Payne Secures $75,000 To Fight Predatory Pests

Austin, April 9.—Representative Stanford Payne of Del Rio, in a brilliant speech before the House of Representatives, succeeded today in having the proposed $2,500 appropriation for the eradication of predatory animals raised to $75,000 for 1936-1937.

The appropriation committee, reporting to the House, recommended $2,500 be allotted for the eradication of predatory animals. This was in contrast with the $70,000 allotted in 1931, 1932 and 1933, and the $50,000 allotted in 1935-1936.

After the report of the committee Mr. Payne addressed the House, pointing out that coyotes in his district as well as in other ranching sections were preying upon stock to an alarming degree.

When the vote was taken, the amount was raised from $2,500 to $75,000. Mr. Payne won the fight by a vote of 99 to 34.

DEBATE AT MARFA

Miss Margaret Martin, coach in debate, accompanied by Betty Bassett and Mildred Hurst, girls' team who will represent Sanderson high school at the Interscholastic League district meet in Fort Stockton this week end, motored to Marfa Wednesday and participated in a practice debate against the Marfa team. The subject for debate was "Resolved, that the government should own and operate all utilities." Our team did exceptionally well, according to Miss Martin. Jack Deaton drove the young ladies to Marfa.

TRAINS DELAYED

The eastbound passenger train of the Southern Pacific was three hours late in this city Wednesday, due to high water in California. The westbound train due in here at midnight Wednesday did not arrive here until nearly seven o'clock Thursday morning. The delay of this train was due to the blasting of several overhanging rocks in the vicinity of Devil's river, the workmen failing to get the tracks cleared in time.

Enlargement of Dryden Port Is War Dept. Plan

One of the items included in the new construction program by the War Department is the enlargement and improvement of the U. S. Airport at Dryden. The allotment for these improvements is $15,000, according to information reaching the Times this week through our Congressman R. E. Thomason.

Mr. Thomason has been busy on legislation to see that this section is not slighted in the matter of enlarging the army, which will call for the regarrisoning of Fort D. A. Russell, at Marfa, as well as the enlargement of the Dryden airport.

The following letter from Gen. McArthur to Congressman Thomason is self-explanatory, and will be of interest to the people of this section:

"With further reference to your letter of March 25, and inclosure, regarding the proposed improvements at the Dryden airport, permit me to inform you that the War Department construction program has included, for some time, projects amounting to $13,000 for this station. The projects are, substantially the same as indicated in Mr. Kerr's communication.

"As you know the continuation of public works construction by the War Department is dependent upon further congressional appropriations and, also, the allocation of necessary funds to the Department by higher authority. The requirements at the Dryden airport constitute a real necessity, and it is hoped that the War Department will soon be able to secure the funds needed to accomplish all of the work contemplated. Your continued interest in the military service is greatly appreciated."

BLAZE AT DAIRY

Considerable excitement prevailed for a few minutes last Saturday afternoon about 6 o'clock when smoke was seen coming from the feed barn at the Lynn Harrell dairy south of the railroad tracks. Volunteers fire-fighters rushed to the scene with extinguishers, and upon opening the barn it was found that several empty feed sacks were smouldering due to being accidentally set on fire by a match that had been carelessly thrown down and was thought to have been extinguished.

No damage resulted and the smouldering sacks were removed from the barn and the fire extinguished in no time.

St. Dust, More Dust; It's Dusty

Every section of the country they are all but ruined by dust storms that have fallen the last two months. Other people can see the funny side of the situation and tell of unhappening, such as women sticking their faces and sticking heads out the window for a facial. In Sanderson, where the editor's experience is gained, the situation is not calamitous—it isn't a bit funny, either.

You call continual exercise a mop and broom funny—and motion, at that.

Of which reminds us of a duck in the gay 90's when we were at Toyah. The wind began blowing about 9 a. m. It got on the turf, with a resultant old-time West Texas sandstorm.

