COGITATIONS and APHORISMS of

Jodok

I have frequently been asked the question: "Do you believe in Dreams?" Sure, I believe in dreams. I have had scores of them, or putting it another way—I have dreamed scores of times. The old maxim says, "Seeing is believing."

While I cannot say that I have ever seen a dream, yet I have seen the embodiment or the results produced by many dreams, hence, I believe in them. I have had real, or slumber dreams; I have had day dreams, pipe dreams, smoke dreams, and perhaps many other varieties, therefore, why should I not believe in dreams.

But getting back to the real meaning and intent of the one who asks such a question, which is, do I believe in dreams as having any potency or power of forecasting or foretelling future events that will occur in real experience, I must say that I do not so believe in dreams. It is true, that some times coming events do fit in fairly well with sights or occurrences that have appeared in some recent dream, but that is merely a coincidence, just as many other events are purely coincidental. Real dreams are merely wanderings or vagaries of the mind while it is fully unleashed from any control or power of the will; therefore it is totally irresponsible, and could not possibly have potency as a prophetic power. The great majority of dreams, are simply great mental jumbles, that could not possibly have any real meaning.

As an illustration of this fact, I shall briefly relate just one of the more prominent dreams that I have experienced. I died, and was in attendance at my own funeral. I heard distinctly the rasping, screeching and growling of the trunks of the old farm wagons as they descended the hill in crossing the ravine between the church and the cemetery. I saw the open grave as the long box was placed beside it. It occurred to me that, at a funeral there should be some mourners, so I began executing a somewhat forced weeping, but when as the box was being lowered into Mother Earth, I chanced to notice that no one else seemed a bit sorrowful, as they were talking and laughing as though in the gayest of spirits. Some of them would step up and look as the box went down, and one old tobacco chewer, even squirted a mouthful of amber on the coffin just as it reached the bottom. Seeing that I was the only mourner, and as it made no difference to me, I joined the others in their apparent hilarity of the occasion and the meeting broke up with all in a most jocular mood.

That was many years ago, and since, to my personal knowledge, I have never died, I am forced to consider dreams as a complete falacy, with a potency and absolutely no power or knowledge of the future.

Some of these effusions are brought on by the occurrence of some related or kindred incident, a coincidence, a suggestion or a reality, and as the above paragraphs are relating to dreams they suggest the remembrance of another experience, which.

I suppose is nearer a dream than anything else, for it is not a vision, an apparition, a reverie nor a retrospection; therefore I shall class it as a dream.

I was supposed to awaken from a sound slumber and found myself lying upon my usual bed in the same room where I had slept for many years and the room was dark as usual during the night, and as I awoke I heard myself voicing a statement from the scripture as stated in the 9th chapter of Mark, verses 44, 46 and 48, which reads as follows: "Where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." This same sentiment is also expressed in the latter part of the 44th verse of the 66th chapter of Isaiah, but here the words are changed just a little, so that it reads: "For their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched."

When, as I supposed, I had repeated this verse, I also asked the question: "Can anyone tell me just what that means?" Immediately following my question, the door seemed to gently open and in the darkness a voice began speaking, and this is practically what it said: "The worm referred to in that verse, is the human soul, and the fire referred to is a guilty conscience. The soul cannot die, and the fire, or the guilty conscience, cannot be quenched because it is not really a fire, but torments like unto a fire, through-out an indefinite existence." Then, said I, how can these things be? The damned are supposed to enter into eternal torment and the justified shall enter eternal bliss. The voice then continued: "True that is, but the Great Creator, our Heavenly Father, is no respecter of persons, he has placed all people here on the same footing, but as free agents. When the soul returns to God who gave it, He receives all on the same basis, so far as he is concerned. All enter the same abode, but it is up to the individual soul as to whether the new abode is a place of torment or a place of perfect bliss. All mingle together but the damned are continually tormented by that fire which can never be quenched—the guilty conscience. The tormented soul has no power to communicate its torment to the justified, and thereby marring their bliss.

