SCHOOL TRUSTEE ELECTION DRAWS BIG CROWD OF VOTERS

289 Votes Cast In Three Precincts of the County

Never in the history of Terrell County has there been such an interest taken in an off-year election as was shown in the school trustee election last Saturday, when more than 280 of our citizens went to the polls and cast their votes. At the courthouse in precinct No. 1, a few minutes after the polls opened at 8 o'clock, voters appeared at the polling place ready to mark their ballots according to their choice, and from that time on to 7 p. m., the hour for closing the polls, the three election officials were kept busy by the big stream of men and women voters. By the noon hour, in this precinct, 100 votes had been cast and at 7 p. m., 234 qualified voters had registered their choice. In precinct No. 2 (Dryden) an equal interest was shown as some 45 voters exercised their rights of citizenship at the polls. In precinct 3 (Big Cayon) 10 votes were cast. In precinct No. 4 (T-5) no election was held, the reason for which we were unable to learn.

In the race for the Common School District Trustee, which was very hotly contested, precinct No. 1 gave R. N. Allen 98 votes, W. E. Stirman 130, and A. F. Buchanan 1. Precinct No. 2 gave R. N. Allen 8 votes, W. E. Stirman 8, and A. F. Buchanan 29. Precinct No. 3 gave R. N. Allen 10 votes and W. E. Stirman none. This made the total vote in this race as follows: R. N. Allen 116, W. E. Stirman 138, and A. F. Buchanan 30.

In the other races, those for county school trustees, very little interest was shown. Joe Nichols was elected from commissioners precinct 1 with 25 votes, and Max Bogusch received 21 votes for the county-at-large. In precinct No. 3, E. W. Hardgrave was elected, receiving the full 10 votes cast and Max Bogusch received 10 votes for county-at-large. In precinct 2 we were unable to get the votes on this race.

The Commissioners Court will in all probability meet Monday to canvass the returns and next week we hope to give a full report.

Humble Station Under New Management

The new oil station, which was recently built by the Humble Oil and Refining Company of Houston, is now under the management of Fred Charlton and Roy M. Bogusch.

This station, which is of the very latest type in construction, is located on West Oak Street. The equipment consists of electric gasoline pumps, hydraulic lift grease rack, and an automatic tire inflator. With this up-to-date equipment these two young men are better able to serve the public. The rest rooms, both for ladies and for gentlemen, are of the latest and most modernly equipped to be found anywhere.

Fred and Roy need no introduction to our citizens as most of their life has been spent here. Both are energetic, business-like young fellows and their many friends predict for them success.

In addition to servicing your car with Humble oils, they are prepared to do a first class job of washing, greasing as well as light repair work on any make of car.

Newsy Notes From The High School

As was announced sometime ago the date for the Sanderson Chautauqua program is May 11 to 14. This particular program is being sponsored by the Associated Chautauquas of America, one of the largest institutions of its kind in the world. Chautauqua's aim is to keep a constructive entertainment available for the boys and girls and to promote art, drama and music for adults who enjoy these essentials of modern culture.

The evening program on the first day, Monday, May 11, is composed of one play, "Kibitzer," said to be the most up-to-the-minute play in America. This is presented by the Sprague Players.

On Tuesday afternoon, May 12, Jay Tobias and his carefree funsters give fun lovers a memorable matinee of music and nonsense. For the evening program the Tobias Company again entertain with dancing and playing and singing.

Margoy Hayes, nationally known soprano, with her assistants, is to be the outstanding feature of the Wednesday program; however, during the evening's program Judge Bale of Ohio is to give his challenging address on "Tomorrow's Citizens of Today."

On Thursday afternoon, May 14, Miss Althea Dominick will bring the only program of its kind—an "entertaining lecture of demonstration on 'How to Dress on a Moderate Income.'"

On Thursday evening "The Big Push," a stirring and lively modern drama, is to be presented.

KILLS BIG EAGLE AS IT FLIES IN THE AIR

A big eagle measuring nearly seven feet from tip to tip of wing was killed by Bill E. Stavley last Saturday morning about 10 o'clock. The eagle was killed with a shot from a 30-30 rifle while soaring some 200 feet or more in the air. The shot passed through the center of the breast and was an exceptionally good hit at that distance and considering the bird was flying. Mr. Stavley said he had been trying to get a shot at the eagle for over a year, but the bird would not light long enough at a time to get a bead on him and would swoop and dart so quickly while in flight it was difficult to get a shot at him. The eagle was killed on the Ben H. Brown estate ranch near 12-mile.

Brown Stirman, who has trapped in the neighborhood of 12-mile for several years, says that he has seen this eagle on several occasions for the past four or five years and that the eagle has during that period killed many lambs and kids. Mr. Stirman said he had tried to trap the bird but that it would not go near a trap, and it was his opinion the eagle had been caught in a trap once and had become wary of them.

Mr. Stavley was in town Sunday evening with the eagle spread across the back of his car. It was viewed with much interest by many of our citizens. Several ranchmen in Terrell County have been troubled by these big eagles and have tried poisoning, traps, and other means to get rid of them.

MISS GLASS RETURNS

Miss Melburn Glass, who has been absent from her duties as teacher in the school due to sickness and death in her family, came in last Friday from her home in Sterling City and assumed her duties at school on Monday of this week.

B. J. Brannan is Re-Elected As Superintendent

B. J. Brannan, superintendent of public schools of Sanderson, has been elected to serve his fourth term in the capacity of superintendent. Mr. Brannan is a progressive school man, as the progress which this school system has made during the last three years well indicates. He has spared no effort in bringing the school to the foremost among the better educational systems of Texas.

Mr. Brannan has both a B. A. and a B. S. degree, and has completed most of the work prerequisite to a Masters Degree. He is a life member of Texas State Teachers Association, and a member of the National Education Association.

The new high school building and gymnasium which has just been completed at a cost of some $150,000 are among the best to be found in Texas for this size town. They are modern in every respect, conveniently arranged, and all departments including not only those for academic subjects but home economics, manual training, music and public speaking, are adequately equipped.

The gymnasium is regulation size for volley ball and basketball; it has maple flooring, a hot air heating system and seating capacity of some 500.

Under the administration of Mr. Brannan a very unique health program is being sponsored by Sanderson schools. The aim of this program is to benefit every child in school. Regular physical education classes are offered in high school, while in the lower grades supervised play periods are provided. Some attention is given to the diet of children, and a mid-morning lunch of milk is served to all children of the first and second grades.

Dental examinations are made once each year of every child in school, and a report of the condition of each mouth is made to the child's parent. These examinations are made free of charge and are a part of the regular health program that is being carried out.

Sanderson high school was admitted to the Southern Association at the recent meeting held in Atlanta last December. This is an indication that our system is listed among the highest class of schools by the educational authorities of the state. The system has 23 accredited units of affiliation, and application for 2 more is being made this year.

Texas-Louisiana Power Co. Drilling a New Well

The Texas-Louisiana Power Company has started the drilling of a new water well here. The well was spudded in last Saturday and the site is about 100 feet south of the company's plant and some 10 or 12 feet east of the wool house. J. A. Cox, a local driller who has drilled a number of good water wells in this section of the country, has the contract for drilling the well. Monday at a depth of about 28 feet the bit struck a solid rock containing considerable flint. It is believed that a good flow of water will be struck in this well at a proper depth. Several years ago Mr. Hackett, who was then an operator for the Southern Pacific at Longfellow, and who is known in this part of the country as a "water witch", prophesied that a river of water flowed underneath the building of the Sanderson Wool Commission Co. If this well proves to be a good producer another one may probably be drilled just east of it, thus giving the Texas-Louisiana Company means to supply our citizens at all times with an abundance of pure, fresh water. This is something that has long been needed here and the company is to be congratulated on its present movement.

C. A. Moreland, local manager for the Texas-Louisiana Power Company, is a wide-awake progressive man who has the interest of our town at heart. In an interview with a reporter for the Times, Mr. Moreland said his company was desirous of giving our citizens first class service in the way of lights, power, ice and water. He said the rapid growth during the past few years of the business and residential sections of Sanderson created a necessity for a greater water pressure and that this increased pressure could be brought about by placing the water towers higher on the hill instead of on the side as now. He stated this might be done sometime in the future.

Big Oil Interests Attracted by Oil Showings Here

The records at the courthouse here reveals the fact that thousands of people have purchased small tracts of land in various portions of Block D 10, T. C. Ry. Co. survey, with the view of several test wells being drilled in this block.

