OIL ACTIVITY IN COUNTY SEEMS CERTAIN

Renewal of Development Indicated By Recent Leases in Potential Field

YEARBOOK OUT
The Times is in receipt of the 1936 yearbook of agriculture just off the press of the Government printing office. The yearbook was sent by Congressman R. E. Thomason.

The book contains almost 1200 pages and is filled with material carefully prepared by experts that will be of interest and value to the farmer and stock raiser. One chapter is devoted to "Beef and Dual Purpose Cattle Breeding," and another to "Plant Breeding and Cotton Industry."

Congressman Thomason states that he has a limited allotment of the yearbooks and will be glad to furnish copies to his constituents as long as the supply lasts. Requests should be addressed to him at Room 1740, House Office Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Renewal of activities for oil development in Terrell county looks very promising, with continued leasing going on, especially in the northeastern part of the county, where several sections of land have been leased at $7.50 an acre and, in a few instances, as high as $20 an acre in the vicinity of the M. H. Goode No. 1 well.

Leasing is also active in other sections of the county, and several vacancies have been leased or purchased, a good price being paid for same.

A steel derrick has been erected and a rotary is being moved in by Loffland Bros., Tulsa contractors, to deepen the Ohio Oil Company's M. H. Goode No. 1, east central Terrell county wildcat gasser. This well has been shut down and capped since late in March, 1931. Opened at intervals, it has indicated no diminishing of sweet gas that increased to a gauged 6 1-2 million cubic feet daily at 5,606 feet on February 13, 1931.

M. H. Goode No. 1 is 2,152 feet from the east line and 330 feet from the south line of section 26, block 161, GC&SF Ry. Co. survey, 20 miles south of Sheffield a short distance west of the Pecos river, and about 33 miles south and slightly east of the Yates field in Pecos county.

Fire on Jan. 11, 1934, wrecked the steel derrick at No. Goode, which was drilled to 6,120 feet with cable tools by Southern & Flaherty, contractors. The fire was believed to have been caused by the striking of a spark from the derrick by gravel blown from the well.

Ohio Has 10,500 Acres Leased
The Ohio Oil Co. retains leases on about 10,500 acres in the area. Originally it held around 20,000 acres, acquired when its subsidiary, the Mid-Kansas Oil & Gas Co., purchased the Transcontinental Oil Co. The Ohio Oil Co. is the largest producer in the Yates field. Its West Texas land and geological offices are located in San Angelo.

No. 1 Goode has an elevation of 2,405 feet. It struck 1 1-2 bailers of fresh water hourly at 490 feet in the cretaceous, the base of which was logged at 650 feet. One quarter bailer of sulphur water was encountered at 1,254 feet, one bailer of water hourly was struck at 1,420 feet and two bailers of salt water hourly at 1,705 feet. The black shale section was entered at around 3,300 feet and 8 1-4 inch casing was run at 4,467.

Gas amounting to 63,683 cubic feet daily was struck at 5,229 feet in sandy shale and this increased slightly at 5,305 feet. On February 13, 1931, sweet gas was struck at 5,606 feet and gauged 6,500,000 cubic feet daily. The well was deepened to 6,120 feet in sandy lime without change and was shut in late in March, 1931.

Big Gas in Pennsylvanian
Identification of the formation in which the heavy gas was struck at 5,606 feet was difficult, owing to the blowing out of samples but was believed to be a series in the Pennsylvanian, although possibly the Permian.

Directs Exposition

Harry Olmsted, one of the best known business men and civic leaders in the Southwest, is the new Director General of the Texas Centennial Exposition. He is at the helm of the $25,000,000 World's Fair at Dallas following the death of William A. Webb, general manager, on August 9. Mr. Olmsted for twenty years has been a director of the State Fair of Texas and for five years its president.

TO THE PLOUGHBOYS

Cy Mussey, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Reuben Mussey, and aunt, left last Saturday for Stephenville, where he will enroll in John Tarleton junior college, a branch of Texas A. & M. "Cy" has high hopes of becoming a member of the Ploughboy squad. He made an enviable record with the Sanderson high school Eagles the past two years. However, he enrolled at Tarleton on a straight pay-as-you-go basis.

FOOTBALL NEXT WEEK

The Sanderson Eagles, minus 8 lettermen from last year's squad, have been put through their paces for the past two weeks, by Coach Smith, in an effort to whip it into shape for the opening game of the season, which will be played with the Marfa Longhorns at Marfa on Saturday, Sept. 28. The material this year is decidedly light, and while Coach Smith has no dreams of a district championship, he is sure he has the material with to build a good team later.

