George B. McCamey Celebration Visitor

George Burdette McCamey, who in 1902 went to work for $55 a month as a roustabout in a West Virginia oil field and later struck it rich by drilling Upton County's first oil well, Friday for the first time in four years came to the city which bears his name. He was guest of honor at the three-day George B. McCamey Celebration, first held since the war, which ended here on Sunday afternoon.

Born in Elk County, Penn., McCamey first came to the Southwest in 1903 when he "settled" in the Indian Territory of Oklahoma four years before Oklahoma became a state. He went back to the Mid-West in 1906 and there he helped build the derrick and dressed tools on the first standard rig in Bridgeport, Ill. field. And it was in Illinois that he acquired his first tools.

A SON SAME DAY
Once again McCamey came to the Southwest, this time to Abilene, Texas, where he drilled a well. After several years of drilling in Kansas and Kentucky, he returned once again to Texas and has been a resident of Fort Worth since 1919.

Recalling the day when the McCamey-Johnson well came in, McCamey says he struck oil in the first well he owned and became the father of his first and only son—Robert L.—on the same day—Sunday, Sept. 27, 1925.

He remembers that he had started toward the well when he saw the boys coming back toward town. He thought they wanted a hot Sunday dinner, but they were coming to tell him oil had been struck.

MONEY IN OIL
After hitting the oil, McCamey sold out to Republican Production Co. for an estimated $500,000 and this, together with previous sales, resulted in a "take" of upwards of $700,000.

Of the oil business, McCamey says if he had it to do all over again, he would get into the oil business again. "It is the easiest way in the world to make money."

Jo Ann Qualls Voted Venus of The Pecos

Jo Ann Qualls, popular and lovely progeny of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. "Red" Qualls, on Saturday evening won the title of Miss Venus of the Pecos from a stiff field of inter-city competition. Clara Mae Tennyson was runner-up.

Other entries were Helen and Jean Odom of Iraan, identical twins; Doris Show of Odessa, Virginia Hendrickson of McCamey, Mary Jo Wood of Midland, Joan Slaughter of Fort Stockton, Kathryn Lewis of Crane, and Wanne Brown of Hobbs, New Mexico.

The selection was a popular one, as evidenced by the roar of approval which boomed across this basin city when the name of the winner was announced.

A capacity crowd attended the Revue, preceded by a diving exhibition staged by six San Angelo mermen unearthed at the last minute by the fat man of the Standard-Times, Blondy Cross.

DELTA HOTEL CHANGES HANDS

McCamey To Field Tough Football Team In Seven-A District

McCamey's Badgers this fall bounce back into A-League competition, after three years in a lower circuit, and Assistant Coach Milton Bryant, who handed spring training, believes the Badgers will field a tough aggregation in District 7-A.

Lettermen dominate both the line and backfield, and though real "star" is available, there will be weight and ability to provide a well-balanced grid machine, Bryant said.

The backfield probably will be as follows:

Malcolm Ham, three-year letterman weighing 168 pounds at tailback; David Pauley, one-year letterman, at halfback; and Bob Ruble, hard running letterman at fullback. Kirk Gregory and Dub Oney will fight it out for the starting position to fill the backfield.

Five lettermen will be among the seven starters in the line, according to Bryant. Both ends—James Ramsey and Bill Wilson—have had previous experience. Center position will be capably handled by two lettermen—Wally George and George Barfield. A three-year man, Joe Allen, will take one guard's position, and Ike Courtney and Don Hess will take over the other one.

Tackles will be new, but there are three prospects—Ward Gregory, J. B. Davis, or Edward Connors.

Bryant, a McMurry graduate and returned naval veteran, took over when Waymon Wilson went to Ballinger. He believes that Pecos and Monahans will be toughest opposition for the Badgers, though he does not count out a single other conference entry, including Wink and Kermit.

Joellen Taylor Weds Marvin F. Croft

Miss Joellen Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Taylor, was married in McCamey Saturday to Marvin F. Croft, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Croft.

Reverend J. H. Estes read the double-ring ceremony in the home of the bride, with only members of the two families present.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore all white, with a corsage of gardenias.

The couple left immediately after the ceremony for a week's honeymoon in Ruidosa, New Mexico.

Rankin, Reimers and Nickens File

Last minute entries in the coming political embroglio were Malcolm Reimers, who announced for constable of Precinct 3 on Tuesday, and Johnny Rankin, who tossed his hat into the political ring for commissioner of Precinct 2, also on Tuesday.

F. A. Nickens, proprietor of Nick's Drive-In, also announced his candidacy for constable of Precinct 3. Nickens came to McCamey in 1928. He worked for Humble until 1937, when he began operating his present business. He had five boys in service during the war, losing one.

RETURN FROM TULSA

Mr. and Mrs. George McCamey returned Friday from a vacation trip to Tulsa. Enroute, they visited the Earl Grimes in Fort Worth. Mr. and Mrs. Earl sent their best wishes to their McCamey friends. The McCameys also visited their cousin, George B. McCamey, who drilled McCamey's first oil well.

Local Amateurs Stage Boxing Show

That the summer youth program, under the direction of Milton Bryant, is making excellent headway was evidenced Saturday afternoon at the local gymnasium when a group of Milton's boys staged an amateur boxing show and displayed considerable talent in the staging.

Les Fambrough and Donnie Hess boxed three rounds, with Fambrough winning the referee's decision. According to the referee's card, Fambrough won the first and second rounds by a fairly wide margin, with the third about even.

Another three-rounder saw Glen Pitts outbox Johnny Allison. Pitts took the first and third, with the second close.

Bob Murray won a close one from Jack Perry. The referee tabbed the first two rounds as even-Steven, with Murray's fast third round finish tilting the scales in his favor.

The most interesting bout of the afternoon saw bantams Dickie Smith and Elbert Eckols scrap to a scintillating draw. Dickie may have had a shade, due to his aggressiveness, but the two good boys were so close that the referee (this writer) felt forced to give them a draw.

