevailed one hundred per cent.

Quite a few ranchmen from a distance who formerly lived in Terrell County were present for the celebration. At the noon hour a table of delicious eats was spread consisting of "real barbecued" lamb, chevon and veal, salad of all kinds, cakes, pies, pickles, ice tea and coffee. In the afternoon ice cream and "red lemonade" was served. The entire day was planned and carried out most successfully.

This affair is sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hardgrave and Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Allen, who deserves much credit for this "get-together meeting" of the ranch people.

Tuesday Club.

Mrs. W. H. Banner entertained the Tuesday club at her ranch home. Sweet peas and other spring flowers were used artistically in the decorations.

At the close of the usual number of games delicious ice cream, cake and punch were served to the following members and guests: Mesdames. Chastain, Stirman, Breeding, Dishman, Nance, Hollman, Brown, McCue, Banner, Duncan, Banner, Harrell, Mary Ellen Bohlman, Jack Banner and Miss Lewis.

Prizes for the afternoon went to Mrs. C. M. Breeding, high, Mrs. P. J. Hollman, second and consolation to Miss Lewis.

Sheer Frocks and Sheer Hats

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

shown is yellow au naturel, tuning in as it does with the yellow and brown which combines in the chiffon print of the frock.

Brown is a color featured through-

It is the fashion for ever so sheer frocks to company with hats as sheer as their own sheerness. Thus the summer mode is presenting a picture with an illusive and intangible beauty about it—a sort of will-o'-the-wisp effect which is most beguiling.

Many of the new hats are that transparent one is impelled to look a second time to see whether a brim is really a brim or merely a halo of something or other lovely framing the face to a point of enchantment.

Competition is keen between just such flattering openwork straw hats as the one topping the pretty chiffon frock in the picture, and the huge transparent hair capelines which are so entrancing, both because of their colors and their picturesque "lines."

The charming lacy straw here

THE MOUTH WASH

The greatest virtue of an antiseptic mouth wash is to leave a pleasant taste in the mouth, say officials of the food, drug, and insecticide administration, United States Department of Agriculture, following a campaign during which more than 1,000 supposed antiseptic preparations found in import and interstate trade were tested by government chemists and bacteriologists. Less than 100 bore labels to which no exception was taken by the department.

Two preparations actually contained living bacteria, and tests revealed that many others would not kill or prevent germ growth. Of the effective antiseptics, some were found to claim unwarranted curative effect for such diseases as influenza, bronchitis, stomach ulcers, dysentery, tuberculosis, and appendicitis.

Deserts, cakes and cookies which may be made, put into the ice chest and baked the next day or a few baked during a period of several days will give the family fresh, delightful food at a small cost of time.

Ice Box Cookies.—Boil two and two-thirds cupfuls of sugar, one-third cupful of maple sirup and one-half cupful of butter; cool, add one beaten egg, two teaspoonfuls of vanilla, four cupfuls of pastry flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder sifted several times with the flour to blend it, one teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of chopped nuts. Mix and make into rolls, lay on a cloth and place in the ice box. Cut and bake as any as are needed for the day. Remove them at once when baked or they will stick to the pan.

Devil's Food Cake.—This is another reliable recipe that will always turn out well: Melt six ounces of bitter chocolate, one cupful of brown sugar, one-half cupful of milk; melt in the top of a double boiler, adding the sugar and milk; cool. Sift two cupfuls of pastry flour, one teaspoonful of soda three times. Cream one-half cupful of butter or any sweet fat, add one cupful of brown sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Now add two eggs, unbeaten, one at a time—beat well, then add the melted chocolate mixture and beat well. Add the flour and three-fourths of a cupful of milk alternately, a small amount at a time, beating well. Add one teaspoonful of vanilla and bake in layers. This makes three nine-inch layers. Bake thirty minutes. An orange filling for this cake is especially well liked.

Custards are the common summer dessert; one may vary them with different flavors and garnishes. As they are one of the easiest of desserts to digest, they make especially good ones for the little people and the aged.

Cheese Custard.—Take one cupful of cottage cheese, mix with beaten egg yolks, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds of a cupful of sweet milk, one tablespoonful of melted butter, and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Cool slightly and cover with a meringue, out the summer mode. The fashion-minded are wearing hats brown in tone—hair or malines transparencies with dressy frocks or brown linenlike straws with informal and sports costumes. Accent is also placed on white kid shoes which are trimmed with brown.

Speaking of the sheerness of things for fabrics especially, sheer is the word. One of the outcomes of this flair for thin, transparent weaves is the revival of dotted swiss. Of the quaint swisses now in vogue, the most flattering compliment that can be paid them is to declare that they are as pretty as ever, and prettier. Organdie also is staging a successful "come-back"; likewise the all-together lovely batiste makes its reappearance in exquisite embroidered effects; cotton nets, too, and chiffons, of course. Frocks made very simply of monotone pastel chiffon is the latest "love" of the ingenue. The beruffled dresses (no trimming whatever except their ruffle fluffies) are flitting about in the summer picture wherever youth dines and dances and attends garden parties.

