Custards Should Be Served Same Day They're Made

College Station—Some people depend on their nose to tell them when food is spoiled, but sometimes a custard has no detectable odor and yet will make one ill, says Miss Nora Ellen Elliott, food specialist of the Texas A. & M. College Extension Service. This is because it has been improperly stored and has developed certain bacterial organisms. And don't make the mistake of looking for this danger only in hot weather, Miss Elliott further warns, for it can happen any time of the year.

When a custard is made it should be kept cold until used, and used as soon as possible. The Food and Drug Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture is often called on to ascertain the cause of food-poisoning outbreaks. Too many times it has been traced to some moist food such as custard, custard pastries, a gravy or sauce, or some leftover meat or fish that has not been properly kept before eating.

In case it is necessary to serve custard pies later than the day they are baked, Miss Elliott suggests that the custard part and the pastry be combined just before serving.

Joe F. Coppinger of Marfa was a visitor in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Boyett over the weekend.

VISITORS TO FORT STOCKTON WATER CARNIVAL

Fort Stockton, June 7.—From all over West Texas contestants and spectators are headed for Fort Stockton this week-end, beginning Thursday, for the three days of contests to be held at the fourth annual Fort Stockton Water Carnival.

Miss Laurys Hadden, Fort Stockton winner last year, and runner-up in the all West Texas Revue, will be queen of the Water Carnival and will occupy the throne over the center of the Comanche Spring pool on Saturday night. Miss Katherine Nations, El Paso, who won the queen's crown last year, could not return for the 1939 show, and Miss Hadden was elevated to the throne.

Elaborate ceremonies of crowning the 1939 Queen will conclude the Revue Saturday night. The winner will not only be the reigning head of next year's revue, but will also receive an all-expense trip to Treasure Island at San Francisco. Towns of this entire section plan to send their comeliest young ladies for the contest.

Amateur water sports will be a feature of the shows, both Friday and Saturday afternoons. M. E. Fincher, principal of the Fort Stockton High School, is chairman of this event, and is sending out information to young swimmers and divers all over this area.

The Spring City Golf Club's annual tournament will be staged on the 9th and 10th, with James Parker, Jr. of Alpine, as defending champion. Young Parker defeated his fellow townsman, Floyd Williams, and Elton Dozier of Midland last year the latter two trying for the runner-up honors. Parker was also low medalist in 1938, with a 69.

Fireman's races and water fights will enliven other moments of the day, and supplementing entertainment at the pool will be the performances of the Ambassador Water Team of Los Angeles.

A new feature of the 1939 entertainment is the three-day matched roping contest, in which West Texas finest performers have been bracketed. It will be held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

A free parade Friday morning at 10 o'clock will open the 1939

JAVELINA NOW PROTECTED BY GAME LAWS

The Peccary, the only native North American wild hog, has finally attained the official status of a big game animal in Texas.

The ranks of the Collared Peccary, or Javelina, have been depleted through long years of being hunted for their hides and as food, but when Governor O'Daniel signed a bill introduced in the State legislature by Representative Fred Felty of San Antonio, they became legally protected and it is now lawful to take them only from Nov. 16 to Jan. 1. The bag limit is two per season.

Texas sportsmen, in general, are only now recognizing the Peccary as a game animal capable of producing considerable sport, but nimrods from other states are invading Southwest Texas in increasing numbers each year.

They find Peccaries are capable of doing considerable damage to the unwary hunter and his dogs. Peccaries reach a weight of fifty pounds and its meat is regarded as table fare, but in order to prevent the meat from becoming permeated with a strong taste it is necessary to cut away a muskbag, found on the rump, immediately after the animal is killed. By doing this the sportsman not only finds he has a fine trophy to go alongside others in his den, but that he has supplies for the larder.

Wild hogs, now found in only twenty-two counties of Texas, formerly ranged over most of the state. Many references are found in the writings of early-day naturalists, hunters and explorers to the ferociousness of the Peccary when it is cornered. Many present-day hunters and other residents of Southwest Texas, who have been forced to hastily retreat to the refuge of a tree or rock pile, where they sat for hours watching the milling wild hogs gnashing their ugly tusks and hearing the herd utter its shrill war cry can attest to the gameness of the animal when it is aroused.

