Goode Well May Reveal Oil Pool

The Goode well which is being drilled on the M. H. Goode Sr. ranch by the Mid-Kansas Oil Co., is a well that has been eagerly watched since its beginning by local people and outside oil interests as being a thorough test that might probably open up a large oil pool in that portion of Terrell County.

About two weeks ago a very strong flow of gas was encountered in this well at a depth around 5500 feet. Workmen and others were forbidden to light matches or smoke around the well, and it was thought that a few more feet of drilling would strike the oil bearing sands. When drilling was resumed some of the tools were lost in the well and several days have been spent in fishing for them. However the first of this week the tools were recovered and drilling has again been resumed. They are now drilling in blue shale with an occasional strata of lime and sand. This well is located in the northeast part of Terrell County.

Other drilling operations in this county show no particular change from the reports of several weeks ago.

Newsy Notes From The High School

The first semester came to a close last Friday afternoon as the 4 o'clock gong signified the end of the last examination. High school was moved during the week-end to the new High School building, and the conduction of classes was continued in the usual manner Monday morning.

The gymnasium was dedicated Friday night by a basketball game with Alpine. The dedication service for the main building is being planned for the 29th of this month.

A few changes have been made in the high school curriculum for this second semester. The 7th grade, having finished their geography, will now take up civics in the place of geography, and United States history will be added to the list of subjects offered for the 11th grade. All other courses are continued from the first term.

The Sanderson Parent-Teacher Association met in regular session Thursday afternoon, January 8, 1931. As a group assembled the orchestra played several numbers. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. H. C. Goldwire, president. The minutes of both the last regular meeting and the last executive board meeting were read by Mrs. Johnson, secretary, and approved by the organization. Reports were made from the treasury committee, the study committee, and the piano committee. It was decided that the school building would be open next Thursday night from 7 to 8 to all students and patrons who wished to come here for an hour of study followed by an hour of recreation and play. The subject of discussion for the patron's study hour will be the wise use of leisure time. Students may read, study, or secure the aid of any teacher in subjects which they may need assistance during this hour. The organization decided not to keep the Packard piano which was here on approval, and a motion was made that Mr. Brannan find out about a Stienway piano from Goggan Brothers of San Antonio. A resolution supporting the Cooper-Robison Bill, a bill now pending before Congress to provide Federal aid for the States for the purpose of establishing Health Units where possible and to supply local health nurses in other locations, was drawn up and accepted by and it was decided that a copy of this resolution should be sent to each of our senators and one to our representative.

There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

Eagles Win First Game, Lose Second

The new $35,000 gymnasium of the Sanderson Public Schools was dedicated on Friday and Saturday nights of last week with a two game series of basketball between the Sanderson Eagles and the Alpine Bucks. Although it was raining Friday night a big crowd gathered at the "gym" to witness the game and to cheer the Eagles on to victory. Band leader Sandifer was there with his boys to furnish the music, and right here we want to say that Mr. Sandifer deserves credit as he has organized a band that our citizens will be proud of before the end of the school term. The way they played was a surprise to the audience, and their music helped to make things more interesting for the players and the audience.

Friday night's game was an even break for some time, the Eagles would make a score and then the Bucks would come back with a score, and at one time the game was a tie, 6 and 6. During the last part of the game however the Eagles did some brilliant playing and when the game was over they had won by a score of 13 to 12.

Saturday night it was still raining but as on the previous night a large crowd was present to greet the players and again the school band was there to furnish music. The Eagles jumped into the game with a vim, determined to win again, and during the first part of the game the score was 4 to 1 in their favor. However, during the last part of the game they were penalized too much and the Bucks began to pile up scores and were soon a score in the lead. At this point the band struck up "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" in an effort to put new life into the Eagles. When the game was finished the score board read 12 to 8 in favor of the Bucks.

Alpine has a good team, husky and well trained, and it takes a good team to defeat them. Our boys should consider it an honor to get a 56-50 break with the Bucks during the two game series.

The girls' cheer squad, dressed in their becoming uniforms, were on hand and under the leadership of Opal Shelton did a great deal to pep the Eagles up and keep up their spirits when the game was going against them.

The line-up was as follows:

Sanderson:—Kircheville (Captain) f; Henry, c and g; Robey, g; Daniels, c; Lea, c; Schupbach, f; Milam, f; Rustin, g; Qualtrough, f.

Alpine:—Stack (Capt.) f; Cook, f; Langford, f; Moss, g; Weyertz, g; Deherns, f; Carroll, g.

The Commissioners' Court met Monday. All the commissioners and county judge were present. This was the first regular business meeting of the court since the two new members, Jim Mitchell and R. E. Fred were sworn in. After examining and paying bills that had been filed with the court and attending to routine business, the commissioners passed the following orders:

Giving the Central Power & Light Company an extension of 60 days in which to install machinery and equipment at Dryden.

Average Rainfall and Temperature

Clyde E. Griffith, local observer for the United States Government Weather Bureau, has given us the following figures on the rainfall for Terrell County: Total rainfall for the year 1930 was 9.75 inches, while in 1929 the total was 11.01 inches. Mr. Griffith's records do not extend back farther than 1929 but he has also given us figures reported to him by R. N. Allen, who has a standard rain gauge on his ranch north of Sanderson. Mr. Allen's records show the amount of rainfall at his ranch in 1930 to have been 11.95 inches, and the yearly average for the past seven years to be 13.35. Mr. Allen states that the driest year during this time was 1924, when the precipitation was only 8.50 inches. Mr. Griffith also records the daily temperatures for the Weather Bureau. The hottest days of 1930 were August 14, 23 and 24 and September 10 and 11 when the thermometer reached a maximum temperature of 102 degrees. The coldest day was on January 18, the mercury registering nine degrees above zero. The coldest weather recorded so far this winter has been 20 degrees above zero.

Game Tonight and Tomorrow Night

Coach G. C. Knight received a telegram Wednesday noon from Del Rio, stating that the basketball team from that city would come here to play the Eagles tonight (Friday) and Saturday night.