HELPS FOR HOUSEWIVES

When it is inconvenient to press silk dresses on the wrong side, tissue paper may be used between the garment and the iron.

Parents will be well repaid if they make meals pleasant social occasions which help knit the family together, instead of opportunities for family quarrels.

For long wear wash silk stockings in lukewarm soapsuds and rinsing water. Squeeze to remove soil; do not rub, wring, or apply soap directly to the fabric.

Cutting to Fit Wide Shoulders

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Very often in large-sized patterns and ready-made garments the width of the shoulders has been increased in the same proportion as the bust measure. Because the shoulders are a bony structure and the bust is a tissue structure, the shoulders do not necessarily increase in proportion to the bust. Therefore the garment is apt to be too long on the shoulder and the armhole not in its proper position. This long shoulder tends to give a broad effect to the figure. It is particularly unfortunate when a person has already rather broad shoulders, to cut a dress so that it adds to their apparent width, and makes the wearer of the garment look short and squat.

To correct the trouble, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, in the bulletin on "Fitting Dresses and Blouses," fold a small lengthwise dart in the front and back of the pattern, through the center of the shoulder, taking out the necessary amount. This allows plenty of fullness in the bust and gets rid of it on the shoulder. Be sure to keep the back shoulder from the neck to the armhole one-half inch longer than the front shoulder. Rip the shoulder seam and recut the armhole from the altered pattern. This preserves the original size of the armhole and is safer than trimming it out. If fullness is desired, make tucks or shirring in the front shoulder to take up the extra width.

Unattractive Appearance of Shoulders That Are Too Wide.

To alter a ready-made garment, make a small lengthwise dart or a group of tucks in the front shoulder and trim out the armhole in the back.

Asparagus Gives Good Flavor to Spaghetti

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many people seem to know only two ways of serving spaghetti—with cheese or with tomato sauce. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests the following mixture of spaghetti and asparagus. A relatively small amount of asparagus will give an excellent flavor, so this is a good dish for the asparagus season.

- | | |
|--|-------------------------------------|
| 1 1/2 cups spaghetti broken in small pieces | 1/2 lbs. melted butter or other fat |
| 1 pint canned or cooked asparagus and liquid | 1 cup rich milk |
| 2 tbs. flour | 3 or 4 drops tabasco sauce |
| | 1/2 cup salt |
| | 1/2 cup buttered bread crumbs |

Cook the spaghetti in salted boiling water for 20 minutes, and drain. Drain the liquid from the asparagus and cut the stalks in short pieces. Prepare a sauce of the flour, fat, milk, and asparagus water and add the tabasco and salt. In a greased baking dish put a layer of the cooked spaghetti, then one of asparagus, cover with the sauce and continue until all the ingredients are used. Cover the top with the buttered bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven for about twenty minutes, or until the crumbs are golden brown.

We Need Food Rich in Vitamin C

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Nutrition specialists urge constantly that the diet for all ages, but especially for children, should include an abundance of foods rich in vitamins. There are now recognized, however, at least six independent vitamins. As each has its own function to perform in growth and bodily well-being, it is necessary to know what each one does and what foods supply it. Otherwise a diet might supply some, but not all of the different vitamins.

For instance attention is often called to the necessity for vitamin C in the diet. Especially good sources of this vitamin are the citrus fruits, (oranges, grapefruit, and lemons), raw cabbage and turnips and tomatoes, peas, pineapples, potatoes, raspberries, spinach, sprouted legumes and string beans.

One reason for insistence on supplying plenty of these foods is that the body has only a limited capacity to store vitamin C. Replenishment must go on continually. Another reason is that this vitamin is very easily destroyed by heat and oxidation. If vegetables are cooked too long they may lose their vitamin C. All recent Various Fruits and Vegetables That Supply Vitamin C.

Instructions on vegetable cookery stress quick-cooked methods. Canning often destroys vitamin C. In the case of acid foods like tomatoes, destruction is not so extensive. Tomatoes seem to retain most of their vitamin content either cooked or canned.

On diets deficient but not entirely without vitamin C, children become irritable and lacking in stamina, do not grow normally, and are less resistant to infectious diseases. Shortage of vitamin C is thought to be an important factor in the prevalence of tooth decay and of much of the so-called rheumatism in children and adults. When vitamin C is entirely lacking, scurvy develops. This used to happen on long sea voyages before present knowledge of the preventive value of lemons and other portable foods containing vitamin C.

In testing foods for vitamin C in the laboratory, guinea pigs are fed a basal diet complete except for this vitamin, and then given measured amounts of the food in question. If the animal thrives and grows well, the food is probably a good source of vitamin C; if the animal develops symptoms of scurvy—sore, stiff joints, a tendency to hemorrhage, sore gums, loosening of the teeth, and fragile bones—the food under test probably is deficient in vitamin C. Similar symptoms are found in human beings, whose diet has lacked the foods that supply this important vitamin.