TOO MUCH COMPETITION

O. T. Schupbach, Dick Sullivan and Elton Halley returned home early in the week "Teeter" from T. C. U. Dick and "Dutch" from Hardin-Simmons, where they got tryouts for the football squads. The boys said there is too much competition in those schools, and while their showing was average, the squad in each school had to be cut materially. We did not learn of their plans for the future.

Uncle Eli says that there is one good thing about a feller that chaws terbaccy: He never started a forest fire.

Governor Calls Special Session September 28th

On Monday of this week Gov. Allred issued a formal proclamation calling the legislature into a special session on Sept. 28, to consider new financing for old age pensions.

The call specified the following purposes, which previously had been announced:

"1. To provide further necessary revenue for old age assistance to persons entitled to same under House Bill 26, as passed by the second called session of the 44th Legislature.

"2. To consider an act on such other subjects of public importance as I may, from time to time during the session, submit by message."

One of the other subjects was expected to be legislation to enable Texas to participate in additional benefits under the Federal Social Security Act, including unemployment insurance.

A committee appointed by the governor to study unemployment insurance will hold public hearings next Tuesday and Wednesday, Tom C. King, vice chairman, announced. Employers, representatives of labor and others are invited to the hearings.

"We expect to hear the viewpoint of lawyers, industrialists and affected persons," Marlin E. Sandlin, assistant secretary of state and committee member said.

Governor Allred said he would study the problem of taxation.

NAMES OF ELECTORS TO BE PRINTED ON NOV. BALLOTS

Austin—The secretary of state's office indicated that the names of the 23 presidential electors, rather than the presidential and vice-presidential candidates would appear on the November election ballot in Texas.

Some Texans high in National Democratic councils had expressed concern lest omission of the list of electors might invalidate the election. A state statute sought to permit elimination of the electors and substitution of the candidates.

Enactment of Earthquake Horrors In Picture at Princess Wednesday

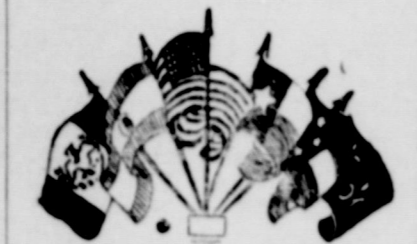

"The Earthquake," which opens at the Princess Theatre next Wednesday night, Sept. 23 for a two-week run, promises to be one of the most talked-about pictures in many months.

It teams three of the most popular screen stars for the first time—Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald and Spencer Tracy. It is a picture brimming with romance, love, comedy, beautiful music and excitement.

The picture takes us into the exciting, mad excitement of the Barbary Coast when it was a byword around the world. It takes us into aristocratic Nob Hill, into the old Tivoli opera house, the Grand Palace Hotel and other landmarks of old San Francisco—it takes us through the disaster that leveled a beautiful city the ground thirty years ago, in a series of the most realistic disaster scenes ever filmed.

Clark Gable offers one of his greatest characterizations in the role of Blackie Norton, owner of the most popular resort on the coast. Jeanette Mac Donald is superb as the country girl who gets her singing career on the Barbary Coast and rises to great heights, only to return to the Coast because the man she loves is there. Spencer Tracy is in an unusual role as a madly priest who chooses the back street for his evangelistic work. In the excellent supporting cast are Jack Holt, Jessie Knight, Ted Healy, Shirley Ross, Reginald Irving, Harold Huber and Al Shean.

Information Sought By Texas in Big Treasure Hunt Launched by Board

Austin—The greatest treasure hunt in the history of Texas is underway from the Gulf to Red River and from Louisiana to New Mexico.

Back of this unique search is the Mineral Resources Committee of the Texas Planning Board, and they are seeking the location and character of every mineral deposit in the state.

Preliminary work reveals Texas to be exceedingly rich in minerals and mineralogists in the employ of the committee have located and classified most of these minerals, but in Terrell county there are deposits of clays and sandstone which haven't been fully located.

Residents of Terrell county who know anything about these deposits can render a great service to the state by sending full information to the Texas Planning Board, Austin, Texas.

Hitler Suggest Bagging Russia to Ease Pressure

Speaking in Nurnberg, Germany last Saturday, Reichsfuehrer Hitler cast envious eyes at Russia's fertile fields and rich mines. He didn't mention war with Russia, but gaining territory is not possible any other way. That is the trouble with a dictatorship, you must keep your supporters stirred up to a high pitch.

Electricity Halt Paralyzes City in California

When electricity failed for half an hour in Los Angeles the other day it stopped the city cold. The dairies were paralyzed, street cars halted and even gambling establishments were closed. Minor disturbances broke out in several places and many persons suffered slight injuries. A city such as a complex structure that the failure of one essential service will tie it up. What would our pioneer fathers say to such dependence?