At this juncture the voice ceased and I really became awake. I was lying just as I had imagined in my dream, or whatever it may be called, on my bed in my dark room, and the impression was so distinct that I really listened for the voice to continue, or if I could hear foot steps going down the stairway, but not the least sound was audible through-out the seven large empty rooms—no voice, no footsteps, no closing of a door.

Since this experience was partly true and partly a phantasy or illusion, but it was not an apparition, a vision nor a retrospect, therefore, I am at a loss to know just what to call it, but it was a wonderful experience.

Come to think of it, I suppose "illusion" is about the proper name for the said experience, but whatever it may be termed, I give it no credence, whatsoever, as a mental or a mental enlightenment, sign or forecast of the future. I have, however, given it quite a bit of consideration, and the more I think of it, the more it seems that it may be a most feasible interpretation of the above quoted expression. Should I hinge my personal belief to the interpretation given me by my unknown visitor, I could be able to answer to my own satisfaction, many, many quandaries regarding an existence beyond this life.

Regardless of what the experience may have meant, I have no worry concerning it. The plans of the Most High are set, and unchangeable, or at least the only change that come to them, will be the understanding of interpretation of them as visualized by the human intelligence.

Those present for the occasion were: Captain George S. Baker of Fort Bliss, El Paso; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Baker and two daughters of Portales, N. M.; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Baker and baby daughter of Amarillo; Mrs. Florence Boyce and her husband and their son and daughter, and Mrs. Boyce's mother, all of Lubbock; and Mrs. Opal Ware and three sons, of Muleshoe.

Mr. and Mrs. George McLean had as their Sunday dinner guests, a group of their old friends and former neighbors, from near Hollena, N.M. The group consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Freeman and their son, Walter Freeman and family. These people lived for many years as near neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. McLean while they lived on their cattle ranch over in New Mexico.

Friona Boy Appears On Radio Program As Featured Soloist

AMARILLO, Texas — Don Edwin Lewis, 12 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lewis of Friona, will be the featured soloist on the Co-op Round-Up radio program over Station KFDA, Amarillo, Saturday morning, from 8 to 9 o'clock, according to Howard Robertson, manager of the radio station. The Co-op Round-Up is presented every Saturday as a weekly feature of KFDA featuring farm cooperatives in the Panhandle-Plains area.

Young Lewis will sing two songs, "The Old Refrain," and "When My Eyes are Smiling." His father, Henry Lewis, is manager of the Friona Consumers Company, a farm cooperative at Friona. Don Edwin will be accompanied at the piano by his teacher, Mrs. Roy V. Miller.

Last February at the Annual Meeting of Consumers Cooperatives Associated in Dallas, Don Edwin sang before the delegates at the T-state area Co-op convention. Next year, when this convention is held again in Dallas, on February 5-7, he will be the featured soloist for the two-day meeting.

The Co-op Round-Up program for Saturday is dedicated to the cooperative activities of the farmers of Farmer County Community Hospital, two successful farm cooperative organizations.

The program will also feature a Hymn for the Day, which was selected by the Rev. T. B. Allen, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Friona; and a Thought for the Day, prepared by Mrs. Roy Miller, president

New Concrete Elevator Repaired And Pronounced Ready For Grain

A few weeks ago it was discovered that one of the tanks of the Santa Fe Grain Company's new concrete building had developed a spot in its wall and it was considered as unsafe for grain storage.

A careful investigation developed the fact that a layer of soft material forming a strip ranging in depth from two to four inches completely surrounding the entire structure. Competent engineers and experts in concrete work were called in and pronounced the structure unsafe for storage uses.

Accordingly all the tanks or bins were completely emptied of the grain they contained and measures were taken to remove the faulty material and replace it with cement of a perfect mixture that will afford the necessary resistance to the weight of the grain when the tanks are filled.

Those present were Sue Cranfill, Bonnie Sissell, Ann McKee, Roberta Reed, Glenna Mae Pope, Eugenia Landrum, Thoma Lou Fallwell, Mary in Fairchild, Phyllis Fairchild and Leleta O'Brian.

