Stolen Car Found At Leakey, Texas

While church was in session at the Methodist Church in Sanderson Sunday night of this week, a chevrolet sedan belonging to Seth Breeding was stolen from in front of the church. Not until after services when Mr. Breeding went to get his car was it discovered that it had been taken. Immediately the officers were notified and soon were on the trail of the thieves.

Word reached Sanderson Tuesday after telephone lines which had been cut were repaired that a car of this description had stopped at the Mansfield ranch, where Tip Frazier lives and wanted to purchase some gasoline, being told they had none the men next stopped at the Harral ranch where they got gas of E. McSparren. Same day a report came from Girvin stating that a car and some men had visited a filling station there, early Monday morning, broke in, secured gas and proceeded on their journey. No other word was received until Wednesday afternoon of this week when a message to authorities here stated that the car bearing the license No and engine No to that of the car sought for along with two men had been seized by authorities at Leakey, Texas, county seat of Real county.

Sheriff Lee Cook being out of town at the time this car was taken, office deputy, Hunter and Capt. Barler got busy and it was through these men the car was located. Sheriff Lee A. Cook and Capt. Barler left Wednesday evening for Leakey and will have returned with both the men and the car probably before this paper reaches its readers.

Mr. Breeding purchased this car only the day previous from Casner McKnight Motor Co. of this city.

Interest Growing In Big Revival

The interest has continued in the revival service at the Presbyterian church this week. The attendance was good at all three of the services last Sunday. There will be a special service for the young people Friday night. The school will attend in a body with the teachers. Prof. Nelson is planning to have a good program of special music and the school spirit will be manifested by the young people in a splendid way. There will be a special reservation for the school and we trust a full attendance will be there to occupy it. Every one is welcome. We hope the parents will be on hand to encourage the young people in their religious activities like they do in the school activities.

Next Sunday at 11 a. m. Rev. Posey will give an illustrated sermon to the young people and adults are urged to come also. Sabbath school at 10 a. m. Evening service at 7:30 p. m. The other churches of Sanderson have manifested a splendid spirit of co-operation in the meeting and we are truly thankful for all assistance rendered by them and their patrons.

The services conducted in the stores and business places of Sanderson started off with a good attendance and interest Tuesday morning. More places were open to the service than we could fill this week. Several ask for the service but the time allotted this day service was planned for this week.

Do not overlook the clever Advertisement of the Empire Cleaners and Dyers.

Mrs. J. R. Blaylock of Dryden was in Sanderson Tuesday of this week.

Newsy Notes From The High School

The program given at the high school auditorium last Thursday evening seemed to have been thoroughly enjoyed by all who attended. The first part of the program was a short skit called the "Fatal Quest," given by several of the lady faculty members. The second number was a pantomime called "The Two Marionettes," given by Robert Lochausen and La Verne Halley. The latter part of the program was a one act play called the "Howling Success." The cast of characters for this play was made up entirely of a group of men, each dressed to suit his role whether it was that of a nurse maid, a baby, a doctor, a flapper, a mother, or some other familiar character. With the use of a few skirts and a little make-up many interesting and amusing characters were created, all of whom merit special mention.

The program was sponsored by the Parent-Teachers Association, and was directed by Miss Fleda Belle Jernigan, head of the High School Dramatics department. This is the first effort for the Parent-Teachers Association has made toward raising money to pay for the Steinway piano they purchased some time ago for the high school auditorium. A large crowd attended this program, and it is of interest to know that something over $100 was made.

All students from the first grade through the eleventh grade underwent dental examinations last week. Dr. H. K. Halbert, local dentist, made the examinations, coming to the high school building each day until every student's teeth had been examined, and a record made of the condition of each mouth. These examinations were made free of charge, and are a part of the regular health program that is being sponsored by our school system.

Children who have defective teeth should go at once to a dentist and have them cared for. It was found that the majority of students had some defective teeth; however, there were about twenty-four out of the entire group of two hundred eighteen who had no defective teeth.

The next regular meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association will be Thursday afternoon, March 5, at the high school auditorium. Every member of the organization is urged to be present, since there are to be discussed a number of matters which are of vital concern to every member.

Don't leave it to the other person to make our P. T. A. a success. You should be willing to share your part of the responsibility as a member in order to enjoy the benefits that our school and community reap from having such an organization. Even your presence will help to make the meetings a success, so don't fail to be present at the regular meeting, Thursday afternoon, March 5.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TRAINING SCHOOL MARCH 2

Dr. H. C. Henderson of Marfa, Dr. A. L. Moore of El Paso, Rev. C. R. Hooten, of Fort Stockton, and Rev. Fred B. Faust of El Paso, all of the conference board of religious education of the Methodist New Mexico Conference will be in Sanderson Monday, March 2, from 2 to 4 p. m., to meet all the teachers, officers and assistant officers, and teachers of the Sunday School, at the First Methodist Church building.

The officers and teachers of the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church extend a very cordial invitation for all officers and teachers of the Sunday schools in Sanderson to meet with them, and hear the lectures of these Sunday school experts.

Man Sets Fire To 3 Cabooses

During the noon hour Wednesday a fire alarm was sounded by the whistle at the roundhouse when it was discovered that three cabooses were on fire in the yards a short distance west of the depot. A crowd soon gathered and several hand-fire extinguishers were brought into play and the fire on two of the cars was put out, but the remaining car, caboose 182, was a mass of flames and was totally burned up. Workmen attached an engine to caboose 182 and pulled it away to itself thus saving other cars from being burned up.

