WOODWORK BY DALTON

IN A WAY, I have a great deal of admiration for the anonymous individuals who compose the statements issued by the federal government. They can take the simplest statement and make it into something totally incomprehensible.

You can find examples in any news story about the government in a newspaper, on radio or TV. I was reading one the other day in which the government agency was asked for comment on the fact that more than half the young men called up for the draft can't qualify for military service for one reason or another. The government came back with the answer that in some respects, present procurement standards are more liberal than the standards of World War II. "This," the report added, "is specifically true in regard to persons with certain psychiatric conditions--the underlying rationale, supported by experience, being that greater proficiency would result with respect to appraising the psychiatric fitness of persons for military service if they were observed under military conditions."

I hastily interpret this to mean they could tell better whether a guy will be a good soldier if they could carry him up to the front lines and let him get shot at a few times. This figure, if he throws a screaming fit and tries to run back to the barracks, he's normal, and they don't want him in the Army.

The federal report continued smoothly:

"Furthermore, studies indicate that the psychiatric and psychological criteria applied at the time of examination for military service generally have not proved a reliable index for efficiently predicting future military behavior."

I take this to mean that a draftee may act perfectly normal on his tests, but once he is in uniform he still might go off his nut.

They don't give the test to volunteers. They figure anyone who jumps up on his own is missing his marbles anyhow.

Aw, you recruiting sergeants know I'm just joking.

Both coaches said that Sudan boys look like they have great potential for a fine football team. Both are looking forward to a good season.

The coaches announced that football practice sessions will begin Monday, at 8 a. m. The football boys will work out each day at 8 a. m. and at 5 p. m. for one week, then football practice will be held as needed.

Devotional

BY HAZEL HOUSE

TIME - TIME - HOW LATE IS IT?

Scripture: Ecclesiastes 11:13; 1 Corinthians 3:15.
 "Take time to be holy. . . ."
 This statement above is taken from a gospel song, and it is a song which gives both advice and instruction on how to be "fitted for service above."
 Who will listen, and who will apply these instructions to their daily way of living? Will you? As I write, I am aware of the rush and hurry and busy-ness of this world. To be still and know that God is always in control, that He is my Father who always loves and cares about you and me—this keeps my mind from panic and confusion and restores my soul every day, every moment, day by day.

 In my estimation one of the dangers of today, which is so easy for us to overlook, is "Too busy." If we are not very careful and prayerful, some of us are going to "too busy" ourselves right into hell. Plain talk? It is high time for plain talk, as it may be later than you think. It is also high time for us to wake up and become aware of what we are living for, to know what the most important things are, and to practice putting them first in our lives.

 Whatever else you do, take time to be holy—take time, business man. Tired and weary, maybe, but rest your soul and mind in the Sureness of God's love. Take time, housewife, mother, or business woman, to leave your work while baby sleeps and children are in school, or playing, or while family is still in bed, long enough to be still and know that God is still the same God that knows and understands all our problems, sorrows, grief or pain. And when we trust Him (even without understanding why) and obey Him, He always uses even the bad things caused by the devil to work out for good to all of us who love Him.
 Take time, young people, students, to recognize Jesus in your life as the Living Christ! A Savior who knows all about you and cares about all your problems.
 Take time to thank God for all things, and most of all for loving us enough to give Jesus to come and save us. Let's live with Jesus every day so that others will see Jesus in us and want Him, too.

 It is sometimes easier to talk about things than to do them. I realize this by the things that come my way each day; the pressure of things to be done, to be thought about. But remember the devil wants no better start toward controlling our lives—owning us—than to keep us too busy to take time to be with God; too busy to pray, or to read His word to us. You notice I said "take time" not "have time."
 I knew of a man who was one of the greatest successes as a witness for Christ. When asked the secret of his success, he said that he always practiced getting up one hour earlier than the time for the other members of his family to get up in the morning, and he spent that hour alone with God. None of us have exactly his same situation and problems in our homes and in our daily routine, but each one of us can so plan our lives that each day we can take time to be with God. This is urgent, that we spend some time with God each day, or our contact with Him is broken, and when we take our head out of the sand, if the going gets tough—we fall down. Like a child trying to get over a much too steep and high place without a parent's help. Jesus said for His disciples to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread."

