I'VE HEARD IT said that many persons who act like idiots when they drink really just use drink as an excuse to act like their real selves. In other words, the drink doesn't really cause that effect—they just figure they can get away with it after having a few.

Apparently the same is true of drugs, judging from a laboratory experiment at Miami Beach, Fla. It was found in the experiment that ten regular smokers of marijuana got the same effects from dummy cigarettes as they did from the real thing.

At times during the test the young men smoked real marijuana cigarettes. At other times, they smoked cigarettes that looked, tasted and smelled exactly the same, but lacked the active chemical ingredient in marijuana. And they couldn't tell the difference.

Both kinds of cigarettes gave them the feeling of being mildly high. The researchers concluded that the cues from the taste and smell are so overpowering as to induce the characteristic psychological state in someone primed for it.

In Plainview recently, it was discovered that high school youths have been acting strangely after taking unmarked capsules which they bought for about $3.00 each. Medical and police authorities obtained some of these and submitted them for laboratory tests which showed they were nothing but vitamin capsules with sugar added, probably purchased by the "pushers" at about $2.00 per bottle. Despite this, some of those taking the vitamins had been acting in the way in which they assumed drugs would make them act.

All of which just goes to prove that many of our reactions are purely psychological, and sometimes more psycho than logical.

PROBABLY it is too late for most of us in the newspaper business to change professions, but it is disheartening to note the most recent study report that prominent professional and business men live on the average longer than men in the general population, but that "correspondents and journalists" register the highest mortality rate among professional people.

It may be that a lot of writers are being done away with by disgruntled readers.

JOE SALEM ATTENDS LAY WITNESS MEETING

Jack Archer, Corpus Christi, Jack Schreiber, Abilene, Joe Salem, Sudan, and Elmer Hurley, Bronte, were among the fifty-five persons selected to receive special training at Nashville, Tenn., May 2-3 as coordinators for Lay Witness Missions in United Methodist Churches. The training was under the direction of Rev. Walter Albrighton, director of Koinonia Ministries (small group depth fellowships) of the General Board of Evangelism of the United Methodist Church.

Soil Stewardship Week May 11-18

Soil Stewardship Week, a nationwide observance which places emphasis on man's obligation to God as stewards of the soil, water and other related resources, will be celebrated locally, May 11-18, according to Marvin Bowling, Chairman, Lamb County Soil & Water Conservation District.

This year's observance with the theme "Confronting The Issues", underscores the responsibility which each citizen has in dealing forthrightly with current issues involving stewardship of renewable natural resources. The Lamb County Soil & Water Conservation District and some 3000 companion Districts throughout the nation along with their State and National Associations are sponsoring the event for the 15th consecutive year.

Through the 1969 theme and in an attractively illustrated booklet, emphasis is placed upon confronting today's issues in this complex world.

For example, the booklet points out:

"In a million small worlds, as well as in the great one, our lives become evermore complex. Our attitudes toward natural resources, as toward so many other values, are changing. We are increasingly worried about resource quality. We become more particular about resource uses. And out of these growing concerns an array of issues had emerged requiring judgment. We must consider these issues."

Mr. and Mrs. Kelton Doty and family of Lubbock visited his mother, Mrs. Eva Doty, Sunday.

Devotional

By HAZEL HOUSE

Scripture: Romans 4: 20 - 25, 5: 1 - 21.

Jesus died because of our sin, but He was raised again for our justification, so;

"Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

In this fifth Chapter of Romans we have listed seven results of justification. If you have faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, you have access into God's grace, peace with God; glory in tribulations; patience; experience; hope; and the Holy Ghost.

As we live by faith, the love of God is "shed abroad" in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given to us.

But how do you and I know that God loves us? We know by what He has done, for while we were yet sinners, Jesus Christ died for us. Jesus did not die for the righteous, but for the ungodly.

And now being justified by His blood, reconciled to God by the death of His Son, Jesus Christ, we shall be saved from wrath through Him, saved by His life.