CHANTS OF THE CHANTICLEER...

We met our old friend "Wilks" Wednesday forenoon, and we were delighted to know that he holds no grudge against us for our remarks concerning him two weeks ago. Wilks is a fine fellow. We have a nice picture, taken while gossiping with him on the street corner a few weeks ago. Another thing about Wilks is that he has a lot of Friona history stored away in his memory.

Stepped into the Friona Locker Company Wednesday afternoon, where a very unusual sight for Friona met our eyes.

One of the long tables there was actually "piled up" with venison and mutton, commonly known as elk (Cervus Canadensis) all slain and brought in by Friona Nimrods. This

The weather here during the past week, with the exception of Friday and Saturday of last week, has been all that could be desired in the way of fine weather; but each day last week was windy, and on some days considerable real estate was migrated via air transportation.

This week has been fair and, for the most part, mild and with very little wind. Late Friday afternoon, most of the territory was favored with a light shower of rain, totaling perhaps half an inch. This moisture, owing to the windy days, was very beneficial to the growing crops and highly appreciated by the farmers.

We had always considered them as about the size of deer, but they are much larger, in fact, some of those wapti hind quarters would almost rival in size, that of some of our Texas steers.

The new hardware firm is known as "Welsh-Blackburn Hardware," and these two young men are making arrangements for quite an extensive stock of shelves and heavy hardware, which is expected to install as soon as their store room is in readiness for it. The firm, so far as we are informed, consists of Nelson Welsh and John Blackburn. There may be other members of whom we know not.

That large mangle down at the City Steam Laundry, is quite a machine for turning out the work, which it does so rapidly as to require three or four hands to operate it to keep it working at full capacity.

Work on the new bank building is progressing apparently with remarkable speed, and should soon be far enough along that its outward appearance will be affording an appeal to the public view.

Houses under construction are making ample progress toward completion, and others are being planned.

There are lots of other things we would like to mention, but the "dead line" draws near and we are forced to mark "30" for this time.

Thanksgiving Service Will Be Held Wednesday

The Brotherhood and the W.M.U. of the local Baptist Church, are sponsoring a Thanksgiving service at the church, November 23rd, at 7:30 P. M. Everyone has a special invitation.

With the wonderful harvest we have, it is truly a season of Thanksgiving.

"O give thanks unto the Lord, for He is good; for His mercy endureth forever." Psa. 107:1.

Assisting Mr. Lewis as manager in the operation of the association is Marvin Lawson, bookkeeper; Buddy Lloyd, parts department manager; Joe Johnson, transport truck driver; Arthur Stokes, delivery truck driver; Elwood Vaughn, in charge of tire repair department; and James Pope and David Smith.

The Co-op at Friona was set up in 1927 with ten farmers as the organizing and charter members. At the outset, this organization handled only pooled orders for petroleum fuels in the past twenty-two years, it has grown until more than 400 Farmer County farmers are members and patrons, looking to the organization for a full line of farm supplies.

The Farmer County Community Hospital was set up two years ago and has a capacity of 15 beds. The hospital is staffed by two doctors, the only two in the entire county. Up until the time the hospital was opened cooperatively by the people of Farmer County, there were no medical nor hospital facilities available in the county at all.

The Co-op Round-Up program is sponsored by 21 local cooperative organizations in the Panhandle-Plains area. It is a musical program based on requests received from listeners over the Tri-State area.

The program is prepared and presented under the direction of the Educational Department of Consumers Cooperatives Associated of Amarillo, the regional cooperative whole sale organization.

Two Amendments Pass In Final Count Timmons Forsees Additional Taxes

A light turnout of Texas voters passed only two of 19 proposed amendments at the polls November 8. Amendment seven, providing that the District Court shall conduct its proceedings at the county seat of the county in which the case is pending, except as otherwise provided by law and amendment eight, authorizing Legislature to provide for the creation and establishment of rural fire prevention districts, were the ones passed. The latter, although it strikes close to an old Deaf Smith issue, failed by a vote of 363 to 129. The former was also defeated 166 to 263.