A Jew by the name of Greenberg from Los Angeles, Calif., is reported to be down at the Keck Pecos Trust's Hamilton No. 1 well, seeing after drilling operations.

Annual Junior-Senior Banquet

On Saturday night, April 4, the Juniors entertained for the Seniors with a banquet at the Kerr hotel. The colors of lavender and ivory were carried out in all the decorations and flowers. The Easter spirit prevailed in the table decorations.

The program was carried out along most informal lines. Ray Qualtrough, president of the junior class, acted as toastmaster and as such gave the welcoming address. The response of the seniors was given by Novis White. Lowry Stradley gave a take-off of Miss Bonnie Cox, senior sponsor. He followed this with "Advice to Seniors on Graduating." The Junior Demons consisting of D. C. Thrift, H. D. Johnson, Aylmer Griffith and Henry Goldwire accompanied by Miss Robinson gave several musical selections. Humorous songs were sung in duet by William Lea and Ernest Farley. M. K. Sandifer and his guest and brother, Perry Sandifer of Fort Worth, gave several novel musical bits. "The Handicap," a playlet, was put on by the following cast: hero, Archie Milam; heroine, Mattierue Newton; villain, William Lea; devil, Leo Daniels; jockeys, Jack Hayre and Ernest Farley and reader Aylmer Griffith. Talks were made by Mr. Nelson, Mrs. Lawrence and Opal Shelton.

The guest list included: faculty members, Mr. and Mrs. Sandifer and guest, Perry Sandifer; Mr. and Mrs. Nelson; Coach Knight; Mr. Brannan; Misses Bonnie Cox, Martha Robinson and Fleta Bell Jernigan; seniors: Opal Shelton Novis White, Lillie Strange, Alyne Haass, Gus Kercheville, Andrew Henry and Marifrances Mason; juniors: Mattierue Newton, Ethel Van Cleave, Mildred Appel, Ray Qualtrough, Aylmer Griffith, William Lea, Lowry Stradley, D. C. Thrift, H. D. Johnson, Henry Goldwire, Leo Daniels, Archie Milam, James Daniels, Ernest Farley, Jack Hayre and J. A. Kercheville.

York City were here last week inspecting the various fossils and rocks exhibited in the office of J. Calvin Stansell, situated in the Princess Bldg., in this city, and made the usual remark, "Where did you find them?"

It is reported that the Big Bend Oil Corporation has resumed work on their well on section 155 in Block D, M. K. & T. E. Ry. Co. survey.

It is also reported that the Woolley-Jones test well on Section 43 in Block B 2, C. C. S. D. & R. G. N. G. Ry. Co. survey, have resumed their drilling program.

It is reported that Robert L. Hill, the first geologist that the State of Texas had, will arrive in this county shortly to do some geological work and to visit J. Calvin Stansell and a few other friends.

As our reporter has not been able to visit the country this week it has been impossible to gather the news from the Jessie McPhee well, and the well being drilled by the Transcontinental and Mid-Kansas.

Mrs. John Craigh, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Alfred E. Creigh Jr., has returned to her home in San Antonio.

Sanderson High School Will be Represented

Next week-end, April 16, the annual interscholastic events in both track and field and literary divisions will be held in Alpine. A complete schedule of events for the three-day activities has been outlined by the officials who have charge of these events.

Last year 308 contestants alone were in attendance at the meet which was held in Alpine and it is expected that about the same number from the 14 entering counties in district 17 will enter their activities for the three day event this year.

J. P. Coleman of Sul Ross is the director general. Other directors are B. C. Graves, athletics; D. M. Major, essay; official reporter, J. W. O'Conner; music memory, Miss Irma Lee Batey; typewriting, P. M. Perrod. The other officials are high school heads in the various competing counties.

The first activities have been scheduled for Thursday afternoon when the preliminaries in tennis events will be run off on the Sul Ross college courts. Friday events will include more tennis, declamation, debate, musical programs and the declamation finals that night. The extemporaneous speaking, music memory and field events will be crowded in on Saturday.

Following is the program for the three days events as it was published in last week's issue of the Alpine Avalanche:

A large number of interested citizens as well as members of the faculty, who can, plan to attend this annual event.

OVERFLOW CROWDS AT THE EASTER SERVICES

The Easter services at the First Methodist Church Friday, April 3, and Sunday, April 5, drew twice the capacity of the church.

The free will plate offering at the services, including the receipts from the chicken dinner served by the Women's Missionary Society, was $399.98. This offering goes for the liquidation of the parsonage debt.

W. D. O'Bryant, chairman of the board of stewards of the church, on behalf of the board expresses a deep sense of gratitude to those contributing to this offering.

OPEN AIR CONCERTS FOR PUBLIC TO BE GIVEN BY THE SCHOOL BAND

Announcement was made this week by M. K. Sandifer, who is instructor of the band and orchestra in the school, that the band will give open air concerts every Friday evening.

The first open air concert will probably be given on Friday evening, April 24, at the park in front of the Kerr Hotel. Concerts will be given every Friday night from then on until the close of school.

Much progress has been made in the band and orchestra of our school. It is composed of youngsters both in the grammar and high school. This is the first year that we have had a band or orchestra in our school and Sanderson is certainly proud of them and much praise is due to Mr. Sandifer, Prof. Brannan and all who were responsible for the organization of the band and orchestra. Everywhere that the band has played they have been given a big ovation.

We are sure that these open air concerts will be looked forward to by our citizens and that the band will always have a large crowd out to hear them.

Upholstered Furniture Requires Care

Using Air Pressure to Apply an Aqueous Fluoride Solution to Moth-Proof Wool Tapestry.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

Furniture upholstered in wool or mohair is attractive, and many people buy it for their homes. Unless proper precautions are taken, however, injury by moths is apt to occur. The bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture believes that there is no reason why woolen covers cannot be maintained in good condition indefinitely if certain control measures are used.

The adult insect, or clothes moth, which may be seen flying about in practically any season of the year in heated houses, does not eat the fabrics. It is seeking a good place to lay its eggs, so that when the larva or worm hatches it will have its favorite food right at hand. The larvae eat the fabric on the surface of the furniture and also get under the cover and eat the wool threads that go through to the back.

Many manufacturers now treat fabrics to be used for furniture covers to make them resistant to moth attack. Another precaution taken by the manufacturer is to place a layer of cotton batting between the padding and the cover of the piece of furniture. It is essential that this layer of cotton batting should be continuous, without breaks through which the moths can work their way to the under side of the fabric. Fumigation at the warehouse or by the furniture dealer is also used to assure freedom from infestation in the piece when it is delivered to the purchaser.

In buying upholstered furniture, the choice of leather, silk, cotton, linen, or rayon covers eliminates the moth problem from the start. Feather cushions are not immune to moth damage, but are rarely disturbed. If mohair or wool covers are selected, it is well to inquire whether they have been treat-

Food Hints That Will Appeal to All

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"Good housekeeping is not necessarily good home-making. Spotless floors may grace a house, not a home. Real living means comfort, happiness and growth."

Nowadays with the loveliest of linens and laces for the table, so many up-to-date hostesses save the wear and tear on these pieces for more state occasions, and for one's intimate friends the delightful colors in crepe tissue are used for cloth and napkins. It is such a saving on both the linen and the nerves, for if an accident occurs a fresh crepe cloth may be quickly placed with no damage to either the feelings of the hostess or guest.

One may buy just the note of color in napkins and tablecloths that may be carried out in the refreshments, table decorations of flowers and glass or china.

The new china of bone, unbreakable though quite expensive, may prove in the long run most economical. The intriguing colors on the creamy plates are most exquisite. Many hostesses use the large dinner plates for the cover plates, matching with cup and sauces, properly used, are safe and fairly effective for home treatment if the piece of furniture to be fumigated can be tightly wrapped in blankets for a day or two. Directions for the use of this substance are given in Farmers' Bulletin 1655-F on the control of moths in upholstered furniture. It may be obtained free from the United States Department of Agriculture. The bulletin also mentions a number of moth-proofing solutions which can be applied without injury to furniture coverings.

Garnishes should be featured as much as possible. Not only are they appealing to eye but they serve as appetizers and in many cases supply the body with mineral salts greatly needed.

