With Dorothy Lamour of radio fame making her screen debut in this picture opposite Ray Milland, "The Jungle Princess" tells of a jungle-bred maiden who has never seen a white man. Her only companions are a full-grown tiger and a giant chimpanzee. She saves Milland, an explorer, from death in the jungle and then she falls in love with him. The decision he has to make between her and Molly Lamont, his fiancee rounds out this story of conflict between the primitive jungle and the effete West.

PRACTICE AT THE GYM ATTEND BASKETBALL

Upon arriving at the gym, one finds himself in the tumult of uproar. At one end are small grammar school boys with their shirttails out, their hair uncombed, and trouser legs rolled up. Then what a contrast this is to the well-groomed high school boys in their orange sweat suits. One shooting a goal, another chasing the ball, and everything they do appears Generally after practicing passes and shooting goals the boys are allowed to scrimmage. This is really a benefit to them, as they not only learn to pass and shoot goals better, but it improves their wind, enabling to play longer and harder without becoming so tired.

But we won't end this without adding that Mr. Caraway, their coach, is always in the big middle of everything. He practices as hard as do the boys, and he either scrimmages with them or acts as referee.