Representative J. Blake Timmons, Amarillo, charged special interest and lobby groups will advocate sales and other tax levies "falling heaviest upon necessities of the average consumer" when the legislature meets in January in the Austin American after the election.

His statement credited defeat of most of the amendments, including the one for annual sessions and annual pay of legislators, to the activities of the "natural resources" and other groups. It bristled with the resentment expressed variously by legislators at what was termed an organized effort of the "GOP-Texas Regulars-Dixiecrat coalition and its rich allies of the pipeline-petroleum-sulphur lobbies in Austin and elsewhere" to beat the amendments.

Timmons said the light vote on the amendment "played into the hands of an anti-Democratic coalition and its rich allies of the lobbies."

"While many sincere advocates of economy", Representative Timmons said, "opposed the forward looking constitutional amendments which were defeated by the small turn-out of perhaps one out of twenty Texans, the fact remains that these special interests and many others got out the vote of practically all the representatives in the knowledge that the rank-and-file were either asleep or failed to pay poll taxes."

Timmons said that both the late Governor Beauford Jester and Governor Allan Shivers had promised to call a special session, if the annual session plan failed, "to rebuild and return our decadent, long-neglected, snake-pit" asylums and other public buildings."

"Special interests and their mouthpieces," Timmons insisted, "will advocate sales and omnibus levies falling heaviest upon necessities of the average consumer as opposed to production and pipeline levies which the Roosevelt-Truman Federal Power Commission and the Texas Railroad Commission will surely require them to 'absorb' out of their swollen excess profits."

Myrna McFarland Pledges Sorority

Columbia, Mo., — Informal pledging of Miss Myrna L. McFarland of Friona to membership in Psi Chi Omicron social sorority at Stephens College here, was held on Sunday, November 4. Miss McFarland is one of nearly 500 young women who are pledged to the 16 social sororities at the college.

Social service is one of the principal objectives of the sororities at Stephens, though members participate in a program of social activities during the year. A series of cultural programs, opening on November 10 with a fashion show of "Stacie Stephens" original designs by fellow students, is also sponsored by Psi Chi Omicron.

Highlighting the winter season will be the formal Pan-Hellenic Christmas ball which will be held in the Lela Ransy Wood ballroom at the college on December 9 and 10. The Pan-Hellenic and Independent organizations jointly sponsor a dance given on November 18 and 19. Miss McFarland is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. McFarland.

Mr. Putney of the Transit Grain Company, Fort Worth, has been at Friona the next week supervising the repair work being done on the new elevator.

Crowding Hens Is Not Profitable

The poultryman who sells his extra pullets rather than overcrowd the laying house will be money ahead, says W. J. Moore, associate extension poultry husbandman of Texas A&M College.

Too many hens in the laying house can cause plenty of trouble during the winter season, because ventilation systems may be ineffective when the house is overcrowded, says Moore. The result is too much moisture in the air, damp litter and wet walls and generally unhealthy conditions. The birds are more likely to be troubled with diseases and thus a reduction in the eggs produced.

According to Moore there is a definite relationship between the floor space provided and potential egg production. He says that three to four square feet of floor space should be allowed for each bird in a well equipped house. If there is overcrowding, sufficient feeding space will not be available and the hens cannot get enough feed to produce at maximum levels. Moore recommends at least six inches of feeder space per hen.

He says there should be at least one nest for every five hens in the house and cautions poultrymen to be sure and supply plenty of good fresh, clean drinking water for the hens. When the weather is cold, it is a good idea, says Moore, to warm the water before it is given to the hens. You can figure that 100 hens will drink about five gallons of water per day. Moore says if the little items in poultry management are observed and taken care of the hens will respond by producing during the season when egg prices are highest.

