WOODWORK

BY DALTON

A SURVEY of the nation's penal institutions recently showed that the guitar is the most popular instrument, presumably among those who are imprisoned.

Now what some people do on a guitar definitely is a crime, but the story didn't even suggest that any of the convicts were in their cells for that reason.

In the old days we used to see cartoons of prisoners with shovels and picks (not the guitar kind) making small stones out of little ones. This probably is the origin of the rock beat.

Johnny Cash did okay in Folsom Prison, so I assume they let him play his guitar while he was there, but admittedly he's better than the average guitar twanger. I just don't know if they let any prisoner who wants one have a guitar to play in his cell. Certainly in many cases this would be a good basis for release of those in nearby cells on the grounds of being subjected to cruel and unusual punishment.

If some of these long-haired characters with their fancy guitar equipment were allowed to perform in their cells, some terrible things might happen. First of all there probably wouldn't be room in the cells for those gigantic amplifiers. And if they turned them up as high as they can (and they always do), the walls might collapse, causing a mass jailbreak. This probably would be abetted by the absence of nearby guards, because guards probably are mostly of the middle-age set who can't get closer than 50 yards to such a racket.

THERE are 25 mountains in New Mexico over 10,000 feet, says a report we read the other day. "Of the state's 32 counties, 13 have at least one mountain above 10,000 feet."

Yeah. Surrounded by hippies, if the Santa Fe and Albuquerque areas are examples.

VOTERS FAVOR NATURAL WEATHER

Some 105 Sudan residents cast their ballots Tuesday in the State Constitutional Amendment election and turned thumbs-down on all four proposed amendments. Voters also stated that they were overwhelmingly against weather modification by cloud seeding.

Nineteen voted for the use of cloud seeding and 80 for natural weather.

County-wide, voters were in favor of natural weather 703 to

436. The weather referendum was defeated throughout the eight-county area in which the cloud seeding program is proposed.

The natural weather advocates have indicated they might form an injunction against Atmospherics Inc. to halt the current hail suppression program since the majority of the voters are not in favor of the program.

The weather controversy has been a major topic of debate throughout the spring months.

Local balloting on the amendments were as follows:

Individual counts included: Amendment 1 - 22 for, 78 against; Amendment 2 - 17 for, 84 against; Amendment 3 - 30 for, 72 against; Amendment 4 - 42 for, 64 against.

Amendment 4 which authorized the sale of bonds for use in bettering water conservation and city sewer facilities, is the only amendment passed across the State.

Among the local events designed to encourage widespread recognition of Soil Stewardship Week are T. C. Faver, chairman, Frank Struve, vice chairman, W. B. Jones, secretary, Marvin Bowling and Edwin Nawson, members.

The Lamb County Soil and Water Conservation District will distribute upon request to churches of all faiths program blanks, bulletin inserts, posters, and booklets created particularly for this year's observance.

BRIGHI IDEAS
by Sylvan Lumiere, Sylvania Lighting & Design Coordinator Being Out Is In

Being-out is more popular than being in, especially on warm spring and summer evenings. And, if you combine a warm evening with a barbecue or patio party, you're sure to have a successful get-together.

Z Country, suburban and city-dwellers are discovering the delights of outdoor entertaining. One of the many delights is versatility — you can make your party casual or formal, serve cocktails and dinner or just make it a cocktail party. No matter which way you plan a patio party, you can't go wrong.

One thing to keep in mind, however, is lighting. Too many hostesses make the mistake of too little lighting, or of lighting the wrong places. One interesting effect in a large outdoor area is to combine Tiki torches with well-placed spot lighting. Smaller backyards should use both spot lighting and place hurricane lamps on the patio tables. For interesting spot lighting, Sylvania's stained glass PAR Lamp does more than just light your patio — it showers it in color.

The important thing to remember in lighting any outdoor area is to place your lights so they illuminate steps, ponds, trees and shrubbery. Not only can you create some interesting effects, but well-placed lighting is also a safety precaution.

The outdoor hostess always has the beginnings of a great party — there's something about the entire atmosphere that lends itself to friendliness and good parties.