Childless Family Accused of Taking Kidnaped Child

An unsigned note to the parents of kidnaped Harry Browne, 20-month-old Detroit child, says that the kidnapers needed one child, the Browns have many and can spare one. Can any family spare one of its children, even though there are many? The maternal instinct takes many queer slants, doesn't it?

German Complete Survey Flight Across the Sea

The success of the China Clipper service across the Pacific has speeded up plans for a Trans-Atlantic service by air. A German plane recently finished a survey trip across the southern route, by way of the Azores. Pan-American lines are flying to various legs of the northern route almost steadily buying land and equipping stations. Problems on the Atlantic are many more than on the longer stretch of the Pacific. Weather mostly.

Ohio Methodists Approve Merger of Three Groups

The Ohio Conference has ratified the union of the three great Methodist organizations. This is one move among the many in the nation aimed at this merger. It is agreed that there are no great religious differences to be ironed out, only administration and financial problems.

Michigan Man Saves 22 Lives, But Can't Swim

Fred Johnson of Menominee, Mich., has saved 22 persons from drowning but can't swim a stroke. It's a hobby with him and he has spent a large amount of money in equipment and his spare time looking for some one to rescue. Wonder when he'll fall in and have to be dragged out?

Amateur Aviators Fly Many Miles to Have Breakfast

Picknicking with a modern angle was represented at San Marcos recently when 15 airplanes piloted by amateur flyers went from San Antonio to San Marcos for a picnic breakfast. All the planes made the trip successfully and "a good time was had by all."

Cruiser Sabotage Calley Jealousy by Investigators

The nation was thrown into a state of alarm recently when evidences of sabotage were found on board one of the Navy's crack cruisers. Rumors of Communist and other activities were bandied about recklessly. Now it turns out that some ship worker was jealous of his boss.

Nudists Serious About Convention Over Problems

Followers of the nudism cult are holding a convention in California. It is a serious affair and as dignified as a fat man can be without clothes. But, the leaders insist, it is not a peep show and visitors and cameras are barred. Enthusiasts of any cult are always serious.

Politics Holding Interest As Races Warm Up

It is less than 2 months to the national elections and candidates of all five groups are speeding up their work. Private information from the East indicates that big-shot gamblers are wagering two-to-one on Roosevelt at the present time. This is a drop in odds and it is expected that they will go to even money or below before the day of voting. This is not so much of an indication of change in trend, however, as it is the result of "hedging" or reversing of bets by the placers of big money, to cut possible losses.

Football Season Begins in Texas Before World Series

Only synonymous with Thanksgiving, but those days are gone forever. The football season in Texas begins this week in both high school and college. The writer remembers when if a football player was asked to practice with the mercury above 50 he was insulted. Now they play all summer long, and like it.

Sherlock Holmes Saves Man Facing Murder Charges

Sherlock Holmes, that fictional character who enthralled so many through his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, now dead, has been credited with clearing the name of Oscar Slater, charged with murder during a robbery. Doyle's activities just before his death brought Slater the hearing that cleared him of the murder committed in 1908.

Tropical Storm Hits Texas Coast Does No Damage

Moroccan Chief Exiled by France Asks for Freedom

Abd-El-Krim, leader for many years of the Riffs' battle against European dominance has recently pleaded with the French government to release him from his Napoleonesque exile on an island in the Indian Ocean. The man who, single handed, defied all the powers, promises to be good. France is studying the question because of the natives' activities in the Spanish revolution. Old Krim may see in the Spanish revolution a chance for his people to regain their control over northern Africa.

Japan and China Again at Odds Over Technicalities

Chinese nationals are reported to have refused members of a Japanese boat permission to land in China to investigate the death of a Jap there. The Nipponese look upon the incident as serious. Until Japan has obtained sufficient room for expansion incidents of this kind will always be possible tinder for flames of a new war.

Spanish Rebels Capture Resort in Northern Region

The revolution in Spain still goes on, there are so many fronts involved that it is almost impossible to gain a comprehensive picture of the struggle. San Sebastian on the Bay of Biscay recently fell into the hands of the rebels giving them control of the north of Spain. Both the rebels and the government troops are announcing victories on other fronts until it seems a case of both sides winning.

CHAPTER VI (Continued from last week)

At the last luncheon stop, as Kerrigan and Hal were drink-Crack joins them, and while at the table Crack grossly insults Kerrigan. Hal is prevented by the owner of the place from chocking Crack to death as the pent-up loathing for the man dims his judgment. Crack abjectly apologizes. Resuming the journey Hal again tells Barry of his love for her. She promises to tell him why their love is impossible.

As they rode on, they talked or not, as the moment meant; but either way Hal knew that Barry and he were more profoundly together there—in a closeness that grew mature and strong, ready for more thrilling aspiration. Now she had said that she loved him; and with that bright finality, he belted firm his prowess against any mysteries, any obstacles.

