ALRIGHT, SO Heart Month is all but over. February is not the only month you need to take care of your heart. And besides, I have in my possession a bunch of interesting information regarding heart disease, so here:

Dr. Paul Dudley White, probably the best-known cardiologist in the world, is a great believer in exercise, especially leg exercise, as a way to keep the veins clear and thereby prevent the formation of blood clots.

He likes bicycle riding and walking, but mentions others... "tennis, golf without a cart, swimming, skiing, gardening, mountain climbing and dancing (but not during or right after dinner) are other commendable forms of exercise involving the always suspected that those guys who used golf carts were losing all the benefits of the exercise in the game. Serves them right... of course, I never could afford the cart. If everybody golfed like I do, they'd walk and get good exercise, instead of making all those good scores. With scores like mine, a guy is never in a big hurry to get to the next tee anyway.

Dr. White, incidentally, says he always gives young persons three recommendations: "First, don't put on any weight after the age of 22; second, keep physically active all through life; third, don't smoke cigarettes."

A chart showing four levels of heart death rates by states is interesting, but puzzling. States with the highest death rates (863 to 1,003 deaths per 100,000 population) included Georgia, South and North Carolina and two or three of those far northeastern states where they have too many people anyway. But also in this group are the states of Louisiana and Nevada. Texas, Arkansas and Mississippi are in the third group, next to the "safest" states, and they all surround Louisiana. And among the very safest (522 to 706 deaths per 100,000) are Texas neighbors Oklahoma and New Mexico. This chart refers only to males in the 45-64 age group.

There's something down in Louisiana that's causing everyone to have heart attacks. Probably that chicory coffee. Or maybe the Mardi Gras.

RED CROSS DRIVE SET

The annual Red Cross Drive will be conducted by the Lamb County chapter beginning the first week of March and continuing through the month.

The Lamb County chapter received its charter in 1931 and has continued to function in services to enlisted men and their families since that date. A total of 558 service contacts were made by the local chapter in 1968.

LEWIS LLEWELLYN

Is This Prophecy To Be Fulfilled?

Are we really on the road to ruin?

Looking at the disorder and dissension on our campuses, as well as other troubled areas of our national life, a writer in the London Daily Telegraph predicts that 1972 will be a fateful year for the United States. By that time, he says, "The American nation will be in a state of nervous collapse."

Our condition, just three or four years from now, he prophesies, will be like that of the French nation last May—when France was paralyzed by strikes and simultaneous student rebellion—but with the significant difference that we will have no "Great White Father" to restore the people to sanity.

Will events prove the prophet of doom to be right? Or will we act wisely, as a nation, and control our own destiny?

Not Only Here
The disorder is not confined to our country. Student rioters and rebels have caused havoc and destruction in other places—as far away as Tokyo University and as near as Sir George Williams University in Montreal, where damage estimated at $2,000,000 was done by students and non-students who occupied the school's computer center for 13 days.

Although the current wave of dissent, disorder, and disruption is not limited to our country, it is our country for which we are responsible. It is in our country that we must take the actions required to halt the destruction of our society.

It seems quite clear now that many of the radicals leading the disruptive movements are not at all interested in integration in this country. Their goal seems to be disintegration.

Will they succeed? The Kerner Commission, investigating civil disorders in the United States, declared that the country's greatest need was to "generate a new will."

Another way to express this thought would be to say, "We need to regain our sense of purpose and principle."

Though it has become fashionable to sneer at the Puritans and our other early leaders, it is difficult to believe that these God-fearing people would have allowed our nation to get into the position that it is now in.

In First Place
The Los Angeles Times, in an editorial some time ago, said, "The old-fashioned folks who founded this republic put religion first in their program. It was the brightest star in their sky."

They rose above their seas of trouble on the wings of faith. "Was it the fact that they put God first that led to the growth and prosperity of the nation?"

Jesus said, you know, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

This is still a sound principle—for individuals and for nations. God does not lead those who follow Him to adopt unsound courses of action. On the contrary, He guides and guards His own.

But can we expect God to lead us out of our present difficulties while we lock Him out of our schoolrooms?

How about putting into practice again our national motto, "In God we trust?"

Howdy Neighbor

By BOYD PIERCE
Of Burleson

Recently I read of a newspaper publisher who seemed to always get some word out of order or misplace the periods and commas.

Here is his sad story:

It seems that a man with a sewing machine to sell placed a classified ad in his paper. The next day the ad appeared and then was followed in subsequent days by three more ads as follows:

Monday

"FOR SALE: R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale. Phone 958. Call after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him cheap."