Ham Sandwich de Luxe.—Chop cold cooked ham fine, add prepared mustard. Beat three eggs, add a cupful of milk and mix well, add a bit of salt. Spread the ham on bread, make sandwiches and cut into triangles. Fry in hot butter after dipping into the egg mixture. Serve this dish for luncheon with hot coffee.

The ordinary deviled ham when spread on buttered bread and covered with a thin slice of cheese, then browned in the oven, makes a most unusual combination.

To keep the family happy and well nourished, one must be constantly alert to find new combinations. We have favorite foods, as we have favorite friends, yet it is not possible nor wise for us to always be served with the foods we like best, or associate with people always agreeable. We may develop character in our restraint in regard to foods as we do in our companionship of friends.

As a rule our cooks prepare too complicated foods, which we are told are not good for our alimentary tract, overworking our organs of digestion. We are advised to go at least one day a week with no food at all, but plenty of water or fruit juice. This gives the stomach a rest and food will be much more enjoyed after such a fast day. Another good suggestion which seems reasonable is to go one week without any kind of meat, eating vegetables and fruits in abundance and plenty of bulky foods like brown bread, cereals and fibrous vegetables. The simple diet is the best, using freely all kinds of vegetables in season and but one or two at a meal when meats are served.

The common foods served daily often become monotonous, if they are served day after day in the same way. Lay away all unused clothing, jewelry, pictures, ornaments in boxes to give to those less fortunate. Things that we are tired of are often highly treasured by another.

Hashed Brown Potatoes a Welcome Dish

Have you ever wondered how the restaurant chef made those delicious hashed-brown potatoes, folded over like an omelet, with a crisp brown crust on the outside? Hashed-brown potatoes are easy to make and are a good way to warm over boiled potatoes. Cut or chop the cooked potatoes into pieces the size of the tip of the finger, or dice the potatoes first into pieces of this size and cook quickly, taking them from the fire before they become soft or mushy. The onion flavor is, of course, a special attraction for those who like onion. Many people, particularly in New England, would derive the two tablespoonsful of fat from dried salt pork. The following directions are from the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

4 cups finely chopped potatoes
1/4 tsp. pepper
2 tbs. fat
1 tbs. chopped onion
1 cup hot water
Parsley

Combine the potatoes and onions, salt, and pepper. Melt the fat in a smooth heavy skillet, add the water, put the potatoes in a thin even layer, and cook slowly until a gold brown crust is formed. Fold the potatoes over like an omelet, turn out on a hot platter, garnish with parsley, and serve at once.

Hair's Growth After Death

Certain claims have been made that in rare cases hair has been proved to have grown after death. The United States public health service has stated there are no authentic records of such cases. The widespread belief in this growth is held to be caused by the shrinking of the skin toward the roots of the hairs, giving an appearance of hair growth. The same may be said with regard to growth of nails.

And all through it the guest of honor ate and ate and ate, and ate, for he said,

"I can enjoy a turkey dinner party when I'm the guest and not the food, and it is fine to be so big and strong that the silly people don't want you, ha, ha, ha, gobble, gobble."

And all the fairies agreed with him. It was really a splendid party.

Story for Children When the Sandman Comes

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

The fairies had a party today—a dinner party. It was a turkey dinner, but it was a different kind of a turkey dinner from any you could imagine.

All the fairies are feeling quite weary now from their wonderful day but they will soon be fast asleep. However, that is not telling you about the party.

In the first place they had a guest of honor. I don't believe you could ever, in a hundred years—or at least fifty—guess the name of the guest of honor.

Well, it was none other than Mr. Turkey Gobbler himself. He came with his chest way out, strutting proudly along, followed by some of his family.

They called a turkey dinner party one which had Mr. Turkey Gobbler for the guest of honor, so you see it wasn't the usual kind of a turkey dinner, for Mr. Turkey walked to the party instead of being carried in on a platter!

"Well," he gobbled-gobbled, as he walked to the pine-wooded grove where the fairies were going to have their dinner party, "these silly people think they have paid me an insult when they have said I was proud and vain and—tough—not good to eat!"

"Ha, ha, gobble-gobble, as if I cared about being tough. In fact I like it.

"That's why I'm the guest of honor here!"

"Yes," he continued, "haven't I a right to be vain? I am at a dinner party myself as a real guest of honor, admired for the way I walk and chatter, and not for the way I'm cooked on a platter.

"I almost could sing a song about that for joy."

And, then, would you believe it, that silly old turkey began to sing—or shriek we would have called it.

"Gobble, gobble, gobble," he called, and he thought it was a perfect song.

"Good health, my dears," he went on, "is most important. Of course it is well enough to have turkey dinners."

"I am proud that they have such parties named after our family, but just the same this is a very delightful, a most enchanting, a most exciting, a most beautiful change."

"You're a fine speechmaker," laughed the Queen of the Fairies, "but dinner is ready now and we are all very hungry."

At that very moment a lovely tablecloth of new spring ferns was laid in front of all the invited guests, and such a feast as they did have of berries, nuts, and all sorts of other de-individual type, it is "so becoming." For instance, if her ladyship wants to show her curls she chooses a cloche with a very shallow crown so that it sets back on the head in the bewitching pose caught by the camera as shown at the top of this group. It may be of any one of the exotic straws—bakou, sisol, or ballibunt, or paper panama, the last named particularly registering high style.

Very wide brims are also "in" again. The model centered to the left is of novelty straw, its crown being crisscrossed with narrow velvet ribbon.

Sheer bodices with all-over braiding done in vermicelli patterning as pictured at the top to the right, present an interesting phase of dressy millinery. Note in this model that there is a suggestion of a bandeau, which emphasizes an off-the-face flare for the brim.

Those who feel at their best in a snug hat of the toque variety may select from among a collection of chic types of which the clever little black-and-white straw model to the right in this group is one. It is a crochet type, limp as can be in the hand—the sort that must be worn to be appreciated.

It's a bit of a poke which concludes this quintette of spring chapeaux, a sand-color bakou, to be explicit, with a band and bow of brown grosgrain ribbon. Its brim is plented at the back as are so many of the new models.

Personal "I. Q."

The intelligence quotient or "I. Q." of a person is determined by multiplying the mental age by 100 and dividing by the actual age. Thus the intelligence quotient of a normal person is 100. A person with an "I. Q." below 80 is rated as subnormal, while one with an "I. Q." above 120 is rated as gifted. About five persons in 100 will be found to be 20 below normal and about five 20 above normal.

Keeping Record of Home Expenses

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

When a family has decided to keep an itemized record of household expenses, who should keep the account? The one who does the bulk of the purchasing, usually the wife, is generally the best person to attend to this task. But so long as everything necessary to a correct picture of the family financial situation is obtained, it makes no difference whether the records of expenditure are made by the husband, the wife, or some other member of the household. It is practical to have one person enter all the items so that classifications may be uniform.

When several different people in the household handle money and make purchases it is a good plan to hang up in a convenient place an ordinary blank book with a pencil attached to it. Then each one who pays for goods or services can note the kind and cost of what has been bought. Personal expenses, if covered by a lump sum or allowance, are not entered among the household items. The homemaker probably carries in her purse a small notebook for writing down petty cash spent. Some items are doubtless paid by check, either monthly or at the time of purchase. All these miscellaneous entries must be collected and classified in one permanent record book to obtain a true picture of how the family money is being used.

A very good classified record of family expenditures has been designed by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. It is made in loose-leaf form, so that unnecessary pages can be removed. The following groups of expenditure are shown in the marginal index: Food, housing, operating, furnishings and equipment, clothing, health, development, personal, automobile and savings. Purchases are transferred at regular intervals from the miscellaneous entries in the daily notebooks to the proper heading, so that at a glance one may see what is spent for food, clothes, and so on. Anyone could make such a record out of a blank book, or, by sending fifty cents to the government printing office at Washington, D. C., obtain the special loose-leaf printed forms. Among them are a number of other pages for information about family finances, such as accounts payable and receivable, a household inventory, records of insurance policies and investments, and for the rural family, the value of products furnished by the farm for home use or sold by the homemaker.

A DOCTOR'S ADVICE for Stubborn Bowels

"Drink at least six glasses of water daily—preferably before meals. Eat bulkier foods, such as vegetables, fruits and coarse breads. Use a mild laxative as needed."

That is Dr. Caldwell's advice to people with stubborn bowels. He specialized on the bowels; treated thousands for constipation and its ills. The prescription he used over and over in his practice has become the world's most popular laxative! "Syrup Pepsin," as it is now called, was tested by more than 47 years of practice.