And to go to the ranch, and when the storm was at its worst. We rode that old hack about five hours, when our opinion remarked: "Hey, we are not to be coming to a gate soon." We opined that the wind blew them down, everything was o. k. So we kept riding, our riding kept hanging crepe. Finally about 6 p. m. we espied a sand, hazy, of course, but a sand habit. Scornfully we asked our companion: "See, big chump, there's the ranch." We did; but when we stepped on the back porch, it was town house. We had been riding in a circle for nearly 8 an account of a celebrated whose chief pleasure seemed to explode the old-fashioned theories of our gallant bears. Among the questions he asked was "Do you believe it is to go to bed after a very supper?" "All bosh," said the doctor. "That's what every baby does." Well, we all shared the old-fogy theory, zealously avoided over-stuffing before retiring. Anxious to get to bed, we recently went to supper, got six inches from the table and never had a good night's sleep. No one, not even Oop, had such a hideous experience. Every known wild that ever roamed the dis-jungle, and some that were never seen, chased us, bent on killing us and what we ate. We saw lots of pretty scenery, did not tarry long enough to see it. Finally outwitting the saurs, whooflings, and sev- other species, we reached a strewn beach, only to be chased by a horde of cannibals. The chase started all over again. They knew the country, didn't see a trail we were for it, not knowing or little where it led. It was what we called a box canyon, and home of the cannibal tribe. They tagged us, and said we were ready in a minute but they weren't talking to us. The pot was dragged out with water, and the fire was lit. When the steam began that water was hot, and at its heat we came out of there with our pants and found ourself sitting on a hot rock that had started in our shirt. We were smoking a pipe when we fell asleep. But proved to our satisfaction on that forefathers and foremothers' right. So next time the doctor tells you that frogs don't cause warts, swallowing seeds cause appendicitis; rusty nails won't stop bleeding and onion poultice won't cure the pneumonia, just tell 'em Baloney!

By JULIAN CAPERS, JR.

Austin. — (Sp.)—A lobbyist's paradise has been created in Austin by the dilatory tactics adopted by the Texas senate, obviously to retaliate against Gov. Allred for the barbs he threw during last summer's campaigns, and many of which lodged under certain senatorial skins.

With only a month of the 120-day session left the senate has more than 25 bills on its calendar, many unimportant, but some extremely important. Besides these bills there is a steady flow from the house and from the senate committee of additional legislation.

Working at the rate it has during the first three-fourths of the session, the senate can not possibly act on half these bills.

Many of those coming up from the house are vitally important—as for instance the appropriation measure, only one of which has passed the senate. By a strange coincidence among the bills yet to come before the senate are included the public utility bill, the race track repeal bill, the gas conservation bill and the common carrier pipeline bill — measures which form the heart of the governor's legislative program.

The race track bill is on the senate's calendar, but near the bottom of the list, with little prospect of setting a final hearing before adjournment. Strangely enough, this bill and the public utilities measure are the ones the governor has most actively urged.

The legislature is undefeatable. No governor can accomplish very much without the aid of a majority of its members. The senate, apparently is successfully avenging any real or fancied slights the governor may have put upon it, when he called attention of the voters to the reluctance of members of that august body to disclose how they made their living. But the senate's spiteful attitude is costing the people of Texas thousands of dollars, and many additional thousands must be spent for special sessions to enact measures that can not wait for another regular session.

This situation is made to order for lobbyists. Their business is to kill legislation. The easiest way to do that is to let bills die on the calendar or never let them get out of committee. With the senate's legislative machinery clogged by petty politics, the lobbyists all say a little prayer of thanksgiving every night for a political system that, whatever its advantages, is neither efficient nor inexpensive, and provides for long-suffering taxpayers to foot the bills.

Texans will have an intense interest in the working out of the national administration's strategic battle to hamstring Huey Long, the Louisiana Kingfish, because Dan Moody, the brilliant ex-governor, who fought corruption in his own state militantly and successfully, is the prosecutor and one of the chief actors in the Louisiana drama. The Washington strategists have outlined a plan of prosecuting the lieutenants of Long for income tax evasion. Their plan is to show, by successful prosecution of Long's underlings, the nest of corruption which they claim surrounds the Kingfish's political machine in Louisiana. This strategy, they believe, if successful, will prevent the Kingfish adopting the role of martyr, which he might shrewdly do, if the government should attempt to make an income tax case against him at this stage. But if successful prosecutions of his underlings are had at first, the federal strategists believe, conditions in Louisiana can be so thorough aired in court by witnesses under oath, that the Kingfish would have trouble in beclouding the situation by a pose of martyrdom.

