BRADDOCK HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP

Jimmy Braddock, Practically Unknown, Outfights Baer To Get Unanimous Decision of Judges

Well, customers, this is one the long shot brought home the bacon! Jimmy Braddock, unknown to millions of fight fans, and a 5 to 1 shot that he would be put away by Clowning Maxie, just kept singing "Who's Afraid of the big bad Bear," and slugged himself into the world's championship, the decision of referee and judges being unanimous.

Several months ago Jimmy was just one of the forgotten men of Depression, his only means of supporting his family coming thru relief. Today he's on the gold-lined pavement to millions.

According to your scribe's way of computing, Baer won one of the 15 verses, two were tied and Jimmy took the rest.

Round 1—Braddock started to force the fight from the beginning starting with right to body; Max landed a short uppercut but Braddock landed left, right, left right to face; Baer lands another uppercut, but Jimmy never wobbles. They go into several clinches, evidently feeling each other out. Braddock's round.

Round 2—Max didn't rush out as round opened. Braddock forces fighting and Max keeps clowning. The bell finds two rounds to the challenger's credit.

Round 3—Both come out slowly. Braddock seems to be trying for knockout. Max gets in several good blows to head and body but Jimmy never notices them. Max fighting capably as round ends.

From this round until the end of the fight Max (Addipate) Baer feels something slipping and all his efforts are concentrated on finding an opening for a haymaker, but Braddock, fighting very similar to Tunney, keeps covered up, and the blows that do land on his jaw never even stagger him.

After the eighth round, Baer's gay life begins to tell. Repeatedly he hit low, and was constantly being warned by the referee. In one round while both were in-fighting, he reached around the challengers neck, pulling his head down into deadly uppercuts. For this he was also warned.

Braddock on the other hand, fought cleanly all the route, and the decision was wildly cheered by the crowd at the Garden.

Jimmy Braddock is a man of family, wife and three kiddies—his inspiration. Here's hoping he will be a popular champion!

OBSERVE RAILROAD WEEK

The whistles of all locomotives under steam tooted loudly Monday morning, rousing late sleepers and causing many to scout about—thinking it was a fire alarm. George White's "1935 Scandals" Is Outstanding Musical of the Year

Slip us a ton of dynamic adjectives! Then maybe we can do justice to the scintillant gayety, "George White's 1935 Scandals," which open today, June 14 at the Princess Theatre for two days.

Here's the last triumphant word in screen entertainment, a splendid sunburst of comedy and music that sustains the reputation of Geo. White as a prince of showmen.

It more than surpasses the expectations and is just about 365 times more brilliant than its sister "Scandals" of last year.

The second annual edition, being sponsored by Fox Films, has everything. Here are ten top-gang stars: Alice Faye, James Dunn, Ned Sparks, Lyda Roberti, Cliff Edwards, Arline Judge, Emma Dunn, Eleanor Powell, Benny Rubin and George White, who conceived, produced and directed the entire show.

200 Dance Beauties
Brilliantly kaleidoscopic in the 1,000 eye-teasing costumes are the 200 glamorous dancing beauties.

The story is strong enough to stand alone and concerns a producer who stumbles on home-grown talent in a tank town and whisks them off to Broadway and Hollywood stardom, and when the bright lights get too strong for simple romance, he whisks back home a pair of lovers.

Among the 200 beauties 30 of the girls won beauty contests. All were picked and groomed and trained by White, whose reputation for selecting beauties and of skyrocketing them to stardom is well known.

Opulence succeeds opulence in the show. The dancing numbers delight the eye! The humor is infectious! The story engrossing!

But that's not all! For look, here are six bright, blitting songs, as follows: "According to the Moonlight," "It's An Old Southern Custom," "Hunkadola," "Oh, I Didn't Know (You'd Get That Way)," "I Got Born Too Late," and "I Got Shoes You Got Shoesies."

George White's 1935 Scandals is super-entertainment. Don't Miss It!!!

At this time the court purchased a new windmill, and sold the old one to John Clark of this city.

It was also ordered that the court ask bids on prices for three new trucks to be used as road equipment, two 1½ ton trucks without bodies, one 1½ ton truck with body. Current bills were allowed and ordered paid.