Story for the Children at Bedtime

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

As they went along in the plane Harry saw a winding procession of stars between the Great and Little Bear constellations.

Harry was having such a wonderful trip with Cosmo up in the sky. Cosmo knew all about the stars, and he had granted the wish Harry had made one evening, only a very little while before, when he had said that he wished he could see what it was like up in the sky.

He had longed to visit the stars and to know which one was which, and what they were like when you got closer to them.

Oh, it was wonderful having this trip. The more he traveled with Cosmo the better he enjoyed himself. He was seeing so much, he was hearing so many legends, he was listening to many fascinating old stories about the creatures he was meeting, and how they were regarded in former times.

He was wondering now about the winding procession of stars at which he was looking.

"That's called the Dragon," Cosmo announced.

Harry looked at the Dragon with great interest. "By the way, Cosmo," he asked after a moment, "how large is Polaris? I meant to ask him."

"Oh, about the size of your sun," Cosmo said.

The pilot had evidently been directed to travel around the Big Dipper, which was part of the Great Bear, as Cosmo had told Harry before.

"The Indians," Cosmo told him, "and the shepherds of the ancient days, too, called the constellation the Great Bear. Did you ever notice her circuit act?"

"Circuit act? I don't think so. I never saw any circuit acts up in the sky."

"Well, you look and you'll see. The Great Bear makes a circle around the Pole every twenty-four hours and in the spring she puts her paws in the air and gets upon her back."

"She says people may not think it is very fine for such a high-up object to behave in such a fashion but she says they must admit it's clever."

"I should say so," Harry agreed. "But that's not all. In the summer she stands, as it were, on her nose. You couldn't do that, could you?"

"No, and I've never seen any circus performer able to do it, and they do wonderful tricks."

"That's still not all that she can do. In the winter she balances on her tail. If you draw an outline of a bear around the stars of the Great Bear you will see that she has a very long tail."

"But bears haven't long tails," Harry remarked.

"That's true, but after all she has always felt that there was little use in being a bear in the sky if she couldn't be different from Earth animals."

"I suppose that's so."

"Then there is the story of how the Great Bear got up in the sky."

"Tell me that, won't you?"

"Indeed I'd like to tell that story. In the old days they said that Jupiter changed a beautiful young girl into a bear. He didn't want Juno, his wife, (who didn't like her) to do her any harm."

"Then he was afraid hunters might shoot the bear if he didn't put her out of harm's way—so he put her up in the sky."

"The Little Bear is supposed to be a near relative of the Great Bear."

"But now Orion is expecting you. We must not linger any more." (©, 1930, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE STORY

On a pleasure trip in eastern waters, Philip Amory, English World war veteran, now a trader on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a musical comedy actress, known as "Gin-Sling." Amory becomes interested in Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family. He tells her of his knowledge of a wonderful gold field on the island, though he does not disclose the name of the place. "Gin-Sling" tells him Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshaw Amory, however, is confident that the girl is not indifferent to him. His holiday ended, he arrives back at Daru. He meets an Englishman, Spicer, there on development business for a syndicate of which Fanshaw is head.

CHAPTER III—Continued

There are such things as warnings; and if ever I felt a warning, it was then. I felt (how shall I put it?) that this place was not good to be in.

There was a personality about it—every one has felt such things, though few care to say so—and it was distinctly hostile.

Of course, that did not stop me from exploring; I had to find out where we were. Further, I was wet through, without a change; it was a tropic night, but tropic nights, with high wind blowing, can be unpleasantly cool, and I shivered a bit, as I tramped the rough, blown grasses; I should have been glad of a house wherein I might take shelter, and find somebody's clothes to borrow. I rather thought the island was uninhabited. In the moonlight, I had seen traces of footsteps, or what looked like footsteps, in the grass! I had seen a pile of coconuts heaped up at the foot of a palm.

It would have been about twenty minutes after landing, when I was getting well warmed up with exercise, that I ran across the houses. They were two or three only, mere hovels thrown together of brushwood and palm.

They seemed to me to be semi-alive, crouching, as if afraid of my approach. It may have been this fancy that urged me to take care, walk delicately, as I neared them. Most were unlighted; from one, however, came a faint red gleam through plaited walls. Somebody, within, was waking, while the rest of the island slept.

The wind had risen, was still rising. It made an intolerable clamor. Masked by the noise, I walked right up to the house wall and peered through a chink.

I do not know what I expected to see; something astonishing, certainly—but whatever it may have been, it was less amazing than the reality.

I saw a white man like myself; a well-bred looking man, with a beard, brown eyes, and wavy brown hair. He was dressed in a most extraordinary rig—linen cloth and jumper, such as the natives use, but of a pattern never worn by any native of the Pacific world, yellow, with spots of black as big as dinner plates. Ugly, conspicuous in the last degree—and so coarse in texture that its folds were stiff as canvas.

"Ought to last a lifetime, that rig," I thought. "Bad sort of thing to go shooting or fishing in; anything alive would spot you a hundred yards off. Why in Tophet does he wear it?"