J. V. Davis displayed excellent form in taking the decision from J. Fleming in a three-rounder. Condition was the determining factor in this bout, although Davis displayed nice foot work and a fair-to-middling left.

The boys meet again Friday evening in the local gymnasium. There will be no charge.

4-H Canning Girls Help Release Food For Famine Relief

"More Home Canning Will Release More Food for Starving Millions Abroad."

That is the motto of thousands of rural girls participating in the National 4-H Canning Activity.

The activity is conducted under the direction of the Extension Service.

By increasing their canning of garden and other home-raised products, the girls will render a three-fold service. They will establish a larder of varied, nutritious foods for their family's future use; reduce cash expenditures for foodstuffs, and help release more commercial stocks of canned goods for famine relief overseas.

Awards for outstanding records are offered by Mrs. Ruth Kerr for the 18th consecutive year. County winners will get medals and the state champion will be a guest at the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

National winners will receive $200 college scholarship.

County extension agents will furnish information and suggestions on home-canning to 4-H Club members.

Enroute To State V. F. W. Convention

Earl Stribling, Britt Pruitt and Frank Adair Nickens, Jr., were injured Tuesday night when their car crashed into a lumber truck near Big Spring while the three McCamey men were enroute to Fort Worth to attend the State Convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

According to information received by the NEWS Thursday morning, Stribling was driving the car when the accident occurred. Pruitt and Nickens were sleeping. All were riding in the front seat.

F. A. Nickens, father of Adair, said that Stribling, driving in a heavy downpour, met the truck and was blinded by the truck's lights. Stribling, in an effort to avoid hitting the truck, pulled off the pavement, throwing the car into skid. Out of control, the car crashed into the middle of the lumber truck and was virtually demolished.

Nickens suffered a knee and head injury, while Pruitt emerged from the accident with two gashes on his head.

Stribling, however, suffered a broken nose and a possible skull fracture. His condition is considered serious.

Sharing a party-line telephone!

If you're sharing a telephone party line, you're helping someone else here have telephone service now. Otherwise he'd likely be waiting his turn for service.

Party-line service is one way of stretching the telephone system here—to serve as many people as possible now instead of asking some to wait until we've had time to put in the wires and cables and switching equipment needed to serve everybody who is waiting.

It's a big job—catching up with four years of backed-up demand. But we're hard at it. As soon as possible, we'll bring service to everybody who is waiting for it. And, after that, we expect to be able to furnish one-family telephone service to those who want it.

"GOOD NEIGHBOR" SUGGESTIONS or party-liners

Before calling, please listen to see whether the line is in use. If it is, hang up gently and try your call again a little later.

When talking, remember your party-line neighbor—he may want to make a call—so please be reasonably brief.

Between calls, try to allow a little time so the other people on the line may have the opportunity to use it.

Ask the children to follow these good neighbor suggestions, too.
Thanks a lot.

4-H'ers Keep On With 'V' Gardens To Help Relieve World Famine

Four-H Club boys and girls throughout the nation are setting an example for all America. They are keeping on with their Victory gardens, which totaled a million acres during the war. It is in response to President Truman's recent message emphasizing the importance of increasing America's total food supply to help relieve famine abroad.

The club members' action is stimulating rural youth to participate in the 1946 National 4-H Victory Garden award program. The awards are offered by Allis-Chalmers for outstanding records of achievement. They comprise gold-filled medals of honor to the four top ranking entrants in each participating county, and $9,600 worth of U. S. Savings Bonds to be shared by state and national winners. Sectional winners will also receive an educational trip to the 25th Anniversary National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago next December.

Participants learn how to care for and manage a well-planned garden, carry out a program of garden insect and disease control, and market surplus produce in an economical, approved manner. Planning gardens for a long season is encouraged so that nutritious vegetables and fruits can be produced for use throughout the year.

The State Extension Service will provide information and suggestions for carrying on this program and for helping 4-H Club members in attaining its objectives.

GORDON FUSSELL MOTORS
McCAMEY, TEXAS

Fosters, Sam Allred Modern Local Nomads

A trio of modern nomads, Bunk and Martha Foster and Sam Allred, returned a few days ago from a 15-day trip which took them to some of the show spots of the country.

Leaving McCamey on May 16, the intrepid trio motored to San Angelo, Wichita Falls, Enid, Oklahoma; Wichita, Kans.; Topeka, Kans.; Omaha, Neb.; Sioux City, Iowa; Fargo, N. D.; Sioux Falls, S. D.; Grand Forks, N. D.; Duluth, Minn.; Superior, Wis.; Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.; Sault Ste. Marie, Canada; North Bay, Canada; Ottawa, Montreal; Montpelier, Vt.; Augusta, Me.; Portland, Me.; Boston, Mass.; Providence, R. I.; Hartford, Conn.; Hyde Park, N. Y.; West Point, N. Y.; New York City, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Annapolis, Washington, Gettysburg, Harrisburg, Pa.; Pittsburgh, Wheeling, W. Va.; Columbus, Ohio; Cincinnati, Louisville, Ky.; Cairo, Ill.; Little Rock, Ark.; Shreveport, La.; Houston, Corpus Christi, Laredo and back home via Nuevo Laredo.

While in Boston, they saw the Red Sox and Yankees play a doubleheader. They saw Roosevelt's home at Hyde Park, visited the Academy at West Point; saw Times Square, the battleship Missouri, the Carrier Roosevelt, the top of the Empire State Building in New York; journeyed to Brooklyn to see the Dodgers play the Gians (dem bums); visited the Naval Academy at Annapolis, spent two days sightseeing in the Nation's capital, including a visit to the Senate and House while in session.

The trio drove from Harrisburg, Pa., to Pittsburgh over the Pennsylvania turnpike.

All in all, we would say that they had one whale of a trip, although this writer does not envy them their stay in Manhattan in

May. It is hot and humid there in May and June.