 Salvation? Yes, of course, the first and most important thing is to meet Jesus and take Him as your Savior. But, I am afraid a lot of us are going to be saved only "as by fire." Like one whose house has burned, and although he is saved from burning, all his possessions and clothes are lost.
 We may all be surprised at what we learn when Jesus comes again. This time He will come as King of Kings before whom every knee shall bow. And at the judgment—when "the books" are opened, we may find that what we did that counted most in God's estimation, had seemed least to us. Some of our good works that seem to us the most important may be the least to God. I have an idea that one of the largest rooms in our spiritual mansion will be built of "patient endurance with joy in pain."
 Here I think of all those that I know who have such a joy in knowing Jesus, such a loving happy spirit, even after spending so long a time confined to one bed or one room. Another room will be made perhaps of the times that we have truly stopped in loving trust, and said, "Thank you, Father, for hearing me, and for loving me." Another of when we have shown love and concern for our neighbor, and then said, "Father, Thou knowest I love Thee."
 Remember that physical action is certainly not always our greatest doing for Jesus. We must receive power first to be able to do. After being with Him, doing everything possible because of our love for Him, what we do seems so little. But we can give ourselves, and that is all He wants.

NEW FOR '65
 60 SERIES
 BASKET

with air system
 and boll separator

FOR JOHN DEERE 77 AND 277 COTTON STRIPPERS

Now, John Deere offers a new harvesting convenience and a simple, low-cost means of reducing field labor for owners of 77 and 277 Cotton Strippers.

The new 60 Series Basket Attachment is available as optional equipment for these two strippers when mounted on "3020," "4020," "3010," or "4010" Tractors. It eliminates the burden and extra labor generally associated with trailer-type harvesting, and it makes cotton stripping strictly a one-man operation.

Mounting is simple and easy. The 2,000-pound basket and frame are attached with eight bolts. The exclusive air-delivery system mounts on the stripper cross auger and is driven by a single V-belt from the tractor PTO.

The basket is basically the same as that of the John Deere 299 Picker, except for a lighter lid for greater dumping stability. A solid sheet-metal floor keeps trash and dirt from sifting down onto the operator and tractor.

The basket holds up to 2,000 pounds of seed cotton and dumps from a minimum height of 10 1/4 feet. Double-acting hydraulic cylinders and lid-control linkage give positive dumping control. You can flip a full load into an empty wagon quickly and easily or ease it into one partially filled.

A unique air-delivery system feeds open cotton to the basket. Unlike competitive systems, it features independent velocity control for green-boll separation.

By adjusting the opening of a small intake door, varying degrees of separation velocity can be set for lighter or heavier boll conditions with no sacrifice in capacity of the primary airstream which delivers open bolls to the basket.

For an effective, convenient means to lower harvest costs, see your John Deere dealer about the 60 Series Basket Attachment. Ask about easy Credit Plan terms.

Here's how the exclusive air system works...

In the delivery system, a jet airstream is created by a powerful 16-inch fan, mounted above the cross auger opening. The fan forces air upward through a tapered jet nozzle, causing a low-pressure area. Air rushes into this partial vacuum from the cross auger opening, the green-boll discharge opening, and through the air-adjustment door to form the necessary airflow for green-boll separation.
 Nozzle velocity and primary airstream remains relatively constant, according to fan speed. However, velocity in the separation chamber can be finely controlled by simply adjusting the opening of the small intake door (see diagram).
 If green bolls are especially light, and too many are being discharged into the basket, the operator can bleed more air through the intake door and reduce airstream velocity in the separation chamber. If, on the other hand, too much open cotton is falling into the green-boll box, he can shut down on the opening for increased velocity and optimum separation.

 Cotton touches no moving parts in the delivery system. There are no elevator or auger conveyors, and no material passes through the enclosed fan. Therefore, seed cracking, green-boll cracking, cotton staining, and embedding of pin trash are held to a minimum.
 The green-boll box has a 10 cubic-foot capacity and dumps like a clamshell. A lever, close to the tractor seat, allows the operator to dump bolls while the tractor is standing or moving.

COTTON TALKS

Latest reports from Washington on the new cotton program proposed in the omnibus farm bill by Congressman Harold Cobby and his House Agriculture Committee still indicate the possibility of its reaching the House floor sometime early in August.

And while it is thought that most Congressmen from cotton states will vote against the measure, prevailing opinion holds that the Administration either has or can muster the necessary votes in the House to pass it. Presently, cotton belt Congressmen oppose the bill as a result of producer opposition to the low loan, direct payments provisions and the virtual certainty it would reduce U. S. cotton production by 30 per cent or more.

A projected analysis of the bill's cotton provisions has been made by John Selbert, Area Extension Farm Management

Specialists

At least 20 specialists are expected to be available for the emergency of a possible epidemic of cotton bollworm.