At rand Island they crossed the Platte river—blue water among the biscuit colored flats where you might still find the fording tracks of the covered wagons; and Rasputin droned away on Route 30 again, with the river hidden low to the southward.

The vigilant welcome of Barry's eyes were quickest for the live things: the fat bellied little creatures that scurried across the road with tremendous haste but no speed, like small mechanical toys, stirred her soft chuckling, and once a swift bird swooped in a lovely arc to deliver his small, mortal impact against Rasputin's hood; Barry's muffled cry of compassion had Hal's foot hard on the brakes.

"He's dead, surely?" she said, glancing backward.

"Fraid so," said Kerrigan.

"I'll stop if you like," said Hal.

"No," said Barry sadly, "but it seems such a poor death for him."

The sun was lower, but it was still blazing hot when they rushed by the little group that walked a shadeless, long stretch of the road. The farmer's overalls were new, his shirt white; the child asleep in his crooked brown arms wore a fresh dress and the printed pajamas of the two older girls following were bright and clean. Hal's thought was of the meanness of having raised that corridor of dust for them to walk in; and as he turned to speak to Barry, Crack's indolent voice came quickly to his ear. "Notice that kid in his arms?"

"Yes," said Hal, with a short, unwelcoming nod; he hadn't thot of Crack for an hour.

There was a flat quality in the next speech of Crack, as if he had exhausted the matter's interest.

"It was dead," he said.

Hal suddenly felt that Crack, if he wanted to, could frighten him, and he turned aside in quick anger to mutter: "D—n it, you don't know that."

"I saw the kid," said Crack in listless obstinacy; "it was dead."

Contempt, low and briefly savage, smoldered under Barry's quick, "It was not dead." Her eyes were blazing even after they had left Crack, as if what he had said were personal to her; her pursed lips lay unwilling together, as if she tasted something turn bitter in her mouth. Crack said nothing.

Hal tried again to capture the certainty that his tained hatred of Crack was defined within the forgettable episode of last night. It couldn't be a slowly crescent thing, begun at the journey's inception. Crack was to insignificant. It must all be Hal's own reaction to a long day of driving, with the trip window of the speedometer near the fifth fresh start. The temptation to look around at Crack and see if his undistinguished face was still basking in the sly pleasure of things he privately knew—a sort of persistent temptation that was part of his fatigue, part of his taut impatience for the night's stop and for Barry. Soo, too, were these other dim bogies, an unconnected wonder whether Crack might be bidding him time for some little weapon of revenge for humiliation; and the old-maid's sense of a thickening imminence stealthily preparing to come upon them just as on the long horizon there behind, the dark was preparing.

They dined in North Platte. If it wasn't raining afterward they would try to make a place called Ogalalla for the night.

Just before they drove up at the hotel, Barry murmured, "I'd like to wash a little, and leave Doc. Shall I meet you down here?"

"Right," said Hal, with the brittle apprehension that unless they hurried something would be sure to happen and stop them.

Barry stood there so straight and cool, talking to Kerrigan, and Hal's hasty fingers slipped on the knots of the luggage lashing. And only when the bags well down did she go into the hotel and up the stairs.

The hall was hot but Hal's well used, unadorned room was ten degrees hotter. He washed quickly and hurried down to the car again, half certain that Sister Anastasia would appear to tell him Barry was too tired to go out so late. It was already eleven.

But Barry came alone—hatless, a reticent smile pretending to ignore the seriousness of her brave eyes. "I haven't been long, have I?" she said squeezing his wrist as she came to him.

"Too long," he said. "Anything is too long. It's all too long. I've had twenty-six years without you and I grudge every moment."

She bowed her head, her lips involuntarily parted to reply. But she didn't. Instead she said "Did you find where the garage is?" And she added quickly: "I don't give a darn where it is. Oh, Hal, be gentle with me; help me!"

The garage was just around the corner, and beyond it the town ended nakedly, the street swallowed by the dark plains like a road running into the edge of a flood. The last house was dark; they hadn't to go far to be alone. And when they stopped, Barry parted his hands with hers, leaned back between them and joined them before her.

"Hal," she said on a wary sigh of comfort, "I'll tell you a story."

"I know a story," he whispered in her hair. "Is it about you?"

"It's about a girl much younger than I," she said; "younger in everything."

"Then why should I hear it?"

"Because it's sort of a test," Barry said. "We don't know each other so—so very well, do we? There's something I need to know before I tell you what I have to tell you. You listen to the story and tell me what you think—and then I'll know."

"Barry, it would keep," said Hal. "Tell me some other time—after we're together, alone, for good."