Charles Ogle, president of the Crane Chamber of Commerce, attended the Celebration Saturday. Charles squired Kathryn Lewis, Crane's entry in the bathing beauty contest. Needless to say, Kathryn was a charming and worthy representative of our neighbor-city.

Ray McCamey, brother of George, accompanied his brother to McCamey for the Celebration. Both served as judges Saturday evening.

Sul Ross Sires Live Stock and Range Management Courses

Outstanding courses in livestock and range management are being offered through the animal husbandry and biology departments of Sul Ross State Teachers College at this time, reports A. J. Bierschwale, head of the animal husbandry department at the college.

Bierschwale will be the instructor in some of the courses of range livestock management, with other instructors being Dr. Omer E. Sperry, head of the biology department, and W. E. Williams, who will devote part time to one or more courses.

Members of the Soil Conservation Service, Marfa, have agreed to give assistance in several courses by discussing practices in conservation of water, soil and range vegetation which have proven best for this section of the state, Bierschwale says.

Bierschwale says the study offered by the college serves a five-fold purpose. The courses are to meet the needs of young men interested in ranching in this part of West Texas; to others who may be interested in working as county agents, or vocational agriculture instructors; to those who may be interested in qualifying as range specialists for soil conservation work; to those who may be interested in qualifying for jobs with other government agencies and to those county agents and vocational agriculture teachers now on the job who wish to take refresher courses in their respective fields.

THE INSTRUCTORS

Bierschwale has his B. S. degree from Texas A&M college, an M. S. from Colorado State, and an M. A. from Sul Ross. He has lived in West and Southwest Texas all his life and has 15 years experience as a rancher and manager. He has made extensive studies of ranching problems of the Edwards Plateau. Dr. Sperry, holder of a B. A. from Peru State College; M. A. and Ph. D. from the University of Nebraska, is head of the biology department and will teach a course in plant ecology and range management. He has made studies of plant life in the Big Bend area and has published bulletins describing the most valuable and most harmful plants in this section of the state.

Williams is supervisor of vocational agriculture work in this part of West Texas, having served in that capacity for the last five years. He has B. S. and M. S. degrees from Texas A&M College and an M. S. from Sul Ross. He is devoting a part of his time to instruction in the animal husbandry department.

Selection of Sheets

By DOROTHY SNELLING
With sheets soon to be available on the market again, the ability to make wise selection once more becomes important to the housewives. Dorothy L. Snelling, County Home Demonstration Agent, has several suggestions on choosing quality sheets.

Thread count has much to do with the differences between a good and a poor sheet, Miss Snelling says. Whether a weave is fine or coarse can be determined fairly well by holding the sheet up to a light and stretching it tightly between the hands. Signs of a poor sheet include loose weave, threads that show small knots or unevenness, puckers, and missing warp threads.

If the sheet is hemmed with long coarse stitches, it also will be cheap, flimsy, and without good wearing qualities. Small stitches characterize a good sheet.

By rubbing parts of the sheet together one can learn whether starch has been added to give it a smooth, soft finish. If starch is present, a fine powder comes off.

Important to the strength of a sheet is the selvage, which should be closely woven, almost like a tape, and free from wrinkles at the edges. Since all sheets shrink in the first few washings, they should be 108 inches long to give an ample 20-inch turnback.

A few words about care in washing:

Do not wash colored sheets with white ones.

Hang colored sheets in the shade and do not wash them in boiling water.

Use a soap you can trust.

Too much water softener will turn white fabrics yellow.

THE G. I. BILL

Jobless Pay Not Affected By Temporary Jobs

Veterans who take temporary jobs are still entitled to unemployment allowances after they are released.

The Veterans Administration made this clarification of G. I. Bill provisions to clear up apparent misunderstanding on the part of some former service men as to their benefit rights. V. A. also stated that veterans are not required to claim unemployment payments immediately after their discharge in order to protect their benefit rights.

The G. I. Bill provides that re-adjustment, or unemployment allowances will be payable to eligible veterans for two years after the date of their discharge, or two years after the end of the war, whichever is later. Since the war has not yet been terminated officially, veterans already discharged, still will have two years after the official termination of the war in which to file claims for unemployment benefits.

The maximum period for which a veteran may draw unemployment payments is 52 weeks, but the weeks do not have to be consecutive. A veteran may apply for the allowance as often as he becomes unemployed, provided he does not voluntarily leave his job without good reason, or provided he is not discharged for cause.

For further information see your Veterans County Service Officer at the Legion Hall.

Quartermaster Search Teams Continue Hunt For "Missing" Men

Simultaneous with the release for publication of the names of all Army personnel missing in World War II, the War Department announced that search for isolated graves and bodies of military personnel will be continued by the American Graves Registration Commands in every part of the world where troops served. The work is being directed by Maj. Gen. T. B. Larkin, The Quartermaster General, who also is Chief of the American Graves Registration Service. Graves of missing soldiers, particularly fliers who were shot down over enemy territory and buried by civilians, are frequently being located in isolated areas and complete identification established. To find these isolated graves, or even wrecked planes which may still hold the remains of the crews, search teams operate in all parts of the world under the American Graves Registration Commands of the overseas theatres.

Upon entering a town the search teams contact the official who corresponds with the mayor of an American city. He assembles the clergy and other citizens who have participated in burials. Usually the underground was able to maintain a record of burials of allied troops and this is turned over to the search teams or they are directed to isolated burial places. In most cases the graves have been marked with the identification tags of the deceased, but some times these are missing and identification must be made by other means.

Due to the scientific identification methods utilized, a very small percentage of the bodies in located graves remain unidentified. The slow procedure is to obtain the information about the grave locations because of the world wide area to be searched.

Methods rivaling tales of fiction are employed by the Quartermaster Search Teams with the result that comparatively few cases still remain incomplete in the files of the Graves Registration Branch of the Memorial Division of the Quartermaster Corps. Sometimes when the soldier's identification tag is missing, finger prints or dental charts have been sufficient to establish positive identification. But, in other cases even these have been unobtainable, but no small clue is overlooked in an effort to establish complete identity. Fragments of letters, a ring, the serial number of a wrist watch and other seemingly inconsequential clues, have led to identification after months of tireless search and investigation. No case is considered closed by the Quartermaster Corps until final identification has been made and this work will continue, the War Department states.