1. A low price of 25 cents per pound based on "average" High Plains grades and staple length.
2. Low cotton allotment of 200 acres.
3. Reduced farm yield of 600 pounds per acre.
4. A "market price" of 15 cents per pound.
5. Specific production costs of $50 per acre, and
6. Low retirement costs of $5 per acre.

Under these conditions, Selbert's figures show a return below specific expenses of $32.50 per acre for the farmer who elects to disengage the government program and plant all of his land to cotton, as he is permitted to do under the current writing of the bill.

The other three choices which would be open to a cotton producer show a return above specific expenses of (a) $86.20 per acre if the farmer planted 85 per cent of his 100 acre allotment, (b) $101.45 per acre if he plants only his domestic allotment, 65 per cent.

From the businessmen's view, a recent editorial in the Leland Progress sums it up this way: "... The plan would have a devastating effect on the entire agricultural community in cotton-producing areas. Especially hard hit would be farm equipment dealers, fuel, seed, fertilizer and farm chemical dealers, cotton gins, oil mills, cotton warehouses etc. Bank deposits would suffer and land values, tied to cotton production in many areas, would decline."

"In spite of all that's been done to date, the cotton industry is still in a state of uncertainty. The government's plan to reduce production and increase price is a double-edged sword. While it may help the farmer's pocketbook, it could also lead to a loss of jobs in the cotton belt. The industry is still waiting for a final decision from Congress.

Don't panic out that the situation is insurmountable. The abundance of cotton chopping jobs and the fact that domestic workers prefer this work to that of irrigation. This is especially true in sprinkler irrigated sections, and these are the producers who will be most seriously hurt by the labor shortage.

Don't summarize by saying: "Even if a clearance order for foreign workers were issued today it would be several weeks before workers could actually be processed and brought to West Texas. In the meantime, irrigation wells are idle and crops are burning for want of water. The farmer has been forced into a vicious, politically born and politically nursed plight from which he has no visible out. Consequently, there seems to be no way to avoid production losses on the High Plains for lack of irrigators just as there was no way to avoid crop losses in other sections of our country for want of harvest hands."

SCIENCE SKETCHES

ELECTRONIC 'NURSES' keeping round-the-clock watch on patients, will be available in hospitals of the future, say researchers. The machines will monitor temperature, blood pressure and heart beat.

BACTERIA hitchhiking through hospitals on shoes and equipment wheels are stopped cold by a floor unit that disinfects the traffic, reports National Cylinder Gas, Chicago. The "sterile treads" are shallow pans containing a disinfectant soaked sponge covered by canvas.

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

By—Vern Seaford

In that rolling, cedar-studded countryside northwest of San Antonio there roams a peculiar game animal which most Texans don't even know exists. It is the Russian hog! It's a mean, vindictive beast with the proverbial chip on its shoulder.

Probably the foremost authority on wild Russian hogs in Texas is retired game warden Bob Snow of Kerrville. His talented pack of dogs has chased game throughout Mexico and the United States. With Snow hot on their heels, his dogs have trailed many dangerous animals including jaguar and mountain lions.

Of the Russian bear Bob says: "A big Russian bear is the meanest, ornariest critter on four feet." He should know because he's killed over 100 of them personally.

He also says there is no other game animal which can match the Russian hog in sheer stamina and speed. When cornered it is a kill-crazed fighter. It doesn't know what "quit" means.

This animal's artillery is impressive. Long, wicked tusks curl backward from the lower corners of its mouth.

When cornered the hog tosses its head wildly, lashing about with the tusks as if they were razor-sharp whips. Which they virtually are! Many a careless dog has drawn its last breath after bringing one of these bears to bay.

A spooked hog never seems to tire. It isn't unusual for a bear chase to range over 10 miles or more of terrain.

Like most creatures of the wild, when confronted with danger, the Russian hog would rather flee than fight. But once the occasion arises, it will turn with a viciousness seldom seen in any other game animal.

Snow carries a small sutur-kit in his hip pocket on every hunt. It's almost an expected thing that at least one of his dogs will get laid open before the hunt ends. When this happens, Bob gets off his horse and administers first aid, patiently stitching the dog together. All his dogs carry scars of battle.

These accidents occur, Snow explains, simply because dogs are neither fast enough nor elusive enough to evade the charge of a belligerent hog.

A Russian bear can lash out so swiftly and so suddenly that it is difficult to follow the action by eye. One instant the hog is backed up against the brush; the next instant dogs are flying in every direction, tossed aside like a bowling ball scatters pins.