The question was no sooner asked than answered. He wasn't going to wear it—any longer than he could help. He had been busy packing a small bag, when I looked in; now, snapping the lock, he began pulling off his hideous shirt, and loosening the linen cloth. Hung up on a rafter beside him, I saw a European suit, crumpled and earth-stained; it looked almost as if it had been buried and dug up again.

The crack was narrow; I stretched forward to look through, and managed, somehow, to stagger against the flimsy but wall. It creaked and bent in as if it had been made of paper. The man must have seen it move; with his arm half out of his shirt, he made a snatch at a revolver that was lying beside the bag, and swung round, eyes glaring like a cat's when it sees prey, to face the spot where I was standing.

I did not stand long. Covered by the noise of the wind, I bolted as hard as I could go for a tussock of hibiscus bush, and dropped into it. By the time the man had got out of the hut, I was lying low, safe among the interlaced stems, and peering through. If I died for it, I was going to know what all this was about.

There were dozens of tussocks near the house; he must have seen the futility of trying to search them. He stood in the doorway, outlined by the smoky flame of his hurricane lamp, and staring wildly about. The spotted-leopard clothes were fastened again; they looked very odd, with the socks and boots he was wearing, and the hat he held in one hand. It was a handsome, well-bred hand, but the little finger, I noticed, had a defective and broken nail.

"Black," he called in a cautious voice that scarcely carried through the wind. "Black—was that you?" I thought he rather hoped it was Black; was arguing with himself that it couldn't have been anyone else.

A freakish humor seized me. I slipped out at the back of the tussock, and showed my head.

"Yes," I answered, aware that no man could identify another in that light, under trees, at fifty yards distance.

He Made a Snatch at a Revolver That Was Lying Beside the Bag.

"What the devil are you playing about, then?"

"Don't want to be seen," I answered truthfully.

This seemed to satisfy him, more or less. "Is the launch there?" he asked presently. I said it was.

"Go and get everything ready to start. I'll be down in two minutes."

This was awkward. I could not be sure of safety, once I left the shelter of the bushes. Black might be inches taller or shorter, pounds heavier or lighter, than I. I hesitated, uncertain what to do.

It seemed that the man in the hut could not endure delay. "What are you mulling and waiting about?" he demanded, with an oath. "If I'm caught, so are you, and it's five years on the breakwater."

"(So I'm supposed to be committing a crime. I wonder what?)" I thought. The freakish devil that had possession of me prompted me to reply—at a venture. "What about the money?"

This let loose a surprising flood of profanity. I judged that Mr. Black, whoever he was, had been exacting in his demands.

"Money?" (Fiery interval.) "Money? What do you want? Five hundred already, and another five when you land me in Valparaiso." ("Crums! Valparaiso—in a launch!" I thought. "Who has he been murdering?")

"—And all the cursed expenses into the bargain, and you want more!"

"No," I shouted across the wind. "No. I'm going off to the launch."

The conversation, I thought, was growing too exacting; not much longer should I be able to keep up my end of it—and then, there was that revolver, in the hands of what seemed to be a desperate man. A cloud was coming over the moon. I waited till it touched, then made a bolt. "Hurry up," I shouted, as I ran away, devoutly hoping that he would do nothing of the kind.

"This," I thought, "is clearly an island inhabited by criminals or madmen. Yet I haven't heard of any convict station nearer than New Caledonia. I give it up." I was almost back on the sea-beach by now; it occurred to me that I might as well shin up one of the palm trees, and see whether there was really anything in this talk of a launch.

The palm I had chosen was tall, but a little bent with age, I had not much difficulty in wriggling my way up into the crown. I waited for clear moonlight, and made my survey.

"Gosh!" I exclaimed. There was undoubtedly a launch, if one may so designate a fine thirty or forty ton boat, schooner rigged, and fitted with an engine; well able to make the run to Valparaiso, or anywhere else, in competent hands. She was lying some way out at sea, on the leeward side of the island, beyond the inner lagoon. I could see a dinghy, like a little black water beetle, creeping landwards from her side.

"That," I thought, "will be Black. I wonder what the two of them will make of it when they get together?" And the thought so intrigued me, that I felt to laughing, and nearly lost my hold.

But when I got down safe to ground again, I was more than sobered by the thought that came almost immediately—if what he said is true—if he has given a man called Black a thousand pounds, and expenses—Crums, what expenses they'll be!—to run him out of this, there must have been dirty work somewhere, and I'm mixed up in it. I could not help remembering, somewhat unpleasantly, the remark about "five years on the breakwater."

Omega, I must tell you—but I will tell no more than I must—belongs to a non-British power, which has a short way with offenders against its rather Draconic code of laws. I didn't know what you could be sent to the breakwater for, but I knew there was one, in an out-of-the-way Omega port, and I guessed that labor of the Portland Island kind, conducted under a tropical sun, was likely to be the kind of thing a wise man should avoid, at any cost.