Even anthropology is being used where other means fail. By reconstructing the facial contour over a skull, identity has been established in a number of cases. Scientifically measuring bones has made it possible to establish the height of the deceased and by the condition of the bones to tell the age.

One fruitful lead that has augmented the identification of fliers who have crashed or been shot down in action, comes from the custom of the Air Corps to record the serial numbers of all guns and instruments installed on each plane. In the case where a badly smashed plane is found it is usually possible to find a part of a machine gun or an instrument bearing a serial number. By checking with the Air Corps, the plane can be identified, and the names of the crew at the time of its last mission established. Unless a missing service man has been lost at sea, or the remains otherwise unobtainable, when a search team finds a grave the exhaustive methods practiced by the Q. M. Corps gives excellent probability of final complete identification of the remains.

Since 1867, the interment of war dead has been a responsibility of the Q. M. Corps. The search teams reached their highest state of efficiency during World War II. Search teams are divided into three groups. One team follows up all reports and rumors of a buried soldier. Another team, after a grave has been discovered, disinters the remains, and a third team endeavors to make identification. Particularly interesting are some of the identifications made by the Q. M. Corps. During the early part of the invasion of France, two bombers were shot down over the Normandy peninsula, which, at that time, was enemy territory. Later, when the search teams and American Graves Registration personnel arrived, they learned that the casualties had been buried by some French citizens. They located ten graves, two of which bore names, and seven were marked with identification tags. The trench had no identification, and was simply marked "Unknown." By checking with the Air Forces, it was learned that the bombers on that particular mission carried crews of six men each. By contacting the mayor of the town, the citizens who had made the burials were located. From them it was learned that one of the fliers was buried in another location in a grave marked with his identification tag, and one had not been killed but taken prisoner. By checking the tag of the soldier buried in the remote spot, they had narrowed the search down to two names, one of which was a prisoner of war in German hands, and the other buried as an unknown. As all names of prisoners of war are sent through Geneva to the Office of the Provost Marshal in the U. S., it was a simple matter to find which of the two names was the soldier buried in the grave marked "Unknown."

In another case, all that remained to identify a soldier was a ring bearing initials and the insignia of some organization. Long investigation revealed that the insignia was the seal of a normal school in the U. S. but that its student body was exclusively female. By checking the school roster and the list of graduates, after a great deal of correspondence, the owner of the ring was found. She disclosed that her husband had been wearing the ring, and after an investigation that covered a number of months, positive identification had been made.

Laundry marks have often been used as a means of identification in criminal investigations, but there is a case on record in the Office of The Q. M. General where they revealed identity even after they had been obliterated by long interment. A grave had been located without any identification, and the condition of the remains prohibited the usual finger print or dental charts. All the search team had to go on was the rather sketchy information from another soldier who said he believed the body to be that of Herbert Jones. A check was made of every outfit that had operated in the vicinity. First, they found that the Herbert Jones reported by the soldier was alive. To further complicate the matter, they found 14 other Herbert Jones, all of whom were alive and accounted for. The clothing on the dead soldier was carefully cleaned in gasoline. Then, portion by portion, it was dipped in water. Although the ink used for laundry marking had long since faded, due to its residual chemical effect on the cloth, the previously inked portions absorbed water a trifle more slowly than the surrounding cloth, revealing momentarily, the original laundry mark which established the identity of the dead soldier.

An even more fantastic story of identification concerns a ring. A Marine Captain, who had been a prisoner of war of the Japs, came into the office of Q. M. General with the ring. The ring showed a picture of a building with a pine tree in front of it, three initials, and bore a date, 1937—that was all. On his release from the prison camp at the end of the war, the ring had been given to the Marine Captain by a Chinese cook in the prison camp. He told the Captain that one of the prisoners, an American flier, whose name he could not remember, due to his unfamiliarity with English, had given him the ring just before he was taken out to be executed, and asked him to get it back to the U. S. Beyond that, there was nothing. The ring was sent by the Q. M. Corps to a metallurgical laboratory for analysis, which disclosed that there were three jewelry manufacturers which used that particular alloy. Blown up photos were made of the ring and sent to the manufacturers. A jewelry firm in Attleboro, Mass., replied with a small lead slug, evidently stamped from the same die from which the ring was made, and which also disclosed that it was a graduation ring of a certain high school. A check of the high school in question was made, and, from the initials in the ring, the identity of the soldier was established from a list of the graduates of 1937. However, they didn't have the body. The Chinese cook was found. He hadn't witnessed the execution but he knew a Korean who had. The Korean was found. He had been present at the execution and subsequent burial, and led the searchers to an isolated grave upon which there were no marks of identification. A dental chart taken from the remains checked with the records at the time of induction proved beyond a doubt that it was the body of the missing flier.

When nightfall of the first day arrived, the group decided to spend the night at a roadside park between Del Rio and Eagle Pass. The site chosen for the camp was soon found to be untenable because of the presence of swarms of mosquitos. The group then moved to what was thought at that time to be a better location near the edge of a cotton field. The night was spent quietly, but at daybreak the following morning all were awakened by the noise from an approaching, low-flying airplane. Hardly had they opened their eyes and raised themselves on their elbows when the plane buzzed directly over them at a very low altitude and gave them and the cotton patch a thorough dusting for insects.

After shaking off the dust, eating breakfast and packing their camping equipment, the trip was continued to Eagle Pass where they crossed the border into Mexico where they drove for 125 miles to the Sabinas River.

The quartet was told by a Mexican guide whom they hired that the fishing sign was not right and that the river needed to get on a rise before the big ones would bite. The old Mexican's prediction proved to be somewhat incorrect for the anglers caught fish to eat while there and brought some home.