HE'S JUST A LITTLE FELLER—This Mexican eagle, captured near Dallas, is only half grown, although his wings are more than six feet from tip to tip. He is held by Gus Story, farm hand, who wounded the bird with a shot. Burnett said he would build a permanent home for the bird in front of the ball park. (AP Photo)

LETTERS TO THE STAR

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 10, 1949
Dear Mr. White:
Enclosed find $2, to pay for the subscription to the Star. Have just discovered our subscription expired in August. Thanks a lot for sending the paper on. We still enjoy reading the Star and are proud of the progress Friona has made since we left there. We still call it our home town and love to read the paper each week.

It is well edited and is a credit to the City of Friona.

Best regards to you.

Mrs. O. D. McLellan
Many of our earlier citizens will remember Mr. and Mrs. O. D. McLellan, who were, once among our most highly esteemed citizens - U. J. Savannah, Mo.

Uncle John:

Could you send our paper to us here at Savannah, this week. Sam entered here last Saturday. They told him then, he would be here two weeks, but today they told him he will be here longer, as he is not doing so well as they expected. This is a large hospital and you see people here from everywhere. A lady from Clovis went home today and a Mr. Bonds from Bovina is here. We feel like we have neighbors. One thing about the Missouri people—they are very nice and try to make you feel at home. So far the weather has been nice here and the country is pretty at this time of year. But we still think West Texas has them all beaten, and we will be glad to get back home.

Mrs. Sam Rule and Patsy. We are indeed sorry to hear of Sam's illness, but hope he is well enough to be back at home ere this, but we will endeavor to send a copy of this week's copy of the Star to the hospital.—U. J.

Excluding the Presidents who were assassinated, three U. S. Presidents have died in office.

Don't Spend Thanksgiving In Kitchen Plan And Prepare Your Dinner Early

The wise homemaker is already planning and preparing the Thanksgiving dinner, and by doing many of the jobs early she will be able to spend the day with the family and friends. Louise Mason, extension foods and nutrition specialist of Texas A&M College, says the home freezer certainly comes in handy on occasions like Thanksgiving.

For the Thanksgiving dinner Miss Mason recommends a traditional meal: roast turkey with stuffing; giblet gravy and cranberry sauce; mashed potatoes; creamed onions with toasted peanuts; celery-peach pickles; string beans; hot rolls-butter, pumpkin pie-whipped cream and coffee.

The turkey can be dressed and stuffed several days ahead of time, wrapped and placed in the home freezer. The pumpkin pie can be baked and stored in the freezer. The fresh vegetables can be washed and sorted and held in the refrigerator. The cranberry sauce can be made early and the yeast dough can be prepared ahead of time and stored

ALLRED SWORN IN—For the second time, James V. Allred, Allred, has taken the oath as a federal district judge. In ceremonies above, at Corpus Christi, where he will make his official residence, Judge Allred was administered the oath by Federal Judge Allen B. Hannay while U. S. Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson looked on. It was Senator Johnson who recommended the appointment. (AP Photo)

Selective Service Says 1,357 Texans Could Go In With 10-Day Notice

A total of 10,558 men of draft age were classified and 5,420 18-year-olds were registered by the state's 137 Selective Service boards during October, according to information received by Mrs. A. Petersen at the local board.

Mrs. Petersen, commenting on the state of readiness of the state selective Service System to deliver men in case of emergency, said that reports showed 1,357 men could be inducted after 10-day notice.

Reports show that Texas has a pool of nearly 42,000 men who could be sent out for armed forces physical examinations prior to the legal induction process.

"This group of men could be sent for armed forces mental and physical examinations as fast as the armed forces could handle them," Colonel Wakefield, State Director, said. "These are the men which our local boards say are fit for military service."

The local board reports showed that Texans had registered 514,394 men under the provisions of the Selective Service Act of 1948 by the end of October. At the same time the local board members had classified 336,161 of these men.

The reports revealed the following classification status: Available for military service, members of the armed forces, members of reserve components and students taking military training (Class I), 53,629; deferred because of occupational status (Class II), 2,727;

New Army Preparedness Plan To Use Medic Personnel To More Advantage

A newly adopted preparedness plan which would result in greater economy in the use of scarce professional personnel in military field hospitals in wartime theaters of operations, was received today by the Texas Military District from Major General R. W. Bliss, the Army Surgeon General.