I thought the matter out at length. I could arrive at only one conclusion. Whole knowledge was better than half. Whatever the risks might be of exploring yet further this odd, unpleasant place, it would be well for me to find out as much as possible, as soon as possible and (but that went without saying) get away as soon as possible afterwards.

Once more I climbed the palm; swung out among the clashing stems among the swaying butts of the leaves, and looked for the launch. She was off, a long way out to sea, I saw her gliding, black in the silver path of the moon.

"Good," I thought, and slid down again. A few minutes rapid walking found me once more among the little, sinister houses, with their horned gables and their air of being huddled together for some evil deed. The hut that had been lighted, was dark now. I lit a match, from the small reserve I always kept in a bottle, and looked in. No one was there. The place bore signs of hurried desertion—a stretcher bed overturned, with bedclothes flung on the ground; a cabin trunk gaping open, and gutted; piles of gray ash suggesting papers destroyed.

In the middle of the floor lay a linen cloth and a shirt of coarse cotton, bright yellow, with black spots as big as plates.

I stood in the doorway and looked, till my match burned out. I did not strike another. I walked away, and left the deserted hut to itself. And once more, mastering as a drug, and heavy as a dream, came over me that definite presage of ill.

In the little hollow there were fifteen other houses, all small and rudely built of bush material. I looked at them for a minute, swallowed in my throat—for something very like fear had me—and then, thinking no longer, but driving myself as one used to do "over the top," in the hour after dawn, I found a coconut stump for a torch, lit it, and carried it, flaring furiously in the diminished wind, to the first of the houses. The door was not shut. I held the torch above my head and looked in. I looked for quite a long time at what I saw, making sure that I understood it, and that my eyes had not in any way misled me. Then, dashing out the torch against the ground, I fled for the sea—the clean sea. It seemed to me that to be drowned in that clean sea would be a fate a man needn't quarrel with—a fate ten thousand times better than the horror I had left behind.

Caves Valuable, Apart From Scenic Splendor

The limestone caves at Walmote in New Zealand bring tourists from every part of the world to see the extraordinary beauties of the glow-worm cavern with its myriad stars of phosphorescent fire. The Mendip caves of Somersetshire and the Peak cave of Derbyshire, England, have thousands of visitors yearly, and so has the Mammoth cave of Kentucky. The Mammoth cave had quantities of saltpeter in it when were dug and carried away for making gunpowder. But many caves have a value apart from that of mere scenic splendor. In the bush country near Te Kuiti in Auckland a huge cavern in which is a wonderful deposit of alabaster, has been recently discovered. Another cave called the Carlsbad cav-

Fishing Superstitions

Some Scottish fishermen will not go to sea if a lame man crosses their path, and in the neighborhood of Aberdeen it is considered unlucky to meet a red-haired or flat-footed person. If Fifth of Forth fishermen meet a bare-footed woman with flat feet where they are going to sea they are sure of having bad luck on that day, and prefer to stay at home.

LIGHTS of NEW YORK

The Right Cure.

This story, in the writer's opinion, is worth repeating because it is amusing. However, I will not guarantee its accuracy. A well known New York doctor had a patient, who explained his symptoms to him, and the doctor recommended a long sea voyage. The patient beamed.

"That's fine," he said. "Won't be any trouble to me. I am the pursuer of the Leviathan."

Little Hideaway.

Over on East Fifty-seventh street one of the eligible bachelors has a little roof hideaway of three floors. One floor has been designed as a racquet club. On Park avenue is a roof establishment with a Japanese garden and little streamlets flowing under lacquered bridges. It is all very expensive, and no little silly.

Roof gardens, they tell me, are sad affairs. Earth is transported twenty or thirty stories, and flowers are planted. But they don't grow very well in the dirt and smoke, and the florist is a frequent caller.

Some of the roof homes are topsyturvy, with bedrooms on the lower floor, sitting room and library on the second, and music room on the third. Its too bad penthouses weren't in vogue a generation ago. Lightning rod salesmen would have had a picnic.

Strictly Business.

In one of the larger apartment-house development projects, where a whole community has been established, with stores, restaurants, etc., the operators will not install anything that does not bring in revenue. Thus, although the development is a miniature city, no post office exists, because there is no profit in it for the operators.

Misadventure.

A young woman who recently made a trip abroad found, in Germany, a certain brand of cigarette that, she avers, was perfectly terrible, but was put up in the handsomest box in the world. The cigarettes were cheap, so she bought a large supply of them, intending to use only the boxes at home. She had the cigarettes delivered to the steamer she intended taking—and then she changed her mind and decided to take another boat.

She knew, however, that the cigarettes would be brought to America on the first liner. She was anxious to get the boxes, so she set out to find them. It took several days and many taxicab rides to find them at the customs appraiser's warehouse. Then she had to pay some sort of fine. Then she got her treasured boxes—and each one had been defaced with a rubber stamp indicating that the duty had been paid.

Stop Thief.