The group arrived home Monday, June 17, tired but happy.

Quartermaster Search Teams Continue Hunt For "Missing" Men

Simultaneous with the release for publication of the names of all Army personnel missing in World War II, the War Department announced that search for isolated graves and bodies of military personnel will be continued by the American Graves Registration Commands in every part of the world where troops served. The work is being directed by Maj. Gen. T. B. Larkin, The Quartermaster General, who also is Chief of the American Graves Registration Service.

Graves of missing soldiers, particularly fliers who were shot down over enemy territory and buried by civilians, are frequently being located in isolated areas and complete identification established. To find these isolated graves, or even wrecked planes which may still hold the remains of the crews, search teams operate in all parts of the world under the American Graves Registration Commands of the overseas theatres.

Upon entering a town the search teams contact the official who corresponds with the mayor of an American city. He assembles the clergy and other citizens who have participated in burials. Usually the underground was able to maintain a record of burials of allied troops and this is turned over to the search teams or they are directed to isolated burial places. In most cases the graves have been marked with the identification tags of the deceased, but some times these are missing and identification must be made by other means.

Due to the scientific identification methods utilized, a very small percentage of the bodies in located graves remain unidentified. The slow procedure is to obtain the information about the grave locations because of the world wide area to be searched.

Methods rivaling tales of fiction are employed by the Quartermaster Search Teams with the result that comparatively few cases still remain incomplete in the files of the Graves Registration Branch of the Memorial Division of the Quartermaster Corps. Sometimes when the soldier's identification tag is missing, finger prints or dental charts have been sufficient to establish positive identification. But, in other cases even these have been unobtainable, but no small clue is overlooked in an effort to establish complete identity. Fragments of letters, a ring, the serial number of a wrist watch and other seemingly inconsequential clues have led to identification after months of tireless search and investigation. No case is considered closed by the Quartermaster Corps until final identification has been made and this work will continue, the War Department states.

Even anthropology is being used where other means fail. By reconstructing the facial contour over a skull, identity has been established in a number of cases. Scientifically measuring bones has made it possible to establish the height of the deceased and by the condition of the bones to tell the age.

One fruitful lead that has augmented the identification of fliers who have crashed or been shot down in action, comes from the custom of the Air Corps to record the serial numbers of all guns and instruments installed on each plane. In the case where a badly smashed plane is found it is usually possible to find a part of a machine gun or an instrument bearing a serial number. By checking with the Air Corps, the plane can be identified, and the names of the crew at the time of its last mission established.

Unless a missing service man has been lost at sea, or the remains otherwise unobtainable, when a search team finds a grave the exhaustive methods practiced by the Q. M. Corps gives excellent probability of final complete identification of the remains.

Since 1867, the interment of war dead has been a responsibility of the Q. M. Corps. The search teams reached their highest state of efficiency during World War II. Search teams are divided into three groups. One team follows up all reports and rumors of a buried soldier. Another team, after a grave has been discovered, disinters the remains, and a third team endeavors to make identification. Particularly interesting are some of the identifications made by the Q. M. Corps. During the early part of the invasion of France, two bombers were shot down over the Normandy peninsula, which, at that time, was enemy territory. Later, when the search teams and American Graves Registration personnel arrived, they learned that the casualties had been buried by some French citizens. They located ten graves, two of which bore names, and seven were marked with identification tags. The trench had no identification, and was simply marked "Unknown." By checking with the Air Forces, it was learned that the bombers on that particular mission carried crews of six men each. By contacting the mayor of the town, the citizens who had made the burials were located. From them it was learned that one of the fliers was buried in another location in a grave marked with his identification tag, and one had not been killed but taken prisoner. By checking the tag of the soldier buried in the remote spot, they had narrowed the search down to two names, one of which was a prisoner of war in German hands, and the other buried as an unknown. As all names of prisoners of war are sent through Geneva to the Office of the Provost Marshal in the U. S., it was a simple matter to find which of the two names was the soldier buried in the grave marked "Unknown."

In another case, all that remained to identify a soldier was a ring bearing initials and the insignia of some organization. Long investigation revealed that the insignia was the seal of a normal school in the U. S., but that its student body was exclusively female. By checking the school roster and the list of graduates, after a great deal of correspondence, the owner of the ring was found. She disclosed that her husband had been wearing the ring, and after an investigation that covered a number of months, positive identification had been made.

Laundry marks have often been used as a means of identification in criminal investigations, but there is a case on record in the Office of The Q. M. General where they revealed identity even after they had been obliterated by long interment. A grave had been located without any identification, and the condition of the remains prohibited the usual finger print or dental charts. All the search team had to go on was the rather sketchy information from another soldier who said he believed the body to be that of Herbert Jones. A check was made of every outfit that had operated in the vicinity. First, they found that the Herbert Jones reported by the soldier was alive. To further complicate the matter, they found 14 other Herbert Jones, all of whom were alive and accounted for. The clothing on the dead soldier was carefully cleaned in gasoline. Then, portion by portion, it was dipped in water. Although the ink used for laundry marking had long since faded, due to its residual chemical effect on the cloth, the previously inked portions absorbed water a trifle more slowly than the surrounding cloth, revealing momentarily, the original laundry mark which established the identity of the dead soldier.