"Under this plan," said Colonel Oscar B. Abbott, Chief of Texas Military District, "fewer physicians, dentists and nurses will be ordered to active duty with Army medical units until those units are ready to move into a theater of operations. This should allow each doctor to remain in active practice in his community until the Army has an actual need for his services with troops in combat."

"The new plan is the result of an intensive study of experience of the Army Medical Department during World War II. At that time doctors and nurses were required to join units while medical technicians and administrative personnel were being trained in the setting up, operating and dismantling of mobile field medical equipment. This resulted in a loss of skilled professional manpower, not only to the Army, but to the doctor's civilian community as well."

Hospital personnel will now be divided into two groups—administrative and professional personnel. The professional group will be known as the "professional complement," and will be made up of physicians, dentists, nurses, and other specialists. They will not be required to join the unit until such time as the unit is engaged in the actual care of patients. Further, when the requirement for this group has ceased, they may be moved to another theater of operations or to another area within a theater where their professional services will be put to use with a minimum of delay. The administrative group would remain to oversee the moving of equipment and records of the unit. In this way maximum use may be made of the professional complement's services.

Out of the 47 professional people required for a field hospital, under the new plan only four officers would be required at all times for duty with the unit. The remaining 43 officers including nine physicians, three dentists and 31 nurses, would not be needed during the organization and training period of the unit.

Although more applicable to war-time than to peacetime conditions, eventually be organized according to all field-type Army hospitals will this plan.

FIGHTS 'MONGRELIZATION'—George W. Armstrong, Sr., above, Fort Worth, Tex., and Mississippi plantation owner and oil man, is a foe of what he calls "racial mongrelization." He is opposed to the intermingling of Jews, Gentiles and Negroes in the same schools. Recently his offer of a prospective $50,000,000 (m) endowment to Jefferson Mill, Harry College was turned down because of strings attached. One string was that the school teach "superiority of the Anglo-Saxon and Latin American races." (AP Photo)

Cattle Feeding Experiment Results Are Announced From Field Station

The results of recently completed cattle feeding experiments at the Big Spring Field Station should be of interest to cattle feeders in West Texas. The 1948-49 experiments were a continuation of the research work that has been underway at the station for several years and was a study of the influence of mineral supplements in grain sorghum rations for fattening steer calves.

J. M. Jones, professor of animal husbandry, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, N. R. Ellis and W. H. Black (deceased) both of the USDA Bureau of Animal Industry, and F. E. Keating, superintendent of the Big Spring Field Station, conducted the research work.

Six lots of steers, with 8 steers to the lot, were used in the experiments and were fed similar rations for 182 days. Lot one received no mineral supplement and was the check or control group and the other five groups received varying amounts of mineral supplements—bone meal and limestone flour.

The best performing group was the one that received 200 grams of bone meal per head per day as a supplement to their ration of ground threshed milo, cottonseed meal, sorghum silage and salt. This was the same ration that was fed to all lots. This lot had the highest daily gain, the lowest feed cost per hundred pounds gain and the best net return per head when they were sold, says Jones.

Normally sorghum silage contains enough carotene to take care of the vitamin A requirements but the silage used in these tests was low in carotene due to the droughty conditions and the late harvests that prevailed in the Big Spring area in 1947 and 1948. A number of the steers developed marked symptoms of vitamin A deficiency during the latter part of the feeding period but recovered after three treatments of 2 ounces per head of a commercial cod liver oil containing 2,000 units of vitamin A per gram was administered. Jones recommends the feeding of good alfalfa hay or the cod liver oil treatment for steers that are being fed on silage or roughage from sorghum crops that were produced under droughty conditions and harvested late.

None of the steers in the 1948-49 feeding test at any time displayed any outward symptoms of urinary calculi trouble.