A Russian bear is a mean-looking critter. It is muscular and lean in the hips, has a protruding snout, sharp tusks and coarse hair. It prefers a hilly habitat and roams furtively through the underbrush where it seldom is glimpsed by human eyes.

Only practical way to hunt 'em is with trained dogs. No one knows exactly how these foreign hogs came to Texas.

One legend has it that many years ago a traveling wildlif-exhibitor passed through San Antonio and included in the display were several of the European or Russian hogs. The owner of the small exhibit was down on his luck and wanted to dispose of his animals. So he sold them to a rancher who wanted to crossbreed the wild hogs with domestic stock.

But the hogs eventually escaped or were released. No one knows for sure. Anyway, they scattered into the hills. And from that inconspicuous start, they soon began multiplying and expanding their range.

Ranchers claim a Russian hog is one of the worst pests ever to roam the woods. A big, ornery one will tear down fences, root up crops and actually kill domestic stock.

Here's evidence that Russian hogs are tough and difficult to hunt. It's a tale Bob Snow likes to tell about the time he was on the trail of an extremely large hog in the 400-pound-plus class. This happened on a hunt near Boerne, northwest of San Antonio.

Five times the dogs brought the hog to bay and five times Bob blasted it pointblank with his .45 pistol! Yet the hog refused to die.

Finally it eluded the hounds, killing two of them in the process. Snow never did bring that bear in. However, deer hunters found it two weeks later some distance away, where it had wiggled under a brushpile to die.

On another hunt a bear had one of its hind legs shot off, yet it managed to run for six miles before the dogs finally brought it to bay.

We repeat — Russian hogs are mean... and tough!

How Old is a Young Redwood Tree?

Don't feel badly if you think that California's coast redwoods are the oldest, largest, scarcest or slowest-growing trees, for though you're wrong, you have plenty of company.

Common misconceptions about Sequoia sempervirens get the axe in a new booklet, "Questions and Answers About the Redwoods," issued by the redwood timber products industry. Copies are available without charge from California Redwood Association, 617 Montgomery St., San Francisco 94111.

The 20-page illustrated publication is based on questions directed to the industry by students, lumber dealers, teachers and conservationists from across the nation. Most of the queries show a general lack of knowledge about the tree and its future.

The redwood found growing from the southwestern tip of Oregon 450 miles down the coast to San Luis Obispo County is a youngster compared with other California species, the publication claims. At 2,200 years, the oldest known specimen of coast redwood is outranked by bristlecone pine at 4,600 years, the 3,200-year-old Sierra redwood and western juniper, aged 3,000.

While the tallest living thing is a 367-foot coast redwood growing on a tree farm near Orick, Humboldt County, the nation's largest trees in bulk are of the Sequoia gigantea species, found on the western slopes of California's Sierra Nevada. More than 98 per cent of the Sierra trees are preserved in government parks and forests.

Is redwood a slow-growing tree? Far from it, answers the booklet. Coast redwood, the commercial species, is the nation's fastest growing conifer, and the Sierra redwood is not far behind. Some regrowth trees are now more than 200 feet tall with 6-foot diameters.

Man's Most Precious Possession

By Melvin Hooten

What is man's most precious possession? Is it his home? Is it his worldly possessions? Is it his family? We know that different people consider different things to be their most precious possession, but we consider a man's soul to be his most precious possession.

Let us consider for a moment a man's soul. We know, whether some will admit it or not, that each person has placed within him a soul. This is the thing which distinguishes a man from a common animal, for when God formed man from the dust of the ground, God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.

What about a man's soul? What will happen to it when he dies a physical death upon this earth? The Bible says that a man's soul will dwell for an eternity in one of two places. If a man trusts in Jesus as his Saviour, he will live for an eternity in Heaven, but if man refuses to accept Christ, he will spend an eternity in hell. It seems that man should consider who he wants to serve,

Jesus or Satan.

How wonderful it would be if each man could be up the Apostle Paul when he devoted in II Timothy 1:12, "for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day."

Paul was not ashamed to admit that he was a Christian, saved by the grace of God. Neither was he ashamed to preach about Jesus Christ, even though it did mean persecution at times for him. Paul also knew whom he believed, and that person was Jesus Christ.

It was into the hands of Jesus that Paul placed his soul, his most precious possession. He knew that only through Jesus could he be saved and he wanted others to know Christ as their Saviour, too.

If you recognize your soul as being your most precious possession, and want to spend an eternity in Heaven, you must do what Paul did. You must meet Jesus and accept Him as your personal Saviour, and place your soul in His hands.