Today you can get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drugstore in America. It is always the same; made exactly according to the original prescription, from laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other valuable ingredients. Nothing in it to harm even a baby. It does not gripe, sicken or cause any discomfort. But it moves the bowels; it gets rid of all the souring waste which clogs the system; makes you bilious, headachy, gassy, bloated, weak, half-sick. A doctor should know what is best for the bowels. Syrup Pepsin is a famous doctor's choice of a safe, pleasant, effective laxative for men, women, older folks, babies and children.

CHANGE OF LIFE

"I used Cardui about sixteen years ago, and found it helpful," says Mrs. Ruth Scott, of Tusculum, Ala. "I also used it during change of life. I was very nervous and my back was weak. I did not sleep well at night, and was restless and very worn-out in daytime. I took Cardui at this time. It built me up and from then I have been well and strong."

SWEETEN ACID STOMACH THIS PLEASANT WAY

When there's distress two hours after eating—heartburn, indigestion, gas—suspect excess acid. The best way to correct this is with an alkali. Physicians prescribe Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. A spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water neutralizes many times its volume in excess acid; and does it at once. To try it is to be through with crude methods forever. Be sure to get genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. All druggists have the generous 25c and 50c bottles. Full directions in package.

Hubby Not Altogether Interested in "Sport"

Arthur Samuels recently crossed the ocean with a man who was frankly bored with the trip, says Walter Trumbull. When he was not in the barber shop or the bar, he was restlessly sprinting up and down the deck like Columbus looking for dry land. "My husband's chief interests are horses and dogs," explained his wife. "He got a couple of books on sport out of the library, but he is so restless that he can't get into them." Mr. Samuels had curiosity enough to look at the books on sport the man had selected. They were "The Hounds of Spring," and James Branch Cabell's "The Silver Stallion."—Los Angeles Times.

An Eminent Physician Prescribed this Tonic

As a young man Dr. R. V. Pierce practiced medicine in Pennsylvania. His prescriptions met with such great demand that he moved to Buffalo, N. It aids digestion, acts as a tonic, and enriches the blood—clears away pimples and annoying eruptions and tends to keep the complexion fresh and clear. This medicine comes in both fluid and tablets. CHAPTER XV —24— Some Day

But the day was not over for Ernestine. She left Will at the bank. His coat pocket was stuffed with the packet of bills the teller had given them, and her bank balance was reduced to three figures. But that didn't matter. Not a bit. She was a million times richer than she had been the day before. The bankbook figures would fatten again.

She wished she had her car, but, lacking it, she went across to Sheridan road, took a bus north, rode almost to Devon, left the bus and went to Lillian's.

Nobody answered the bell, but the door was unlocked, so Ernestine walked in. The house was silent, but she was instantly aware of the fact that some one was in it. She called, but no one answered. She went through into the kitchen. The maid's bedroom was off the kitchen and the door stood open. Ernestine went in there and saw that the room wore an unoccupied look. She opened the closet door. The hooks were empty. The maid had left, or had been dismissed.

She was still under the domination of her deep self, and, as she had been governed in Will's office an hour or so earlier by forces she did not understand, so now she went quickly up the stairs, through the silent house and into the big front bedroom where Lillian and Loring slept. The cover showed the impress of a body, the pillow had been drawn out from under the spread. She looked swiftly about and was not at all surprised to see Loring standing against the wall, behind her, one hand behind his back.

His coat collar was turned up across the back, his hair was in disorder, he was unshaved, and across one cheek was a deep imprint where his sleeve, or his pillow, had creased his flesh.

Ernestine went to him and held out her hand.

"Give it to me," she said sternly, as she might have addressed Peter.

Loring stared at her sulkily for a moment, his haggard eyes taking on a belated vitality. Then, silently, but with a shrug and a grimace, he drew from behind him a small nickel-plated revolver and put it in her hand. Ernestine crossed the room, opened the window and flung it far away into the water of the lake that breathed against the sandy beach.

She turned back to Loring, closed the window and dusted her hands.

"That's that," she said, with a gleam in her eyes. "What did you think that was going to do for you?"

He dragged himself away from the wall and sank down into a chaise-longue. With a kind of groan Loring hid his face in his hands and sat there like a broken man.

"I didn't know till this afternoon," he said. "But the grand jury—"

"That's all right, Loring," said Ernestine. "That's fixed."

"Fixed?" he said hoarsely, and looked up at her, his expression a little wild. "You don't understand. They've got me seven ways."

"Not now," she said, thinking how strange it was that he could never know about Pastano, and about the twenty thousand dollars.

"Will fixed it," she said gently. "You know, he has friends who told him. Will fixed it for you, Loring. He could—there are men downtown who would do anything for Will. He knows the ropes."

Loring's head fell forward again.

"I'm a failure," he muttered. "A complete failure—and now Will pulls me out of the rubbish heap. I've been here in the house all afternoon, trying to screw myself up to do one decent thing—to get myself out of the way—before all this falls on the rest of you, and I couldn't even do this."

"Of course you couldn't. You're too perfectly healthy. You've been a fool perhaps—like the rest of us, but you aren't crazy, and only insane people are capable of self-destruction. Look, Loring, you can start again. Why, men sometimes have to start again when they're old. Lots of men fall once—or twice—and then succeed. You can start back and rebuild your father's old business. What if you have to let the house and the car go—It's a small price for a new start. Pastano will let you alone, as long as you stay off of his preserves. Lillian's got her money. Will and I are going to start new."

He looked up at her—eager to be comforted as a child is eager to be comforted—eager to believe her, coming back, slowly and painfully, from the dark places of fright and madness.

"But Lillian"—he said, protesting, arguing, as mortal man always argues, on the wrong side—"Lillian's going to have a baby—that was what sickened me on all that old business—I'd been sick of it, anyhow, and when I knew I might have a son—I had to get clear. I told her to go to New York, last week, but she wouldn't. She's stuck to me, Ernestine. I never believed she would. I thought she was a fair-weather wife. I've always thought it. But she's been wonderful. She let her maid go, and she's been doing her own housework. She sold her car and brought me the money. She wrote to her father to let her have her trust fund outright. Now she's going out looking for a flat. That's all right—but when I thought of prison—and Lillian's baby coming in all that trouble, it seemed that the best thing I could do would be to get out. If I were gone, she'd go home to her mother, and perhaps no one would know. I'm all caved in about Lillian, about the way she's taken it."

"Why, Loring," said Ernestine, and laughed shakily. "Lillian adores you—always did. She loves you. When you've just found out how much she cares, you contemplate leaving her. What a way to figure. If that's not like a man!"

They talked a little. Ernestine sat down on the dressing table, flung her hat upon Lillian's bed and talked to him. She told him of the new plans she and Will had made. Gradually he relaxed, came back to normal. He reached up and turned his coat collar down and put up a hand and smoothed his hair. After a little he got up and shook his big body.

"I believe I'll go and shave," he said. "I'm a fright. You won't tell Lillian or Will about this afternoon?"

"Why should I tell them? It would just scare them both. Have you had lunch?"

"No, I don't think so; no, I didn't." "Neither did I. I'll go downstairs and fix some coffee and sandwiches while you're shaving."

From the kitchen she could hear him moving about; then she heard the front door open and the click of the latch. She went to the hall, and Lillian saw her. Lillian came back to the kitchen.

"You didn't answer the phone, so I came over—Loring's upstairs. He said he hadn't eaten"—she made a gesture to the preparations on the table.

Lillian nodded absently.

"Ernestine," she said softly, quickly, "I'm going to have a baby."

Ernestine kissed her. "I'm awfully glad."

"Did you know about all of Loring's trouble?" "Will told me some—Loring's told me the rest—but the worst is over for him now."

"Poor kid," said Lillian. She leaned against the door a moment and smiled at her younger sister. It seemed to Ernestine that since she had last seen her, the hard surface had dissolved from Lillian.

"Isn't it funny? Now everything is different. I used to wonder how you could go ahead when things were so hard. But it's not so bad—in the thick of it, as it seems from the sidelines. Just to know the baby's coming makes all this mess of Loring's seem so unimportant—I don't care what arrangements we make. Oh, Ernestine, there have been times when I thought Loring loved you more than he did me, but these last few days he's been so sweet to me—so worried about me. He's humbled—it makes my heart ache. I can't tell you how I feel."