An even more fantastic story of identification concerns a ring. A Marine Captain, who had been a prisoner of war of the Japs, came into the office of Q. M. General with the ring. The ring showed a picture of a building with a pine tree in front of it, three initials, and bore a date, 1937—that was all. On his release from the prison camp at the end of the war, the ring had been given to the Marine Captain by a Chinese cook in the prison camp. He told the Captain that one of the prisoners, an American flier, whose name he could not remember, due to his unfamiliarity with English, had given him the ring just before he was taken out to be executed, and asked him to get it back to the U. S. Beyond that, there was nothing. The ring was sent by the Q. M. Corps to a metallurgical laboratory for analysis, which disclosed that there were three jewelry manufacturers which used that particular alloy. Blown up photos were made of the ring and sent to the manufacturers. A jewelry firm in Attleboro, Mass., replied with a small lead slug, evidently stamped from the same die from which the ring was made, and which also disclosed that it was a graduation ring of a certain high school. A check of the high school in question was made, and, from the initials in the ring, the identity of the soldier was established from a list of the graduates of 1937. However, they didn't have the body. The Chinese cook was found. He hadn't witnessed the execution but he knew a Korean who had. The Korean was found. He had been present at the execution and subsequent burial, and led the searchers to an isolated grave upon which there were no marks of identification. A dental chart taken from the remains checked with the records at the time of induction proved beyond a doubt that it was the body of the missing flier.

When nightfall of the first day arrived, the group decided to spend the night at a roadside park between Del Rio and Eagle Pass. The site chosen for the camp was soon found to be untenable because of the presence of swarms of mosquitos. The group then moved to what was thought at that time to be a better location near the edge of a cotton field. The night was spent quietly, but at daybreak the following morning all were awakened by the noise from an approaching, low-flying airplane. Hardly had they opened their eyes and raised themselves on their elbows when the plane buzzed directly over them at a very low altitude and gave them and the cotton patch a thorough dusting for insects.

After shaking off the dust, eating breakfast and packing their camping equipment, the trip was continued to Eagle Pass where they crossed the border into Mexico where they drove for 125 miles to the Sabinas River.

The quartet was told by a Mexican guide whom they hired that the fishing sign was not right and that the river needed to get on a rise before the big ones would bite. The old Mexican's prediction proved to be somewhat incorrect for the anglers caught fish to eat while there and brought some home.

The group arrived home Monday, June 17, tired but happy.

Congratulations, Miss McCamey of 1946

The first post-war George B. McCamey Annual Celebration is now a matter of history. Considering the handicaps, including lack of time, under which the various committees worked, we believe that it was very successful.

Many West Texans visited McCamey for the first time in years... some for the very first time... and went home impressed with McCamey hospitality.

McCamey received much favorable publicity in papers throughout the State.

This writer noted only one unfavorable undertone, criticism of the judges' selection of Miss McCamey on Friday evening. We believe that the judges, all out-of-towners, judged the show the way they saw it. We also believe that the winner was just as deserving as any other of the 18 girls entered in the contest.

We say, congratulations, Miss McCamey of 1946.

Are You Polio-Conscious?

BY VIRGINIA MONROE

(Reprinted from The Iran News)

Within the past ten days there has been two innocent children within twenty miles of our community stricken by this dreadful enemy. Are we doing everything, as parents and citizens, to stamp out this terrible fiend or are we encouraging it to strike again... this time maybe in our own neighborhood?

For the past week health and county officials have been doing everything humanly possible to make Iran polio-conscious. Will you co-operate with them in overcoming this menace that is stalking our community and threatening every man, woman and child?

For the advantage of the citizens of Iran, here are some simple precautions that we, as individuals, may help to keep this terrible disease from entering our town:

1. Do not use water contaminated with sewage for drinking, swimming or washing dishes.
2. Avoid exhaustion and sudden chilling as from plunging into cold water on a hot day.
3. Wash, peel or scrape all vegetables and fruit.
4. Keep your home in good sanitary condition.
5. Caution children against putting unclean objects in their mouths. See that they wash their hands before eating.
6. Avoid unnecessary contacts with large groups of children during the summer and fall.
7. Postpone tonsil and adenoid operations until after the polio season. FIGHT POLIO!

H. L. Kokernot, Jr., well-known West Texas ranchman, was honored this week by the Texas FFA Assn., when he was awarded the Honorary Lone Star Farmer Degree, the highest award the state association can bestow.

This award was given in recognition of the outstanding support he has given the FFA boys in Texas, especially in connection with the Southwestern Livestock show in El Paso. He has been the major supporter of the auction sale held each year during the show, which has helped to make it successful as far as the young exhibitors were concerned.

Spraying by the City of Marfa of all garbage cans in Marfa alleys was begun this week, Merritt Finley, city gas superintendent, said Wednesday. A DDT spray is being used.

The cooperation of all Marfans in keeping their premises clean is asked by the city. If individuals will spray often, the fly menace will become of little significance. The work done by the city will take care of the problem to some extent for a matter of 15 to 20 days. Individual activity can do much to continue the job that has been started by the city.

The number of covered garbage cans that are available in Marfa stores is negligible, a Sentinel survey this week showed. Dealers have promises of more deliveries of cans.

Possibilities of a Pecos Valley Junior College, which might utilize existing construction at Gibbs Field 2 miles northwest of Fort Stockton, were outlined Tuesday night to the directors of the Pecos County Chamber of Commerce by Dr. C. C. Colvert, junior college consultant with the school of education of the University of Texas.

Dr. Colvert, former organizer and president of a highly successful public junior college at Monroe, La., told of the increasing trend in education toward the use of local junior colleges, which feature not only the courses required for professional study in advanced schools; but offer a variety of young people in trades and crafts practical courses designed to train with which to earn a better living.

Recently enacted state laws provide for formation of junior college district along lines similar to independent school districts, with one county or part of a county, or a group of counties, banded together to form the college district. Uniform taxes are levied in the district in an amount not to exceed 20c on the $100, and students from all points of the district may attend the college on payment of minimum fees, and usually in buses provided for their transportation to and from home each day.

Formation of more colleges to serve local areas results in higher education and specialized training for a greatly increased number of teen-age young people who might not otherwise afford the schooling after high school. The colleges also are used for any type of desired adult training program of for night classes.

Pecos County meets the minimum legal requirements for valuation by a wide margin, but barely has the prescribed number of high school scholastics. Adjacent counties might be invited to band together to lighten the financial load to some degree and to provide the number of students needed for efficient operation. Costs would be slight for the taxpayer, said Dr. Colvert, and would bring a greatly increased opportunity to the youth of the entire region.