SOIL CONSERVATION WEEK

WE CONQUERED THE WILDERNESS

... OR DID WE?

At a time when pressures grow on the land, it is useful to remind ourselves of the origins and history of the Soil Stewardship observance. They stress the allegiance of all men to God and their dependence on His grace for all good things.

Throughout the ages, men have offered humble thanks to their Creator for the priceless gifts of air, soil, water, and sunshine which make all living things possible.

The custom of setting aside special days—Rogation Days—for this purpose began more than 1,500 years ago in the neighborhood of Vienne, France. Bad weather and earthquakes had brought crop failures and widespread hunger. The Bishop of Vienne called for prayer and penance on the three days preceding Ascension Day. The people responded and implored God for help in their suffering and privation.

Word of what had happened in Vienne spread throughout France—and then to other countries. The supplication filled a need in the hearts and minds of the people, and as the years went by Rogation Days were widely observed as an annual custom. By the end of the eighth century, the Church formally adopted the custom. Now, the world over, people on Rogation Days beg the mercy of God and ask that He spare His children the evils of soul and body—and give good increase to the plants of the field.

In our own land it has met an evident need of the people to set aside a week each year to acknowledge before God our gratitude for His gifts of soil and all the bountiful resources associated with it. The week has become a special time to remind all people that these gifts warrant their best in Christian stewardship.

In America, the soil stewardship observance has always traced its origins to the Rogation Days. Throughout parts of the South, earlier in this century, churches and their congregations began to set aside the fifth Sunday after Easter as Soil and Soul Sunday.

Subsequently, this became Soil Stewardship Sunday when, in 1946, the publishers of Farm and Ranch magazine suggested to religious leaders in a few southern states that one Sunday be set aside each year to remind their congregations of man's duty to be a good steward of the land.

The response of clergymen and laymen was so warm and widespread that observance of Soil Stewardship Sunday spread steadily to additional states. In 1954, the publishers of the magazine suggested to the officers of the National Association of Soil Conservation Districts that a still wider observance of Soil Stewardship Sunday could aid significantly in bringing about a national awakening and recognition of man's obligations to the Lord's earth. The publishers offered to relinquish their limited sponsorship of Soil Stewardship Sunday to the Association.

The Association accepted, and beginning in 1955 undertook to encourage a nation-wide observance—a mission to which it has dedicated itself ever since, under the guidance of a special Soil Stewardship Advisory Committee of clergymen representing many of the country's religious denominations. In 1956, recognizing possible conflicts with the observance of Rural Life Sunday, which was on the calendar of many churches, Soil Stewardship Sunday was changed to Soil Stewardship Week—beginning with the fifth Sunday after Easter and continuing through the sixth.

Erosion And Sediment Are Everybody's Business

The Lamb County Soil and Water Conservation District recognizes that sediment resulting from erosion is assuming increased importance in our county every day.

With the world population doubling about every 40 years and demands for food and water mounting at least at an equal rate, conservationists and the public must increase efforts to reduce erosion of the land and to protect water from excessive pollution.

There is no longer a clear-cut distinction between urban and rural interests in the use and management of natural resources.

Everyone benefits from bountiful supplies of food and fiber, unpolluted streams and reservoirs, and good fishing and swimming that can result from better use and management of our natural resources.

Everyone benefits from good roads, safe waste disposals, and the selection of building sites free from soil limitation and excess water hazards that can result from wise planning.

Similarly, all segments of society reap a share of the penalties occurring from damaging or unwise developments.

Sediment ranks above domestic sewage, industrial waters and chemicals as a major cause of water pollution. Annual sediment deposits in our reservoirs in the U. S. are estimated at 850,000 acre-feet.

This is nearly five times the total volume of soil excavated in building the entire Panama Canal. This amount of sediment fills reservoir storage capacity sufficient to provide an annual water supply for 5.5 million people.

This district recognizes the importance of erosion and sediment control. The SCS also realizes the complexity of the problems involved and the magnitude of the cost that must be shared by the public and the individuals in order to protect and guarantee our valuable soil and water resources and associated values.

