livestock commission dealer and order buyer.

Tax figures show that there are 420,922 sheep in the county, of which 20% are dry sheep and 346,738 are breeding ewes. This calls for 1,200 bucks, and on the basis of 75% lamb crops, would mean 260,052 lambs per year produced in the county, estimates Mr. Adams on a conservative basis.

The lambs, sold at $7 a head, bring income of $1,820,364, which added to wool (6.7 pounds average at 45¢ per pound) revenue of $1,262,766, and $400,000 annually from sale of dry sheep, provides gross revenue of $4,000,000 annually.

The same figures are used by Adams in estimating other livestock counts—28,000 cattle, 19,000 goats, and 3,000 horses.

Even Crops Can Tell You When They're Hungry

A farmer with the "know-how" can spot, at a glance, evidence of starvation in his growing crops, and remedy it. You will find it profitable to learn the signs of "hidden hunger" in your crops, whether you are selling them as cash crops or using them as feed for livestock. Once you have learned to understand the "sign language" of plants, you can often tell just by looking at a growing plant whether it is drawing from the soil all the nitrogen, phosphorus, potash and other elements it must have to produce healthy, high-yielding crops.

A deficiency in these essential elements will affect the plant's appearance in some way which will tell you just what is short. Here are some of the "hunger signs" in corn, for example:

- Yellowish-green leaves and stunted growth indicates nitrogen deficiency.
- Tips of leaves gummed together indicates calcium deficiency.
- Purple color in leaves indicates phosphorus deficiency.
- Bottom leaves dead; yellow striping between veins of upper leaves (condition known as "white-bud") indicates zinc deficiency.
- Scorching along the edges of leaves indicates potassium deficiency.
- Regular yellowish-white stripes on leaves indicate magnesium deficiency.

Other crops also show "hunger signs" which can be recognized at a glance if you know their sign language. Your county agent or vocational agricultural teacher can tell you about them or advise you about books or bulletins which give detailed information. Because of their thorough understanding of soil and crop conditions in your district, they are the men to answer your questions. Both are ready and able to help you. They know the signs of crop malnutrition and can give you valuable advice.

Worth thinking about: Consider the common little word and. It usually joins things together, but then we use it to separate things which should be separated.

Strawberry-shortcake is a homely example of meaning. It's eaten everywhere . . . it has two parts, but no one ever separates that satisfying combination in word or thought. You'd never think of saying strawberry and shortcake.

So it is with many combinations which cannot be separated. There's agriculture-industry and the livestock-meat industry, for example. These combinations cannot be split into separate sections, because all parts of each are dependent on the others. The production of livestock and the preparation and distribution of meat are inseparable as strawberry-shortcake. When producers prosper, meat packers prosper. When one suffers constant loss, the other must suffer also. Those of us in the livestock-meat industry have mutual interests, and we work together toward a common goal.

Ringworm in Cattle causes irritation and loss of weight. Indications of this parasite disease are circular patches on the skin, usually on the head and neck, which soon become denuded of hair. Small blisters and scaly yellow crusts appear, with moderate itching. Colorado A. & M. College suggests the removal of crusts with soap and lard, then painting the area with acetic acid, sulphur ointment, or iodine once a day.

BETTER FARMERS FROM OUR HIGH SCHOOLS

by E. J. Johnson
Federal Agent, Agricultural Education

By training the farmers of tomorrow in new farming methods, vocational agriculture is doing much to assure America the most productive and progressive agriculture in the world.

Teachers of vocational agriculture have worked for almost thirty years to prepare youth for the practice of better farming. Over 8000 U. S. high schools now have vocational agriculture departments. Broad courses of study are offered to in-school farm boys, and short, intensive courses are open to farmers of all ages. Many schools operate farms or observation plots in which students are able to practice what they are taught. The program is productive as well as instructional.

In the Pacific and Intermountain regions, vocational agriculture is taught to 30,000 high school boys. 64 high schools in these areas operate farms totaling 2,546 acres. The 1945 production record of the school farms and of students on their home farms is a tribute to the skill and the spirit of both the young farmers and their teachers. In 1945, vocational agriculture students in the Pacific and Intermountain regions produced 9,000 beef cattle, 11,400 dairy cattle, 19,500 sheep, 44,800 hogs, 58,000 chickens, 40,000 turkeys, and raised over 25,000 acres of field crops, fruits and vegetables.