Freight Wreck At Altuda Halts All Trains to East

Passenger as well as freight service from the west was delayed into this city Wednesday, due to a washout and wreck that occurred at Altuda, a section several miles west of Marathon on the T. & N. O.

On Tuesday, about midnight, an eastbound freight train ran into a washout at Altuda, with the resultant derailling of sixteen cars. The train was in charge of Conductor J. H. Hayre, and brakemen M. F. Bodkin and Gerald Grigsby. John Green was engineer and Douglas Newton was freman.

Heavy rains in that section on Monday and Tuesday had caused warnings to be posted, and the train was going very slowly over that particular area. The engine and one car passed over the washout and bed and were not derailed. None of the crews were injured.

The wreck, however played havoc with service from the west. The eastbound passenger, due in Sanderson at 6 a. m., did not arrive until Wednesday at 2 p. m.

The midnight passenger thru here Tuesday was stopped just this side of the wreck and all trucks and cars available were sent from here, Marathon and Alpine and used in transferring passengers, baggage, mail and express between the two trains.

A wrecker from this place was immediately dispatched to clear the right-of-way, and several section crews started work repairing the damaged tracks.

Normal service over the road was resumed Thursday afternoon.

HEAR LECTURE

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. McCright and John Hayre motored to Ozona Sunday where they attended a lecture delivered that afternoon at the Church of Christ by Rev. Hardeman on "The Holy City." Rev. Hardeman, who is holding a revival there, gave a very interesting address, as he has visited the Holy City in Palestine.

If Either of Them Gets Nervous—

Takes nerve to stand up there and let anybody plunk at you with rifle. It also takes nerve to do the plunking, unless you are sure of your gun and your ammunition. "Ad" Topperwein, using Winchester gun and cartridges, has been doing it for years. He always misses—the boy—but clips the tiny sticks slick as a whistle. This feat and many others, just as thrilling, will be performed today, and by arrangement of the Kerr Mercantile company with the Winchester Arms company, the exhibition will be free. Don't fail to see the world's foremost fancy shot, just east of the ball park, today, 3 p. m.

PECOS RODEO Good Purses Draw Best Talent Of Southwest

Pecos, June 13.—Two full days of bronc riding, horse racing, steer roping, and other events will be held here July 3 and 4, when the American Legion post holds its sixth annual rodeo and cowboy reunion.

Pecos, already justly famous as the home of the world's first rodeo, held back in 1883, will throw open its doors to the large crowd of performers and spectators who will throng the city for the celebration.

The largest purses ever offered in this section will be posted, and these are already drawing some of the best talent in the Southwest. Expert riders, daring bulldozers, ropers and trick horse riders will give visitors the most thrilling exhibition of skill ever seen here.

One of the main features of the entire two days is the election of the rodeo queen. Several girls have already entered and interest, even at this date, is running high over this event.

Two big street dances—free to everyone—are also on the program. All tourist camps, hotels, cafes, and filling stations are preparing to accommodate the vast multitude of visitors who will fill the city during the rodeo.

On this night the management made a change in the usual procedure, announcing that if the person whose name was called should not be present the night's amount of $15 would be given away, and names would be called until the name of someone present was called. Terry Miller was the lucky boy, after the names of Cuco Perez and Mrs. A. E. Burns had been called.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Mansfield and children came in Wednesday from Knippa to attend to business and visit with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. "Pete" Vincent and son of Houston were Sanderson visitors for several days this week. Mr. Vincent, a T. & N. O. employe, was here making a survey and testing rock near the company's pumphouse preparatory to installing a rock-crusher, provided test proved favorable.

Federal Court to Probe Chains as Misuse of Mails

The aftermath to the send-a-coin chain letters is going to be unpleasant for somebody, if found out.

The latest news dispatches indicate that the Austin federal grand jury, which began investigations Monday, will prosecute those who participated in the fad. At least 100 cases from Del Rio, Austin, Waco, San Antonio, etc., have been cited for consideration. Judge Robert J. McMillan of federal district court, Ben F. Foster, assistant U. S. district attorney, formerly of Del Rio, and Guy McNamara, U. S. marshal, were all scheduled to take part in the Austin proceedings.