It was raining the other morning, and a certain young housewife who lives in Westchester county thought it was high time to go into New York and retrieve the three umbrellas she had left at a department store to be repaired. She took the train in to Grand Central, and as she got up the pocket of her coat caught the handle of an umbrella belonging to the woman who had been sitting beside her. This woman created a scene, accusing the other of trying to steal her umbrella. It was straightened out, however, and the young housewife spent a day in town shopping. Late in the afternoon she boarded a homeward train, with her three repaired umbrellas. And who should walk down the aisle but her enemy of the morning, who took one look and then shouted so all in the car could hear:

"Well, I see you have made a good haul today!"

After the First
Twenty-five Thousand Miles

THE VALUE of sound design, good materials and careful craftsmanship is especially apparent in the new Ford after the first twenty-five thousand miles. Long, continuous service emphasizes its mechanical reliability and economy of operation and up-keep.

As you drive the Ford through many months and years you will develop an increasing pride in its appearance and a growing respect for the substantial worth that has been built into it. From every standpoint—in everything that goes to make a good automobile—you will know that you have made a far-seeing, satisfactory purchase.

Wherever you go, you hear enthusiastic praise of the car and this significant, oft-repeated phrase—"I'm glad I bought a Ford."

A FORD owner in New York tells of a 13,000-mile trip across the United States and back in sixty days and says "the car was extremely economical to operate, comfortable and speedy." A grateful father tells how the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield saved his wife and children from serious injury.

To test tires, a large company drove a new Ford day and night, for an average of 500 miles every twenty-four hours. It was still giving satisfactory service after 105,000 miles.

A Ford car that had fallen into Fernan Lake was submerged for twelve days before being raised. After a new battery and carburetor bowl were installed, it was driven back to Spokane under its own power.

Many police departments have written of the special advantages of the Ford in crowded traffic because of its alert speed, acceleration, and ease of control. An increasing number of fleet owners are also purchasing the Ford because their cost figures have given conclusive proof of its economy of operation and up-keep.

In addition to important triumphs in Germany, France and Italy, the Ford won six out of seven leading places in a contest in Finland, first and second in the Rafaela races in Argentina, first and second in the run from Copenhagen-to-Paris-to-Copenhagen, three gold medals in England, first ranking in the durability test over the tortuous Amancaes road in Peru, and first place in the 1930 reliability run conducted by the Royal Automobile Club of Sweden.

This contest was an exceptionally severe test of endurance and sturdy construction because it was held in the dead of winter and covered 600 miles of steady running over snow-covered country roads and mountainous hills.

Famous Father—Worthy Son

J. Hopkinson

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

RECENTLY there was unveiled on the wall of a modest brick house in Philadelphia a bronze tablet which tells the passer-by that "Hall Columbia" was composed here by Joseph Hopkinson on April 22, 1798. The unveiling was done by a little girl, Martha Hopkinson, who thus honored the memory of her great-great-grandfather, a man whose name is known to comparatively few Americans. Yet Francis Hopkinson and Joseph Hopkinson offer an example of "famous father-worth son" scarcely paralleled in all American history.

It is eminently fitting that their names should be recalled as Independence day approaches for they contributed materially to the foundation of our Republic and the establishment of the national tradition.

Francis Hopkinson was born in Philadelphia in 1737, the son of an Englishman who served several years as a judge of the admiralty and as a member of the provincial council. Hopkinson was the first scholar entered at the University of Pennsylvania (then the college of Philadelphia) and was graduated with its first class. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1761. After serving as secretary to a conference between the provincial authorities and the chiefs of several Indian nations, and as librarian and secretary of the Philadelphia library, he went to England in 1766 and became an intimate friend of Lord North, Benjamin West and John Penn.

Upon his return to this country he resumed his law practice, kept store of the while and became a member of societies which united in 1769 to become the famous American Philosophical society. In 1772 he was appointed inspector of the customs at New Castle but was removed because of his radical ideas. He next moved to Bordentown, N. J., and was a member of the provincial council of that year. In 1776 he was elected to the Continental congress from New Jersey and became one of America's intimates when he signed the Declaration of Independence.

Historians now seem to agree generally that the Betsy Ross legend of the origin of the flag can be accepted with reservations. She may have made the first flag, so far as the actual cutting and sewing of it was concerned, but she was not the "designer." The evidence as to who actually was at best incomplete, but such evidence as exists points strongly to Francis Hopkinson. It is known that he was greatly interested in the heraldic art, especially as it applied to seals, medals and coins. It is known that in 1777, he was chairman of the committee of the Continental congress, and that the famous "flag resolution" of June 14, 1777, establishing the design of the national flag, was presented to congress among the business of the marine committee.

But the strongest evidence is contained in the words of Hopkinson himself which are on record. On May 25, 1780, he wrote to the board of admiralty saying, "It is with great pleasure that I understand my last Device Seal for the Board of Admiralty met with your Honours, Approbation." This seal, which was adopted on April 4, 1780, had 13 red and white stripes. In a later letter he asked for compensation for his services, itemizing a list of designs that he presumed had prepared. Among these was the flag of the United States of America, and "a great seal for the United States of America, with a reverse."