This will give our citizens an opportunity to witness two of the best games of the season. The Del Rio team is a strong one and have a record of victories. Coach Knight has the Eagles well trained for this battle and each member on the team says he is going to do his utmost to win from the Del Rio boys.

Come out and see the game tonight at the new "gym." The school band will be there to furnish enlivening music; Opal Shelton's husky cheer squad will be there to help "pep" up the game, and you'll enjoy the evening. Game starts at 8 p. m.

Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I didn't hear what you heard," said Netty. "as I was busy swinging by my tall and didn't pay much attention to the people outside of my zoo room." Netty and Elsie were both monkeys. "Well," said Elsie. "I was sitting on my perch, and so I heard what was being said."

"But let me tell you, the keeper told them some things."

"What did the keeper tell them? What did the people say?" asked Netty.

"Listen, and I will tell you," said Elsie.

So Elsie and Netty sat on the same perch and Elsie put her arm around Netty and said:

"Keep calm when you hear it, for the keeper set the people right."

"Good," said Netty. "The keeper is always doing things for us."

"He is splendid."

"He most certainly is," said Elsie, "and he says that only people who care about animals and who love them when they're well, or sick, or naughty, and who understand them, should be the ones who are allowed to take care of them."

"That's right," said Netty. "Just suppose we had any other keeper but the one we have."

"Wouldn't it be too dreadful?"

"My dear Netty, don't even say such a thing. The very thought sends shiv-

"What do you mean by that?" asked Netty. "I know the keeper is perfect. But tell me just what those words mean."

"Well," said Elsie, "there are some people who will say:

"I love little children. They are so dear and sweet." And then if a little child gets dirty or does something wrong (which we're all very apt to do once in a while) or if the child is tired and not feeling well, some of these people don't act as though they did love little children at all.

"There are others, too, who will say they love animals and yet will leave their pets alone for hours and hours and hours, with nothing at all to do and no place to play in."

"But the keeper is different. He says he loves people, and he does."

"Now I know what you mean," said Netty. "And I agree with you. There is no make-believe about our keeper."

"He attends to us and plays with us."

And then the one monkey, sitting with her arm around the other, told how the keeper had said to the people that the monkeys were so good, so clean, so intelligent and that they were just as lively as they could be, and if one monkey did something naughty it no more meant that all monkeys were cross than if one person should do something mean.

"Oh," said Elsie, "we have a keeper who means what he says and who lives up to it."

"Listen and I Will Tell You."

ers from the top of my head to the tip of my tail."

"It makes me feel the same way," said Netty. "I was sorry the moment I had spoken that thought of mine."

"Oh," said Elsie, "we have a keeper who means what he says and who lives up to it."

CORN FRITTERS ARE RICH, SUBSTANTIAL

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When the lunch or supper supplies seem a trifle less hearty than usual, it is a good time to have fritters, which are rich and substantial—in fact, too substantial to have in addition to other foods on a heavy dinner menu. With cold meat at any meal, they are tasty and appetizing. Fritters may be made of many materials, but are extra good when the basis is canned corn. The recipe below is from the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

1 1/2 cups sifted soft-wheat flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1 cup drained canned corn
1 cup liquid, either juice from the juice of the canned corn or milk, or the two mixed
1 egg
1 tbs. melted fat

Mix the flour, baking powder, and salt. Mix the juice from the canned corn or milk, or whatever liquid is used, the egg after it has been beaten slightly, and the canned corn. Stir this liquid mixture gradually into the dry ingredients. Add the melted fat. If the corn is very moist, even after the liquid has been drained from it, more flour may be needed. Dried corn which has been soaked and cooked until tender may also be used.

Fry the corn fritters in deep fat or, if preferred, in a skillet in shallow fat. In either case drop the mixture by spoonfuls into the fat and fry rather slowly. The fritters need time to cook through to the center before the outside becomes too brown. Drain the fritters on absorbent paper and serve hot.

Hints About Things Good to Eat

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Those persons and things, then, that inspire us to do our best, that make us live at our best, when we are in their presence, that call forth from us our latent and unsuspected personality, that nourish and support that personality—these are our friends.—Randolph S. Bourne.

In many homes fresh cookies are so much more enjoyed than a large amount baked at one time. Here is the ice-box cookie which may be kept many days and when a tin of fresh cookies is wanted, slice off a few, put them in the oven and bake them as brown as you like.

Ice Box Cookies.—Take one cupful each of butter, brown and granulated sugar, two eggs, one teaspoonful each of salt and soda, one cupful of nutmeats, one teaspoonful each of almond and vanilla extract and four and one-fourth cupfuls of flour. Cream the butter, add the sugar, eggs and other ingredients. Roll into two rolls and let stand on a cloth in a pan placed in the ice box. The cloth keeps the dough from flattening and sticking to the pan and thus losing its round shape. Slice very thin, decorate with half a nut meat, a raisin or cherry as one's taste suggests.

Another food so much liked in all our homes is fresh rolls. It takes time to prepare a light and crisp roll. Here is a recipe which will keep for a week or longer in the ice chest and a pan of biscuits may be baked any time one cares to serve them:

Ice Box Rolls.—Dissolve two compressed yeast cakes in one-fourth of a cupful of warm water, adding two teaspoonfuls of sugar. Add two tablespoonfuls of shortening, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of sugar to a pint of boiling water. Beat two eggs and mix all together with four cupfuls of flour. Beat well, then add three and one-half cupfuls more of flour, mix well with a spoon but do not knead. Set away in the refrigerator until the next day at noon, when it will be ready to use. Handle the rolls quickly, brush with melted lard or sweet fat when they are placed in the pan. Let stand until more than double their bulk; keep covered while rising in a warm place.

With these two mixtures in the ice box, one may be ready for the unexpected and need not worry.

