A VITAL SERVICE

(From the San Angelo Standard)
It has been said that nothing is more powerful than an idea which has found its time. All human behavior, habits, activities, originally sprang from ideas. The world revolves around them. Often they serve no purpose and are discarded, but the fittest survive.
Springing from a desire to render voluntary service to humanity, the Red Cross movement in 1859 was merely an idea—but one which has found its time. Soon it took root, flourished, and in half a century spread around the world. Today the Red Cross is recognized as a vital part of community life throughout the world.
That the Red Cross is the pioneer of its broad field is shown in a review of its origin and development.
Moved by the horrors of the Battle of Solferino in 1859, Henry Dunant, a young Swiss idealist, and a small band of villagers he had summoned, braved the danger of gun-fire in a determined effort to give voluntary succor to victims of the ferocious encounter. Later Dunant wrote a stirring volume on the barbaric practices among nations toward fallen warriors. Although other influences helped to crystallize sentiment for such a movement, the original aims and purposes of the Red Cross sprang from Dunant's emotions and from a sympathetic reaction which his writings captured.
Prior to its inception in this country in the work of Florence Nightingale during the Crimean war was born the principles of modern nursing. Thousands of lives were saved on the battlefields when she and her devoted followers nursed many back to recovery and brought order and sanitary practices out of chaos and gross neglect.
European leaders set about to correct this wartime evil a few years after the Crimean and Solferino engagements, and in 1863 assembled a committee at Geneva to study the problem of neutralizing aid to the wounded in the war. The solution was found in the Treaty of Geneva which was ratified by twelve nations in 1864. Today more than a half hundred countries are banded together in the cause. There also exists an International Red Cross Society with headquarters in Paris. It is headed by John Barton Payne, American Red Cross chairman.
The United States, although observing the formation of the Geneva group, was extremely backward in becoming affiliated with the movement. Not until Clara Barton had spent many years of tireless effort to the founding of the Red Cross in the United States did the government finally recognize the widespread need for such a society.

FOR DEAR OLD ALMA MATER

Mothers and fathers of the Southwest read the account of a fatal accident during one of the many football games last week with varying emotions. They were not human if, in their breasts was not waged a battle of conflicting thought, the query uppermost being "What Price this Fighting Glory?" Everybody, even the most rabid of football followers, deplore such tragedy, especially when the victim is a youth, in the prime of life, with all of life's ambitions before him. But in the case of the youth who succumbed after injury on the El Paso gridiron, the game was placed in a new light, broader and uplifting. The young man's thoughts as he breathed his last was for the player indirectly responsible for the accident. "Tell him he was in no way responsible; I tackled him the wrong way." The mother, whose heart was breaking as she saw life ebbing for a fine son around who, no doubt, she had built many hopes, also dismissed the player from responsibility, exclaiming "It is the breaks of the game." Asked if she opposed the boy's ambition to play the game, she stated that, on the contrary, she encouraged him and, if she had another boy she would encourage him to play the game also. And why not? The boy's own statement, added to that of the mother, is the best argument we have ever heard in favor of a game that teaches the youth fundamental principles that will guarantee his future as a useful citizen of his country in all walks of life: Courage, Initiative, Discipline, Good Sportsmanship. Mother and son, in the face of stalking death and tragedy, have exalted, not merely a game, but principles instilled by participation therein.

DEFAULTING RFC LOANS

With not much surprise we read that certain railroads have defaulted on $55,000,000 of RFC loans.
Could it be that this is to be used as a further argument before the Interstate Commerce Commission for increased freight rates?
Probably not. The government doubtless would be quick to see thru a contrived default, even tho' the railroads were inclined to such deceit.
In total, the RFC has loaned $423,801,021 to railroads. Of this sum $70,631,445 have been repaid. Then there is the defaulted sum. The remainder of the aggregate loans is not yet due.
The default does not represent a loss to the government. As security it holds bonds of the railroads which could be sold for more than enough to satisfy the debt. Or the government could foreclose and take over the railroads.
It desires to do neither of these acts. On the contrary, there is a hope that the railroads can be strengthened and, with returning prosperity, increase their earning power and pay off their debt. Obviously this is the proper course to pursue.—El Paso Times.

Sanderson business men deserve a vote of thanks for closing places of business Monday, honoring the memory of our country's fallen heroes and the cessation of hostilities in one of the cruelest wars of recorded history, and one whose streaks of misery are still visible. That we have not forgotten is a good omen—that hope for our country still persists, and that faith in its ideals have survived.