Shortly after the fire Sheriff Lee Cook arrested a man in the railroad yards and placed him in jail. The man admitted to the sheriff that he had set the cars on fire and he did it because he had been put off of No. 101 on which he was trying to steal a ride. The man had a pistol and cartridges and said he fired several shots into the cabooses before setting fire to them.

An examining trial will probably be held today (Friday) in justice of peace court.

Mrs. N. C. Rogers Passes Away

Mrs. N. C. Rogers, age 70, died at her home here Wednesday evening. About two years ago Mrs. Rogers suffered a stroke of paralysis from which she never fully recovered.

Mrs. Rogers was a native Texan having been born on March 17, 1861, and reared in Lavaca county. She was united in marriage in October 1886 to N. C. Rogers, who survives her as well as two sons, Charles of this city and Clarence of Los Angeles, also two grandsons, Charles, Jr. and Clyde Harvey Rogers. She is also survived two brothers, Bob Bosworth of Tucson, Ariz., and Willie Bosworth of Los Angeles. Mrs. Bettie Bosworth of this city is a sister-in-law.

Mrs. Rogers was a devoted mother and a good christian woman, having been a member of the Church of Christ since early in life.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon from the residence with interment in the Sanderson cemetery, Rev. R. E. Griffith holding the services.

Good Things for the Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"When one grows up with the mountains rather than molehills against which to measure one's self, one's importance becomes amusingly small."

With the children the real party begins when the refreshments are served, and as we are all "children of a larger growth," we may be excused for liking tasty, nice refreshments.

For a bridge party the decorations may be in the color and design of the four suits of cards.

Canned pimientos may be cut in the form of diamonds or hearts to top an open or double sandwich, spread with cream cheese. For clubs and spades, raisins or prunes or dates may be used.

All Trump Sandwiches.—Cut thin slices of bread into oblongs to resemble playing cards. Spread lightly with softened butter and then with cream cheese which has been rubbed to a paste with cream. Make the spots on the cards, the red of pimiento and the black of stuffed dates cut into slices.

Grand Slam Salad.—Dissolve one envelope of gelatin in one cupful of boiling water. Drain a number two can of grapefruit and add it (one cupful of the juice) to the gelatin with a few drops of coloring and enough after-dinner mints to flavor the mixture delicately. Two dozen will be ample. When the jelly is of the consistency of egg white, fold in the grapefruit sections cut into halves with the scissors, one cupful of diced cucumber and pour into small molds. Surround when serving with water cress and serve with sour cream or cream or cream cheese dressing.

American Chop Suey.—Brown two sliced onions in two tablespoonfuls of fat, add one-half pound of fresh pork cut into strips, one green pepper shredded, one-half cupful of mushrooms sliced, one cupful of shredded celery. Cook one-fourth of a cupful of rice in three cupfuls of stock with one teaspoonful of salt, adding all the other ingredients. Serve with buttered rice crispies, pouring the chop suey over them.

Chicken Ham or Croquettes.—Put one small sliced onion and two strips of parsley through the food chopper with two and one-half cupfuls of ham or chicken, add one cupful of rolled crackers and mix well. Add a beaten egg, three-fourths of a cupful of milk and two tablespoonfuls of cooking oil. Season to taste with salt and pepper and shape, roll in cracker crumbs, then in egg beaten with one-fourth of a cupful of milk, then in crumbs again and fry in deep fat after chilling well. The fat should be hot enough to brown a cube of bread in 40 seconds, or 385 degrees Fahrenheit.

Potato bugs that spend the winter underground take "anti-freeze" precautions by getting rid of one-third their weight in water, which otherwise would freeze and burst the body cells.

Read Labels on Bottles Before Buying

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

When you go into a grocery store to buy the family goods, do you read carefully the labels on the bottles or packages you select? Do you trust to your eyes in estimating the quantity in each container, or do you find out from the label exactly what you are getting for your money? Do you compare articles of one brand with those of another, both in quantity and quality? Do you observe whether or not the label declares artificial coloring or flavoring?

Labels must tell truthfully what kind of material a package, bottle, or can of food contains, and what quantity. The statement on the label should not be misleading in any way to the consumer. Sometimes, however, it may be truthful and still misleading. Again, the appearance of the container may be misleading, and if the statement on the label is overlooked, the buyer gets poor value.

The food and drug administration of the United States Department of Agriculture urges every housewife to scrutinize the labels on every kind of food she buys, as well as on the drugs she needs in her household. In the case of foods, it has been found that most manufacturers and packers have shown a satisfactory disposition to meet the demands for truthful labeling, but occasionally it is evident that there is some attempt to give the consumer less value than she thinks she is getting.

Take the two bottles illustrated. Bottles of peculiar shape, with thick sides and bottoms, like the taller of these two, sometimes hold less than those which are made in an ordinary very slowly, the shrinkage of the meat when rare is only about one-eighth of the fresh weight; whereas if the roasting goes on to the end in a hot oven the shrinkage is about one-fourth of the fresh weight.

Well-done beef shrinks more than rare beef, other things being equal. Well-finished, high-grade beef and lamb roasts lose more fat and less water during cooking than very thin meat of the same kind and cut.

shape, like the one that seems at first glance smaller. In this instance, the fancy shaped bottle held only one fluid ounce, and the straight-sided bottle held two fluid ounces.

Bedtime Story for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I'm sorry," said young Edgar Eagle, "to be late at the party, but I'm glad I can stay later."

He enjoyed the party immensely—it was being given for a young eagle of two years of age.

His mother had a fine white head and tail, and the young eagle was looking forward to the day when he would be bald—or rather that is what they call it.

A bald eagle is not really bald, and when that word is used it means that the eagle has white feathers on his head.