Coffee Cake Most Excellent.—Dissolve one yeast cake in half a cupful of warm water, adding one teaspoon-

Forcemeat Makes a Good Stuffing

Stuffing a Breast of Lamb With Forcemeat.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Did you ever fry roast breast of lamb, stuffed with "forcemeat"? Forcemeat is a chef's name for a well-seasoned mixture of chopped meat, bread crumbs, and vegetables, used for stuffings of various kinds. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for preparing this cut so that all the delicious flavor of roast lamb is retained and the meat is tender. The breast is one of the least expensive cuts of lamb.

Select a breast of lamb, including the fore Shank, which will be used to make the forcemeat stuffing. Have the butcher crack the bones of the breast so that it can be served between the ribs. Wipe the meat with a damp cloth. Remove the fore Shank, and trim off the meat and grind it. Make a pocket in the breast by cutting through the flesh close to the ribs. Sprinkle the inside of the pocket with salt and pepper, pile in lightly the hot forcemeat, made according to the directions below, and sew the edges together. Rub the outside with salt, pepper and flour. Lay the stuffed breast, ribs down, on a rack in an open roasting pan. Do not add water. Place the roast in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) and sear for thirty minutes. If there is not sufficient fat to keep the meat from drying out, baste with melted fat, or lay a strip or two of bacon on top. After searing, reduce the oven temperature rapidly to 300 degrees Fahrenheit and continue the cooking in the open pan until the meat is tender. The total time required will probably be one and one-half to one and three-fourths hours. If there is more stuffing than the breast will hold, bake it in a separate dish or use it as stuffing for onions to serve with the meat. Serve with brown gravy made from the drippings.

For the baked onions, choose a large, mild-flavored variety. Cut the onion in half crosswise and simmer in lightly salted water until about half done. Lift the onions out and arrange on a baking dish. Remove the centers without disturbing the outer layers. Chop the onion centers and add to the forcemeat stuffing. Fill the onion shells with this mixture, cover, and bake in a moderate oven for about one-half hour, or until the onions are tender. Remove the cover from the baking dish during the last of the cooking so that the onions will brown well on top.

Forcemeat Stuffing.

Ground lean meat 1 spring parsley
1 from the fore-shank
2 cups fine dry bread crumbs
1 tbs. butter
1/4 cup chopped celery
1 tbs. chopped onion
1/4 tsp. cut fine
1/4 tsp. celery seed
1/4 tsp. savory
1/4 tsp. seasoning
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper

Melt the butter in a skillet, add the celery and onion, and cook for two or three minutes. Add the ground meat and stir until the juice evaporates and the meat browns slightly. Then add the bread crumbs and seasoning and stir until well mixed.

POOR POSTURE CAN BE REMEDIED

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Poor posture in childhood often becomes so confirmed in people that the bones and muscles assume faulty positions permanently, to the great disadvantage of the person concerned. Bad posture crowds heart and lungs, makes the stomach and intestines sag, and causes muscle strain. It also fosters shallow breathing, poor circulation, bad digestion, sluggish bowel action. If taken in time, poor posture can often be remedied. Sometimes it is a result of unnoticed early rickets. In the case of the child shown in the accompanying picture, by the United States Department of Agriculture,

Slight Early Rickets Caused Muscles and Ligaments to Relax.

This picture was made in connection with extension work in better posture and good health among children. It brings out the special defects that are increased by continued poor posture.

This five-and-a-half-year-old child had slight early rickets, which caused her muscles and ligaments to relax. She has a distinct hollow or groove across her chest, flaring ribs, knocked knees and lowered arches, all indications of rickets in early childhood. The remedy in this case was to give the child exercise that would tend to improve her habits of standing and sitting, so as to correct as many of these defects as possible. Also great care was given to her diet, to include in it as many of the protective and growth promoting foods as possible.

Rice Is Served With Curried Dishes

A curry of vegetables is an East Indian idea. Rice is always served with curried dishes in the east. It is cooked separately, so that it is dry and flaky, and placed in a ring around the other ingredients of the curry, with the sauce poured over them so that the flavor is well distributed. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture says this vegetable curry is very easy to make and quite delicious on a cold winter night.

1/4 cup rice
1 cup diced onion
1 cup diced carrots
1 cup diced celery
1 cup fresh or 2 tps. Worcester-canned peas
4 tbs. butter or other fat
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. curry
2 tps. Worcestershire sauce

Wash the rice and cook in two quarts of boiling salted water. Drain in a colander, pour cold water through, and let stand over steam until the grains swell and become separate. Cook the vegetables in a small quantity of water and just before removing from the stove add the canned peas, or if fresh peas are available, cook them with the other vegetables. Use the liquid from the vegetables and add the fat, salt, curry and sauce. On a hot platter make a ring of the cooked rice, pile the vegetables in the center, pour over them the liquid.

Jackets Last Word in Economy

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

One of the most popular movements in the realm of costume design at the present moment is the jacket-plus frock. These little removable jackets are the last word in economy and as to chic, they are all that and then some.

Not only do these cunning separate modes, designers are working the idea for all it is worth.

The model pictured has been aptly called a "double-date" dress for reasons which are obvious. As it stands in the illustration it is ready to go stepping to most any afternoon affair from backgammon party to luncheon here or there amidst smart environment. Comes "after six" with its round of more formal dine, dance and theater parties to which this costume of lovely wine-red bemberg chiffon crepe tunes in at a moment's notice, simply by removing the jacket, thus rendering the gown sleeveless.

Note the graceful girdle. It is made of shaded sheer velvet. In adjusting the jacket one may or may not draw this colorful sash through slots at the side seams. The advantage in doing so is that the jacket will not "fly open" to the annoyance of its wearer. Then, too, it gives a very charming effect to tie the jacket down across the front just as it is shown in the picture.

The merit of sheer crepe such as this bemberg type is becoming more and more apparent. There is everything to recommend it, from the fact of it being durable and practical at the same time that it is flattering as well as being sufficiently dressy for festive occasion. With good reason style creators are continuing to exploit sheer frocks in solid colors such as the model illustrated.