Texas' Newest and Oldest Governors.

Here is Jimmie Allred, Texas' governor-elect, listening to the voice of experience represented by O. B. Colquitt, who is Texas' oldest living governor, who left the governor's chair when the present Democratic nominee was still in short pants. They posed in Corpus Christi while attending the opening of a new manufacturing plant in that city. (Texas News Photo).

Guests of Mrs. J. L. Osgood and Mrs. Elmer Schwalbe last Friday were Mrs. Ike Billings, Mrs. A. Billings and Mrs. Lee Billings and children of Langtry. They returned home that evening accompanied by Miss Grace Marie Billings who spent the week end in Langtry visiting relatives and friends.

Mrs. J. C. Green and daughter, Miss Willie Mae, motored to Alpine last Saturday where they witnessed the football game played between Sul Ross and the El Paso School of Mines. John Green, Jr., who is attending Sul Ross, returned home with them and spent Sunday here with his parents.

It Happened in Sanderson TEN YEARS AGO

This Week, Do You Remember? (From the Times, Nov. 15, 1924)

Plans were made at a mass meeting last Wednesday night to raise funds to finish work at the athletic field. It was decided to give a Thanksgiving dance.

The Sanderson high school basketball team defeated the Marathon team last Saturday by a score of 26 to 1.

New Ford owners are Lee Cook, touring car; Jesus Marquez, sedan; Tariva Barea, touring car.

Mrs. J. M. Savage returned from El Paso Wednesday morning from a visit with her daughters, Mrs. H. P. Stanton and Miss Ella Savage.

T. R. Kuykendall of El Paso was in the city for several days this week on legal business and also to visit relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Clafelter and family have as guests Mrs. W. H. Clafelter and Mrs. C. F. Roderus of Terre Haute, Ind.

Magnolia Company Offering Winter Proof Service

"Every fall shows an increasing number of people preparing their cars for winter driving, according to information coming through our dealers and service stations," said E. P. Angus, vice president, and in charge of sales of the Magnolia Petroleum company.
"These people," Mr. Angus explained, "know that much of the pleasure and economy of winter driving is lost with a car lubricated for summer driving." With the first chill mornings comes hard starting. Motors warm up slowly. Batteries get their hardest use.
It was for the purpose of making cold weather driving more economical and more pleasant that Magnolia's Winter-Proof Service was first offered.

"This seven-point winter-proof service," Mr. Angus explained, "will thoroughly prepare the car against the hazards of cold weather driving. The crankcase is flushed and filled with quick flowing winter Mobiloil. The chassis is lubricated with Mobilgrease for winter performance. The differential and the transmission are cleaned out and freshly lubricated with Mobilgear lubricants that do not harden in cold weather. The radiator is cleaned and flushed and if necessary the correct amount of anti-freeze put in. The battery is examined and re-filled for the heavier load it must pull in cold weather. The tank is filled with winter grade Mobilgas. Autoists in the Southwest are rapidly being educated to Mobilize for Winter."

In Sanderson Joe Kerr is agent for the Magnolia company's gasoline and lubricants.

Mrs. and Mrs. H. W. Morelock of Alpine were Sanderson visitors last Saturday. They were enroute to Del Rio where Mr. Morelock was to address a meeting of the American Legion at an Armistice Day program in that city.

LIKE READING WITH Smoked Glasses

You wouldn't bind your feet if you wanted to walk! Then why read in half light... as if you were peering through smoked glasses?

Reading or working in poor light causes eyestrain, which affects the entire nervous system and results in damaged eyesight. Statistics show that 60 per cent of all people over 40 wear glasses, or should wear them. Yet many folks today continue to read in light that equals only two candles stuck in bottle tops.

Check over your home lighting tonight. See that each member of the family has his own reading lamp... equipped with at least one 100-watt bulb, two 60's or three 40's... according to the number of sockets. Use shades that are wide in spread, light in color and open at the top. In this way, you can be sure your family is getting light that is adequate to protect vision. We will gladly help you re-arrange your lighting without charge.

See the Sight-Saving New I. E. S. STUDY LAMP

The new I.E.S. Study Lamp was designed by lighting engineers to give the maximum of soft, glareless light. The extra wide outside shade (A) is lined with white pigment and reflects twice as much light as ordinary lamps. The opal glass diffuser (B) eliminates glare, and sends enough light upward for general room illumination. The stand (C) is 19 1/2 inches from bottom of shade to base and spreads light evenly over a wide area. Only $6.95; 95c down, $1.00 monthly.