"DUST THOU ART TO DUST RETURNETH"

WATER POLLUTANTS

SEDIMENT

Sediment (call it silt or mud if you like) is the largest pollutant by volume of our streams, lakes, and harbors. Sediment is the result of erosion—it is the soil that washes from unprotected land.

Fishing can be ruined by muddy water. Sewage wastes, infectious agents, and chemical wastes may "hitch a ride" on the moving soil particles. Sediment increases the cost of purifying water.

By terracing, reforestation, improved tillage practices, better grassland management, and other conservation work, farmers benefit all users of streams and lakes.

Construction sites, roadbanks, and other nonfarm land uses are serious producers of sediment. Conservation practices that are effective on farmlands can also be used to curb this nonfarm erosion.

CHEMICALS

Many conservation measures reduce the need for pesticides and herbicides.

Crop rotations are used to conserve and improve the soil—and to fight insects and diseases. Coastal bermudagrass and certain other plants kill nematodes (tiny worms that damage plant roots). A rotation to include these crops will help control these pests.

fire, or any bird against extinction is to serve a human need. The prime purpose for conservation is to improve the lives of people. God created man and nature as a unity. In His design there was no built-in conflict or ultimate collision, but an enduring challenge to man to make the most harmonious use of the resource gifts entrusted to him.

Members of the Lamb County Soil and Water Conservation District Stewardship Committee are T. C. Faver, Frank Struve, W. B. Jones, Marvin Bowling, and Edwin Nawson.

"Seventy percent of Americans now live in only one percent of the space available in the Nation. If the present trend continues, by the year 2000 four out of five Americans will live in metropolitan areas. Two hundred and forty million people will live in only 8.7 percent of the land area, while 60 million will occupy the remaining 91.3 percent."

--Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman

In 1822, one farm worker in the United States fed four people. In 1922, the number he fed had been raised to eight. Latest reports show he feeds 38.

The United States, in the year 2000, will be a nation of from 280 to 350 million citizens. We will inhabit the same fixed number of square miles as today. And we will live from the bounty of the same thin layer of topsoil that feeds 200 million Americans today.

The world must depend, primarily, on four percent of the earth's land area for the major portion of its agricultural production.

NATURAL BEAUTY POLLUTANTS

Trees, grass, the broad strokes of contour farming, sparkling streams and ponds are things of beauty. Outdoor beauty is enhanced by conservation programs.

But apathy and neglect have degraded much of the natural beauty of the land.

Litter is a national problem. Garbage disposal systems are adequate for only a few of the towns and cities. Ugly dumps and junkyards spoil the scenery, reduce land values, and often harm fish and wildlife.

Here are some of the ways conservation programs are working to reduce the pollution of natural beauty:

GARBAGE

Soil Conservation Service soil specialists are helping municipalities throughout the country in selecting sanitary landfill sites to replace open dumps.

JUNKYARDS

A screen of trees to mask junkyards or other unsightly areas is a relatively new, but growing practice. Conservation agencies assist in the establishment of such screens.

EROSION EYESORES

Public and private agencies are working together to heal erosion scars, abandoned surface mines, and raw roadbanks. SCS lends technical aid to convert erosion eyesores to grasslands, forests, lakes, parks, and even golf courses.

CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS

SCS-assisted projects are planned to minimize water pollution, protect fish and wildlife habitat, forests, and natural beauty. Trees, especially large or beautiful trees, must be saved if possible.

Swimming Pool Tips

The National Safety Council estimates that 270 persons drowned in home swimming pools last year. Home swimming pool owners this year are urged to keep these precautions in mind:

Keep the pool under constant surveillance when in use. Have a well anchored cover over the pool when it is not in use.

Do not permit children to swim in the pool without adult supervision.

Have a fence with a selflatching lock around the pool.

Have a rescue device, such as a long pole, and a well-equipped first aid kit at the poolside. Learn how to use them and to apply artificial respiration.

Prohibit running or roughhousing of any sort around the pool area.

Electricity and water don't mix. Keep all electrical equipment away from the pool side. Also, never swim after drinking alcoholic beverages.