Quite a few of the midseason dresses of chiffon or sheer crepe are topped with either lace, beaded or self-material yokes, the latter usually in pale pink or a delectable pastel tint or pure white.

Speaking of the separate jacket, an interesting outcome of the mode is the solid-colored chiffron frock with a bolero or novelty-cut jacket of lace in matching color. A sleeveless sheer gown, if it does not have a jacket of self material, is almost sure to be complemented with a bolero or eton of all-over lace. In Paris they are bending these lace jackets and they are very effective.

Beggars Can Choose

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. Ernestine's sister, Lillian, knowing their father would disapprove, urges her to end the affair, but Ernestine refuses. They make a runaway marriage. Briceland is furious, but helpless, as Ernestine is of age. Loring Hamilton, lawyer, wins Lillian's consent to be his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in a single room in a humble neighborhood. John Poole, Will's best friend, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's resort. Pastano irritates Ernestine by criticizing Will for bringing her to such a place. Conscious of approaching motherhood, Ernestine opens a savings account. Will's father dies suddenly. Lillian and Ernestine are married. Will's mother dies immediately after the birth of Ernestine's baby.

"What has friendship got to do with business?" Loring asked, and his own face flushed with resentment. "I tell you I've got to make new contacts if we're to bring a different kind of clientele into the office. Besides, I don't disapprove of Will knowing him. It was only his taking you to that dive. Do you think I would mix Lillian up with that crowd?"

"I can't see any grand difference," retorted Ernestine. "Lillian isn't a baby. She's your wife, anyhow. Besides, the Pastanos are all right—all of them. I know them well, and the two girls are as fine as any I have met. There's not a month passes that we don't visit them, or they don't call. Mr. Pastano admires Will. He once hurt my feelings, and he's been making it up ever since. We've been friends without asking about his political activities or how he makes his money."

"It's all very well for you to take an attitude with me," declared Loring, "but I've come home with the determination to make money—and a lot of it. Chicago is rich. I may as well take some of it as others. And if an acquaintance with a powerful man like Pastano falls to my luck, I'll pursue it. Will would want me to."

"Will would," admitted Ernestine, but her looks were cold. "You've changed, Loring. You used not be so ambitious."

"I've acquired a new sense of values," he admitted. "Of course I'm not saying at all that a man should stick at nothing to make money. That's a mistake, and no good anyhow. But I've been around—I saw one thing everywhere. It is the passion for the possession of money—as much as a man can lay hands on."

"Don't be silly, Loring," said his wife mildly. "Look how happy Ernestine is, and she's as broke as broke." "I am happy," declared Ernestine. "Yes," admitted Loring, "but that is because your capacity for happiness is great. Your pleasure in your marriage and your child wouldn't be spoiled at all by more comforts."

"I don't want anything changed." "Not now—not at this moment. But if you'll be honest with yourself, you'll find that one reason for your contentment is your great expectations for the future. You feel that your condition is only temporary. Come now, Ernestine—isn't that so? You are confident that there will be money for you and Will when Peter grows older, and Will's work develops into more importance. Being poor can be a game if it's only an interlude. But if you had to look forward to nothing else—"

The truth of his logic hurt Ernestine unbearably.

"I don't care whether Will ever makes money or not," she declared passionately, almost in tears.

"You think you don't," said Loring inexorably. "But Will wouldn't say that. Every man wants money—every woman wants her man to have it. It's a symbol of power. If Will doesn't get it he'll feel that he's failed your confidence in him."

Ernestine found herself trembling. Lillian picked the baby up and dandled him and spoke quietly to Loring. "You are disturbing Ernestine and it isn't a bit nice of you. All this shouting makes me wonder if you doubt your own ability."

She took the baby and put him in his mother's arms.

Loring apologized.

"It's a bad habit I have—arranging my own thought—in an argument. It doesn't mean a thing—sophistry pure and simple. I know you are sincere, Ernestine. Don't pay any attention to me."

The talk fell into safer lines, but Ernestine was no longer happy. Loring got out his car, and, with Lillian and Ernestine in the back seat as they had left her in Erie street, disrupted, unhappy and at odds with Will.

She was awake when Will came in, and she fixed a light supper for him, and told him all that Loring had said, with some small editing.

"He's a capable lawyer, I suppose," Will said. "And if Ruby wants to give him work to do, and Loring wants to do it, what's the difference? He's not the only lawyer that would like to get his fingers into Pastano's pie. But anyhow, I've got something to tell you. Underwood's going to New York, and Tucker's to be head of the art room."

Ernestine felt a cruel shock of disappointment. She knew Will had expected this—had hoped for the job himself.

"But Tucker's so young," she protested.

"It isn't that—he's capable. I'm glad he got it," said Will.

Ernestine thought of what this job might have meant. The pay was nearly double. They could have rented this house and, with the rent and the increase, moved into an apartment in Ravenswood.

"Oh," she cried to Will, agast at her own mental processes. "It's so hard not to consider money. Not to want it! Not to care! I don't want to be greedy and grabby. I don't want to crave success. But I am—I do. Isn't it horrible?"

He looked at her with some humor. "You aren't greedy and grabby, sweetheart. And as for success, there's a legitimate way to want that—not for the money but for the work. I don't think this has any effect on my future. It's really an executive position, and I'm a solitary worker. I'd be no good at bossing. It's an editorial job, and Tommy has an editorial slant on things. He's fitted for it."

A few days later he came home with a shining face.

"I'm to be Poole's assistant," he said. "Do you realize what this means to me? It's worth ten thousand in cash—to work under him. If a person went to him and offered a hundred dollars a lesson, he wouldn't teach him to draw, but would curse him out of the office. And he'll teach me, and I'll be paid for it. It means no more night work. Ten till six. I do detail in the art room until Mr. Poole comes in and then I work for him all afternoon. He does a copy for a New York syndicate every day, and there's always work to plan ahead and sketches to lay out. He's been boozing a lot lately, and I think McDermott feels that if he has somebody to help him he'll keep ahead and not run so close to publication. Wiston didn't want to send me in there—but Poole insisted on me." He sighed with happiness and added, as an afterthought, "It means another five-dollar raise—maybe more later."

