WHAT GRADES MEAN IN SCHOOL

Many people ask "What do grades mean in school?" "Nothing at all," answers others, not thinking of his hasty answer.

Grades in school often mean the kind of job the student will have when he gets out of school. When an employer is getting recommendations on a prospective employe the first place he will call for such reference is the former school of the prospect. The best recommendation available is to be found is at such school. In school the teacher and the school heads get to know the students' habits, good and bad, and they also know the students' ability to work, his attitude toward work, and the students' school spirit.

One of the first things an employer asks when getting a recommendation is, "What kind of grades does the prospect make?" And the ones who put the most into school usually get the most

Once there was a busy, busy, business man by the name of Jones who was called away to another city for a very important business transaction, but before he left he had to go to the office to procure some important papers. It was early in the morning and the office had not yet opened, so he had to get the night watchman to let him in. The watchman, however, warned Mr. Jones that he could not go on this trip because the night before he had dreamed that there was an awful train wreck and that he was hurt very badly. Mr. Jones did not heed this warning, however, and went on his way. He was gone for two days and nothing happened to him. When he returned he immediately fired the night watchman. Why?

Once upon a time there was a man who had two watches, but the poor chap had but one chain which was valued at $20. He put the chain on the first watch and together they were worth twothirds as much as the second watch. If he puts the chain on thought that was an old romance. the second watch it is worth 234 the value of the first watch. How We think the boys lost those much does each watch cost?

Secures Biology Material for Class

Catherine O'Connor. sophomore in Sanderson high school, recently received a supply of cray-fish and oysters from Louisiana which are to be used in the biology class here. Her cousin in the neighboring state sent the materials to her. In return she is sending a shipment of live horned frogs to her cousin, to be used in the biology class there.

The biology class, under the Band and selection of a Band leadership of Mr. Duane Smith, make many interesting studies at Friday, December 17 a 9 p. m., first hand. The cray-fish and the oyster make up some of the important studies, and were thus welcome to the class. The science class this year has three microscopes to use in its studies and observations. These microscopes were repaired by the Welch Manufacturing Co. during the summer and add much to studies in the different fields of biology.