She pressed his hands harder against her firmness and her head turned so that he smooth cheek ran under his lips. "No," she said, and he could tell from her voice that her eyes must be closed. "Please—Hal, now."

"All right," he said. As a favor, Barry, which I shall want returned."

"This girl," Barry began hurriedly but quietly; "this girl lived on the same street I did, at home; I know her well. It doesn't matter what she looked like, except that she was pretty—perhaps before she should have been. Her father was in the bank, on town boards, a vestryman in the church—she thought she understood him, she loved him very much, and she tried to be everything to him as he was everything to her. She knew he had started humbly in his life and she knew how proud he was of the trust and respect he had in the town, how carefully he had built it up around him and in himself. And she was proud of that for both of them. But she knew hardly anything else about him, except what she saw, because once when she asked about her mother, he made it plain in his gentle way that she wasn't to ask questions, that some day he would tell her everything she needed to know."

Barry's pressure against relaxed a little.

"One day," Barry went on, making sure it should all be simple and clear to him as it to her, "her father brought a quiet sort of man, a pleasant younger than her father but older than she. The man was a good deal, but when he was home the girl hardly saw him except at breakfast and dinner—the evening he used to read paper while she and her father played cards and talked, as always had.

"Then one day her father her that the man had asked consent to their marriage—girl's and the lodger's. Her father had given it. He treated it much as an ordinary matter—even without warning, the way no real feeling about it way or the other. And her father wanted it. So they were married, right away, she being under seventeen, and her father a little past thirty. For more a year there was hardly any interference in her life; she gave her beaus, counted her husband's laundry and sewed on his buttons as she did for her father—was like a dream—not happy, unhappy—that doesn't seem worth breaking down because you know it's a dream and you wake up soon.

"Then her father was taken—very ill—so that the doctor her she must think of his life. She could not—possibly—tell her so dreadfully, so desperately that she never wondered would happen between her—her husband. One night he called her to him; he asked her to promise that she would stick to her husband no matter what happened, do what he asked her to do, no matter what was, never to leave him nor obey him, for ten years. He promised; and then in his weakness and fever her father about it and begged her to promise all over again. It was so terribly important to him—terribly—terror mixed up in it. And while she stood watching after she'd promise, her father died."

A dog barked in the still, town and the dark, sleeping away before them forever in the starless black of the sky.

"Later," said Barry quickly, she began to realize it had opened, she told her husband would try to love him, if he wait—try to love him for the and friendship her father had him to make her promise of. Her husband laughed at her she were a fool; he said, "You promise that because wanted to keep his respect in h—I with him." He showed a sort of receipt that was really a confession of some her father had done before he come here, in another bank-acknowledgement; that her band had covered it up for her.

"That was four years ago, contract still has four years to and what she'll be when it ends. Her husband's plans are definite enough—to make money for and power for him, in the he finds. The four years have mostly a sort of schooling for—with a few little tryouts."

"That's the story, Hal, do you think?"

"It's improbable," said Hal once, "and banal and wickedly relevant to what my heart the whole world is full of—"

Within his arms she turned quickly stopped the words her smooth, urgent lips.

WHEN A WIFE FLIRTS SHE'S IN "DANGEROUS WATERS"

If you had been taken into the home of your best friend, and found yourself the constant object of his pretty wife's advances what would you do?

That is the problem that confronts Robert Armstrong in "Dangerous Waters," the exciting Universal drama to be shown at the Princess Theatre tonight and Saturday, Sept. 18 and 19, with Jack Holt in the starring role.

Friendship and loyalty impel Armstrong to rebuff the blandishments of the wife. He hesitates to advise Holt of the situation, since the latter is deeply in love with his ravishing bride of a year.

Shortly afterward Armstrong has an opportunity to go to sea on a cruise with Holt, and this, he feels, offers a solution to his problem. But when the bride elects to accompany her husband on the trip, Armstrong finds that he is more deeply involved than ever.

This is only one situation in a swiftly moving drama of the sea which is filled with thrilling incidents, culminating in an attempt by rascally members of the crew to sink the ship. "Dangerous Waters," has a superb cast including Miss Bradley, Diana Gibson and Charlie Murray.

They'll be riding, shooting and fighting again at the Princess Theatre next Monday night, September 21, when the screen's favorite western screen team, William Boyd and Jimmy Ellison—known to lovers of action pictures as Hopalong Cassidy and his pal of the range, Johnny Nelson, have their finest story to date in "Heart of the West," which shows for one night only.

Packed with thrills from the opening flicker to the final fade-out, when "Hoppy" and Johnny ride toward new horizons, "Heart of the West" give the straight-shooting pair new jobs and a new location.