The young eagle would have a white tail and white feathers on his head in one more year—when he would be three years of age.

But now the party was over and young Edgar Eagle was talking to the birthday eagle.

"What a fine white head and tail you have," said the two-year-old eagle to Edgar Eagle.

"Yes," said young Edgar Eagle, "I am three years old. But we must be friends, and we will be friends."

"Good," said the young eagle. He was very proud to have a friend a whole year older than himself.

"Do you know," said young Edgar Eagle, "that we are very much honored?"

"Lots, and lots, and lots of people, who call themselves 'Americans' have taken our family for their emblem."

"What's an emblem?" asked the two-year-old eagle.

"It means," said young Edgar Eagle, "that they wish to be like us."

"They want to be free and brave and independent. And it's very fine to have lots and lots of people say they want to copy you, isn't it?"

"We Are Very Much Honored."

"Yes," said the two-year-old eagle. He was very much impressed and was feeling very solemn through young Edgar Eagle's talk.

"So I'm going to teach you how to make your wings very, very strong—so you'll be free and independent—and so no one can be fiercer than you."

"Then, when it's your third birthday and your bald head is covered with white feathers—then, ah, then, you'll be glad and proud that you are an eagle."

lace blouse is already assured. Which in itself deserves a whole chapter written as to the kinds of lace, not forgetting the versatile styling, which runs the gamut from befruffed types like the one pictured to the over-blouse with the cow neck or perhaps a surplice front fastening. Lots of glittering glass buttons on the lace blouse, too, and then again the lace is apt to be strictly tailored.

PORK SHOULD BE COOKED WELL-DONE

Use a Thermometer to Insure Well-Done Roast Pork.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

As in cooking other roast meats, the use of a thermometer when roasting a fresh ham removes the guesswork. This is particularly important in the case of pork, which should always be served well-done. Thorough cooking is necessary, because pork sometimes contains the trichina parasite, which, if not destroyed, may cause illness. Since this organism is killed when heated to 137 degrees Fahrenheit, there is ample margin of safety when pork is cooked to the well-done stage, 182 degrees Fahrenheit.

The following directions for cooking a fresh ham are given by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture:

Wipe the ham with a damp cloth and leave the rind on. The ham will cook more quickly and shrink less when the rind is not removed. Sprinkle the surface of the meat with salt and pepper and rub with flour. Place the ham, rind side up, on a rack in an open roasting pan, without water. Make a small incision through the rind with a sharp knife or steel skewer, cut short gashes around it with scissors, and insert a roast-meat thermometer through the opening so that its bulb reaches the center of the fleshiest portion of the ham.

Place the pan containing the ham in a hot oven (480 degrees Fahrenheit) and sear for about 20 minutes.

Then reduce the oven temperature rapidly to very moderate heat (300 degrees to 325 degrees) and continue the cooking at this temperature until the roast meat thermometer in the ham registers 182 degrees. Between 25 and 30 minutes per pound will probably be required when these oven temperatures are used. Do not add water and do not cover the meat during the roasting.

When the ham is done remove it from the oven and carefully take off the rind. To remove the rind easily break through it on the fleshy side at the hock, then turn the ham over and lift the rind off in one piece. With a sharp knife score the fat covering in squares. Stick long-stemmed cloves into the intersections and sprinkle brown sugar over the fat surface. Return to a moderately hot oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) to brown over the top. Serve hot or cold.

Savory Brown Gravy.

Remove excess fat from the pan drippings. Mix two tablespoonfuls of flour with the drippings remaining in the pan, add one and one-half to two cupfuls of cold water and cook until smooth. If the pan drippings are strong in flavor, add more water, and flour in proportion. Cook one-half cupful of chopped parsley or celery leaves and one tablespoonful of chopped onion in a small quantity of the fat and add to the gravy.

Bolero Suit With Frilly Blouse

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Comes as a most welcome fashion for spring, the bolero suit with a frilly blouse. Every woman who is wise as to what's flattering, knows that among costumes youthful there is none more so than the skirt-and-bolero type with which is worn a "fussy," frilly, utterly feminine blouse.

With this charming fashion foremost on the style program, there is every prospect that its vogue will be widespread during the coming months. You can see for yourself, from this picture how attractive the threesome of a pleated skirt, a bolero and a frivolous-looking little blouse can be, especially when the latter is elaborated with myriads of tiny lace edgings sewed row-and-row, as it is in this instance.

It is really a matter of choice as to whether the skirt and the wee jacket be made of flat crepe or a sheer woolen weave for Dame Fashion says either. Then there is the question of color. With black taken as a matter of course the next move is navy, for the consensus of opinion is that it is going to be a season of "blues." Others there are who declare that brown for this spring is "it."

Later on in the season these youthful bolero suits on the order of the model illustrated will appear in the most delectable pastel tones, their pistachio greens, pale grays, blues and pinks being so alluring we will be falling in love all over again with this fetching mode.

Such a blouse season as this promises to be. We have not witnessed the like for years. It simply had to be, this vogue for the blouse, what with short-jacket suits being the rage. The story of the blouse and its endless program as outlined for spring and summer, is a volume in itself. Touching merely on the highspots which relate to the new blouse types, the first thought which comes to mind is the popularity of plaids, stripes and prints for its making.