I plead with you, in Christ's stead, hear and obey the word of God—accept Jesus by faith as your Savior and Lord—and remember:

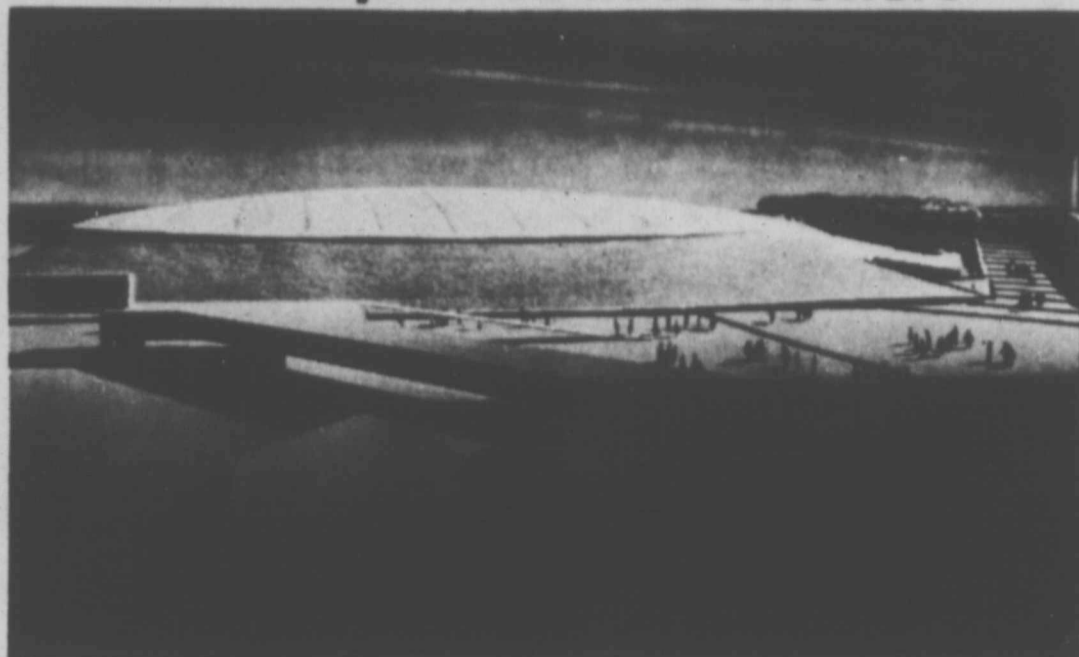

"Therefore as by the offense of one (Adam) judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one (Jesus) the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life."

United States Pavilion

Air Compressed Roof Structure

The United States Pavilion at Expo 70, Osaka, Japan, designed by Davis, Brody, Chermayeff, Geismar, de Harak Associates under the direction of the United States Information Agency, will be the first air supported cable roof structure ever built.

The roof will be a super ellipse measuring 462 feet by 270 feet and consists of a translucent fiber-glass fabric skin. A total of four air compressors will be required to keep the roof in an inflated condition.

Because of its translucency, the roof permits the sunlight to pass through into the enclosure below by day and also will glow from the interior lights by night. Inside this low-arched dome, excavations will provide for a height of almost five stories from the lowest point to the top of the cable roof.

An appropriation of $10 million by the U.S. Congress will be used to fund the construction of the pavilion as well as all other aspects of the U.S. exhibition at EXPO '70.

Proposed CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT
NUMBER SEVEN ON THE BALLOT (HJR1)

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF TEXAS:

Section 1. That Section 51-d, Article III, Constitution of the State of Texas, be amended to read as follows:

"Section 51-d. The Legislature shall have the power, by general law, to provide for the payment of assistance by the State of Texas to the surviving spouse and minor children of officers, employees, and agents, including members of organized volunteer fire departments and members of organized police reserve or auxiliary units with authority to make an arrest, of the state or of any city, county, district, or other political subdivision who, because of the hazardous nature of their duties, suffer death in the course of the performance of those official duties. Should the Legislature enact any enabling laws in anticipation of this amendment, no such law shall be void by reason of its anticipatory nature."

Sec. 2. The foregoing constitutional amendment shall be submitted to a vote of the qualified electors of this state at an election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in August, 1969, at which election the ballots shall be printed to provide for voting for or against the proposition: "The constitutional amendment authorizing the Legislature to provide for payment of assistance to surviving spouses and minor children of governmental officers, employees, and agents, including members of organized volunteer fire departments and certain organized police reserve units, who have hazardous duties and are killed in the performance of those duties."