He was so thrilled and excited that Ernestine commanded her heart to yield its disappointment over Tommy's job. But she could not see any real future for Will in losing himself in the great man's shadow.

"I don't want mamma to know," Ernestine said. "I'm afraid she won't go to Europe. Besides, you know what a fuss there'll be."

"Then don't tell her," said Will in his simplicity. "It isn't really any one else's business, is it?"

Ernestine sighed. "You don't know how they'll take it. Of course it's their business—they'll have enough to say. And I feel embarrassed with mamma. She'll wonder why I didn't tell her."

Will kissed her cheerfully and went away to his beloved job. He was radiantly happy and his happiness seemed to affect her inversely. Every day was an adventure to him.

"Tommy gives me plenty to do," he admitted one evening. "Tommy's a good boss. He keeps us all bumping, and gives every fellow the kind of job he can do best. But it's the work for Mr. Poole that makes up for any chores. Ernestine, I tell you he is a great man. He comes in there—sometimes he doesn't know whether he's eaten or not, but as soon as he gets in that little office, which fits around him like a glove about a hand, he begins to function—the way his mind works is always a surprise. What's the matter, honey?—you're not eating."

Ernestine leaned on her hand and her eyes filled with tears.

"I hate to have mamma go away now," she said.

Will's methods were infantile. "Then tell her. You know she'll stay in a minute."

"Go on talking about the office, please—so I can think."

Will laughed. He took a half-dollar from his pocket and spun it on the kitchen tablecloth.

"I won me fifty cents, shooting craps at the office," he said. "We can go to the movies."

Ernestine plucked the fifty-cent piece from his fingers, and he made a pretense at regaining it.

Takes Much Water to Supply World's Cities

Have you any idea how much water the average city dweller uses daily? Take London, with its gigantic population. Here the authorities have to supply an area of 558 square miles, and give the 7,000,000 people the water they need. Would you have imagined that each of these demands no less than 36 gallons every day? Yes, that is only the average supply per head per day. In the dry, hot weather the amount required for each person becomes 40 gallons, or more than a barrel of water per day for each man, woman, and child. London is not the thirstiest town. Scotland consumes more water than England. In Glasgow and Edinburgh, for instance, the average consumption per head is not 36, but 37 gallons; and to Helensburgh, in Dumbartonshire, belongs the distinction of being the most thirsty town in the whole of the British Isles. Here they take 81.7 gallons per head. One reason given for Scotland's large consumption is that the water supply is much better than in England.

"Now my thinking process is entirely disrupted," she told him. "I thought Mr. Wiston was going to fire the next person he caught shooting craps in office hours."

"I don't believe he'll do it," said Will comfortably, and Ernestine did not believe it either. The men were always matching pennies or rolling dice or making up pools.

Will pushed back his chair, came around and cupped Ernestine's face in his hands, kissed her cheeks and lips and pressed her eyelashes down hard with his caresses.

"Don't be blue, honey—don't worry," he bade her cheerfully. "You're the prettiest, sweetest woman in the world. It's natural for us to have a family. You're not going to be unhappy about the new baby, are you, Ernestine? It's the way of love."

"I know," she said. She drew him down and kissed him. But her face was strangely sad. "Nothing can make me unhappy, Will, as long as we love each other. I get hurt because we go for weeks without seeing my family—I seem to be drifting away from them. Mamma and Lillian are always so busy, and papa is in New York. And I get proud and avoid them on my part. But as long as we have our love for each other—this oneness—it's the best thing in life—what can we lack?"

He picked her up, sat down in his mother's little rocker, cradled her, sang silly songs in her ear and teased her. But after a little while he was talking about the office again, and she was resting against him, entirely inattentive, her thought on her own affairs.

CHAPTER VIII

Will and Loring

Loring succeeded in securing for Ruby Pastano the deed and title to the old LeQuinne place in the restricted colony at Langley lake. Ernestine was filled with indignation that he should do such a thing.

"Mamma won't like it at all," she told Lillian. "LeQuinne's land runs right down to ours with nothing but Stone creek between the two places. You know how it will be with the Greeks there. The house will simply be bursting with visitors all summer. They will have speed boats, and there will be children in the water from morning till night."

"But I thought you liked them," protested Lillian. "You are friends of theirs. Mrs. Pastano is so happy about it, I thought you would be delighted, and so did Lorie. In fact he counted on your help in calming mamma if she objected."

Ernestine shook her head.

"He can do his own calming. It's plain to me that Loring's ideas differ from ours. Will and Ruby Pastano are real friends, yet Will would never have thought of selling that place to Ruby. He fits into his own place in Chicago, but he won't fit in there. The people—the Hendersons and the Mayces and the O'Tooles won't be kind to them. They'll not belong to the country club, nor be in the tournaments. I suppose it's not my place to worry about it, only I am thinking of mamma."

"Mamma won't go there after this summer, or next. Didn't you know, darling, that this stone-merger thing is going to make papa rich? You know, papa owns altogether nearly seven quarries in Indiana where some of the best limestone is cut, and then he has proxies for the Langley quarries. For the last year he and Lorie have been buying options and small interests in other quarries. Now they have made a merger. The quarries are worth at their present rating five or six million dollars altogether, but the merger will be worth twenty-five million. Don't you see what it means?"

Ernestine stared at her. "Papa—worth millions?"

Lillian nodded with complacent pride. "Yes, and Loring is getting some of the stock. He is to be counsel for the merger, and he has a holding. You don't need to worry about mamma at Langley lake. I'm going down to open Lake Haven next week. Can't you come with me, instead of waiting for Will's vacation?"

"I don't like to leave Will alone in Chicago, in the heat—" said Ernestine.

"But I am leaving Loring. Are you well, Ernestine?"

"My feet bother me," Ernestine admitted. "I asked Doctor Grey about it, but he didn't say much. He's put me on a diet. I'll be all right."