Then, too, there is every reason to believe that the dainty, frilly, lingerie blouse will return. The fact of the

The desire to wound him filled her with a burning fever. At least then he would not be able to go for weeks without remembering her. He would think of her. His attention, his desire would be hers. For an intolerable moment she yielded to the pain of this desire, then rose, wrapped her faded cotton kimono over her bathing suit and turned to face Loring. For a moment she was struck with a bright memory. His composure, his self-assurance were broken by the upthrust of some powerful emotion. She was a girl again, at her mother's house, running up the front steps, he stood at the top in her way, looking at her eagerly, his face so—alive, disturbing. They stared at each other, remembering, caught and held together. But Ernestine thrust this clamoring thought away from her. This man was Lillian's husband. This was Jonathan Hamilton's son, her father's son-in-law and adviser. He was one of her own people.

"You haven't been kind to Will, any of you," she stammered, trying to bring the talk back to commonplace. "He hasn't accepted our kindness," Loring answered slowly. "It isn't only that he's proud," said Ernestine. "He's vain as well. He's different. He's entitled to his vanity."
"At any cost?" asked Loring in a low voice. "I think there are men who would consider pride too dear—for your happiness."

Ernestine's thoughts were in confusion. Loring's words came back to her, nothing but poverty and child-bearing and distress. Oh, she had had more than that from Will. She had had life! But was there to be for her no permanent peace and security with Will? She doubted it. And this doubt brought another: Has my whole instinct concerning Will been false? Is the family's judgment of him correct and my own mistaken? They think him erratic, trivial, unsteady, a failure—O God in Heaven, help me—

She turned away from Loring and took the path up through the shrubs toward the lawn about the house. She stumbled along as though to get away from the weakness, the tears, the fearful doubts that assailed her.

A motor had been humming along the lake road as she advanced from the water's edge, and now abruptly the car had entered the inlet road and swung about before the house. At this instant when she became conscious of it and its arrival, the air was still filled with the grinding of brakes, while the doors of the car spilled open and it disgorged three or four men who were carrying others. One of the two men lifted from the car was either dead or dying, for a thin bright stream ran from him as they laid him on the grass.

Bright red dripped from the running board. The other man was being carried indoors, while two tied their coats together to make a stretcher for the first man lifted out. A shout brought Madame Pastano from the house. The gardener, the houseman appeared on the run.

The whole household was instantly concentrated with skilled, practiced efficiency, so quiet, so quick that Ernestine was still gaping while it was all accomplished. The hose was running furiously across the lawn. The rug was brought from the floor of the car, and thrown into the lake, with rocks on top of it. The gardener put the hose inside the car and washed the floor and the running board. Another came from the garage with a car rug, with a different license plate which he changed in a moment, and the driver of the car moved it up a little, so that the gravel could be picked up in a shovel, and carried and thrown into the lake, the fresh spot raked together.

Now old Grandmother Pastano, an ancient dame who spoke not a word of English, came from the porch, her head wrapped in a shawl, and got into the car and sat by the window, her thick jeweled hand resting on the edge of the glass. The car turned about and, with a different driver, moved sedately back along the lake road, whence it had come—as innocent appearing a vehicle as ever rode the highway.

No one had noticed her, there at the end of the lake walk, among the carefully cut shrubs. Ernestine moved back and came to the little summer house and sat down in it, for her limbs would carry her no farther.
The dreadful efficiencies of the Pastanos had all this time increased her wrath with Will. She could not bear it for him to be in a daze, to go about with the air which had exasperated Lillian the night Elaine was born—helpless, hopeless and confused. She couldn't stand the thought that he was a failure while these foreigners were thick with success.
"Ruby Pastano had power. He loved money. He had it. He was dramatic and generous with it. He wanted it to show. He loved to empty his pockets—knowing well where he might refill them. And all summer she had compared this man's magic with Will's fumbling. Deliberately she had shut her ears against stories of political corruption, against tales of graft and bribery, of Ruby Pastano who was generous with policemen. Growing strong and well again, with the children blooming under the benevolence of this man whose kindness had been more acceptable to her than the kindness of her own people, because he was Will's friend and they were not, she had nevertheless been influenced to vexation beyond measure that Pastano should be so capable and Will so futile.

Now her tears fell from her eyes in great scalding drops.

What was she, Ernestine Briceand, doing in this band of cutthroats and thieves? All of Ruby Pastano's efficiency was to her nothing now but filthy rags. All her relationship with him and his family, from the beginning, had been built on misunderstanding. They were too far apart. Not even affection and liking, not even respect could bridge the gap, the difference in ideals, in standards, in purposes. This generous, unscrupulous man, bringing the victims of rapine so unflatteringly into the heart of his own home was Will's friend—not hers. She had nothing in common with these people, and she would never have. And she had shut the door of her heart against her own flesh and blood, because of Will's pride, and had opened it to these—these—She choked and her throat turned bitter with gall at them.

Abruptly she was conscious of an upsurging of patriotism. Her own people—her own kind! Americans, strong, decent, successful, ardent and clean. Kind—kind. Incapable of murder and plotting. These foreigners looked upon them all as fat geese to be plucked and did not understand the courage, the cleanness, the strength of kindness. She hated them with a furious hatred. The compulsion to be rid of them—all of them, and Will as well—came upon her.

She was crying terribly. She ran back down the beach path and came to Loring playing in the water with Elaine and Peter.

"Get the boat," she said sobbingly. "I will go with you."

It was wonderful to relax in the comfort and security of home again. The children went off happily with old Annie, who had cared for Lillian and Ernestine when they were small, and who had always stayed with mamma, a privileged member of the household. Lillian scarcely left Ernestine's side a moment.

Papa planned softly about going into Chicago in the morning, to set through to a finish the details of the trust funds for his two girls. Loring kept his distance, reading and smoking by the table at the far end of the long porch.

Ernestine was almost asleep, relaxed and comfortable in her body for the first time in many weeks, and she was almost inattentive to papa's voice going gently on with plans.