Tuesday

"We regret having erred in R. D. Smith's ad yesterday. It should have read: FOR SALE: R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale cheap. Phone 958 and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him after 7 p.m."

Wednesday

"R. D. Smith has informed us that he has received several annoying telephone calls because of an error we made in his ad yesterday. His ad stands corrected: FOR SALE: R. D. Smith has one sewing machine for sale. Cheap. Phone 958 after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him."

Thursday

NOTICE: I, R. D. Smith, have no sewing machine for sale. I smashed it. Don't call 958 because the phone has been taken out. I have not been carrying on with Mrs. Kelly. Until yesterday, she was my housekeeper but she has quit.

Homemaking Tips

FROM THE OFFICE OF HOME DEMONSTRATION AGENT

County Home Demonstration Agent, Mrs. Lady Clare Phillips, reports this week that consumers are being bombarded with so-called washday miracles laundry products, supercharged with enzymes.

The idea of soaking clothes before laundering to make your wash significantly cleaner is not "new", says Mrs. Phillips.

presoaking with detergent does as good a job on most of the stains as does enzyme presoaks, tests have shown.

In the tests there was some "very slight difference" between two enzyme products and a detergent in their performance on blood and gravy stains, with the enzymes doing slightly better. But all three removed egg stains completely in 30 minutes of soaking and spaghetti sauce over night. All three removed a good the other two will probably be chosen this weekend.

The Hutcherson Flying Queens of Wayland College in Plainview top the list and after their double victory over defending national Champion Nashville Business College last weekend.

Also in the tourney will be the John F. Kennedy Patriettes of Wahoo, Nebraska, Temple Junior College Leopardettes of Temple, Texas, Ranger Junior College Rangeams of Ranger, Texas, Midwestern College Packerettes of Denison, Iowa, and Ouachita Baptist University Tigerettes of Arkadelphia, Arkansas.

part of grass, syrup, coffee and tea stains overnight. None did very well with mustard stain.

Mrs. Phillips suggests that housewives first try presoaking in a solution made up of whatever laundry detergent they now use. It may perform surprisingly well—and at half the cost of an enzyme presoak.

Should You Limit Low-Calorie Drinks?

Those artificially-sweetened soft drinks continue to gladden the hearts of calorie-dodging dieters. Today one bottle out of ten of soda pop is a "diet drink."

But some nagging questions about the most widely used synthetic sweeteners are still bothering public health specialists and keeping their laboratories busy. What the scientists are trying to find out is not only "What's the limit?" but also "How safe are they?"

Almost all low-calorie soft drinks and diet foods are sweetened with cyclamate, an artificial sweetener in use since the early 1950's. A study by the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council, released in December, warned that total unrestricted use of these chemicals was not a good idea. The report asked for more research. It also said that cyclamate intake of five grams a day less than one-fifth of an ounce, should present no hazard to adults. However, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is not sure that five grams of cyclamate a day is a prudent dose.

Safe Intake
So until now studies of artificial sweeteners completed, the FDA counsels that safe intake should be based on body weight. Daily consumption, it recommends, should be limited to 10 grams for every 2.2 pounds of a person's weight. According to these figures, an individual weighing 100 pounds should limit himself to less than three 12-ounce bottles of diet drink a day. A 60-pound child should not be permitted more than 1 1/2 bottles a day. The 180-pounder's daily cyclamate limit would be 1.05 grams—the amount of sweetener in four bottles of diet drinks. Dieters who also use diet foods, and sweeteners on grapefruit or in coffee, would have to take the additional ration into account, and cut down on their total.

In a study to be issued later this year, the NAS is expected to report on a number of adverse effects that have been attributed to cyclamate. One of these is the finding by a Food and Drug Administration team, as well as other scientists, that a cyclamate by-product in the body may impair human genes.

75% Less Effective
A research group at the University of Michigan found that cyclamate cuts down the effectiveness of an antibiotic drug commonly prescribed for children, by as much as 75%. Another scientist has discovered that cola drinks boost the amount of free fatty acids in the blood. When the drinks are sweetened with cyclamate, the increase in the fatty acids takes place steadily, sugar seems to delay this undesirable effect for several hours.

Waistline watchers are not going to enjoy cutting down on their once-a-day diet-bottle refreshments. But lower diet drinks shouldn't work any hardship on most adults of an active or sedentary youngsters. For them, there's always regular soft drinks—sugar sweetens energy and all. And no question marks.