"I think you ought to stay at Langley lake all summer."

Blasting Lowers Producing Costs

Specialist Tells How to Remove Stumps and Boulders on Farm.

Lowering the cost of crop production by blasting stumps and boulders out of tilled fields to reduce the time required for plowing, cultivating, and harvesting, is a safe and inexpensive practice when certain rules are followed, says Virgil Overholt, extension specialist in agricultural engineering at the Ohio State university.

If dynamite is handled with the ordinary recommended precautions, blasting is as safe as other farm tasks, he believes.

Care of Cap.

Crimp all caps with cap crimpers rather than with a pair of pliers, Overholt recommends. Pliers are likely to crush the cap, thus cutting off the powder train inside the fuse and oftentimes, as a result, the charge is either delayed or does not go off at all. The use of cap crimpers is the blaster's best form of life insurance and aid in preventing accidents.

Most accidents in blasting operations are due to investigating why charges have failed to go off. It is best not to investigate a delayed charge until a day later. Fuses, he feels, should be at least a foot and a half long; this length allows the operator about a minute and a half to leave the stump or boulder. Where a blasting machine or battery is used, it is safest to use wires at least 200 feet long.

Always face the charge so that pieces of stone or wood may be dodged if necessary, and never smoke while handling dynamite, he advises. Fuse caps should be kept out of reach of children.

Bursting Boulders.

In bursting boulders, he suggests that the mud capping method be used. This consists in placing sticks of dynamite on the stone and putting about six inches of wet, sticky mud over them. Stump blasting is usually done by placing the charge directly under the stump, or, where there is a taproot, in boring a hole for the charge in the center of the root. However, if the wood is hard, the charge may be placed close to one side of the root. The charge may be tapped with safety after a few inches of earth have been placed next to the dynamite and mud placed in the hole.

Legislation to Improve Quality of Dairy Milk

Ontario has recently introduced legislation to improve the quality of milk offered for sale in that province. "All milk received at a milk and cream distributing plant which is sold or distributed in liquid form for human consumption shall be purchased on a uniform standard of 3.4 per cent butterfat. For milk testing from 3.4 to 4.5 per cent fat, the purchaser shall add 4 cents per 100 pounds of milk for each one-tenth of 1 per cent fat above the standard, and for milk testing below 3.4 per cent fat the purchaser shall deduct 4 cents per 100 pounds of milk for each one-tenth of 1 per cent below the standard."

Asparagus Seed Will Germinate Very Slowly

Asparagus seed germinates very slowly. It is usually two to six weeks from time of planting until the plants appear above ground. As a result it is often difficult to control weeds. For this reason and also because there is quite a variation in the young crowns it is advisable to sow the seed in a small plot and transplant the crowns when one year old into the permanent location. The seed bed should be worked early in the spring to germinate as many weed seeds as possible. These will be killed in the final preparation of the plot for seeding. Asparagus germinates very slowly at 68 degrees.

Extra Fertilization for Garden May Help

If the garden has not been doing well, some extra fertilization may encourage the plants, says the United States Department of Agriculture. A top dressing with a complete mixed fertilizer, at the rate of 2 pounds per 100 square feet, may be applied. A mixture containing 5 per cent nitrogen, 10 per cent phosphoric acid, and 6 per cent potash, is suitable. Bone meal can be used at the same rate, but is slower in its action. If the plants have a poor color they may need nitrogen. This can be supplied by nitrate of soda or ammonium sulphate at the rate of one-fourth pound to 100 square feet.

Pocket Gopher Control in Northwest States

At least 50 per cent more grazing than two years ago is reported by a sheepman whose grazing allotment in certain portions of the Cascade and Umpqua National forests, in Oregon, where pocket-gopher control was undertaken two years ago and the areas retreated last year under the direction of the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. Many sections indicated practically 100 per cent success. In some areas that were beginning to erode badly two years ago, grasses and other vegetation are now rapidly regaining a foothold.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES

A dozen arrests of motorists by State highway department authorities on charges of driving automobiles not equipped with rear-vision mirrors were reported here Tuesday.
Ten of the offenders are reported to have entered pleas of guilty when arraigned before Justice of the Peace Charles Miller. They received the minimum fine of $1 and costs, it was announced at the county courthouse. Their names were not disclosed. Two of those arrested entered pleas of not guilty and were to have their hearing in justice court at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.
Judge Miller pointed out that the Texas law requires that all automobiles be equipped with rear-vision mirrors enabling the driver to see machines approaching from the rear, and that violators of this law are subject to a fine not exceeding $200.
A war against violators of the highway vehicle laws is being waged by highway patrolmen and motorists and car owners are cautioned to see that their cars are fully equipped with all articles required by the State.—Del Rio Evening News.

When the automobile manufacturers of America had produced enough cars so that there was one to nearly every family that could buy a car, they did not stop making cars or advertising them. Rather they got together and said, "Now we will proceed to sell each family another car."
They might have saved their money and said, "Everybody knows our car and all about it, why advertise?" But they didn't. They advertised all the more.
Oftentimes a merchant thinks, "Why should I advertise? Everyone here knows me. I get their trade."
If this sort of policy had prevailed with the manufacturers of automobiles when they had sold everyone a car they would have quit.
A merchant, even though he is the only merchant in his locality, can make money by advertising, because by advertising he can increase his sales. He can lead his customers to buy more, to buy the new things that come on the market. He can stimulate desire and create demand and thus increase his sales and his profits. It is the modern merchandising way. It is good business.—Star City, Arkansas, Ledger.

Work of erecting direction and distance markers on every Texas highway at every intersection with paved county roads, city limits and county lines was begun December 1. The work will require three or four months. The number of markers, which will be many thousand, has not been announced, neither has the cost thereof.
The markers will not replace the present system of numbered road signs, but will supplement them. They are intended to clarify the present system and keep the traveler informed of the names of the towns and their distances on the route, the engineer said.—Chronicle Journal.