Ratty Arithmetic: One rat eats about 150 pounds of corn per year. It costs you as much to keep 10 rats as to keep 17 laying hens. Those 17 layers could produce 200 eggs each, at 36¢ per dozen, which would bring you $102. For 10¢ you can poison those rats. Then, you can feed the corn to your hens and collect the difference of $101.90.

EDITOR'S COLUMN

You who raise and feed livestock know as well as I do that the problems of the livestock-meat industry are usually mighty complicated. Naturally, I am always interested in what others have to say about our problems, especially in the press or over the radio.

During the recent meat strike, for instance, I was impressed with the effort that was made to place both sides of the question before the public. On the other hand, I was disturbed, on several occasions, by statements made by people who either did not know all the facts, or who ignored them—people whose words consisted of part-truths and their own biased opinions.

To my way of thinking, all of us should consider all the facts that are available if we are to form a fair opinion on any subject. And so, it seems to me especially important that ranchers and farmers have the fullest factual understanding of every part of the livestock-meat industry. Now I don't pretend to know all there is to know, and you probably have many facts that I lack. But from long experience in this business we have learned many things which might help clear up certain doubts and questions you may have in your mind.

If there are things about our business that you are sure about, we would appreciate hearing from you. I will reply with whatever facts we have. I am sure that our correspondence will make for a better mutual understanding of our common problems.

INDUSTRY LOOMS FOR FORT CLARK

A representative of the Texas Railroad Equipment Company, highest bidder for Fort Clark which was recently sold by the government as surplus property, met with the City Council Thursday night of last week for the purpose of adjusting city rights to the propstry.

The City of Brackettville was to be granted permanent water rights, it was agreed, which matter was of paramount importance here. Permission for the city to tie into the Fort Clark disposal plant was given. It was also agreed that the city or rather the people of the community could have access to the swimming pool later.

The Texas Railway Equipment Company propose, according to their representative, to instigate the establishment of an industry here, especially one conducive to the development of this area. A woollen or scouring mill, possibly both, are expecting to be attempted. Mr. Peterson, of Kerrville is interested in the latter, and joined the Texas Railway Equipment Co. in their bid.

Earlier, the City Council had received an offer from another bidder, C. B. Wardlaw, proposing the organization of a company with himself for securing the properties and proposing establishment of a woollen mill here, and offering the city assurances and rights similar to those suggested by the Texas Railway Equipment Company.

The Council sought first for water rights, and secondly, for assurances for some industry for the old post in order to maintain employment here if possible. The city had exercised it priority to attempt to gain the rights but did not place a bid.—Brackett News Mail.

The improved convertible bulkheads, which form the ice bunkers in each end of the car, may be folded back to give maximum space for loads that move under top and body icing.

The fans are located under the floor racks, adjacent to the bulkheads, and operate by friction from the tread of the moving car wheel. They can be operated by electric motor for pre-cooling. Lightweight Refrigerator Cars

Developed by S. P.

WATSON, Texas, May 31—The Fruit Express Company, owned by Southern Pacific and Union Pacific Railroads, announced the purchase of 2,000 new lightweight refrigerator cars. The design and construction of the cars is scheduled for the first quarter of 1946.

The purchase of ultra-lightweight equipment, recently announced by Southern Pacific and Union Pacific for PFE's improvement program, will cost the company a total of $3,000,000. Its fleet, one of the kind in the world, carries the great bulk of the fresh and southwestern crops to distant markets.

The new cars will weigh about 4,000 pounds less than conventional refrigerators and will incorporate structural changes from Pacific Fruit Express' extensive experiments in laboratory and field tests. The effort was made in designing these cars, it was stated, to anticipate possible future car requirements in experiments now being conducted in radical changes in preparing perishable goods for market.

The insulation and easier handling qualities are outstanding features of the improved design. Thoroughly tested under operating conditions in experimental cars, PFE's principal innovations include new-type convertible bulkheads, improved fans for circulating air inside the car, floor racks, one-piece door closures, wrought steel and trucks with longer wheel bases.