Cotton Farmer Has New Planting Method

Farmers who need to fumigate cotton land to control nematodes but have not been able to get fumigants put down in pre-planting operations shouldn't give up the idea. They can fumigate at the same time they plant.

That's what Terry County Farmer Loyd Yowell of Brownfield and Bill Elms of Amherst in Lamb County did this spring when they got pressed for time.

Yowell and some of his neighbors have been running knife-type fumigation rigs just ahead of their planters in two separate operations. In some cases, only a few minutes elapse between the fumigation and planting of a given area.

Elms' approach is to fumigate, plant, and shape beds all in one operation by fitting fumigation chisels and other rigging on a double tool bar with the planter.

The chisels on Elms' rig run about 4" deeper than the opening plow. To apply Fumazone nematocide at the recommended rate of seven-tenths gallon per acre, he slowed his tractor speed from 5.5 miles per hour—which he considers his normal planting speed—to just under 5 mph.

The idea of fumigating and planting at the same time is new.

Until last year, it was recommended that Fumazone—the nematocide most commonly used on the Plains—be placed in the seed bed 10 days to two weeks before planting. But these recommendations were changed after research showed that fumigating at planting time gave equally good nematode control.

Elms, who farms about five miles northwest of Amherst, is fumigating this year for the first time. He decided to try the practice on 100 acres, he said, after analyses of soil samples showed that he had nematode problems. Elms already knew something was wrong. He said his yield has declined steadily from a high of 1242 lbs. of lint per acre in 1962 to the point "it's gotten so it's all I can do to make a bale and a quarter."

THREE-WAY RIG. Bill Elms of Amherst in Lamb County accomplished three separate operations in a single pass over his cotton land this spring with the planting rig shown here. In addition to shaping beds and bed planting, Elms attached deep-running chisels to a second tool bar to deposit FUMAZONE to control nematodes. Chisels (like the one in front of his hand) were set to deposit chemical about 4" deeper than opening plow. Elms fumigated 100 acres this year after soil tests indicated he had a nematode problem. He had tests made after his yield dropped from a high of 1242 lbs. of lint per acre in 1962 down to where "it's all I can do to make a bale and a quarter."

SOIL CONSERVATION SPECIAL

J. C. Withrow and son are checking the soil moisture with a soil probe to see how much irrigation water to apply to fill the soil with adequate moisture within the plant root zone with his pre-irrigation 4 miles south and 3 miles west of Sudan.

Joel Thompson is setting up a portable sprinkler system on his farm for pre-irrigation located 2 miles west of Sudan.

too became depleted of its fertility; and then, on he went, digging and destroying with no thought of any ending to this system of farming. Ruined farms behind - new farms ahead to be converted into more ruined acres; this seeming to be the accepted routine.

It was probably the easiest way, or perhaps the accepted way to farm in those days. It was the general belief that new land could not possibly give out - it would last indefinitely. It was easier and much cheaper to move on and take up new land than to do anything to hold or rebuild the worn out and eroded soil.

The seemingly never ending supply of new acres caused many to become careless, neglectful, and brought about the desire to move on, to pioneer, to seek new land, new surroundings, and new neighbors. Whatever it was, many acres of good soil suffered, and much land was almost completely destroyed.

However, the time arrived when the exodus from old land to new land came to a halt. New land did give out after all and there was an ending. There were no new acres to go to. There were no new farms. Farmers had to stay on the farms they had been living on and mining or give up farming entirely; and if they expected to live and prosper they must do something about the soil to make it pay.

It was necessary to stop this destructive mining of farm land - stop this robbery of nature, and most of them did. They are now putting back some of the things needed for soil fertility. But they must also hold the soil; they must feed the soil and practice soil conservation. They must not fail to save the farms they are living on; they must not permit them to waste away.

Land is a gift and we must respect its great wealth. Nothing man can put together can make land. It can easily be depleted, or even destroyed, but it can also be held fertile and profitable if we feed it, care for it, and build it up as we go along. As we take out, we must put back, and this can be done in many ways.