"I guess I know," Ernestine answered. "It's this business of marriage—but go on up to him, darling, and get him to eat something. All this will straighten itself out."

Lillian went up the stairs. Standing in the hall, looking after her, Ernestine realized that these sorrows were blessings—these were the things that bound a man and a woman together. This would break for ever Loring's old fixed idea about herself, and Lillian's belief that she had married for her own advantage. This would leave them close together, warm, heart to heart.

She turned the gas low under the coffee-pot, spread a napkin over the sandwiches she had fixed and slipped quietly out of the house. Perhaps Will was at home, and she would eat with him.

As she walked she began to plan all the new life. Her practical, efficient mind set itself with vigor upon the new problems. The removal to the lake—the need of a studio there for Will, the possibility of adjusting their life to changeable income. But Will was so active—he would doubtless have all the work he could do, within a year or two. Some day he would be famous, and he would find the world willing to pay for beauty as well as wit.

She walked more quickly—eager to be home, the young blood singing in her heart.

Some day— [THE END.]

Writer Would Go Limit in State Abbreviations

The abbreviation used for Ohio is "O." Apparently Oklahoma and Oregon do not object. But there are six states whose names begin with letters which are not the first letters of the names of any of the other states. These states are: Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Pennsylvania and Utah. Why not use D, F, G, L, P and U for the abbreviations in those cases? Also, West Virginia is the only "West" state. So why not simply use "W. V.," instead of the usual "W. Va.?" The only reason for abbreviations in the first place is the desire to save time and space. Then why not save all the time and space possible, or else use the full name? Why fuss with "Pa." and "Penn." and "Penna." when "P." would fill the bill?—Worcester Telegram.

The Boyhood of Famous Americans

George Eastman

The young bank clerk was in need of a vacation. He had been working hard in the confinement of a bank. His health was poor. He planned on taking a trip to San Domingo, where the United States was likely to buy a naval base, according to the gossip of the day. He told the engineer of the bank of his plans. The latter advised him to take a photographic outfit with him. This was in the days of President Grant's administration.

While the trip never materialized, George Eastman, the young bank clerk, then and there began a deep study of photography. He had been interested in the art from the time he was fifteen years old, but until he made plans for a southern trip he had never really applied himself to the study of the subject.

The result of his studies gave the world the kodak and the modern process of photography.

George Eastman was born in Waterville, N. Y., in 1854. A few years later his father moved to Rochester where he established a commercial school, teaching his pupils business methods by actual experience. The father died in 1890.

George was an only son. He was a quiet and somewhat shy lad. His mother made many sacrifices to keep him in school until he was fourteen years old. She taught him never to buy anything unless he could pay for it, with the result that he was never in debt.

He got his first job as an office boy in an insurance office. His wages amounted to $3 a week. He worked his way up until he was getting $600 a year. Frequently he labored over his books eleven hours a day.

He had a chance to become a book-keeper in a savings bank at $1,000 a year. The young man didn't hesitate about accepting an opportunity that brought with it such a substantial increase in salary. When his pay was low his mother had taken in boarders so as to keep a nice home for her only son.

He was twenty years old when he went to work in the bank. He remained there seven years, during which time he took up the study of photography in earnest in view of his contemplated trip to the West Indies. He bought a camera and took lessons on the wet plate process. Glass plates were in use then. They had to be sensitized before using, a tedious process.

This meant that the photographer of the day had to carry a bulky equipment if he worked in the field. Treatment of the plates made it necessary to take a silver bath and dark tent so as to prepare the plates properly to receive an image.

The amateur enthusiast took such an equipment with him on a trip to Lake Superior, which was a substitute for the planned but not carried out excursion to San Domingo. His experience on his vacation showed him that the joys of picture taking could be made available to every one only through the perfection of a process which would substitute compact and light equipment for the bulky paraphernalia and eliminate the tedious process of preparing each plate.

Meanwhile his career in the bank was not progressing to suit him. The official, whose assistant he was, resigned his position. Young Eastman's work had been most satisfactory. He looked forward confidently to moving up a notch and succeeding his immediate superior.

But he didn't get the job. The place went to a relative of one of the directors of the institution. That convinced him that he had better get out of the bank as soon as possible. He determined to go on his own when he could see his way clear to do so.

He rented a small room for his experiments in the dry plate process. He worked hard and intelligently, but not without the disappointments that come to all inventors. He was often too tired to undress when he went to bed. Frequently he slept on Saturday night until Monday morning, awakening only to eat the meals his devoted mother brought to him.

He didn't have to seek money to finance his experiments. His mother had taught him thrift as a little fellow and he never forgot the lesson. He saved $37.50 the first year he worked. He had $2,500 in the bank when he was twenty-five years old. His first photographic equipment cost him nearly $100.

From that he built the great industrial concern which today bears his name.

Black Locust Grown for Posts and Money

Good Tree to Plant to Check Damaging Soil Erosion.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service. Early rapid growth into hard, strong, and durable wood, suitable for fence posts, insulator pins, hubs, mine timbers, and tree nails, commend black locust as a tree crop, says the United States forest service.

Few hardwood trees equal black locust in growth for the first 20 to 30 years. Its network of roots and sprouts make it also a good tree to plant to check erosion. Thick stands develop shade, which causes the young trees to drop their lower branches and develop clean, straight poles in the first ten or fifteen years of their growth. Shade is also a deterrent to the locust borer, the tree's worst enemy.

One-year old seedlings for planting may be bought from nurseries or from state forestry departments. It is also easy to propagate planting stock on the farm. The seed should be soaked eight to twelve hours in warm water, not over 100 degrees F., and sown immediately one-half inch deep. Spring sowing is preferable.

The tree thrives especially well in the Appalachian region and is grown successfully in most other parts of the United States. As post timber, good black locust in Ohio has shown 77 per cent of sound posts after 42 years in the ground. Although a tree crop is not usually expected to yield as much profit as a cultivated crop, black locust timber on an abandoned cornfield in Ohio produced 2,180 posts to the acre in 22 years, netting $350, or $16 per acre per year. Under ordinary forest conditions in the Appalachian region, the stand will range from one to twenty cords per acre.

Bacterial Blight Most Important Bean Disease

Development of bean varieties resistant to bacterial blight appears to be the most promising control for the disease, reports Dr. W. J. Zaunmeyer, assistant pathologist in the United States Department of Agriculture, who has been conducting investigations on this disease. The results of his findings have been published by the department as Technical Bulletin 186-T, the Bacterial Blight of Beans Caused by Bacterium Phaseol.

Next to anthracnose, says Doctor Zaunmeyer, bacterial blight is the most important disease of beans with the annual loss from the disease approximately a quarter million bushels. Losses in very bad seasons have run as high as 75 per cent of the crop and in isolated instances and in particularly bad years, complete destruction of a field is not uncommon.

In field tests no variety showed complete resistance, the author says, although four varieties of the Refugee type showed a very low degree of susceptibility. All other varieties tested showed moderate or very slight resistance.

Copies of bulletin 186-T may be obtained free from the Office of Information, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Farmers Travel Far in Feeding All Live Stock

Farmers travel farther in feeding than in any other operation connected with dairy or meat production. Any practical method of reducing travel should be beneficial. Convenient silos and feed bins, with a labor-saving plan of moving feed to the cows or live stock, are a big help. In the dairy, carrier trucks which will hold enough ensilage or meal for several cows will cut the work in two, as compared with carrying feed in baskets. Arrangement of the barn, smooth floors, accessible mangers which are easily cleaned, are all factors in making feeding a shorter task.

FARM FACTS

Don't burn leaves, save them for mulch or for the compost heap.

Get in plenty of insect ammunition. You will need it early and often.

Put in kohlrabi early. This is a fine vegetable grown early and used tender.

Spray your peaches, plums, apricots, etc., each year for the prevention of fungus attacks.

Plant your vegetables in rows instead of broadcast. It is economical of seed and gets bigger crops.

Tests show that the practice of salting hay does not make the hay keep better. Hay cures best in the field.

Put out poisoned bait for the snails and slugs. They work at night while you sleep, and they may destroy your young plants.

If the bee cellar is efficient, a thermometer inserted in the hive entrance should show a temperature of at least 52 degrees Fahrenheit.

Cost of production is just as important on the farm as in the factory. Profitable agriculture demands, however, that efficient and economical distribution must follow closely upon the heels of low cost production.

