DEFICIT CUTTERS AT WORK
 WASHINGTON — A group of hard-headed businessmen, imbued with a genuine spirit of public service, have rolled up their sleeves and gone to work in the massive graystone building on Pennsylvania Avenue from which is directed the $20 billion a year business of the United States postal service. They have a single-minded purpose: to improve the nation's postal service while reducing its cost. If they succeed, their chief reward will be the satisfaction of showing that sound business management can be a practical expectancy in government.

The personal background of a number of the members of the new management "team" now being recruited in the Post Office Department, under the leadership of Arthur Summerfield, was quite well known to me when I walked into the Postmaster General's suite of offices. In the field of business and industry where they have carved out their success through hard-gained know-how their abilities could not be had for double or triple the salaries they'll receive from Uncle Sam. I put the question to Charles R. Hook, Jr., deputy postmaster general and organizational workhorse of the Summerfield team: "What motivates you men to make the financial sacrifices you're making to come to Washington?"

Hook is the son of one of America's most widely known steelmakers. He literally grew up in the industry — but on his own. As a vice president of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad for the past six years, he has become recognized as one of the country's top authorities on organization and personnel management. Here was his answer to my question:

"Our nation's predicament could be more serious if only we were in an all out war. The American people generally are aware of the fact that unless we begin operating our Federal government on a balance budget and demand ability and personal integrity as basic characteristics of the people in the management of government, the future is not going to be one we would like for our children. We business people who are leaving our life-work and our homes to come to Washington feel this deeply. We have been asked to make a contribution to the nation's security. We have responded — as all citizens in these times must."

The first job of Summerfield and

Hook was to size up the task. Here's what they found: a $20-billion yearly business with an operational budget of $2.9-billion, with more than 500,000 employees, with 43,000 post offices and postal stations — and with a deficit this year of $659,000,000! "Why," said Hook, "just our New York post office, one of the 43,000, does almost as much business as Macy's department store, the biggest in the world." No wonder I found Hook in his office on Saturday. And he'd asked me if I'd mind doing the interview at the lunch hour! I didn't mind.

Men with know-how in each phase of the operation of this mammoth business are being brought in. John Allen, of Chicago, is an example. Summerfield and Hook frankly do not know how Allen voted last November, but they know he is one of the best men in America on big transportation problems. For five years he has been general traffic manager for Sears Roebuck & Co. His job for the new post office department is assistant postmaster in charge of transportation.

"We haven't filled all the key jobs," said Hook. "We're proceeding carefully, not being satisfied with less than the best in ability and character, and heart. Meantime, we're approaching the overall job here as a business problem. We're doing an organizational study, starting at the top. Our first objective is to raise the standard of management. The overwhelming majority of employees of the department are loyal, efficient, dedicated people. With a sound management organization and sound and human business practices throughout the whole operation, the postal service employees will do the job more efficiently, more happily, we feel, and with substantial savings in cost."

And eliminate the year-after-year deficit? "We feel confident," Hook said, "that the deficit can be reduced and at the same time the service improved. But in this objective, we're dependent on the cooperation of Congress. Congress sets the postal rates, thus our income. It determines our basic costs by setting our wage rates for postal employees. We've been getting fine cooperation. As a result of our initial studies, we hope to raise the qualification standards for postmasters and other classifications of personnel, and while this may step on some political toes, we believe the Civil Service Commission and our governing Congressional Committees will be in accord, and that's a big step toward improved efficiency."

What happens in the Post Office Department under business management will be worth watching. At this stage it promises both efficiency and economy.

HEALTH FOR ALL—

PREVENTING TUBERCULOSIS
Tuberculosis and automobile accidents may seem to have little in common, but they are alike in that both can be prevented. Both rank tragically high among causes of death in this country. In 1950, the accidents on the highway caused 33,577 deaths, and tuberculosis 33,633. Gross death rates from both causes were thus identical, 22 per 100,000.

Most of us are familiar at first hand with the perils of the highway. Almost daily we see newspaper accounts of spectacular motor accidents. We are all aware of the need for preventive measures.

Although tuberculosis is less spectacular and less publicized, we must not forget that it can be just as deadly as a car out of control. And just as unnecessary. Knowledge of the facts about the disease is the first preventive weapon.

Tuberculosis is a chronic, communicable disease caused by a germ called tubercle bacillus, that is spread from person to person. It is not inherited, any more than is careless driving. It does not attack just the young and frail. Anybody can catch TB, rich or poor, young or old.

The "rules of the road" to prevent tuberculosis require: a balanced, nourishing diet, plenty of sleep, moderate outdoor recreation, clothing suited to the weather to prevent colds, avoiding people who do not cover coughs and sneezes, and having regular medical examination with a chest X-ray at least once a year.

Tuberculosis seldom shows any outward symptoms in the early stages, but the X-ray can detect it. The sooner TB is discovered, the better are the chances for a quick recovery, and the smaller are the chances for the germs to find new victims.

What's new about "TT" DYNAFLOW?

Television treat — the BUICK CIRCUS HOUR — every fourth Tuesday.

The TAKE-OFF'S TERRIFIC!

It's only fair to warn you.
When you try a new Buick with the sensational Twin-Turbine Dynaflow Drive, you'll tingle all over with thrill.
You'll sweep your speedometer needle from zero to 30 mph so quickly, you won't have time to breathe but twice. You'll move from a standing start to legal speed so quietly, you'll practically hear your heart beat. You'll experience such complete and utter smoothness every step of the way, you'll be wholly relaxed, refreshed, and ready for more.

This is not dream stuff. This is real.
This is what actually happens when you're at the wheel of a new 1953 Buick with TT Dynaflow.
Twin Turbines in the Dynaflow unit, instead of just a single one—in addition to other engineering advances—make the tremendous difference.
So you feel a firmer and more immediate "take hold"—get far faster getaway, new quiet and efficiency, plus infinite smoothness to and through every speed range.
There's a lot more to be had, of course, in these great new Buicks. Higher horsepowers and compression ratios. A still finer ride. Easier handling. Improved visibility. More comfort and richer interiors.
But start with take-off—the greatest in Buick's fifty great years—and learn the rest of the story from there. Can you drop in on us this week?