Over one hundred and fifty Mexicans returned to their native country through Presidio port of entry during the last ten days of December. This was due in all probability to the lack of labor in Texas at this season of the year.—Big Bend Sentinel.

The Boyhood of Famous Americans

By J. V. Fitzgerald

Chief Justice Chas. E. Hughes

Kindergarten certainly wasn't a place, even for a boy of five, when the lad was able to outline a plan of study for the classics to his father. Rev. David Hughes, Baptist minister in Oswego, N. Y., made up his mind to that effect when his son, Charles, presented such a plan to him shortly after he had been entered in the infant class.

The result was that the boy was taken out of school and tutored by his mother and father. Mrs. Hughes had been a school teacher before her marriage. Few parents were so well equipped to teach a bright lad at home.

Charles Evans Hughes was a precocious child, as his formulation of a plan to study the classics when he was in kindergarten will bear out. He was born in 1862 in Glens Falls, N. Y., where his father had a small congregation. He was delicate as a child and didn't romp and play much with other little boys and girls.

Perhaps because he was not particularly robust his parents devoted more time to him than might ordinarily have been the case. His mind developed rapidly. He showed a decided interest in books as soon as he was able to talk. He was reading nursery rhymes when he was three and a half years old. He was five when his father was transferred to a church in Oswego when Charles was summarily removed from kindergarten.

When he was eight, and the family was living in Newark, N. J., the lad was able to translate the Bible from the Greek. He was also a wide reader of Shakespeare's works at this early age.

He later went to school in New York city where he was graduated from high school in 1875 at the age of thirteen as salutatorian of his class. His oration, because of its scholarly tone and the fine delivery of the orator, surprised a big crowd that attended the exercises in the old Academy of Music in that city.

While attending high school he wrote essays on such subjects as, "The Limitation of the Human Mind," "Self Help," and "The Evils of Light Literature." He was marked even then as a deep student and thinker.

The Rev. Mr. Hughes wanted his son to become a clergyman, if the boy felt a real call to the religious life. Young Charles had not made up his mind definitely as to his future career when he entered Colgate at the age of fourteen. He was a slight boy at the time and timid, save when it came to questions of scholarship. Then he would talk well and enthusiastically, even with his elders. Mentally he was more mature than his classmates.

The boy spent two years at Colgate. From there he went to Brown university, entering as a sophomore in 1878. He immediately showed all the promise indicated in his high school days. He was a brilliant student, but modest and retiring in disposition.

He gained many scholastic honors at Brown. He won the prize for the highest standing in English literature when he was a junior. Upon graduation, at the age of nineteen, he was awarded the prize as the student showing the most all-around promise. He was honor man in his class.

By this time he had finally made up his mind not to become a clergyman. Deciding against following the career for which his father had hoped, he went from Brown university to Delphi, N. Y. There he taught mathematics in the Delaware academy.

He studied law at Columbia university at night after returning to New York city and was admitted to the bar when he was twenty-two years old.

While the young lawyer had been sickly as a child he showed great physical capacity for work in the next three years. He was engaged as a clerk in a law office during the day. At night he acted as a teacher and tutor at Columbia.

Finally his health suffered under the strain. He was ordered to take a vacation. He spent it as a teacher of commercial and contract law at Cornell university.

The upstate climate agreed with him. When he returned to New York city he was able to throw himself vigorously into the duties of his profession as a practitioner. He first attracted wide public attention as counsel for the gas investigation committee. He added to his reputation as an outstanding lawyer by his conduct of the insurance investigation, another New York state inquiry.

Later he was elected governor of New York and re-elected, resigning to become a United States Supreme court justice. He retired from the bench to be his party's candidate for the Presidency. He lost the highest office within the gift of the American people because of a factional squabble in California. Later he served as Secretary of State and is now chief justice of the United States Supreme court.

Manure Is Valuable Plant Food Source

Farmer Should Not Allow It to Waste Away.

"There is little question but that stable manure on the dairy farms of Wisconsin is, and will continue to be, the chief source of plant food in the fertility maintenance of cultivated land," says G. J. Chapman, University of Wisconsin. "Any farmer who will deliberately allow his manure to waste away and lose its valuable constituents by leaching and runoff, and on the other hand, buy large amounts of commercial fertilizers is in my opinion headed for the poorhouse."

"In the early days there was some excuse for the neglect of this valuable plant food but I believe farmers now are universally aware of the value of manure. Both the farmer and the back 40 recognize its shortage. There is never enough to go around to all the fields and those farthest from the barn are usually neglected. The best argument for the use of fertilizers is one of stretching the supply of manure and making it go farther, and at the same time balancing the plant food both of the soil and crop being grown."

For handling the manure in the best way Chapman suggests: Manure should be hauled directly to the fields day by day year-round. Exception should be made in case of steep rolling fields, or on deep snow, then it may be piled in small heaps in the field until spring.

Plowing under or disking in of all manure as soon as possible after spreading gets better crop results, especially that hauled during spring and summer.

Don't Neglect Rhubarb During Whole Season

Do not fail to take good care of your rhubarb plants all season as well as in the spring when you are making use of the tender stems for sauces and pies. After the first few cuttings of rhubarb stems, many gardeners neglect this crop until the following spring.

Harvest of the rhubarb crop should be completed in from six to eight weeks' time. After this period has passed, allow the leaves to remain.

Stir the earth around the plants at least once a week in order that the weeds may be controlled, and that the leaves may store plenty of plant food in the roots without weed competition. By so doing, the plants are aided in producing a large crop of tender stems the next year. Keep the seed stalks broken off all summer. If these are allowed to develop, the plant food will go to seed production rather than in to the roots where it is desired.

Discover Two Sources of Potato Blackleg

The popular theory, held by potato growers for many years, that diseased seed constituted the only source of infection of blackleg, has been exploded by Dr. J. G. Leach, plant pathologist at University Farm, St. Paul, Minn., with the discovery of two important new sources of infestation. These new sources are first, bacteria present in the soil itself, and second, bacteria carried into the seed pieces by maggots.