Short-legged, but fleet, the Peccary boasts long tusks and it is with these and its sharp hoofs that it does considerable damage to its natural enemies.

H. P. Attwater, Texas naturalist for whom the Attwater prairie chicken is named, related in his writings in 1896 that "the Peccary was widely hunted for its hide and as food, but that sportsmen also sought them". Too, he recorded the fact that the hides were used as currency in Zavalla County in 1886. Since that time the hides have been exported, mostly to France, where they were made into ladies' gloves. The bristles are converted into brushes.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt made a successful forage along the Rio River near Uvalde in 1892 in search of sport with the Peccary. A Kentucky cavalryman reported the Peccary rushes his adversary with the ferociousness of a tiger.

Peccaries, unlike most hoofed animals, sleep in some sort of a den and take refuge, head out, in holes. The nest of the young of which there are almost always two in every litter, are found in hollow logs and holes. The animals' principal food during the winter consists of nuts of every description, but in the summer they feed upon fruits, seeds and roots.

The herd's biggest boss is boss of the tribe and it is he who stands guard at the opening of the herd's den while the others sleep. Many a hunter, seeing the big boss on guard, has shot him down. Immediately another member of the herd takes up the post and is shot down. In that way entire herds have been wiped out.

Peccaries now range over twenty-two Southwest Texas counties, Robert Mauerhann, assistant game manager of the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, has found.

Mr. and Mrs. Tol Murrah were Del Rio visitors Wednesday.

INJURED WHEN CAVE-IN OCCURS

D. W. Jones was injured early Thursday morning when he was caught in a cave-in which occurred while he was standing in a hole that had been excavated for the foundation of one of the bridges being placed west of Sanderson on Highway 90.

Mr. Jones and two Mexicans were in the excavation, which was about 22 feet deep, at the time part of the side caved in. The Mexicans were not hurt and Mr. Jones was buried to about the waist which resulted in a fractured lower vertebrae as an examination later disclosed.

It will probably be about two months before he will be able to resume his work.

Wool buyers estimated on the first of June that 20,000,000 pounds of the 1939 wool clip had gone over the scales to the eastern dealers. This is said to be a third of the expected total for the year. C. D. Stokes, veteran wool buyer, put the total shipment of wool and mohair in 1938 at 101,000,000 pounds and estimated that this year's total for the two would be 85,000,000 pounds.

There's an old "yoe" at Texas Technological College at Lubbock that deserves a medal of some sort. She was nine years old on the 31st of January, is a registered Rambouillet, and has presented the college with a set of twins every year since 1932. Eight sets of twin lambs she has given the college to serve as "guinea pigs" in the animal husbandry division. W. L. Stangel, head of that department, says that six of her offspring are still in the college flock and that $125 worth of sheep from the ewe have been sold. According to her records she has sheared better than an 18-pound average yearly.

WHY GO TO COLLEGE?

This is a question that has been argued for so these many years. The question like all of its type is no nearer solution today than it was in the early days of American Colleges.

It would be unwise to send every child in Texas to college. The outcome of such a plan would be to flood the market with college graduates, or to cause a great deal of heartaches to students who, lacking the ability to graduate, failed out.

The matter of picking a career is an unfortunate feature of our system. Many parents make the mistake of deciding what little Mortimer will be when he is cutting his first teeth.

To the June graduate, go to college and if you are not sure what you want to take—make a judicious investigation into your likes and dislikes, and try to match a course of studies to them.

OK ROADSHOW "CAPTAIN FURY" TO LOCAL SCREEN

With the Brian Aherne of "Juarez," the Victor McLaglen of "Gunga Din," the John Carradine of "Stagecoach" and the Paul Lukas of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," playing the four top roles under personal direction of Hal Roach, "Captain Fury" which comes to the Princess Theatre Monday and Tuesday, stacks up as an attraction of the first magnitude.