Interest Rate On Farms Reduced To 3½ Per Cent

The interest rate on all federal land bank loans made through National farm loan associations will be reduced 3½ per cent for all interest payable in the one-year period commencing July 1, 1935, according to an announcement received by A. E. Creigh, Jr., secretary-treasurer of the Sanderson National Farm Loan association, from A. C. Williams, president of the Federal Land Bank of Houston and general agt. of the farm credit administration of Houston.

This temporary reduction of interest on federal land bank loans having installments due prior to July 1, 1938, is the result of new legislation signed by President Roosevelt June 3. Interest payable on installment dates occurring after July 30, 1938, will be at the original contract rate which is 4½ per cent on loans now being made through national farm loan associations and varies from 5 to 6 per cent on loans made prior to April 1, 1935.

Under terms of the new legislation the land bank commissioner now may make loans to finance the purchase of farms by deservient tenant farmers. Formerly these loans could be made only to refinance debts, to repurchase farms lost through foreclosure, and for working capital. The act extends to Jan. 1, 1940, the time in which the land bank commissioner may make direct loans to farmers on first and second mortgages. The commissioner loan plus any prior encumbrance on the property may not exceed 75 per cent of the appraised normal value.

The interest rate reduction provided by the act will affect only federal land bank loans, all of which are first mortgage loans. Interest rate on land bank commissioner loans, which are made on either first or second mortgages on farm property, will remain unchanged at 5 per cent.

REPAIRING FOUNDATION

The state highway department's gasoline storage tank, in the east part of the city, is being repaired this week by the installation of additional support to prevent the structure from sagging. The job was let by bid, Griffith Lattimore being the successful bidder.

S. J. Kellogg left Sunday for Franklin, Texas, where he will visit with relatives. On Wednesday of this week he attended the wedding of his niece, Miss Elizabeth Kellogg, in Houston, which occurred at high noon.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Stavley were in town the first of the week from their ranch north of Dryden, attending to business.

Another good reason for Modernizing your refrigeration

Try This "Left-over" Recipe

ALASKAN DELIGHT

- 1 1/2 cups Tuna fish
2 cups steamed rice
1 cup peas
4 tbsps. mayonnaise

Combine all ingredients in glass dish and place in refrigerator. Chill until firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise, garnish with tomato slice or strip of pimento. (Chicken may be used in place of Tuna).

Intelligent use of left-overs offers an effective method of reducing living expenses. The clever house-wife can utilize scraps to prepare appetizing meals at negligible cost. To realize the greatest possible savings, however, she needs adequate refrigeration to safeguard left-overs until they are ready for use.

Use Ice or Electricity, But Refrigerate Adequately

Adequate refrigeration may be boiled down to two things: (1) constant cold, always below 50 degrees, and (2) ample food storage capacity, not less than two cubic feet per person. If your present refrigeration does not measure up to these standards, it will pay you to modernize with a new ice or electric refrigerator. Heavily insulated, finished in dazzling white porcelain and replete with many new refinements in design, the 1935 models are the last word in beauty, efficiency and operating economy. Flame of the Border

By VINGE E. ROE

Synopsis of Preceding Chapter

Dire consternation follows the disappearance of Soyna. Her horse, returning home riderless, is the first intimation that harm may have befallen her. Serge and Marston visits the village store where she was last seen, but find no trace of her. Her Navajo friends, remembering what they owe her, take the trail and find evidence of the presence of an airship. But Soyna is a prisoner in the hands of Diablo, who is bringing in Starr Stone, intimating he will sentence them both together. Soyna bravely faces the bandit chief, who tells her she is at the end of things, even life.

Doom of Soyna and Starr

"To life, even," said Soyna with calmness.

A little whisper of admiration murmured through the silent crowd. She had courage, had this young white woman beyond the border. No one ever met the master so, word for word, eye for eye.

"You remember, senorita," El Diablo said, "that once I took my lieutenant from your arms on a dance floor. That should have been a warning, a sufficient warning. Yet you did not heed it."