Many able Democratic prosecutors were available for the Louisiana cleanup, but all were from northern states. Texans in high places at Washington pointed out that a "Yankee prosecutor" sent to Louisiana would be at a disadvantage. So Moody, militant, red-headed, with a reputation already established in a neighboring state as a foe of corruption in public office, was chosen. Wright Matthews, of the Washington internal revenue department—who dug up the evidence in the Louisiana income tax cases, hails from Palestine, and worked six years for Gov. Moody's law partner. He probably had a lot to do with Moody's selection, as did Vice President Garner, Jesse Jones, Rep. Sam Rayburn and Rep. Buchanan, of Moody's home district.

Gov. Jimmie Allred will make his first extended visit outside the state since his election on April 25, when he rides as a passenger upon the Texas Press Association's "Centennial Special" train touring the south and visiting Washington. That is understood to be the program unless legislative situation is such that the governor can not leave. In that case, it is very likely that Mrs. Allred, the charming first lady of Texas, will represent the governor on board the Centennial Special, which will bear the official invitation to the president, vice president, cabinet and the congress to visit Texas in 1936.

"Safeguarding The Children of The Community From Physical Harm"

The above was the subject of a paper read by Dr. Jas. C. Sharp at a recent meeting of the Parent-Teacher association. For the possible guidance of parents, the Times is glad to present its main features.

There are many procedures available to the parents of this community by which their children can be prevented from suffering some physical harm.

Some of these have been considered and steps taken to protect the child. Others have been overlooked, either through ignorance of benefit obtainable, or due to lack of finances.

All of the acute infectious diseases are by far the most harmful, and from which we desire to protect our children. At the present time we have available methods of protecting our children against several dangerous serious diseases, namely, diphtheria, whooping cough, scarlet fever, smallpox, and typhoid fever...

You ask how can this be accomplished? The answer is that the Parent-Teacher association endorse such a program and recommend to the school board that it be carried out. Then, the idea may be brought to the County Health Officer, and the school, in cooperation with the health department, institute a program of immunization so that every child in the school is immunized.

"Helldorado" Is Vivid, Novel Film Of Big Gold Rush

Reuniting the great producer-director combination which made motion picture history with such films as "The Covered Wagon," "Old Ironsides," and others, the new Jesse L. Lasky-James Cruze production "Helldorado," will be the attraction at the Princess in Sanderson tonight and Saturday.

"Helldorado" is the story of a group of eleven stranded strangers, cut off from the world by cloudburst and flood, who find adventure and romance in an old abandoned California ghost town.

More particularly, it is the story of a beautiful young heiress, the millionaire who is about to marry her, and the footloose young adventurer who teaches her that she is just a woman after all.

There is a modern gold rush as a climax to this vivid story, with armies of hungry gold seekers, sweeping down upon the old deserted town now but a shell of former glory.

Cruze found "Helldorado" to his liking and has turned out a big picture—wide in scope, sympathetic in characterizations, and free from the driving and colorful in the flow of its narrative.

Richard Arlen and Madge Evans play the young adventurer and the heiress with outstanding skill.

but I am condemning the parents, who allow their children, especially the younger ones and the babies, to remain in a seething furnace of bacteria. If these parents want to kill their children I can tell them of much quicker ways.

During the past year and a half I have unsuccessfully attempted to persuade the county commissioners and the school board to place a graduate registered nurse in the Sanderson schools.

A nurse in the school having supervision of the children's health, can do much to safeguard them from ill-effects of many an injury that, at the time may seem trivial.

One of the most important steps in the prevention of Bovine Tuberculosis, that type which infects the bones of young children, is to pasteurize the children's milk, taken as food. Before the child's milk is prepared it should be heated to 58 degrees Centigrade for 30 minutes.

In conclusion, I would like to state again that much can be accomplished through this organization to safeguard the children of this community from physical harm.

Urging programs of immunization, your interest in securing a nurse for the school will make this a safer and a happier community in which to live.

Helpful Household Hints

By BETTY WEBSTER

Just about now everything begins to look dingy—our houses, our yards, our clothes—oh, everything. We can get new clothes and plant gay flowers in the garden, but it is no small matter to renovate our homes.

One of the simplest ways to gain our desire of a "new" atmosphere is by changing the curtain rods. I know that sounds trivial and you'll probably laugh but take my word—try it and see for yourselves.

Use Wooden Rods. The first thing to do, of course, is to measure those windows that are to be dressed up. Then get pieces of wooden rod about an inch and a half in diameter the correct lengths.

Remove the old curtain rings, if possible. Put crushed ice in the glasses, pour in the mixture and serve at once. This will make 4 glasses.