To plan crops is to organize for a system of rotation. To produce the best kind of crops, erosion must be stopped and soil fertility must be maintained. There is very little unfertile soil, and there are very few, if any, naked subsoil spots of a well organized farm - one that had a plan of saving the soil, maintaining its fertility and planting certain crops in each field with good reasons for doing so. Land on this kind of an organized farm gets better as the acres are being utilized, not worse.

There can only be good farms and good crops by fighting erosion and licking it good. Exert every effort to keep the soil fertile and place it in condition by terracing, contouring and seeding grasses, legumes, or alfalfa crops so that it will stay and not go the route of lakes and rivers. A well-layed plan consistently executed will yield big dividends. Protect soil from erosion by proper rotations which include legumes and grasses. To follow and abide by natural laws is conservative farming. Top soil washed from the fields and pastures is gone for good - it cannot be returned.

The Lamb County Soil Conservation District is striving to develop Conservation Plans and to carry out good conservation practices on every farm and ranch in Lamb County. Help us by contacting the Local Soil Conservation Service Office in the Courthouse and make your plans now to develop a conservation program that will fit your individual farm.

SOIL EROSION NOW PASSE

by JOHN P. HARMON

There was a time when tillers of the soil could run away from the evils of soil erosion and burn out farms. It was in the days of "land a plenty." But, those days are gone, never to return. The farmer in those days was a miner. He dug in the soil and took from it everything he could reasonably get, and continued to do so as long as his land produced. When it became worn out and depleted, he moved to virgin land to dig some more, to begin again his robbery of nature, remaining only until it

SOIL STEWARDSHIP WEEK MAY 11-18, 1969

SOIL AND WATER CONSERVATION WILL PRESERVE OUR HERITAGE

MAINTAIN SOIL TO PRODUCE FOOD

Maintaining the capacity of our soil to produce food is one of the main objectives of a national soil conservation program, according to the newest publication of the Soil Conservation Service, "Our American Land." Stopping sediment that is filling our streams and reservoirs, planning for orderly urban expansion and community development, and providing new outdoor recreational facilities are other objectives.

The booklet points out that America's farmers are producing food more efficiently than any other place in the world and because of this, we have the highest standard of living anywhere.

Quite a bit of our high production, however, comes at a high cost in tons of soil washed from the land. Much soil and water conservation work is still needed on the nation's farm and ranch lands. And that which is already in effect needs constant care and flexibility to adapt to changing needs and technology.

Copies of this publication may be obtained from B. T. Kiser, Soil Conservationist, SCS Office, Littlefield, who provides professional and technical help to

At a time when pressures grow on the land, it is useful to remind ourselves of the origins and history of the Soil Stewardship observance. They stress the allegiance of all men to God and their dependence on His grace for all good things.

Throughout the ages, men have offered humble thanks to their Creator for the priceless gifts of air, soil, water, and sunshine which make all living things possible.

CONFRONTING THE ISSUES

IN A MILLION small words, as well as in the great one, our lives become ever more complex. There are more of us. We are younger, on the average, and more affluent. Most of us now live in the cities or their suburbs. Our attitudes toward natural resources, as toward so many other values, are changing. We are increasingly worried about resource quality. We become more particular about resource uses. And out of these growing concerns, an array of issues has emerged, requiring judgment.

With more people in more places imposing steadily greater demands on the limited supply of natural resources, how can we avoid waste, erosion, fouling, disorder, and ultimate shortages? Do we need to modernize our policies and devise new systems for more effective resource management? Consider these issues. Consider them well.

Postal Rate Increase Proposed For July 1

An "inherited" postal deficit of $1.2 billion is responsible for the proposals to raise the postage bill for residents of Sudan, Postmaster Minyard said.

Minyard also said he had been advised by Postmaster General Winton M. Blount in Washington, D. C. that the record $1.2 billion 1970 deficit compelled President Nixon to seek postage rate increases. Without higher rates the Department will be left with a staggering deficit that would become an added public tax burden.

In addition to increasing letter mail from 6 to 7 cents, as proposed by the Johnson Administration, President Nixon also asked that second and third-class mailers help reduce the large postal deficit which would otherwise be paid by taxpayers, the postmaster said.