"I will deed the Sheridan road house over to you, darling. Mamma and I will be in New York most of the time, but when we are in Chicago we will stay there with you. Loring told us that you would come back sooner if I withheld your settlement."

Something clicked in Ernestine's mind—a small sound, as though a lock had been unbolted. But she went on to sleep calmly enough, carrying down with her into unconsciousness her trouble and her pain. Loring said she would come back—papa had been so willing to obey her wish about not having her money, because Loring said she would come back the sooner.

She slept deeply, all through the long evening, all through the night. It was the first clear flush of dawn when she awoke, sat up under the light cover that mamma had thrown over her there on the porch swing and looked out across the water.

She awoke with a conviction. She could not do this. She could not leave Will. It was impossible. By what route she had come to this conclusion she could not have told. But in her sleep her true nature had asserted itself and her mind was fixed.

She had done what she had resolved never to do. She had denied her marriage.

"Oh, not I—not my true self—not my heart!" she whispered. "I never did deny Will nor my love. I'll go back today—to be his wife for ever—no matter what comes."

She felt calm and strong now and could look with impersonal horror upon her defection. In the clear light of morning, filled as she was with the conviction that she must for ever choose Will against all the world, further understanding came to her.

All these months that she had been hating Will and loving him and reviling him and saying such cruel things, it had been a deep unknown desire for her mother's home which goaded her. It had been rebellion against the continued humiliation of poverty and disappointment that their hopes and plans had not matured this time into success.

All her mental processes seemed loosened, open. Now from some cunning instinct she was presented with a new enlightenment. She was—she had been—worse than the "gimme" women. She had been for months under the domination of a bitter jealousy of his work. She had been wounded because his activity was secret from her. She had loathed the mistress that he followed—his own career. So, wanting him to succeed and to earn money, she had not wanted him possessed with the preoccupation of such processes. She had seen in his gaze that inward adoration which is more obnoxious to a woman's greedy pride than another woman's lure can ever be—that love for what he was doing, that excluded interest in his own mind.

All her own mind clear at last in the limpid humility born of having failed Will, in intention, if not in conclusive act, she could reach a place on which to plant her feet for ever, as far as he and she were concerned.

"What have I to do with his work?" The answer to this question in the clear logic of her mind released her for ever from the petty jealousies of the artist's wife. The answer was "Nothing." She had nothing to do with his work at all. It was his own, and she must know it. The old unity she had wanted to preserve was possible only as a kind of over-unity, not going into details. It was the ground on which love placed its feet, the sky above love's head, but not the secret of the habitations of the soul.

He could not bear a child for her, though his love conceived it. And was not the business of bringing forth something new and bright, even if it were but a comic strip for the daily papers, as secret and silent a process as that in which she was now again engaged? They all knew she was intruded upon her privacy save by the most discreet and apologetic kindness. And might not the creative processes of artistry be as secret, as involuntary?

She had been resentful as petty men were sometimes resentful of a woman's preoccupation and distress in maternity. Will had been natural with her, casual and kind, and she could accord him the same courtesy. She wept afresh, but not the dreadful scalding tears of the day before. These were unselfish thanking tears distilled from a heart grown calm and good again.

"O God, help me to be a good wife—help me to be a good wife to Will, O God. Help me to understand him, to grow and change when life demands it of me. Help me to be a good wife."

She went to the desk in the corner and wrote a telegram: "I have left Pastano's, and am at mamma's cottage with the children. Please come and get us today.—Ernestine."

Mock Spirits in Daytime, but Fear Them at Night

Night has great terrors for the inhabitants of the island of Bali, in the Dutch East Indies, because of the great number of demons (butas) prowling about in the dark. To appease these evil spirits, the mother of each home places on the doorstep, or shrine, a platted tray filled with fruit and rice, often with a small lamp to show the way. When the demons find what they want they are supposed not to molest the people of the home. If a man has to go about by night he always carries a lighted torch and sings to keep the spirits away, as they do not like either light or music.

In the daylight, however, the natives can make fun of these spirits without coming to harm. On feast days they dress up and imitate the demons, mocking them. But as soon as the shadows lengthen, the clothes are returned to the temple and those who have worn them pray a little longer than usual and offer a little more food than regularly to the spirits who may come to their doorsteps.—New York Magazine.

Alumni Associations

The organization of those who have been students is characteristic of American schools. The first alumni association was established at Williams college in 1821. For many years alumni organizations were chiefly social, affording opportunity for the reunion of friends. As these associations developed, however, they proved to be useful not only in welding former students together in friendship, but in maintaining interest in and, in some cases, supplying funds for the various schools and colleges.

Would Eliminate Black Currants

Cultivated Plants Threaten to Destroy White-Pine Forests.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

Because of the relatively small value of cultivated black currants in this country and the role of these plants in the spread of white-pine blister rust, a disease which threatens to destroy our white-pine forests, United States Department of Agriculture recommends that farmers and nurserymen and the public generally discontinue growing these currants in regions where white pines grow.

Carriers of Blister Rust.
In its fight to save the white-pine forests of the country, the department recognizes other varieties of currants and gooseberries as potential carriers of the blister rust disease, but the cultivated black currant, sometimes known as the English black currant, is by far the most susceptible to the rust. This variety is responsible for spread of the disease over long distances, department specialists declare.

Compared to cultivated black currants, other species of currants and gooseberries are relatively resistant to blister rust, the department says. However, in the course of a season the disease may spread from the original black currant center, to any type of currant or gooseberry. This is caused by successive cycles of the summer stage of the rust.