"Why should I have heeded it?" said Soyna steadily. "Who were you that I should fear you to such an extent?"

"You saw that Quince feared me."

"Yes. And knew there must be a reason. He is no man's coward."

"Then you should have known the reason to be good."

"I did."

"And tried to find that reason out. I have no doubt."

"Assuredly."

"And did?"

"No, senor. Although I tried hard."

"You shield the man."

"No."

"You lie to me, senorita."

"And so do you," flashed Soyna.

"Carramba!" swore El Diablo. "You tell me that?"

"You told me that. In my country a man does not speak so to women."

The man who ruled his little world with blood and steel half rose, his dark face purple with a mounting rage. In that wavering second Soyna Savarin was nearer death than she had ever been.

Then he sat down again and smiled. That smile was deadly as an adder's grin.

"So," he said, "we shall proceed. And Quince did not tell you that I meet the ships from China at Mazatlan?"

"No, senor."

"Nor that I bring into Mexico and along the border merchandise of great value."

"No, senor."

"Nor that that merchandise crosses into the United States by my little gray ships of the sky to be sent to New York on the railroad?"

"No, senor."

"You are well schooled, senorita," he sneered. "I make bold to compliment you both. You did not know that Quince is—or was—my ablest man in both countries? That he knew as much about El Diablo as El Diablo knows about himself? That he can do anything connected with my business, from seining the sea at low tide for floats, tied to the sunken contraband, to flying the planes? You did not know about all this?"

He was leaning forward now, searching the girl's face with boring eyes to catch the faintest change, the slightest flicker of betrayal.

"I did not, senor," she said.

"H'm," said El Diablo savagely, "and when you so quickly stooped and picked up from the floor that small brass can which Senor Parks dropped from his pocket, you still did not know what you were finding?"

"No," said Soyna, "and would not now if Manuel there had not told the Senora about it—called it a five-tael can of 'black molasses'."

Manuel leaped from his seat, talking swiftly, facing his master. And somewhere behind her a woman stifled a scream. But Diablo was on his feet, his fist on the table.

"So!" he thundered, "my people talk behind me, do they? They mention that which is never to be mentioned! I'll deal with you—and you, senora, later. And now bring me Quince."

At that Soyna felt the world go round for one terrible second. She clutched the chair tightly.

And from somewhere at the right there came the sound of marching feet, the swift step of men obeying a master. Through the dappled shade cast by the poplar trees five figures moved into her line of vision, four who walked abreast in twos, and in their midst a fifth—Starr Stone, as she had seen him last, in cowboy boots and dungarees belted at his lean hips, a faded denim shirt.

He was haggard and his eyes were large in his tanned face; his arms were bound behind him. He was a prisoner with all a prisoner's indignities heaped upon him, but his tall form was erect, his blue eyes dark with the spreading pupils. He strode toward the table with his gaze on Diablo's face and saw no other in the silent mass.

"Senor," he said, "and the smile was gone from his face. It was black with fury."

"For five years, Quince, you have been with me, my best and ablest man. You have done my bidding quickly. You have led my raids. You have put my merchandise—safely through its secret ways. I have called and you have come, always. Always, until lately. Lately you have come on laggard feet. You have held back at my orders. You have disobeyed me. And I have now the reason. That reason is a woman—a woman whom you have set before El Diablo—whose word has been more to you than mine. Who, through your instruction, doubtless, has come upon the key to my activities. Who has caught Quatro with the goods in his own store. Who holds Diablo and all his future in the hollow of her hand. Or would so hold him if it had not been for Quatro's very swift action in the matter. Senor, behold the woman!"

He had risen again, leaning with one broad hand on the table. With the other he pointed dramatically to Soyna. And like a flash Starr Stone whirled and saw her.

It was the first inkling he had had that she was not safe in her own country, and about her own pursuits, and the shock of it drained his face to a ghastly pallor.

"Soyna!" his lips formed soundlessly.

"Yes," said the girl defiantly, "they took me from my horse two night ago—kidnaped me—by airplane—and brought me here because I stumbled on the fact that Parks is their agent in the smuggling of narcotics across the line. They think you told me—that you and I have planned to double-cross this wicked bandit here—this beast who says I'm lying!"