Although tax revenues may be used to build and equip, as well as maintain and operate the college, availability of suitable buildings—such as those soon to be acquired by the county at Gibbs Field—are a great advantage and result in a much lower cost of beginning and running a college. Similar plants formerly used by contract flying schools are to be utilized for junior colleges now being organized at Uvalde and Sweetwater, and one is proposed at Corsicana.

It is unlikely that the details for voting to organize a district and levy a tax for its support plus the red tape involved in securing Gibbs Field buildings and securing a faculty, could be worked out in time for opening a school this fall, but the time is right, believes Dr. Colvert, to study the possibilities and begin plans for organization if the people of the area want a regional junior college—and he believes they will when the advantages of such schools are made known to them.

Chamber of Commerce directors are planning a membership meeting in July at which Dr. Colvert will be asked to explain the junior college plan to the Pecos County organization and to others interested.

Officials of the Chamber of Commerce believe that a junior college here would tie in splendidly with previously studied plans for location of an airplane assembly plant and aeronautics school here by the Baumann Aviation group of California.

The hearing which will decide whether Sutton County and parts of Edwards County may call an election which will decide whether a Soil Conservation District will be formed, will be held on Tuesday afternoon, June 18, at 2:30 o'clock. At this time representatives from the State Conservation Board will be present to hear local ranchmen's opinions on the desirability of such a district.

Sutton County is one of the few in Texas with no soil conservation program, but at the meeting held here three weeks ago, the reaction to a Soil Conservation District was so favorable that over fifty land owners filed a petition asking that a hearing be held.

If the results of the hearing are favorable, an election will be called among landowners, 66 2-3 per cent of whom must be in favor of the measure before it is put into effect.

Even after the district is formed, the program is still strictly on a voluntary basis. Anyone participating may quit the program any time he so desires.

Shaved said that this was, in his opinion, the most important meeting of all in the formation of the district. He asked that all ranchmen, whether landowners or not, be present.

If a Soil Conservation District is formed here, a scientific program will be started to put the range land back in the shape it was in 50 years ago. This will take several years, but according to experts, it can be done.

The Tri-State Product Company of Pecos is already shipping cantaloupes—but they are from the company's farm near Presidio.

Jack Williams, owner of the concern, states he will harvest approximately 30 car loads of cantaloupes at Presidio and that most of the melons are being shipped to West Texas. He added that the quality of the melons is fine and will remain that way as long as no rain falls on them.

The firm also is shipping carrots at this time, and has just finished shipping cabbage.

Reeves County cantaloupes, thought by many to be the best grown, likely will be ready to market around July 15. There are several big cantaloupe producers in the county, including Mr. Williams.

SQUIBS
 BY JAY

Old Jay has been under the weather for a couple of weeks... little old case of strep throat... and the sawbones said (very fiercely), "No squibs for you, kid." So... no squibs.

The first item on the agenda is a note of thanks to Blondy Cross of the Standard-Times. Go ahead and cuss the critter if you want to, but in the same breath thank him for bringing us the divers you saw just before your eyes struggled to jump out of their sockets when those dry country bathing beauties were introduced by emcee Gaylon Harding Saturday evening.

A last minute telephone call to Blondy, when all other tries had failed, brought results. The fat man canvassed the town and came up with six very willing and expert divers, including a 9-year-old who must have been weaned on an inner tube (pre-war), in a San Angelo swimming pool.

So, until next football season, at least, let's extend a word of thanks to the old fat man of the Standard-Times.

Some of the boys and girls who attended Friday night's bathing revue didn't like the judges' decisions, according to word seeping into old Jay's cubicle. Seems that they thought Bill Moore, Charlie Cox and someone else whose name eludes us at this writing served as judges.

According to Gaylon Harding, V. F. W. Commander, all three of Friday's judges were out-of-towners who did not want their names revealed. That's all we know, podnabs. Old Jay was at home in bed, still rasslin' with strep.

George B. McCamey, guest of honor during the Celebration, recalls the "day when McCamey was rough and tough, had trot lines and, of all things, lady barbers. Returning to McCamey about two years after bringing in Upton's first oil well, he entered a barber shop featuring lady barbers. As he climbed into the chair, he asked, "Would you give free service to the man after whom this town was named if he came in to have some work done?"

The lady barber said, "I sure would, brother."

She cut George B.'s hair, shaved him, massaged him and rubbed some stinkum into his hair, then turned him loose. He headed for the door without offering to pay.

"Say," the lady barber called after him, "haven't you forgotten something?"

McCamey said, "No. The town was named after me. I'm George McCamey."

A few weeks ago, there was a shooting in the flat. One colored gent drilled another colored gent in the fanny, then shot himself in the leg as he tried to put his six-gun in his pants pocket.

Our intrepid sawbones, Dr. James Cooper, arriving on the scene a few minutes later and ahead of the local police, found the fanny-branded man on the ground behind "Shine's" place. The man with the six-shooter was seated on a box a feet removed from his victim, with the six-gun in his hand.

Cooper said, "Here, boy, you better give me that gun."

"I don't want to kill nobody, Doctah," the man replied, relinquishing control of the lethal weapon. "If I wanted to kill that fellah, I'd just have to push that six-shootah up ag'in his head and pull the trigger."

Cooper emptied the gun, dropped the bullets into his pocket and tossed the weapon back to the colored man. He said, "Here, you keep the gun. I'll keep the bullets."

Our fearless medic then proceeded to administer to both the wounded men.

Local businessmen please note... the McCamey Annual Celebration, with its bevy of booful gals, etc., was staged by the sponsors without a single cash contribution from local business houses. The only contributions solicited were items for the bingo play. We take pride in noting here that not a single businessman refused to donate to the cause.

George B. McCamey, when invited to attend the Celebration as honor guest, immediately called this writer on the telephone and accepted the invitation and stated that he was going to pay for all trophies and prizes. This he did.

