LISTEN TO LUKE

By Albert---

Last weekend we received the release of the story about the TSGRA District 1 directors and members sponsoring the predator-control meeting here Saturday this week. We think the program and having the meeting here both are excellent ideas and we voice our appreciation to those who are responsible for each.

Everything that happens to bring visitors here is a help to the community and is another means of our expressing our friendliness.

The same thanks is due to those who sponsored the roping here last Saturday that was responsible for bringing many visitors here also.

But back to our original idea: We thought that there had been enough furor against the killing of eagles to cause all of the ranchers over the nation to do some thinking -- but we found that such is not the case.

We took a little jaunt Saturday on business and on the highway north of Fort Stockton we saw several fresh coyote carcasses hanging on the fence on the right-of-way for all passers-by to see: both the haters of coyotes and those who would go on record and take a national stump for their protection.

Certainly, we can understand the pride involved in a ranchman who kills a coyote and/or a cougar, bobcat, lynxcat, etc. And we have held in the past, and still hold that the rancher is justified in taking this means of protecting his livestock.

And as a newspaper man, we were proud to print the pictures that we printed in the past showing the various kills of predators. It makes for interest in a ranching country to publish such pictures.

But some of the pictures were sought by this newspaper, and some of the ranchers who had predators came to us to offer the chance for a picture. We probably are cutting off all future chances for pictures of predators, but it would be to the best interest of the ranchmen if such pictures were not published in the future.

And, as we stated at least once before, it would be better if the ranchmen did not advertise their kills by hanging them on a fence on a highway right-of-way, in our opinion.

Maybe it just depends on how you look at it!

But those who are looking for some kind of an animal to protect could find food for public sympathy in seeing the carcass of a coyote hanging head-down on a fence.

We heard the other day that it had been determined that predators had preference over sheep in protective legislation because the predators were here first!

Funny, isn't it? The Indians were not given the same consideration!

Mrs. J. E. Hasty and daughters were weekend visitors in Del Rio.

"For everything there is a season". But something is out of season in the picture above -- an almond tree in bloom with the ground covered in snow on January 31, 1972. The tree is in back of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Harrell and the beautiful pink blooms seem to be such a contrast to the weather conditions on Monday. It is doubtful that the blooms will make almonds, even if it is not too unseasonable for an almond tree to flourish!

Chili Supper Slated Tonight

The annual chili supper given by the Band Boosters will be this evening (Thursday) from 5:00 to 7:00 p.m. at the St. James Parish Hall. Mrs. Irvin Robbins is chairman of the project.

Plates will be $1.25 and children to the sixth grade will be charged 75¢.

The money earned from the project will be used to help defray expenses for the band to attend the Sweetwater Festival, March 3-4 and for a new concession stand at the football field.

The patronage of the public will be appreciated.

Mrs. Carl Werneking is visiting in Seminole with her daughter, Mrs. Glynn Chandler, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan O'Banion made a business trip to Eldorado Sunday.

Predator Control Is Being Studied

Because of the increase in sheep and goat losses due to predators, new methods of control must be found if the sheep and goat industry is to survive. Herbert Brown, chairman of Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association District 1, announces a special area-wide meeting of sheep and goat producers in West Texas to discuss this problem.

The meeting will be Saturday, February 5, at the St. James Parish Hall in Sanderson. The program will begin at 11:00, followed by a lunch hosted by area TSGRA members and directors. Special guest speakers will be Bill Sims, TSGRA executive secretary, and Sutton Allison of Fort Stockton, TSGRA president. They will discuss the forthcoming referendum for predator control and all matters of importance on the legislative level. Directors for the 1972-73 term will be elected at the close of the meeting.

Currently serving as directors are: Herbert Brown, Sid Harkins, C.C. Mitchell, and Charles Stegall of Sanderson; Sam Bruce, Frank Fulk, W. Alpheus Harral, Bill Ed McKenzie, Gerald Porter, Jerry Puckett, and Burch Woodward of Fort Stockton; Weir Hall of Marathon; Gay Howard, Bill Renfroe, and Russell White of Marfa; and Rod Richardson of Iraan. Jack Allison of San Angelo, William Allison and Worth Evans of Marfa are honorary directors for life. Past presidents from the district are Steve Stumberg of Alpine and John T. Williams of Sanderson.

All sheep and goat producers in Brewster, Culberson, El Paso, Hudspeth, Jeff Davis, Pecos, Presidio, Reeves, and Terrell Counties are urged to attend this very important meeting.

Repairs Started On Legion Hall

Repairs are underway on the Legion Hall, which had recent water damage.

The air conditioning unit on the roof was not drained before cold weather set in and when the temperatures dropped below freezing early in the month, the pipes burst. Water accumulating in the ceiling finally caused large sections of it to drop to the floor and then water stood on the floor for several days until the damage was finally found by Commander J.A. Mansfield.

Some volunteer labor has been used as well as hired labor and so enough repairs will soon be completed to take care of the damage for the present. It is planned that the hall may be used again beginning next week.

What is most interesting about rock art is that various sections of the country have their own art designs and styles. Great Basin art, as an example, is known for its abundance of abstract designs. The far north has many naturalists paintings, and the Great Plains has a considerable amount of paintings done in various colors. The Southwest seems to have a great variety of all styles. Rock art of the Big Bend Country is varied but is not as complex as that found in central and eastern Texas. A variety of figures, from humans, horses, cattle, deer, and even mastodons, circles, triangles, crosses, abstract lines, and anything else imaginable, have been found.

Studies of rock art can offer some very exciting and original information about early man's culture, distribution, and relations with other Indians. That is the purpose of Dr. Lowrance's research. She is recording as much of the remaining rock art as possible. It is likely that only a small portion of the original paintings still exist. If ranchers and other land owners, that know of unreported rock art, would contact Dr. Lowrance, it would be greatly appreciated.

Mrs. Mabel Young of San Angelo returned to her home on Monday after visiting here for a week with her brother, John Burchett, and Mrs. Burchett, who were ill.

A very interesting talk, by Dr. Marian Lowrance of Sul Ross State University, on rock art of West Texas was given to the Folk Lore Society recently. Dr. Lowrance told of her studies of the art left by early Americans. It prompted me to this note on a subject that everyone seems interested in but few people know too much about, Indian Rock Art.

It has been said that petroglyphs and pictographs are nothing but doodlings by some idle primitive artist. And many may well be just that. But rock art has been classified into four main categories: ceremonial, menomic (using pictures as a written language) records of important events, and doodling and copying of designs. Rock paintings (pictographs) vary greatly in design and colors, while scratches or peckings (petroglyphs) lack color. And some early artists used a combination of the two.

The great majority of paintings were done in red, ranging from a bright vermilion to a dull brown-red. Some are in black and rarely in white. Some elaborate paintings were made in blue, green, and yellow. Red was usually made from iron oxide, hematite. Yellow was obtained from another iron oxide, limonite. White was made from chalky deposits, such as gypsum and kaolin, and the greens and blues from copper ores. Black was derived from either man-