How Disease Is Spread.
Farmers' Bulletin 1398-F, "Currants and Gooseberries: Their Culture and Relation to White Pine Blister Rust," a publication just issued by the department in revised form, tells how to grow these plants and explains how they spread the rust disease. In some sections currants and gooseberries are commercial crops, and the department does not wish to interfere with this industry any more than is necessary to protect the white-pine forests, the bulletin says.

So great is the danger from cultivated black currants, however, that the department is asking state authorities, nurserymen, and farmers to help eliminate this plant entirely in the Pacific, Rocky mountain, Atlantic, Appalachian, Ohio valley, upper Mississippi valley, and Lakes states.

Copies of Farmers' Bulletin 1398-F may be obtained free from the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Prune Young Trees for More Profitable Yields

Although butchering young apple trees with the pruning shears is a poor practice, the training of permanent trees so that they will develop into vigorous, strong trees capable of carrying their crops is an essential part of profitable orchard management, declares F. H. Beach, extension specialist in horticulture at Ohio State university.

While the unpruned young tree will grow more rapidly, have the greatest size for its age, and come into bearing earlier than heavily pruned trees, he says, it does not follow that training the trees with the help of the pruning shears should be overlooked. Light pruning that aids in developing the modified leader type of tree and that prevents splitting from weak crotches is highly desirable.

The modified leader type of tree, Beach points out, is secured by allowing one central branch to continue through the lower part of the tree, other branches from which the scaffold branches may be developed will grow from the central branches at different heights and positions. In this way it is fairly easy to prevent crowded heads and weak crotches.

It is best, he states, to allow the lowest limb to grow on the southwest side of the tree so as to prevent sunscald injury. Relatively light pruning may also be given this side of the tree.

Old Age Fast Removing Many Soils From Service

Old age is fast removing many soils from use in Illinois as nature removes humans, according to E. A. Norton, University of Illinois. Nature and man are both contributors to the aging of soils, says Norton, and man is the greater offender as he has removed the protective covering of sod and allowed the rains to gully the land. Removing crops continually from the land has depleted the fertility and moisture holding capacity.

Good management of soils prevents their aging and as in man it preserves youth. Old age in soils is shown by gray soils, acidity, well-defined surface, subsurface and subsoil and scanty supply of plant foods. These soil characteristics compare with gray hair, lack of activity and conservatism in man.

Nitrogen for Celery

In Ohio the use of a nitrogen carrier gave a marked increase in the growth of celery. Four hundred pounds per acre of a readily available nitrogen carrier used as a side dressing produced an increase of over 8,000 pounds of celery per acre.

All plots in the experiment received a basic treatment of a half ton of a 2-8-16 fertilizer. In comparison to the marked increase from the additional nitrogen, doubling either the potash or superphosphate increased the yields only about one-tenth.

OLDER PEOPLE Must watch bowels Constantly!

As we grow older the bowels become more sluggish. They don't get rid of all the waste. Some days they do not move at all. So older people need to watch their bowels constantly. Only by doing this can they hope to avoid the many forms of sickness caused by constipation. When your bowels need help remember a doctor should know what is best for them, and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from your druggist. Syrup Pepsin is a doctor's prescription for lagging bowels, good for all ages.

No restriction of habits or diet is necessary while taking Syrup Pepsin. Made from fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other valuable ingredients, it is absolutely safe. It will not gripe, sicken or weaken you.

Take a spoonful next time your tongue is coated, or you have a bad taste in your mouth. It clears up a bilious, headachy, dull, weak, gassy condition every time. When you see how good it tastes and how nice it acts, you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the world's most popular laxative for every member of the family.

The Lengthening Skirt

Alice Terry, who recently returned from France to begin work on her new film, "The Gypsy," talked to a girl reporter about Paris fashions. "Fashions have become completely revolutionized," said Miss Terry. "The short skirt and long waist have completely disappeared. In their place we have long skirts and short waists."

"How do these new fashions compare with the old?" asked her interlocutor.

"More becoming," replied Miss Terry, "and becoming more."

Men who say they have no illusions have that one at least.

Most of us have a hard row to hoe because we dislike hoeing.

The Boyhood of Famous Americans

By J. V. Fitzgerald

Walter S. Gifford

College students, if they are ambitious and need to make their way in the world, begin to hunt jobs in the spring before their graduation. Walter S. Gifford was in this class. He decided, in his senior year at Harvard, that he wanted to work for the General Electric company.

He sought no friends to find an opening for him. Instead he sat down and wrote a letter applying for a job. He directed the envelope to the Western Electric company by mistake. He received an application blank from that company in reply. While embarrassed by his error in writing a letter to General Electric, and then sending it in an envelope addressed to Western Electric, he forgot about it when he was hired as a clerk by the latter company. His pay was $10 a week.

His letter of application might well serve as a model to young men today who are seeking to get their start in the business world. He wrote, in part: "It is my wish to enter some good business as soon as possible after I leave here. Now if there is only some position (no matter what, provided there will be a fair chance for a rise if it is deserved) in the General Electric company, I should like to try it and would endeavor to suit."

"If you wish any references, etc., I think I could get them, for, of course, you know nothing about what sort of a fellow I am."

Walter S. Gifford was born in Salem, Mass., in 1885. He wrote his letter of application in 1904, the year he was graduated from Harvard. His early education was received in the public schools of his native city. He was a bright student and was able to enter high school when he was eleven years old. He completed his course at Harvard in three years.

The future head of the American Telephone and Telegraph company was not a very husky and robust lad. When his companions were playing baseball, football and other games he was generally off getting his exercise and recreation by collecting butterflies and other insects. He had a notable collection when he was a high school pupil. They were all catalogued under their Latin names.