REGULAR PAINS

The modern Miss needs no "time out" for the time of month.

If you've ever taken Bayer Aspirin for a headache, you know how soon the pain subsides. It is just as effective in the relief of those pains peculiar to women!

Don't dedicate certain days of every month to suffering. It's old-fashioned. It's unnecessary. Aspirin will always enable you to carry-on in comfort. Take enough to assure you complete comfort. If it is genuine aspirin it cannot possibly hurt you. Bayer Aspirin does not depress the heart. It does nothing but stop the pain, so use it freely.

Headaches come at inconvenient times. So do colds. But a little Bayer Aspirin will always save the day. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Rheumatism. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking a few of these remarkable tablets. So are the little nagging aches that bring fatigue and "nerves" by day or a sleepless night.

Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets cost so very little after all that it doesn't pay to experiment with imitations!

Choice "Dahlia" A friend brought to the Old Orchard bungalow of Miss Anna Wenzel some dahlia bulbs, says the Boston Globe. Among them, she told Miss Wenzel, was one very choice one, which was planted in a selected spot. All the bulbs came up but the choice one did look a little different and when the donor of the dahlias saw it, she exclaimed that it was a potato. And so it was and Miss Wenzel dug up enough potatoes in the fall for five or six dinners.

IN MEMORY OF LILLIEMAE LEA GRIGSBY

Died April 11, 1930

A voice we loved is stilled
Our sorrows we can't repair
Babe's place by her spirit is filled
And her cheer and love is there.

To God we gave her soul,
Her body to nature's care,
A home in heaven was her goal
Now as an angel she is there.

We don't grieve for you Babe,
For "God's will be done;"
We are more reconciled each day
Knowing to God you have gone.

One That Loved Her.

WILL DISTRIBUTE STOCKTON CREAM IN ALPINE SOON

Alpine will be the wholesale distributing point for the Fort Stockton creamery if present plans of the manager, J. E. Reeves of Stockton, go through, it was learned here yesterday. Reeves has made arrangements with W. L. Matthews, owner of the Orient dairy, to handle his ice cream, butter and other products on a commission basis with the plan of erecting a big cold storage room, lined with cork, here next year if the business of the summer justifies the expansion program.

Matthews is to have charge of the sales in Alpine, Marathon, Sanderson, Marfa, Presidio and Fort Davis, he said a few days ago. The Fort Stockton creamery is amply able to take care of its business, the plant having a 400-gallon a day capacity for ice cream alone.—Avalanche.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Duncan were visitors here the first of the week from the Prosser and Brown ranch near Dryden.

Mr. and Mrs. S. H. West of Taylor, Texas came in Sunday to visit Mr. West's sister, Mrs. F. L. Burnside. They left Monday for home going by the way of the Carlsbad Caverns.

Miss Helen Watson, who has completed her school as governess at the Babb ranch near Langtry, visited friends here Wednesday enroute to her home in Alpine.

Miss Mary Pearl Burdette and Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Goode of Riverside, Calif. visited Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Cargile last week end. Miss Burdette is a cousin to Mrs. Cargile.

Annual Convention Of the West Texas Chamber Commerce

Stamford, April 9.—Details of the arrangements for the general business plan of the annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in Lubbock, May 14, 15 and 16, are being rapidly worked out under direction of the convention work committee headed by Walter D. Cline of Wichita Falls.

This group, which in addition to Cline, will include Clifford B. Jones, Spur; A. P. Duggan, Littlefield; Chester Harrison, Brownwood; J. D. Hamlin, Farwell; and Wilbur G. Hawk, Amarillo, will organize and plan the work of the convention; schedule the events and speakers on the general convention program, and pass on all items needing attention in connection with the affair. General Manager D. A. Banded is working in close connection with the Cline committee.

The convention work committee is arranging the program to include at least six group conferences on subjects of vital interest to West Texas. Each of these sections will be under the direct supervision and direction of a special committee, working with the general arrangement group and the actions, recommendations and reports from those group conferences will be presented to the general sessions of the convention through the convention work committee.

Mr. Cline has advised WTCC headquarters here that he is much interested in the coming convention and says that he plans to give his duties as chairman of the important convention work committee, all the time and thought necessary and he is expecting that each of the other members will do the same.

Would Investigate Bus Traffic
Railroad rights of way, he declared, represent tremendous capital investments, on which the railroads have also heavy current costs to meet.

"They pay every day a million dollars in taxes and most of this is on their rights of way," he said. "Also they spend daily over two million dollars additional for the proper maintenance of way." He asserted that the motorbuses have not had to pay for their rights of way in any sense that the railroads paid for theirs.

"They have simply taken possession of public highways built by public funds, both state and national," he continued, "and they have extensively made those highways vastly less comfortable, less safe and less serviceable for private motorists and others who are contributing chiefly to their creation and maintenance."

Mr. Stephenson declared that all these matters should be thoroughly inquired into by competent public bodies, both state and national, with a view of determining the equities and basic public economic interests involved, "particularly in respect to their effects upon the nation's railroads."

"I venture to say," he added, "that such inquiries would show whether it is to the public interest to let things remain as they are, whether the situation calls for a new basis of motorbus and truck taxes to satisfy the equities of the case or whether it would call for such drastic action as the exclusion of this traffic from our public general highways, and the requirement that, even as the railways, it provide as a part of its own private capital investment its own rights of way and for its own maintenance of way out of operating income."

BUS COMPETITION HITS RAILROADS

Bankers Association President Asks If Unfair Aid Is Given Motorized Transport— For Rail Mergers.

NEW YORK.—Fair treatment for the railroads in respect to highway motor competition was called for by Rome C. Stephenson, President American Bankers Association, in a recent address here. He also strongly endorsed "sound economic railway consolidation" and praised President Hoover for his initiative in this respect.

"I am very strongly of the opinion that one of the measures which would help materially to put back business where it ought to be is the Eastern four-system plan of railroad consolidation as announced recently following negotiations instituted by President Hoover," said Mr. Stephenson. "Its adoption by the Interstate Commerce Commission would tend to stabilize the transportation industry, facilitate operation and exert a favorable influence on business in general."

"It is a fact well known to business leaders that our railroads are now facing a crisis. Not only do they need protective laws to meet competitive situations arising from increased use of our highways and waterways by other carriers, but they need unification such as the proposed four-system plan provides. Our President has acted wisely in assuming a leadership in this respect and his move deserves the support of every clear-thinking citizen."

Mr. Stephenson declared that the railroads have served this country "superlatively well that we are prone in our public affairs to overlook our dependence upon them and our obligations to them. The past, present and future progress of the United States is inseparably bound up with their welfare. In neglecting just consideration for them we are even more neglectful of the public's best economic interests."

A Question of Public Interest

"We are confronted with the question as to how much more the public economic interest will stand an invasion of the welfare of the railroads by forces and difficulties not of their own creating and not within the scope of their own unaided powers to combat," said Mr. Stephenson. "I refer especially to new competitors that are undermining the hard-earned position of the railroads, not only with the aid of natural economic forces but also through the aid of government policies which, positively or negatively, tend to give these competitors undue advantages over the railroads."

"It goes without saying that the railroads have no right, nor claim any, so far as I have been able to discern, to complain at legitimate competition in the field of transportation, for the public is entitled to the best possible transportation at the lowest practical cost. But equally does it go without saying that this cannot be fairly brought about by using, or by failing to use, the taxing powers of government to enable competitive methods of transportation to do things they could not otherwise do as unaided private enterprises, particularly when such action impairs the invested rights held in good faith by great masses of our people in established enterprises that are serving the public well."

Mr. Stephenson said it was not his purpose to argue against such competitive transportation as the highway passenger motorbus and motor truck as such, when conducted under proper conditions and in keeping with public welfare and benefit. He declared, however, there is need for serious consideration whether such competition is being developed under conditions that are unfair to the railroads, because either the outright or obscure aid of government policy is the deciding economic factor in that competition.

OLDEST FORD DRIVER

J. M. Crow, 89, of Ethel, Miss., the oldest Ford driver in Mississippi, traversed the historic old Natchez Trace in a covered wagon eighty-seven years ago.

As rugged today at 89 as the age in American history he so picturesquely typifies, J. M. Crow of Ethel, Miss., is the oldest Ford driver in Mississippi and one of the oldest in the United States.