But even though it may not be possible to establish his right to that distinction, he showed his versatility in other ways which entitle him to remembrance. As early as 1774 Hopkinson had won a name for himself publishing an allegory in which he recounted the wrongs of the colonies and this is said to have done much to fan the spirit of revolution all who read it. Throughout the revolution he continued to use his talents as a writer in a series of satires directed at the British, which were published in the newspapers of the day and attracted widespread attention.

F. Hopkinson

some of them even being attributed to Benjamin Franklin.

The most famous of all of Hopkinson's writings was "The Battle of the Kegs," based on an incident which took place during the British occupation of Philadelphia. A certain David Bushnell had invented a turtle-shaped, one-man submarine which he proposed to use in attacking British vessels in the Delaware river. Tests of this submarine, however, were not very successful, so the ingenious Bushnell next conceived the idea of loading a number of kegs with powder and putting them in the river to float down and explode against the ships when they touched them. Most of them blew up when they struck ice cakes in the river but one did actually destroy a British boat. This was enough, however, to throw the British into a panic and they began bombarding every floating object in the river, both the guns on the ships and soldiers on the wharves keeping up an incessant fire for hours.

When Hopkinson heard of this incident he was so amused that he wrote a poem called "The Battle of the Kegs." It immediately became the most popular soldier song of the war and Washington's soldiers sang it to a variation of the tune of "Yankee Doodle" during the remainder of the conflict. It reads as follows:

THE BATTLE OF THE KEGS

Gallants attend, and hear a friend
Till forth harmonious ditty—
Strange things I'll tell that late befell
In Philadelphia City.

'Twas early day, as poets say,
Just when the sun was rising,
A soldier stood on log of wood
And saw a sight surprising.

As in amazement he stood to gaze—
The truth can't be denied, sirs—
He spied a score of kegs or more
Come floating down the tide, sirs.

A sailor, too, in jerkin blue,
The strange appearance viewing,
First dammed his eyes in great surprise,
Then said, "Some mischief's brewing."

"The kegs now hold the rebel bold
Packed up like pickled herrings;
And they've come down to attack the town
In this new way of ferrying."

The soldier flew, the sailor, too,
And, scared, almost to death, sirs,
Wore out their shoes to spread the news,
And ran 'till out of breath, sirs.

Now up and down, throughout the town,
Most frantic scenes were acted;
All noise ran here and some ran there,
Like men almost distracted.

Some "fire" cried, which some denied,
But said the earth had quaked;
And girls and boys, with hideous noise,
Ran through the town half-naked.

Sir William, he, snug as a flea,
Lay all this time a-snoring,
Nor dreamed of harm, as he lay warm
In bed with Mrs. Loring.

Now, in a fright, he starts upright,
Awaked by such a clatter;
He rubs both eyes and boldly cries,
"For God's sake, what's the matter?"

"Why, sure," thought they, "the devil's to pay
'Mongst folks above the water."
The kegs, 'tis said, tho' strongly made
Of rebel staves and hoops, sirs,
Could not oppose the powerful foe,
The conquering British troops, sirs,
From morn to night these men of might
Displayed amazing courage,
And when the sun was fairly down
Returned to sup their porridge.

A hundred men with each a pen,
Or more—upon my word, sirs,
It is most true—would be too few
Their valor to record, sirs,
Such feats did they perform that day
Upon those wicked kegs, sirs,
That years to come, if they get home,
They'll make their boasts and brags, sirs.

In 1788 Hopkinson published a group of seven songs which he dedicated to "His Excellency, George Washington." Whether or not this had anything to do with his appointment as United States district judge in Pennsylvania is a matter for conjecture. At any rate in 1790 Washington named him for that position. He did not live long to enjoy the new honor, however, for he died of a stroke of apoplexy on May 9, 1791.

His son, Joseph Hopkinson, born in Philadelphia November 12, 1770, followed closely in his father's footsteps. Graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1790, he also studied law and began practice in Easton, Pa., in 1791. But he soon returned to Philadelphia and rapidly rose to a position of prominence at the bar. He was elected to congress in 1814 and at the close of his term moved to Bordentown where he remained until 1822. He then resumed the practice of law and in 1828 President John Quincy Adams appointed him judge of the eastern district of Pennsylvania, the same office held by his grandfather, Thomas Hopkinson, under the British crown. Hopkinson died in Philadelphia January 15, 1842.

In addition to his distinction as a jurist, Hopkinson was for many years president of the Philadelphia academy of fine arts, which he helped found, and vice president of the American Philosophical society which his father had helped establish. He was a writer of wide renown on legal, educational and ethical subjects but he is best remembered for the patriotic song which he wrote in 1788.