She waved a hand at El Capitan, and nodded her black head toward him.

"Ah! A beast, am I? El Capitan Diablo a beast!"

"Yes, senor—and worse," said Soyna Savarin. "You may kill me—as I do not doubt you will—but I am an American, and I do not bend to you either in body or soul. We are both Americans!"

"Oh, Americans! And Americans do not double-cross!"

"No, senor."

"Well, we shall see. Quince—attention. What do you say for yourself?"

The tall man standing in the mottled shade looked long in his master's face. What years of wrongdoing, of obedience, of fear, were in that look only they two might say. For a long time it held between the wild blue eyes, the deadly black ones.

Then Starr turned to Soyna. "A misstep in my early youth—it doesn't matter now what it was—put me in the power of El Capitan Diablo. For my freedom's sake I cast my lot with him. For my life's sake I could never leave him afterward. I have raided, I have burned, pillaged, but I have never killed a man or harmed a woman or a child. I have been his brains in smuggling, his ablest lieutenant, as he says, but now I am through."

"With death as my sure reward for what I'm saying, I say now and here, before these witnesses, that I am done forever. Done with all wrong and evil. That the leopard changes his spots at last. For the love of you in my soul I am made over new. They'll kill me soon, and I hope they'll send you with me with all my heart—though hell itself can hold no torture for me to compare with the knowledge that I have been the cause of your being here. That will be more punishment than my lost soul can bear. Oh, Soyna, forgive me for what I've done to you!"

"Forgive you!" panted the girl, half sobbing. "Forgive you? I glory in you! And we'll go together, never fear! If not one way, then another. It will not be a long good-bye, I promise you."

"Soul's covenant," said Starr Stone.

"Soul's covenant," she answered.

But here El Capitan leaped to his feet, his fist one the table once more.

"It will not!" he rasped. "You think it will not? Carramba! El Capitan Diablo has yet to say the final word. You to the winds and the vultures Quince, and may you remember many things in the interval."

"You," he turned to Soyna and leveled a finger at her. "I give to that one among my men who rises to Quince's empty place. Manuel, my compliments, the lady. I believe you like the white skinned woman with curls in her hair. And after you, the rest. And that, as they say across the border, is that. Take them both away!"

The four men moved to surround their prisoner, the marching feet passed swiftly, and Soyna watched the tall bronzed head go out of the shade into the sun—around a corner.

The world and all it held had turned dark before her just as the senora reached out a motherly arm.

Dimly she heard Manuel saying: "Careful, senora, careful—she is mine."

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

Do you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination, backache, headache, dizziness, swollen feet and ankles? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unwell and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

May Robson In Role of Mother Scores Big Hit

Just as from selfishness spring the problems of real life, so in RKO-Radio's epic photoplay—"Strangers All"—are the dynamic forces of the thrillingly powerful story rooted in the human characteristic called "self-interest."

The picture has May Robson as head of a family that is brought to the verge of destruction by selfishness. A gripping story, one that all heads of families should see when presented at the Princess Theatre next Monday night, June 17th.

Miss Robson is the mother and there are four children in the family, three boys and one girl. For them the mother, deprived of her husband in their early years has struggled. She rears them, making the one mistake of pampering them. She did that out of her brimming love for them—she let them have their way!

In later years, their spirit of selfishness, each for himself alone, brought boomerangs of sheer, stark disaster upon themselves, and upon the mother. The children quarreled among themselves, and with their mother. One son the only child achieving any sort of success, was the family's sole provider; the two brothers and sister were seemingly hopeless. Each, through selfishness, builded woes upon woes, which were to crash later upon their home in a single thunderbolt.

It was selfishness that made all of them, living under the same roof, strangers to one another. Harmony was replaced with hates and jealousies. Suddenly light dawned on the mother—she shares the blame, stirs herself to battle, and by the might of what she does and how she does it works their salvation and her own.

Preston Foster is co-starring in the picture with Miss Robson.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Druse and son, Troy, left Tuesday morning for Vanderpool, Tex., where they will visit with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bell and children of Valentine spent the week end in Sanderson with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Green and family.