His mother had been a school teacher before her marriage. While she had other children, she was able to devote much time to teaching her son Walter. The lad's memory was not of the best when he was a schoolboy and as a result he learned early to dig out the facts. He was able to remember them by not attempting to clutter his mind with non-essential details.

It was an excellent lesson for the youngster to learn. Perhaps much of his success in the business world can be laid to his ability to eliminate unimportant details and get down to the bed rock of a proposition.

His college course was a success. It didn't give him an inflated idea of his knowledge or ability, as his letter of application for his first job shows. He had learned that a man has to begin at the bottom to be of real value to himself or to a business. He was willing, as he wrote, to take anything, as long as it offered an opportunity for advancement if he made good.

He could have gone to work in a Salem bank when he was graduated. His father would have obtained him a position but the youngster had other ideas. He wanted to stand on his own feet. He did so when he took the $10 a week job with the Western Electric company.

His first job called for him to make the trip to Chicago. He borrowed money to pay his fare rather than to accept it from his father. He was determined to make his own way from the very outset of his business career.

Wages of $10 a week didn't go very far even in 1904. Young Gifford managed to make it do somehow. He lived at Hull House in Chicago, where he had comfortable and congenial surroundings at little expense. Needless to say, on his meager wages, he had little chance to do anything but work.

He rose from a pay roll clerk to a position as assistant treasurer in a short time with a good increase in salary. It wasn't long before he was chief statistician of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. In that position he attracted the attention of Theodore N. Vall, then head of the concern, and gained further promotion.

When Mr. Vall retired, the man, who as a college boy had made the mistake of misdirecting his letter of application for a job, was made the head of one of the world's greatest utility organizations.

Mushroom Diseases and Their Control

'Bubbles' and 'Plaster Mold' Cause of Big Loss.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)—WNU Service.

Two diseases of mushrooms, known as "bubbles" and "plaster mold," are responsible for great losses to mushroom growers, say Vera K. Charles and C. H. Popenoe in Circular 27-C, "Some Mushroom Diseases and Their Carriers," recently issued in revised form by the United States Department of Agriculture.

"Bubbles," probably the disease of greatest importance to the industry, deforms the plants from the beginning of growth. It is caused by a fungus which at first covers the plants with a cottony growth and later disappears, after which the mushrooms soften and rot. The fungus works its way into the wood of the mushroom bed and lives there from year to year unless killed by fumigation. For control, the infected manure must be removed, the beds and house must be fumigated with sulphur or formaldehyde, and care and sanitary measures must be exercised to prevent workmen or insects from carrying the fungus spores to an uninfected bed or house.

"Plaster mold" does not attack the mushroom directly, but the disease is caused by a fungus that runs through the manure and prevents or delays development of the spawn. The plaster mold appears on the surface and sides of the bed as white patches which may be seen when the boards are raised. When mature the fungus is coated with powdery spores that separate and are carried readily to wind or insects. These are likely to spread the disease. Plaster mold has been serious in recent years. It reduces mushroom yields and frequently causes complete failure of the crop.

Mushroom flies and other insects common in mushroom houses distribute the disease spores. They can be controlled with pyrethrum nicotine, or hydrocyanic acid gas.

As sanitation measures, infected manure should be moved to a safe distance from the mushroom house and manure used for replacement should come from a place free from contamination. Manure never should be piled close to the mushroom house.

Circular 27-C may be obtained from the office of information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Korean Lespedeza Best Sown in Early Spring

Korean lespedeza is best sown in the spring during late March or early April. It may be sown with oats immediately after the seed grain has been covered, or 10 days to two weeks later, after the grain crop is up. The time of seeding on wheat may well be delayed until April, after the danger of severe freezes is past. Seedlings should be made, however, before the ground has dried out and while the surface soil is alternately freezing by night and thawing by day. If the sowing is later the wheat ground should be harrowed before the lespedeza seed is put in.

Korean lespedeza establishes itself more quickly where the ground is firm and well packed. For that reason it is more likely to succeed and make a larger growth the first season if sown on wheat rather than with oats. The seed is not difficult to sow and may be distributed by a grass-clover seeder, or by a wheelbarrow seeder, or by a grass-clover attachment on a grain drill.

Destroy Scale Insects Very Early in Spring

There are probably to exceed five broods of the San Jose scale per year. It has been estimated that even with four broods, a single female's progeny would number 3,216,080,400 in a season. To figure the progeny in view of a fifth brood would make the figures incomprehensible. Thus it is seen that it is very important to destroy the insects before the breeding season as a plant only slightly attacked in the spring may be covered, as well as the fruit, by fall. With millions of scales with their beaks thrust into the plant, pumping out the sap and poisoning the tissues, a tree will succumb in from one to three years if the scales are not checked by spraying, natural conditions or parasites.

Agricultural Notes

Clover or alfalfa sown in the spring should make a cutting of hay by late summer.

The celery cabbages are attractive salad vegetables. They can be grown at home.

Seldom does the cost of an hour of horse labor fall below 12 cents or exceed 30 cents.

The New Jersey State college finds that egg plants on highly acid soils are less likely to be damaged by wilt than on soils containing lime.

Experiments at the Pennsylvania State college reveal that nitrogenous fertilizers should be applied to sod orchards in the spring soon after the tips of the branch buds begin to show gray and before the blossom buds show pink.

Improved Uniform International Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. F. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Lesson for March 1 JESUS BENDING FORTH MISSIONARIES

GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore said he unto them, the harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:1-12. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Helpers. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Trying Out His Helpers. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Helpers of Jesus. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Missionary Task.