Doctor Leach's experiments have shown conclusively that the blackleg bacteria may live over winter in the soil. However, he says, when planting is done under favorable conditions and in light, well-drained soil, a layer of wound cork is formed on the seed pieces which immunizes them to the blackleg bacteria.

Agricultural Squibs

Test your seed corn. If a sample tests less than 90 per cent good kernels, test every ear planted.

Spring grain sown after a heavily-fertilized crop such as potatoes may not pay for any additional fertilizer.

One of the simplest and least expensive ways of testing seed corn for germination is by the rag doll method.

Select a variety of silage corn that will at least reach the glazing stage in a normal season. If early planting is necessary, plant early.

Many feeders have found the silo more profitable for summer use than winter and, without doubt, we will see the silo used more in summer as its merits become known.

Gardens should be planted to provide the kinds and amounts of vegetables needed to balance the family diet. Yields vary with the weather, so plant enough and insure an adequate crop.

Try a row of asparagus broccoli. It grows as easily as a turnip and needs the same conditions. This is the green broccoli that has become popular. "Calabrese" is one of the fine strains. It is old in Europe but a new vegetable here.

For 2 to 4 cents an acre the oat crop can be protected from smut. Last year Pennsylvania farmers paid a 10 per cent toll to this disease which can be controlled easily by treating the seed with formaldehyde. Why pay the extortioner when it can be avoided?

Lesson for January 18

THE MINISTRY OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 3:7-20
GOLDEN TEXT—Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance, and begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and John the Baptist.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus and John the Baptist.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Courageous Reformer.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Message of John the Baptist.

I. The Degeneracy of the Times (vv. 1, 2).

The Jews had sunk to a very low level of civil, moral and religious life. Luke carefully enumerates the civil and religious rulers in order to show the profligacy of the times and therefore the need of a messenger to call the people back to God and virtue. Caesar has been described as "talented, ambitious, cruel, licentious, infamous, inhuman." Civil rule was divided between four of Rome's vassals. Pontius Pilate a little later attained notoriety by unjustly and in a cowardly manner condemning Jesus to death. Herod, the son of Herod the Great, was a murderer. Annas and Calaphas were corrupt ecclesiastical rulers.

II. The Nature of John's Ministry (vv. 3-6).

Out of the wilderness John flashed forth, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins (v. 3). The baptism was a sign of repentance. His ministry is declared to be a fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy. He is described as one calling upon the nation to prepare for the coming of the Messiah. The only hope for the world is God's salvation through Jesus Christ. The valleys of righteousness need to be filled. The mountains and hills of sin need to be brought low. The crooked ways of commerce need to be straightened, and the rough ways of society and nations need to be smoothed. Let men accept Jesus Christ and all war and contention will end. Men will then love each other.

III. The Content of John's Message (vv. 7-18).

1. A denunciation of sin (vv. 7, 8). He called the people "a generation of vipers." He charged them with being essentially wicked and deceitful. Knowing the subtle hypocrisy of these Jews, he demanded evidence of their sincerity.

2. An announcement of judgment (vv. 9). He declared that the ax was laid at the root of the tree and that the tree not bringing forth fruit was to be hewn down and cast into the fire. John made it very plain that for their sins they should be called into judgment. To be brought face to face with judgment has a sobering effect upon men. Paul's preaching of a judgment to come made Felix tremble (Acts 24:25). While John preached sin and judgment, he accompanied it with the assurance of pardon on condition of repentance.

3. Instructions to the inquirers (vv. 10-14). (1) The people (vv. 10, 11). Each man was to turn from his besetting sin and show love and kindness to his fellow men. Clothing and food were to be given to those who had need. The people were to turn from a life of selfishness and greed and do unto others as they would be done by. (2) Publicans (vv. 12, 13). These taxgatherers who were guilty of greed and oppression were not asked to give up their occupation, but to exact only that which was appointed by law. (3) The soldiers (v. 14). These were probably the policemen of that day, at least men on military duty. They were to refrain from false accusation and doing violence to men, and to be content with their wages.

4. Testimony to Jesus (vv. 15-18). The people were musing in their hearts as to whether John was indeed the Messiah. When John perceived this he, with fine humility, declared that his mission was so lowly by comparison with that of Christ that he would be unworthy to perform the menial act of a slave in loosing the latchet of his shoes. John baptized with water, but Christ would baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire.

IV. John's Imprisonment (vv. 19, 20).

Because of his reproof of Herod for his lewdness and other sins, John went to the dungeon and eventually was beheaded. God's faithful prophets are usually despised by the world, and some are even imprisoned, burned, or beheaded.

Faith

It is the wind that carries the ship across the waves; but the wind is powerless unless the hand of the boatman is held firmly upon the rudder, and that rudder is set hard against the wind. This is the attitude of steadfast faith to divine omnipotence. We hold the rudder; God fills the sails. It is not the rudder that carries the ship, but it is the rudder which catches the wind which carries the ship. And so God keeps us in perfect peace while we are stayed in him.—A. B. Simpson.

Oklahoma Snakes Live Up to Bad Reputation

Out in Oklahoma, says a writer in the Washington Star, the snakes have learned to climb poles, but they have not learned not to monkey with the current, for several have met their fate by establishing a short circuit with their bodies. Incidentally, this puts the station out of commission, to the great inconvenience of the patrons whose establishments are held up until the damage is located and repaired. A blacksnake crawled to the top of the Mehan tap station and, wrapping around the steelwork, stuck his head out until it came in contact with a lightning arrester, causing a short circuit and sudden death to the snake. At the same time Morrison, Glencoe, Stillwater, Perkins, Ripley, Mehan and the Mehan oil fields were cut off from electric service until the damage could be repaired. A six-foot bullsnake caused a fuse to blow out in the substation of the company near Choctaw, Okla., interrupting service on the power line from Harrah to Jones. The bullsnake was found on the line, which was strung on the top of the 30-foot poles.