To the girls who did not win in the contest for the title of Miss McCamey, let it be said that this writer is of the opinion that any one of them might have won the title. They were all grand young people to agree to take part in the Celebration, and this column extends a Texas bluebonnet to each and every girl who participated. The girls were Sue Berry, Jo Ann Qualls, Connie Rae Cobb, Meredith Courtney, Patsy Ann George, Virginia Hendrickson, Shirley Perry, Polly Edwards, Martha Lou Neal, Jeannine Holmes, Anna Lou Wade, Lorraine Burruss, Doris Jean Freeman, Clara Jo Green, Nelda Stacy, Frances Shafer, Clara Mae Tennyson, Donna Rae Patterson and Beverly Sikes.

JOCKEY INJURED IN SATURDAY'S RACES

Dwayne Schnaubert, robust progeny of Arthur Schnaubert, was slightly injured during Saturday's races when his saddle slipped while he was riding a horse owned by J. Barker in one of Saturday's featured races. Young Schnaubert was thrown under the horse. He suffered leg bruises and a black eye.

Hens Must Lay 12 Eggs Monthly to Pay

COLLEGE STATION, June 20.—Any hen laying less than one dozen eggs a month is losing money for her owner, considering the prevailing prices of feed and eggs. These inefficient hens should be culled from laying flocks, the Texas A&M College Extension Service is advising farm families and backyard poultry raisers of the state.

A hen consumes about five pounds of feed per month even though she is not laying, so further reduction of laying flocks is being sought by the government in view of the current feed shortage. For the nation as a whole, the reduction sought is one of every seven hens.

According to Sam Moore, Extension poultry specialist, most Texas flocks could lose one of every seven hens, and with proper culling, profits would increase. Until recently, he says, Texas egg production this year has exceeded last year's for the same period, although the state has reduced its poultry population to or below pre-war numbers. This indicates a rise in production per bird.

While chick production this spring was 20 per cent less than last year with good management an average number of pullets should go into production on the Texas farms this fall, Moore says. He indicates that there are large amounts of shell eggs and poultry meat in storage and the demand for fresh eggs has been good this spring.

George W. Elliott of Odessa, candidate for State Representative, 88th District, was a week end visitor in McCamey Saturday.

"Okay, just so the engine's OIL-PLATED!"

"This one is . . . and you're 101% right," the car salesman agrees. He goes on to explain, "We want this car to show you real engine endurance—which means the least carbon, sludge, and upkeep you can have. That's goodwill for us. And all it takes to keep your engine's insides OIL-PLATED is Conoco Nth motor oil . . . Say, this time you're figuring to treat your new car right!" . . .

Many of the oldest cars, too, are being kept in the running by having their engines OIL-PLATED. This internal wear-fighter—OIL-PLATING—is created by magnet-like action. That comes from Conoco Nth oil's added ingredient—surfacing your engine's insides with durable OIL-PLATING. There's your barrier against lots of wear. You can have it in any car—any model or year—by driving around to Your Conoco Mileage Merchant's station. You'll get your correct grade of Conoco Nth oil—and an OIL-PLATED engine. WSCS Holds Meeting Monday Afternoon In Assembly Room

The Monday meeting of the Women's Society of Christian Service was held in the church assembly room, with Mrs. Doc Adams in charge.

Opening the meeting with a song and prayer, afterwards holding a short business meeting, then turning the meeting to the leader, Mrs. Ty Tolle of the Missionary Program, taken from the magazine, "The World Outlook." Her subject, given in two parts, was, first, "Missions In The New Age," second, "Deepen and Strengthen." These articles were written by missionaries working in foreign countries, mostly the Pacific Isles.

Mrs. Adams announced the next meeting would be the last for June consisting of the regular business and social with quarterly reports, hostesses to be Mrs. A. B. Holley and Mrs. Thomas L. Fuller.

'One More Tomorrow' Is Gay Warner Comedy At The Grand Sunday

Warner Bros. scintillating new comedy, "One More Tomorrow," which opens Sunday at the Grand Theatre, is a refreshingly different motion picture that should evoke immediate gratitude in the hearts of a number of moviegoers now weary of the more somber film fare that has come from Hollywood in the past few seasons.

With crisp and sparkling dialogue, smartly sophisticated situations revolving around an unusual romantic triangle, and a superlative cast headed by five of filmdom's top stars — Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson, Alexis Smith and Jane Wyman—"One More Tomorrow" wins this column's unqualified vote as the brightest comedy to come this way in many a moon.

Stars, Songs, Action, Laughs Combined In 'Sisters From Boston'

The story of a singer who makes the transition from cheap Bowery music hall to grand opera serves as a showcase for the talents of such varied performers as Kathryn Grayson, June Allyson, Lauritz Melchior, Jimmy Durante and Peter Lawford in "Two Sisters From Boston," the new MGM musical on the Grand screen Wednesday.

Kathryn Grayson is cast as Abigail, the ambitious sister who abandons her straight-laced Back Bay background in the attempt to crash the sacred portals of a New York opera house. Failing this, she becomes the star performer in Jimmy Durante's beer hall, a compromise which shocks her staid sister, Martha, played by June Allyson.

Thrilling Western Drama Based On Red Ryder Comic Strip

McKean, Western outlaw leader, and his gang of desperadoes ride into the isolated town of Desert Springs and are startled to find the town completely deserted and looking as though its inhabitants had left in a great hurry.

Having heard that Red Ryder and the "Duchess" and "Little Beaver," followed by a wagon train of prospective settlers, are on their way to Desert Springs to pioneer a new stage coach line, McKean and his gang decide to impersonate the missing town officials and inhabitants and swindle the newcomers by "selling" them choice tracts of land.

This is the basis for the thrilling Western drama, "Wagon Wheels Westward," fourth of the new series of Red Ryder films based on the famous cartoon strip and starring Wild Bill Elliott as Red Ryder, Alice Fleming as the "Duchess" and Bobbie Blake as "Little Beaver," which comes to the Grand Theatre Friday and Saturday.