Cassidy and Nelson are reporting for work on the Big John Trumbull's "Tumbling L" ranch near Yucca when the story opens. They never take the job, because they find Trumbull's outfit is not the sort they wanted to be associated with. Instead they agree to aid the eastern owner of an adjoining ranch, Jim Jordan, who is involved in a fence war with the Trumbull outfit.

Jordan wants to fence in his small ranch; Trumbull swears no fence will go up, and that if it does, it will come down right away. Hoppy and Johnny discover the sinister reason for Trumbull's opposition, then beat the outlaw at his own game.

It's a picture packed full of range action; you'll like it!

Mrs. J. E. Dewees and Mrs. S. V. Houston, who were enroute to their homes in Floresville following a trip to El Paso and to points in New Mexico, spent Tuesday and Wednesday as guests in the homes of Joe Kerr and James Kerr.

Mrs. P. L. Avant of Del Rio visited here this week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Keene.

Rev. John Minter, who has been leading the large union choir at the Presbyterian church, leaves Saturday morning to fill his pulpit in Uvalde. Mr. Minter's music in the Presbyterian meeting has been much appreciated.

Editor-in-Chief—Sammie Carter

HELLO!

Hello everyone! We are surely glad to see all of our old school mates and chums running around with shining faces. After three months of vacation they seem to all be happy as larks, running around and getting their lessons. We want to take this opportunity to tell you all that we are now beginning our school's newspaper again with better resolutions than we have ever had before. We also want to take this opportunity to thank the publisher of the Sanderson Times for giving us the privilege of using the back page of her newspaper. If it were not for that special privilege given us, we could not have the "Eagle News."

Current Comment

Don't ever pity the editor of a paper. It's the reporters who have to do all the work.

Ho hum! School started off fine, or did it? It isn't so easy to get your brain to work again after such a long holiday. You'll get used to it, though, or at least you had better.

Everything seems to be fine except that the books aren't covered and the Study Hall doesn't have enough seats. Therefore, most of the senior girls may be found in the library. They'll have a good time, though, don't worry.

Coach is having trouble getting enough boys out to play football. Just remember that we must have a team. So get out there, boys, and let's see you working.

The juniors have a meager class this year. If you don't know just why, take a look at the number of sophomores standing around.

Then there is the question of what club to join. Take my advice and join the one which interests you. Give your best, and the best will come back to you.

H. E. TEACHER SUPPLIED Mrs. Leona W. Ulbricht of Antonio was elected as home economics teacher last Saturday and started her work Monday, a week after school opened.

Mrs. Ulbricht holds a B. S. degree from the Southwest State Teachers college at San Marcos. She taught in the H. E. department of the Burnet high school for several years.

"Mrs. Ulbricht has an excellent rating with the state vocational board of the home-making division—rated among the best by that board," Supt. R. D. Holt stated.

Mrs. Ulbricht's work consists of two classes in home economics with a total of 25 students and one class in girls' physical education and one seventh grade art and writing class.

Change Made in Study Periods

A new system of periods is being used in the high school this year. Six one-hour periods are being used instead of eight 45-minute ones, the system that was in use last year.

Several new subjects are being offered to high school students this year. A course in stenography is being offered to the juniors and seniors. Business training is being offered to freshman students. Public speaking is now a full credit subject and is open to junior and senior students.

Marion King, ex-high school student, is enrolled in the Mexico high school this year.

Can U Imagine?

By MILDRED UNDERWOOD

One of our sophs with a Texas University student Monday night?

Sanderson students actually liking most of the new teachers?

A teacher forgetting to call a class meeting?

Some students already being absent from school?

The senior boys not having the privilege to check out library books?

The students liking six 1-hour periods better than eight 45-minute periods?

All the teachers having poise when they made their introductory speeches the first day of school?

An ex-senior really enjoying her present surroundings?

Two senior boys having to be sent out of the English class?

A sophomore, who locker is No. 197, forgetting to bring her locker key to school?

There being only thirteen seniors! Will that prove to be lucky or unlucky?

A senior girl engaged, but still getting an education?

That we have only 34 more weeks of school?

Rooting Squad Elects Officers

The high school girls had their first pep meeting this afternoon at 4:15. They met in the study hall for the election of yell leaders. Miss Lorene Childers and Miss Lucile McWhorter are the sponsors of this club.

The meeting was called to order and leaders were elected from each of the four classes. They were: Mildred Underwood, senior yell leader; Helen Turner, junior yell leader; Mary Beth Banner, sophomore yell leader; and Ethel Laura Nance, yell leader from the freshman class.

The first game of the season will see all the pep squad girls attending it, with new uniforms and all the trimmings. Twenty girls have signed up for this club.