Conflicting stories are told as to the reason for Hopkinson writing "Hall Columbia." According to one version he wrote it in honor of President John Adams because of Adams' protest against the shameful attempt of the French government to exact bribes from American ministers sent to France to make a treaty which would smooth out the difficulties between that country and the United States. Another version is that it was written in order "to get up an American spirit which should be independent of and above the interests, passions and policy of both belligerents" in the threatened war between France and Great Britain.

Whatever the motive back of it, it seems pretty definitely established that Philadelphia theaters went to Hopkinson and tried with his help to put words to a piece of music called "The President's March," which was an arrangement of an old German folk song. Fox had been unable to find words that would adequately express the national feeling, but Hopkinson and his wife wrote such a song and Mrs. Hopkinson played it on the clavichord. Fox sang the song in the theater, advertising it as the "new federal song" and it gained instant popularity. It was not known as "Hall Columbia," however, until it was first sung in a New York theater some time later, but for the next 16 years, until Francis Scott Key's "Star Spangled Banner" swept the country, it was regarded as the only national song of the new republic.

Lesson for June 22 THE RISEN LORD AND THE GREAT COMMISSION

GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye therefore and teach all nations.
LESSON TEXT—Matthew 28:1-20.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Carrying on Jesus' Work.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Our Marching Orders.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Our Marching Orders.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Great Commission.

I. The Empty Sepulchre (vv. 1-7).
1. The earthquake (vv. 1-4). This occurred when the glorious angel descended from heaven to roll the stone away from the tomb. This work of the angel was not to allow Jesus to escape, but to show that the tomb was empty. Christ needed not even the help of the angel, for He came forth from the grave by His own power as the seal of His atoning work on the cross (Rom. 1:4). The open tomb and the angel sitting upon the stone with calm dignity, is a graphic picture of Christ's triumph over the devil, and the terror of the keepers is a sample of what all of Christ's enemies shall one day experience when He comes in glory to reign as King.

2. The angel's message to the women (vv. 5-7).
(1) Fear not (v. 5). While the enemies had occasion to fear, these women who loved the Lord received good news from the empty tomb. The empty tomb puts an end forever to all doubts and fears. Let every teacher endeavor to show the greatness of the fact that the tomb was empty, for it shows that we have a living Christ. The resurrection of Christ should be the major theme of those who give out the Christian message. (2) "Come, see" (v. 6). The angel told the women that the Lord had risen and invited them to see the place where He lay. The Lord made special effort to convince the disciples of the reality of His resurrection. He remained with them for forty days, giving them many "infallible proofs." (3) "Go quickly" (v. 7). Having seen for themselves, their responsibility was to go and tell the message. Experience is necessary before testimony. They were to go quickly to the disciples with the message, assured that the Lord would go before and meet them.

II. The Risen Lord Meets the Women (vv. 8-10).
The women quickly obeyed the command of the angel, and were running to bring word to the disciples. Jesus met them on the way. Those who have an experimental knowledge of Christ should go speedily to tell others of it. When they saw Jesus—that He was really the Lord—they worshiped Him.

III. Paying Money to Circulate a Lie (vv. 11-15).
That Jesus arose from the dead could not be denied even by the Sander. They saw only one way out of the difficulty; that was to bribe the keepers to tell a lie. They had paid money for His betrayal—now they paid more money to circulate a lie about His resurrection. This shows the wonderful power that money has over the lives and consciences of men. It not only induces people to lie, but it even muzzles the mouths of some teachers and preachers.

IV. The King's Great Commission (vv. 16-20).
1. The royal authority (v. 18). By virtue of His divine authority, He issued this command to the disciples. In order to prepare them for the reception of this command, He declared unto them that all power in heaven and earth had been given unto Him.

2. The commission itself (vv. 19, 20).
It consists of three parts. (1) Go teach all nations. This is the first and primary business of the disciple. This command has been issued to all disciples by the risen and mighty Lord. (2) Baptize them in the name of the triune God. Those who have become disciples of the Lord should receive the rite which signifies that relationship to Him. (3) Teach them to observe all of Christ's commandments (v. 20). Those who have become Christ's disciples should be taught conformity to His will.

3. The available power (v. 2). Those who obey Christ in carrying out this commission shall enjoy His abiding presence.
Prayer the Golden Key
Prayer is a golden key which should open the morning and lock up the evening.—Bishop Hopkins.
Making Short Cuts
There are plenty of cuts across corners that one can make in life, in education, in business, in politics, in religion. But there is really no short cut to any promised land.—Edgar Whittaker Work, D. D.
Should Have Jesus With Us
What lessons the sea teaches us. It is calm like life at times, then stormy, also like life, causing shipwrecks. If we sail life's sea, we should have Jesus with us in the ship.—Morris Martin.

Bees Resented Intrusion
When a truck ran away and hit one of the grand old cherry trees at Cherryville, Pa., the eight men aboard received more than a bump apiece. The collision, which demolished the tree, aroused a monster swarm of bees that made their home in the hollow trunk. Some of the men made surprising records as sprinters, but all were stung. Two Cherryville girls, taking a stroll, shrieked that men were about to attack them, only to find out that what was really doing when the bees came along.