When as a babe of two years he rode with his parents in one of a train of 30 covered wagons out of Cobb county, Georgia, into Mississippi, the old Natchez Trace followed by the brave little band was still infested by the swashbuckling ruffians whose bloody outrages gave that era its place in this country's history as "the outlaw years."

One of his vivid memories is hearing, as a boy of six, the news of General Scott's victorious assault on the heights of Chapultepec which ended the Mexican War in 1847, and his proudest memory is of honorable service as a Confederate soldier during the Civil War. When the southern cause collapsed, Crow was compelled to trudge 400 miles on foot to the old homestead at Ethel where he settled down to rear a family.

In the intervening years he has seen the lumbering stagecoach give way to the fleet automobile and the comfortable motorbus, the soggy gumbo and rough corduroy roads of his childhood to the wide, paved roads of today, and although he was long past middle age before the modern automobile became commonplace he is as enthusiastic a driver as youngsters who can boast less than one-quarter of his years.

Five generations of Crow's family are frequently seen together in his Model A Ford, the second of its type Crow has owned and driven.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF FORD VALUE

Bright, enduring RUSTLESS STEEL is used for many exposed bright metal parts of the Ford

WHEN YOU BUY a Ford you buy enduring beauty. The body finish is made to last for the life of the car and practically all exposed bright metal parts except the bumpers are made of enduring Rustless Steel.

This Rustless Steel has great tensile strength. It is the same bright metal all the way through. A salt test equivalent to forty years' service under the severest weather conditions failed to have any effect on its brilliance. It never requires polishing. All you do is wipe it with a damp cloth, as you do your windshield.

This is just one of many features that show the substantial worth of the Ford. In speed, comfort, safety, economy and long life — in the richness of its finish and upholstery — it brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

Call or phone for demonstration.

CONVENTION SLOGAN SHOULDERS TO SHOULDERS

Stamford, April 9.—"Shoulder to Shoulder" will be the general theme of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention in Lubbock during the middle of May. The various items on the program will point to that idea—all West Texas "shoulder to shoulder" for the best interest of the region. This slogan has been officially adopted by the officials of the WTCC and also by the convention work committee headed by Walter D. Cline of Wichita Falls.

Miss Anna Lena Wirz, who was a member of the High School faculty here last year, was a visitor with Mrs. H. D. Williams from Wednesday of last week until Tuesday of this week. Miss Wirz is an instructor of English at the State College of Women, C. I. A., located in Denton.

Our success as the leading dry cleaners of Sanderson has been built on producing the highest quality of cleaning at all times. Songs the Cowboy boys Sang

"On the Western Trail"—A cowboy group, the work of the famous woman sculptor, Sally James Farnham, recently exhibited in New York.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ONE of the current Broadway stage successes is a play which bears the title of "Green Grow the Lilacs," and sophisticated Gotham, which doesn't usually think a song is worth singing unless it came out of Tin Pan Alley, is delighted with the songs in that play. And the majority of them had their origin, not in New York, but in the Southwest—they are songs which the cowboys used to sing!

This incident is another example of the increasing interest of Americans in the folklore of their country. That interest has manifested itself in various forms—in the popularity of the negro spirituals of the South, in the revival of singing of ballads of past generations (ballads which prove conclusively that, although many of them trace back directly to the old English ballads, America had a native balladry) and in the wider dissemination of the legends of Paul Bunyan, Pecos Bill and John Henry, myth heroes created in the fertile imaginations of the lumberjacks, the cowboys and the negro railroad workers, respectively.

The play referred to above takes its name from a song, "Green Grow the Lilacs," which has been sung in the Southwest for generations. Its origin is veiled in obscurity. One critic has ventured the opinion that it traces its ancestry back to Robert Burns' poem, "Green Grow the Rashens." If so, perhaps somewhere in the line of descent may be found a song popular with the American soldiers during the Mexican war, "Green Grow the Rushes, O!" and there is a legend that the Mexican name for Americans, "gringos" is a corruption of the words "green grows."

Another of the songs of this play which is said to have been an old favorite in the Southwest, hence was well known in Oklahoma, the native state of Lynn Riggs, author of the play, is "My Name is Sam Hall." There is no doubt about the origin of this song for it comes from London where it was a cellar ditty. In 1848 W. G. Ross, a Scotch low comedian, was singing in Cider Cellars in Maiden Lane, Covent Garden, (the original, incidentally, of Back Kitchen in "Pennydennis") and "My Name is Sam Hall," was one of his "hits."

How did this song find its way to the old Indian territory? Did some adventurous Cockney carry it there or did some disgraced "younger son," who could not live in England and who had fled to the American frontier where no questions were asked about a man's past, first sing it along the banks of the Canadian or the Cimarron? No one knows! But the cowboys once sang it on the Oklahoma range and it is their version, slightly changed from the original English version, which is being sung on Broadway today.

In reality, though, this is not so unusual for an examination of the collection of old cowboy songs, made by John A. Lomax of Texas several years ago, will show that many of the favorites among the cowboys, especially those of the more sentimental type (and the cowboy was strong for the song which dripped with sentimentality) closely resemble some of the old English ballads and probably trace directly from them. Some typical ones, given in the Lomax collection, are those which bear the titles "Bonnie Black Bess," "Fair Fannie Moore," "Her White Bosom Bare" and "Young Charlotte."

More than that, investigators of this type of folk song have revealed the fact that many of the best known cowboy songs are nothing more than adaptations of sentimental ballads of an earlier day. This is true of one of the most famous of them all—a song variously known as "The Dying Cowboy," "The Cowboy's Lament" and "The Lone Prairie," a song of innumerable verses and of many variations both as to the wording of the different stanzas and the choruses which follows each stanza. In practically all versions the first stanza is the same:

"Oh, bury me not on the lone prairie. These words came low and mournfully From the pallid lips of a youth who lay On his dying bed at the close of day.

By making allowance for much "local color" it is easy to see how "The Lone Prairie" song was adapted from the song, "The Ocean Burial," words by W. H. Saunders, music by G. N. Allen, which appears in "The Nightingale," a book of songs for "Juvenile Classes, Public Schools and Seminars," compiled by W. O. and H. S. Perkins and published by Ditson in 1890. The first verse of "The Ocean Burial" tells how:

"O, bury me not in the deep, deep sea. The words came low and mournfully From the pallid lips of a youth who lay On his cabin couch at close of day, and its other numerous verses describe the deathbed scene minutely and with a wealth of detail, only, of course, the scenes are laid on the "deep, deep sea" instead of the "lone prairie-e-e."

Nearly as famous a cowboy song as "The Lone Prairie" is another also variously called "The Cowboy's Lament" and "The Dying Cowboy," which has this chorus:

"Oh, beat the drum slowly and play the life lowly. Play the Dead March as you carry me along; Take me to the churchyard and lay the sod o'er me. For I'm a young cowboy, I know I've done wrong."

Different authorities on cowboy songs and other native American ballads credit the authorship of this song to various persons and the usual statement is that "it appeared on the ranges in the early eighties." Although it is difficult to determine the authorship of a ballad, since such a song usually represents the contribution of a succession of amateur bards rather than the work of a single poet, it is my belief that, as nearly as the authorship of "The Cowboy's Lament" can be determined, credit for it belongs to the late F. H. Maynard of Colorado Springs, Colo., an old-time cowboy. Here is his story as he told it to me several years ago:

"During the winter of 1876 I was working for a Grimes outfit which had started north with a trail herd from Matagorda Bay, Texas. We were wintering the herd on the Salt Fork of the Arkansas river on the border of Kansas and Indian territory, waiting for the spring market to open at Wichita.

"One of the favorite songs of the cowboys in those days was called 'The Dying Girl's Lament,' the story of a girl who had been betrayed by her lover and who lay dying in a hospital. I don't remember all of the song but it began something like this:

As I walked down by St. James hospital. St. James hospital, so early one day, etc., etc.

"I had often amused myself by trying to write verse and one dull winter day in camp, to while away the time, I began writing a poem which could be sung to the tune of 'The Dying Girl's Lament.' I made it a dying ranger or cowboy instead of a dying girl and had the scene in Tom Sherman's barroom instead of a hospital.

"Tom Sherman was a noted character in the old cattle trail days, a big strapping fellow six feet six or six feet seven tall, who first ran a dance hall and saloon in Great Bend in 1873 and then moved to Dodge City where he ran the same sort of place until some time in the '80s. All of the cowboys who came up from Texas knew Tom Sherman.