Aherne's performance as the dashing ex-convict who champions the settlers against their oppressor is as ruggedly assertive as his portrayal of Maximilian in "Juarez" is restrained.

McLaglen's two-fisted enactment of the hero's light-fingered but faithful lieutenant is another stout link in his long chain of he-man characterizations.

The story and screen play, by Grover Jones Jack Jevne and William deMille, opens with the arrival of a convict ship at Melbourne and the placement of the convicts in custody of respected landowners for whom they are to work during the remainder of their penal sentences.

"Captain Fury" escapes confinement and convinces the settlers that they can defend their rights under his leadership. He thereupon liberates other convicts who promise to follow him.

The band which he assembles meets the oppressor's violence with violence, guile with guile, in a series of melodramatic encounters Captured at last, he is saved from hanging when the settlers testify in his behalf. He ultimately is pardoned and given custody of his convict associates.

Thousands of game and rough fish were killed in an extremely heavy hail storm of a half hour duration in the San Saba River in Menard county recently.

The fish, bass, crappie, bream, cat, gar, snad and sucker, were caught in the shallow waters of the river by the hailstorm, which followed an exceptionally heavy rain.

Game Warden G. C. Gardner, whose district is composed of Hardin and Liberty Counties in Southeast Texas, reached 6,452 pupils of the 5,981 in the upper grades of eighteen schools with a wildlife conservation program for fifth, sixth and seventh grade pupils which extended over a two-month period.

Eighty-one lectures were delivered by the warden and sportsmen interested in preserving game and fish. A total of 441 children competed in an essay contest on the subject of "Why and How to Conserve Wildlife." A total of $350 in cash prizes was awarded the students winning first, second and third places in each of the schools.

Do squirrels build homes and become old settlers or are they Nomads?

The Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, through two squirrel trapping projects recently gotten under way, is attempting to answer that question.

By trapping squirrels time and again and marking them with tags, the department biologists hope to ascertain whether squirrels set up housekeeping on one home range and remain there or whether they migrate and to what extent they move.

With the information at hand concerning possible migrations of squirrels the department can make proper recommendations for squirrel seasons in the various counties.

While it is not generally known, Texas has three species of game squirrels. The Texas fox squirrel inhabits central and south central Texas.

"King of the Turf" Rides Onto Screen As Exciting Story

"King of the Turf", which stars Adolphe Menjou and comes to the Princess Theatre Friday and Saturday, June 9 and 10, has everything in the line of adult entertainment, a strong story excellent dialogue, first rate acting, a blend of humor, drama, comedy and beautiful photography.

Producer Small has brought to the screen an exciting picture which is swiftly paced because it is set in the world of horse-race fans and big time gamblers. The story concerns a down-and-out who rises from the lower fringes to become one of the most publicized and spectacular figures of the turf.

Whether or not you are an ardent devotee of the sport of kings, you'll get thrills and chills and plenty of breathless moments watching the exciting horse races which are woven into the story.

Menjou and Daniel are supported by a strong cast of excellent players including Alan Dinehart, Dolores Costello, Walter Abel, William Demarest, George McKay and Tom Hanlon.

Texas Citizens Are Headed for Quieter Life in the Future

That Texas is headed for an era of quieter, more mature living is the prediction of Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health officer.

The basis of this prediction is the declining birth rate and the increasing life span of the average Texan.

While the population may continue to increase until 1955, as Government census experts predict, the percentage of youth is decreasing. By 1975 today's total American population over 65 years will have trebled their number from seven and a half million to twenty-two and a half million.

Two reasons for this change in the age ratio are smaller families and stricter immigration laws.

Third and most important reason is the longer average life expectation due to increasingly wide-spread use of medical and public health knowledge, which reduces mortality, particularly in childhood and allows the average person to live a longer span of life.

Repercussions to this change in our population from youth to middle age will be gradual. Both young and old will do less productive labor, while the middle aged do more.

When our population becomes more or less static, our scale of living will automatically rise.