Slides Available For All Courses

This school year the classes of both the grammar school and the high school will have access to the colored educational slides furnished by the division of extension of the University of Texas. A fee for the year was paid at the beginning of the current school year and all classes can use the slides free by paying the transportation charges.

Slides may be obtained in any field of social science, literature, business, science, mathematics, or any other subject taught.

"It is advocated at the present time that teaching include visual projects as one of the best possible methods," Supt. R. D. Holt stated.

The slides are used with an electric projection machine which is owned by the school.

Free Tickets for Honor Students

Again this year the manager of the Princess Theatre will award movie passes to the honor students of the grammar school and high school at the end of each school period.

The plan will from that of the previous year in that passes will be awarded to the highest ranking student in each grade each month in grammar school and each six weeks in the high school. In case of a tie, passes will be given to each student. A total of eleven passes will be given to the school at the end of each reporting period. The passes will be brought to the superintendent's office and will be given to the teacher of each class.

This courtesy by the manager of the Princess Theatre is intended as an incentive for high scholastic rating. Mrs. Carlton White is manager of the local theatre.

CONVICTS IN HIGH SCHOOL

By NELLE LEA

We are well aware that the boys consider themselves as prisoners while they are at school. To be sure they were looked upon as convicts when the senior boys and one junior boy had their hair cut so short that they looked as if they needed a striped suit to complete their costume.

Their story is that they had to start a new style in this school to make it slightly different. They are going to have to do some more talking before we change our thoughts that their reason was to keep some one from pulling their hair.

There are just four more senior boys that will have to cut their hair before it will be a senior fade. Two advantages are that they do not have to comb their hair; the other is that it won't be so hard to wash. If the girls had pretty curly locks like two of the boys had they wouldn't have had it cut—but boys will be boys.

Well, well, boys, it's bad enough now, but wait until it grows one or two inches longer. What are you going to do then? I guess flax-seed or glue are the only things that will help.

Here's to you, boys. But next time why not start a fade that every boy can keep up?

Large Attendance At PTA Reception

Approximately 75 people attended the annual Parent-Teacher reception last Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the home economics banquet room at the high school. Mrs. Clyde Griffith, PTA hospitality chairman had charge of arrangements.

This reception is an annual affair given by the association honoring special guests and members of the faculty. The reception followed the first regular monthly meeting which began at 4:15 o'clock. Mrs. Clyde Higgins was in charge of the main program and the president, Mrs. E. W. Hardgrave presided over the business session.

Mrs. Hardgrave and Mrs. Bustin Canon presided at the tea table which was covered with a lace cloth. Pink candles in crystal holders were burning on the table which was centered with pink bride's wreath.

Committee members assisting Mrs. Griffith at the reception were Mrs. A. E. Creigh, Mrs. R. D. Holt and Mrs. John Harrison.

SENIOR CLASS MEETS

Miss Margaret Martin was elected by acclamation for the senior class sponsor at a meeting called Tuesday by Mildred Underwood, former senior class president.

Joe Kerr was chosen president of the class for the coming semester. Other officers were: Sammie Carter, vice president; Jack Bogusch, secretary-treasurer.

Howard Black, former high school student, is attending Peacock Military Academy in San Antonio this year.

The Reaction Just Before 9 O'clock

By MILDRED UNDERWOOD

Yes, that's right. Some students were glad for school to start, and one could tell it by their shining eyes, rosy cheeks, and gay hellos. But, on the other hand, some students were dreading the day when they would have to attend school, and again get in that monotonous routine, as they call it.

Let me tell you something: The students who dreaded school most were really and truly the happiest one on the campus. One could hear their gay voices above the chatter of their companions; their faces were bright and they had a big smile for everyone. They were running in one door and out another, calling to their old school chums. Now one can see that there were very few students who were not glad "Dear Old Sanderson High School" had again opened its doors to them!

THIRD GRADE WINS BOOK

The third grade of Sanderson grammar school had the largest per cent of patrons present at the September meeting of the Parent-Teacher association. At the initial meeting of the P-T A the rule was changed that a picture be loaned to the class winning the attendance prize and the plan of presenting a suitable book to the winning room was adopted.

The book will be selected by the teacher of the class and will be ordered through the school. The P-T A will make the presentation. Miss Lucile McWhorter is third grade teacher.

Jimmy Cook, ex-high school student, is attending San Marcos Military Academy this year.

Club Work Earns Quarter Credit

For the play at school that doesn't make Jack a dull boy, one fourth high school credit will be given this year, according to an announcement made Tuesday by Supt. R. D. Holt, in regard to the extra-curricula program at the Sanderson high school.

During the recent school year an extensive extra-curricula program was inaugurated by Superintendent Holt which included the organization of various clubs and each student in high school and the seventh grade being a member of some club. According to this year's program the club idea predominated, but one-fourth of a high school credit will be given students doing satisfactory work in his respective club. At the end of four years, the students will have one extra-curricula credit.