For bulky third-class mail and most magazines and newspapers, the rates would be increased 16 percent to 20 percent above today's levels, he noted. These percentages include rate hikes already scheduled by previous action of Congress.

The President's recommended increases will reduce the 1970 postal deficit by more than $600 million.

What to Do About Filthy Films?

If you knew a man was selling poisoned candy to children and young people, would you patronize his store?

Even if the Supreme Court declared that the man must be allowed to continue to dispense his poison, wouldn't you feel a responsibility not to help him to stay in business?

Recently, Joseph Grunstein, film distributor, said, "I've been 40 years in this business, and frankly I'm ashamed of some of the films we handle now. I wouldn't want my kids to see them."

He justified his continuing to handle these indecent films on the basis that "this is what the market is demanding."

"Progress" of Movies

Over a period of years, movies have "progressed" from border-line scenes, shady situations, and double-entendre dialogue to the present practice of showing a man and a woman in bed together, partial or complete nudity, and even—in a Swedish import now showing in this country—an actor and an actress engaging in actual sex acts.

What should be our attitude toward motion picture theaters which exhibit films that are immoral and degrading—poisonous to the morals of all, especially our young people?

Perhaps Jack Valenti, chairman of the Motion Picture Association of America, has given us the answer to this question.

The public, said Valenti, has the "greatest civil right in the world to stay out of the movies."

Regarding the motion picture producer, Valenti said that he was opposed to any form of censorship. He added, "I want to shame him into raising his sights."

Well, while Valenti does what he can to shame the shameless purveyors of immorality, maybe the rest of us should adopt his other suggestion and "stay out of the movies."

What does the Bible say about this matter?

Of course, there were no motion pictures when the Bible was written, and there are specific instructions as to what our attitude should be.

One thing that the Bible says is this: "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather prove them."

Another: "What fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? And what communion hath light with darkness? . . . Wherefore, come out from among them."

"Stay Out" Motion picture exhibitors and producers will respond to only two things, it appears—legal action and box-office figures.

Since our Supreme Court has made it practically impossible to control this moral cancer by legal means, we are left with only one weapon to use against those who would destroy our youth for profit.

This weapon is the one which Jack Valenti suggested that we use—"stay out of the movies." You have an influence. Will you use it?

On which side?

MISS FILES SPEAKS TO SURVEY COMMITTEE

Miss Dianne Files, Museum consultant of the State Historical Survey Committee, spoke to members of the Lamb County Museum Planning Committee, and guests, Thursday morning when the meeting was held in the county courtroom at the courthouse in Littlefield.

The forming of a Lamb County Museum Association is being planned in the near future. Members of the County Museum Planning Committee include Mr. and Mrs. Roy B. McQuatters, Spade; Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Kelley, Earth; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Blessing, Amberst; Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Scott, Sudan; Mrs. A. H. Scivally, Fieldton; and Mrs. C. O. Stone, Littlefield.

Those attending the meeting from Sudan were Mrs. S. D. Hay, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Scott, and Hubert Dykes.

"Eternal Vigilance Is the Price of Liberty"

Comments by the Chairman of the Board of Trustees
National Small Business Association

Carl A. Beck

The major consideration in tax reform legislation is to bring fairness into our tax laws. The question of revenue to pay for the ever-growing cost of government is also of paramount importance.

National Small Business Association is greatly concerned with tax discrimination in favor of the co-op.

National Small Business Association believes that the tax-exempt co-op should be made to live under the same rules as the tax-paying small business.

It believes the co-op should pay taxes on its income, just as small business must, where the co-op performs the same business function.

Salt is rubbed into the wounds of tax-paying small business when the co-op assaults private enterprise as greedy and grasping.

But this does not deter the co-op from demanding of Congress more free handouts, such as two percent loans for the REA, when the government itself is paying more than six percent to sell its notes and securities to professional buyers.

Removal of the co-op's special privilege loophole would easily add $2 billion to government revenue.

But more importantly repeal of this inequitable exemption for co-ops would strengthen private enterprise, the economic foundation of the country.

It is not fair to permit the co-op to run in the same competitive race with private enterprise while requiring private enterprise to wear 100-pound weights on each leg.