The sending forth of the seventy was for a special time and purpose. The missionary enterprise today has much in common with that of that day, but there are certain essential differences which should be recognized.

I. The Seventy Sent Forth (vv. 1, 2).

1. Appointed by the Lord (v. 1). They went forth not merely because of an inner urge but because of personal and direct appointment. Only those should go forth as missionaries who are appointed by the Lord.

2. Sent two by two (v. 1). The purpose of this was that they might mutually help, counsel, and support each other.

3. The reason for their appointment (v. 2). It was the greatness of the harvest and the fewness of the laborers.

4. The force back of missions (v. 2). The disciples were instructed to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers. Prayer indited by the Holy Spirit has been back of every missionary enterprise.

II. The Seventy Instructed (vv. 3-16).

1. As to the source of their commission (v. 3). "I send you." Everything depends upon the authority of the commission. No missionary should go forth without the consciousness of being sent by the Lord.

2. As to the dangers confronting them (v. 3). Missionaries thrust forth by the Lord will be exposed to deadly peril.

3. As to their support (v. 4). Being sent forth by the Lord, they were to look to him to provide for their need.

4. As to the speed of their mission (v. 4). So urgent was the need of the speedy evangelization of the Jewish territory that the distractions of social intercourse were to be omitted.

5. As to behavior in homes where received (vv. 5-9).

a. Offer the peace of the gospel (vv. 5, 6). This is to be done regardless as to whether it will be received or not. There is a reflex blessing in preaching the gospel.

b. Do not shift quarters (vv. 7, 8). Missionaries should remain in the home where they have been received, content with what is given them. They should not demand better food and more comfortable quarters than are commonly provided.

c. Heal the sick (v. 9). These disciples were given power to heal the sick. The ministers of Christ should seek to give relief to those in distress and use every opportunity to proclaim the gospel message.

6. The awful fate of those who reject Christ's message (vv. 10-16). Their case is more hopeless than that of Sodom. Those who reject Christ's messengers reject Christ and reject the Heavenly Father who sent him.

III. The Return of the Seventy (vv. 17-24).

1. Their report (v. 17). They were highly elated. They found that they could not only heal the sick, but cast out demons also. It is easy even in Christian service to be spoiled by our successes.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 18-24). (a) He told them that it was no surprise to him (vv. 18 and 19). With prophetic eye, he saw their success as indicating that time when the prince of this world would be overthrown (John 12:31). By virtue of his mighty triumph over Satan, he assures them that they need have no fear of what should befall them. (b) Real cause for rejoicing (v. 20). He promptly rebuked them, telling them that their chief joy should be because of their heavenly relation, not because of these miraculous gifts. (c) Jesus' exultation (vv. 21, 22). The consciousness that soon the victory would be won because God had committed all things unto him and that only as men received him could they know the Father caused him to rejoice in what was being accomplished. (d) Congratulated the disciples (vv. 23, 24). He assured them that they were sharing privileges which had been denied to many of the prophets and kings.

By His Presence

When God possesses us we are possessed by his presence, and the Holy Spirit cannot be in us without purifying our thoughts, desires and motives and so equipping us for his service.—W. H. Griffith Thomas.

Boundless Possibilities

Oh, I am staggered as I think of the boundless possibilities that God opens before the man whose whole nature is filled with His Spirit!—Selected.

How to Escape FLU

1 Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most likely to be spread; overcrowded cars and public meeting places; overheated, stuffy rooms.

2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughs and sneezers; breathe through the nose, get fresh air, but avoid drafts or chilling.

3 Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrus fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take extra precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.

4 Above all, avoid catching colds. They lower your resistance to the flu germ. Ward them off. At the first sign of any cold, take Bayer Aspirin and remain indoors if possible until your cold is gone. If you have a sore throat, dissolve some Bayer Aspirin tablets in water and gargle; this will relieve the soreness and reduce the inflammation.

5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor at once.

Collects Skulls for Living

The claim that he is the only man in the world in his particular line of business is made by Herr Hugo Brech. He supplies English doctors with Russian skulls. "There is a steady demand for Russian skulls in good condition," Herr Brech said. "Because of the hard fare on which Russian peasants live their teeth are in very good condition, and the skulls are therefore invaluable for dental demonstrations. My firm collects the skulls in Russia, and it is my job to sell them to doctors. A good skull brings in about $80."

Castoria made especially for CHILDREN

CHILDREN usually hate to take medicine but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And mothers like its action—so gentle, yet so prompt and effective.

Castoria is a never-failing comfort to children and mothers alike because it was formulated expressly for children—to correct their little ills and upsets.

The beauty of it is you can give Castoria to children of all ages with equally sure results. When baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed; and free from pain, he is asleep again in a jiffy.

In an older child when coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, a more liberal dose is usually all that is needed to cleanse and regulate the bowels.

Your doctor will tell you Castoria deserves a place in the family medicine cabinet until your children are grown. He knows it is safe for the tiniest baby; effective for a child in his teens.

Dog "Mothers" Lion Cubs

A small setter dog at the National Zoological park in Washington, D. C., has taken on the task of mothering three wee lion cubs. The cubs first appeared to have been born to a life of starvation because the mother lioness ignored them and stalked about her cage. The dog adopted the trio of cubs quite willingly, and watches over them with the greatest maternal solicitude.

A man who really believes in free love rarely talks about it.

Diner—Waiter, just look at that piece of chicken; it's nothing but skin and bone.

Waiter—Yes, sir; d'you want the feathers, too?

Village Spinster—Lead me to it.

Why can't a good educationist get a stunt in vaudeville? That's entertainment, too.