The clubs will meet on Monday and Tuesday mornings at 11:30; after school on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, and Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. This year's clubs include the Newspaper club, meeting every Monday morning at 11:30; the Dramatic or One-act Play club, on Thursday morning at 11:30; and the Science club, every Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. The junior choral club will meet Wednesday afternoon after school, and the high school choral club will meet Thursday afternoon after school. The Debate club work is included in the public speaking class, and Miss Margaret Martin will have charge. Miss Lorene Childers will have charge of the Newspaper club; Mr. Duane Smith, Science club; Miss Bessie C. Leath, Dramatic club; Miss Lucile McWhorter, the high school choral club, and Miss Louise Taylor, junior choral club.

"We hope to start later in the year shop work as one of the activities," Mr. Holt stated. The shop work club will meet twice a week and Mr. A. B. Caraway will have charge. Band work counts as one of the activities, and one-fourth credit will be given each year.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR BAND

Since most of the 1936 graduates were in the band there are but seven old-timers attending regular practice. Eighteen others are beginners, taking daily lessons and will be able to play in about six weeks. So we are looking forward to a good band. The band will play at all football and basketball games, and there will be several concerts during the year. You will see us first at the next football game.

Football Starts Again

By PAT HARRIS

Football season is again here! The Sanderson High boys have been training now for the past week. This year there are six lettermen on the squad: Joe Kerr, Jack Bogusch, Albert Appel, H. Chandler, James Allen and Esary Haines.

As it stands now we have: Joe Kerr, tackle; Jack Bogusch, quarterback; Albert Appel, guard; H. Chandler, tackle; James Allen, end; Pat Sullivan, center; Troy Druse, end; Wilton Dishman, back; Esary Haines, guard; John Taylor Birdwell, back; and Rafael Fierro, back.

Mr. Caraway, former football player on the Sul Ross Lobos, and who is teaching mathematics here this year, is assisting Coach Smith by coaching the line, while Coach Smith is whipping the backfield into shape.

Although our men are not as heavy or as large as last year, we believe they will put up a good battle for district honors. Our opening game of the season is with the Marfa Shorthorns, on Saturday, September 26, at Marfa. This will be followed by our first home game with Big Lake, October 3.

Junior Football Team Organized

The school will have a junior football team this year. Mr. Hensley, the band director, will have charge of coaching this junior squad. All boys in the sixth and seventh grades are eligible. Those now practicing are: Kenneth Litton, C. G. Carpenter, David Allen, Robert, Chandler, Wilburn Short, James Blackwelder, Martin Bodkin, C. Kerr, Marshal Cooke, James McDonald, Wilson McDonald, Theo McDonald, Earl McDonald, Harold Haynes, Curtis Litton, Ross Underwood, Mack Mims, Bill Cargile, Bill Cochran, Gene Lock, John Hardgrave, Ross Stavley, Julian O'Bryant, Sam Bell, Jerry Miller, Cherry Miller, and David Poncho.

Bill and Mary Ferguson, high school graduates, are enrolling in Westmoorland College, San Antonio this year. Mary finished high school here last year and Bill finished two years ago. Westmoorland is a fully accredited senior college.

Travel When the Southwest Was Young

This is a scene typical of Dallas and its Main Street of early days. The photograph was taken on one of the nine famous roads and highways which have been reproduced by the Ford Motor Company at the on the round block was replaced with rectangular blocks. Both types are pictured here.

Main Street, Dallas, which is believed to have been one of three old Indian trails leading to the cabin of John Neely Bryan, pioneer settler of Dallas, is reproduced in part in the "Roads of the Southwest" which encircle the lagoon opposite the Ford building at the Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas. This road is one of nine reconstructed historic trails and highways which have played important roles in the development of the Southwest.

1841, John Neely Bryan, starting from Preston Bend on the Red River, came down an Indian trail to the three forks of the Trinity River. The trail was later known as Preston Road and was the second most important early road in North Texas. It is now a part of Texas State Highway 116.

John Neely Bryan pitched camp on the banks of the Trinity River where the Indian trail forded the river at the three forks. He staked his claim to 640 acres of land which included the ground upon which much of the present business district of Dallas stands. Immediately a log cabin was erected and he started a trading post. Since he had settled at the only logical crossing of the river for miles around, the military road, or state highway, which had been authorized, naturally crossed in front of his cabin.

In 1881 bois d'arc block pavement was laid downtown. This was round blocks laid on a base of five or six inches of gravel. Later on, this round block pavement was replaced with the rectangular bois d'arc blocks on sand and concrete base. This has been replaced from time to time with asphalt and brick.