"After I had finished the new words I sang it to the boys in our outfit. They liked it and began singing it. It became popular with the boys in other outfits who heard it after we had taken our herd to market in Wichita the next spring and from that time on I heard it sung everywhere on the range and trail."

"So 'The Cowboy's Lament' is another example of a favorite cowboy song which was an adaptation of an earlier ballad. Mr. Maynard's version, written in 1876 and thus antedating other versions by five and possibly ten years, had for its first verse the following:

As I rode down by Tom Sherman's barroom. By Tom Sherman's barroom so early one day. There I espied a handsome young ranger. All wrapped in white linen, as cold as the clay. "I see by your outfit that you're a ranger." The words that he said as I went riding by. "Come, sit down beside me, and hear my sad story. I'm shot through the breast and know I must die."

CHORUS: Then muffle the drums and play the dead march. Play the dead march as I'm carried along; Take me to the churchyard and lay the sod o'er me. I'm a young ranger and know I've done wrong.

The version of this song, as given in Lomax's collection and as it is often reprinted, starts out:

As I walked out in the streets of Laredo. As I walked out in Laredo one day. I spied a poor cowboy wrapped up in white linen. Wrapped up in white linen as cold as the clay.

"O, beat the drum slowly and play the life lowly. Play the Dead March as you carry me along; Take me to the green valley, there lay the sod o'er me. For I'm a young cowboy and I know I've done wrong."

I see by your outfit that you are a cowboy. These words he did say as I boldly stepped by. "Come sit down beside me and hear my sad story. I was shot in the breast and I know I must die."

From which it will be seen that in the years in which the fame of this "poor cowboy who done wrong" has spread the scene of his untimely demise has been changed to Laredo, Texas. But before it is too late, I want to register this footnote to history and say that it took place in Dodge City, Kan. I know, because the man who killed him (in a song) told me so!

Lesson for April 12

THE PRODIGAL SON

LESSON TEXT—Luke 15:11-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.
PRIMARY TOPIC—What to Do When We Do Wrong.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What to Do When We Do Wrong.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Father's Welcome to the Wandering Son.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Church and the Repentant Sinner.

The center of interest in this parable is not the prodigal nor his brother, but the "certain man who had two sons." He who fails to see the heart of our Father God will miss the purpose of the story.

I. The Son's Estrangement From the Father (v. 12).

There is every indication that this was a happy home, but a demon entered it and stirred up discontent in the heart of the younger son. He became tired of the restraints of home. His desire for freedom moved him willfully to choose to leave home—to throw off the restraints of a father's rule. Sin is essentially the desire to be free from the restraints of rightful authority and for selfish indulgence. At the request of the son "the father divided unto him his living."

II. The Son's Departure (v. 13).

Having made the fatal decision, he went posthaste to the enjoyment of his cherished vision. He quickly got his goods in portable shape. Having thrown off the restraints of his father's rule, he eagerly withdrew from his father's presence. This is always the way sin works. Adam and Eve after they had sinned hid themselves. The son could not now stand the presence of his father so he hastened away, having "gathered all together."

III. The Son's Degeneration (vv. 13, 14).

He had a good time while his money lasted, but the end came quickly. The indications are that his course was soon run. From plenty in his father's house to destitution in the far country was a short journey. The sinner is soon made to realize the famine when such powers as ministered to his pleasure are burned out.

IV. The Son's Degradation (vv. 15, 16).

Having no friends to help him when his money was all gone, he was driven to hire out to a citizen to feed swine. It was a tragic change from being a son in his father's house to feeding swine in the far country. It is ever so. Those who will not serve God are made slaves to the Devil to do his bidding (Romans 6:16). How vividly this portrays the history of many men and women about us, and yet it is the picture of the inevitable consequences of sin.

V. The Son's Restoration (vv. 17-24).

"He came to himself" (v. 17). Upon reflection he was made conscious that though he had wronged his father and ruined himself, he was still a son of his father. In the days of his sinning he was beside himself. The sinner continues in his sin because he is insane. The world calls the sinner who leaves off his evil ways crazy, but in reality he has just become sane.

2. His resolution (v. 18).

His reflection ripened into resolution. The picture of his home, where even the hired servants had a superabundance, moved him to make a decision to leave the far country and go home.

3. His confession (vv. 18, 19).

He acknowledged that his sin was against heaven and his father, that he had forfeited his right to be called a son, and begged to be given a place as a hired servant. The sinner not only should make a resolution—he should confess his sin.

4. His action (v. 20).

Action was needed. Resolution will not avail unless accompanied with action. When the confession is genuine, action will follow. Good intentions will not avail.

5. His reception by his father (vv. 20-24).

The father had not forgotten his son. His unchanging love followed the son all the time he was away, and longed for his return. He must often have looked for him, for he saw him when he was a great way off. So anxious was he for him that he ran to meet him and fell upon his neck and kissed him. So glad was the father that he did not even hear his confession through, but ordered the tokens of honor to be placed upon him, receiving him back into a son's position.

Boundless Resources

He is the God of boundless resources. The only limit is in us. Our asking, our thinking, our praying are too small. Our expectations are too limited. There is but one measure given for his blessing, and that is "according to the power that worketh in us."—A. B. Simpson.

Prayer Opens the Way

Prayer opens the soul to God. Prayer opens the life to the workings of infinite grace.—J. H. Jowett.

Irony in Story of the Famous "Fireside Song"

The erection of a boulder memorial to Eben G. Rexford, author of "Silver Threads Among the Gold," in a churchyard at Shiocton, Wis., is a reminder of the ironic story connected with the writing of the song. Rexford, who wrote the words while a student at Lawrence college, spent most of his life on a quiet Wisconsin homestead in a way befitting the author of the nation's fireside song, but Hart P. Danks, composer of the music, knew an altogether different life. Fortunately Danks and his bride in 1874, secure in youth, could sing their pledge that age would make no difference without foreseeing the separation which the future held for them. Danks died friendless and alone long before the tranquil evening of their dreams, and she who inspired the song was equally as lonely years afterward. After the composer's death a son and daughter lived bitter lives, spent wrangling about royalties. At one time the quarrel reached such a pitch that the sister sought her brother's arrest for failure to turn over what she felt was her share. Even such a story as that cannot tarnish the song, whose acceptance by the American people was not on account of the greatness of either its words or music, but because it furnished a means for thousands to express one of their deepest feelings.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Odd Southern Birds

Penguins are strange birds. They use their wings for swimming instead of for flying. They are found in the seas of the southern hemisphere, and range in size from the emperor penguin, who stands four feet high, to little fellows hardly larger than an ordinary duck. The legs of the penguin are set very far back, and on land they waddle and shuffle about in the most mirth-provoking manner, holding their bodies upright. The king penguin, which comes from the South Atlantic Islands, stands over two feet in height, and has a long bill and a bright orange chest. Another strange bird similar in many ways to the penguin is the steamer duck. He gets his funny name from his rapid and splashy way of swimming, just like an old-fashioned paddle steamer.

Antiquarian Find

Ancient dynasties whose origin is lost in antiquity were recalled when the remains of a king and queen, which experts say are from 1,800 to 2,000 years old, were discovered by antiquarians on Sheebeg, a mountain near Carrick-on-Shannon, Ireland. After infinite labor the antiquarians removed the covering of centuries, and were then faced with the entrance to the royal vault. It had been barred by a solid block of dressed masonry weighing over ten tons. When this was removed the skeletons of a male and female were discovered, side by side, facing toward the former royal seat of Tara.

Found American Ink Best

The disclosure that American water-proof ink was used in preference to domestic or British inks to inscribe the names of Australian soldiers at the war memorial in Melbourne has created a mild political storm. Counselor Luxton, lord mayor of Melbourne, replying to critics, said American ink was superior to all others and was used because the inscriptions were to last as long as possible.

BILIOUSNESS

The Rev. J. J. Wisener, of Drake-town, Ga., says he has taken Black-Draught, when needed, since childhood, and he is past fifty years of age. "When I would get bilious," he says, "I would feel like shuffling along instead of walking. My feet felt too heavy to lift. I had such a dull, tired feeling, and I would feel dizzy and nauseated like I couldn't hold my head up. I found how much the Black-Draught helped me, and I took it. Castoria... for CHILDREN'S ailments

ARE you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or for the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish spell, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine

Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the formula on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.