Jones says that the results of the feeding tests at Big Spring over a period of years indicate that the feeding of 200 grams of bone meal per head per day is a good practice for feeders to follow. It tends to hold down the urinary calculi trouble, cattle make slightly higher gains and have a better finish than those not getting the bone meal supplement. The increased income per animal will more than pay for the cost of the bone meal, says Jones and the other benefits go in for good measure.

Youngster Believes In Starting Early With The Real McCoy

A four-year-old "Roy Rogers" has a burning ambition to lead yells in the Cotton Bowl next New Year's Day.

Roy's real name is Harris Coe, Jr., son of Baylor University students from Houston. He picked up his fancy moniker from the movies. His real distinction, as of the present, is that of being Baylor's fifth cheer leader.

Baylor students elected four of their number as the leaders of their pep section, and were surprised some three weeks ago when a half-pint youngster with a half-pint megaphone appeared as middle man. He yells and jumps and throws his megaphone into the air just as big as his college buddies.

Red Bush, one of the elected cheerers, said it all started when the youngster wandered from his parents' rooming house over to Greer House, where Bush lives. He saw Red's megaphone and asked what it was. Red demonstrated—and Coe begged for it. But the big one was too much for him to handle.

Next pep rally, though, found the youngster all dressed up in a full cheer leader's costume, courtesy of the Baylor Book store. And he had, also, the miniature megaphone. He imitated his buddies perfectly.

Then on the night of the big alumni pep rally preceding Baylor's Home-coming football game, Coe beat his buddies to the platform and led the crowd of 3,500 in two complete yells—all by himself. He's been in every pep rally since then, and at the Baylor game between TCU and Texas.

The recent loss to Texas was not a surprise to him—for he had predicted it. He does believe that the Bears will come back strong to beat S.M.U. and Rice and claim a Cotton Bowl berth.

Baylor students like his leadership and are willing to follow him in that prediction. He outgessed them in the Texas game, didn't he?

Coffee and Pumpkin Blend in This Holiday Dessert

WHEN everyone has had his fill of roast turkey, when the dressing and cranberry sauce and the rest of the feast's have each played their role at Thanksgiving Dinner, clear the board for pumpkin pie and coffee! And here is a fine suggestion for a pumpkin pie that is light as thistle-down, toothsome enough to hold its own on the year's all-star menu.

The flavors of pumpkin and coffee have a real affinity for each other, and, combined with spices, they form a perfect blend in this delicate, fluffy pie. Somehow, coffee-pumpkin chiffon pie is the perfect light dessert for an extra-filling dinner.

Of course, you'll need plenty of fresh, fragrant coffee to top off the feast. This is the day to use your best coffee-pot, your prettiest cups. Then, when the pie plates are empty, fill up the cups again while you sit back and sigh with satisfaction!

Coffee-Pumpkin Chiffon Pie

2 eggs, separated	1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 1/2 cups sugar	1/4 cup cold double-strength coffee
1 1/2 cups canned pumpkin	1 9-inch baked pie shell
1/2 cup double-strength coffee
1/4 teaspoon each salt, ginger, cinnamon and nutmeg

Beat egg yolks; add 1/2 cup sugar, pumpkin, 1/2 cup coffee, salt and spices. Stir in top of double boiler until hot. Sprinkle gelatin on remaining coffee. Dissolve in hot pumpkin mixture. Chill until slightly thickened. Beat egg whites stiff, add sugar while continuing to beat, fold into pumpkin mixture. Spoon into baked pie shell. Chill until set. Yield: 1 9-inch pie.

"LOST CITY" FOUND IN DESERT—This is part of an ancient "lost city" discovered in the desert of southwestern Afghanistan. It is believed to be the once great city of Peshawarum, which reportedly had a population of 100,000 at the time of the Crusades. Scientists from the American Museum of Natural History "stumbled" on the ancient city.

CONSTRUCTING NEW MICROSCOPE—Mr. Claude Magnan, left, stands beside the microscope he is building which he thinks will magnify objects one million times.
