WOODWORK

BY DALTON

BY THE TIME you read this, the big freeze may have been considerably melted in places. Everybody is in favor of freezing everybody else's wages, and in favor of freezing prices, preferably at 1940 levels. But nobody seems to want his own salary frozen at its present level.

Labor unions, whose exorbitant contracts have contributed greatly to zooming inflation were the first to protest and even defy the 90-day order. They've said they won't do it, they'll continue their present strikes, and by grab, they want right now the increases they just got through striking for.

Only thing is, should the labor unions get by with defying the order, the point of the whole freeze is blunted. After all, these are the inflationary-causing agents at which the order is mainly aimed.

The number of people who have asked to be exempt from the freeze is legion, because there's a whole bunch of them. And many other have some questions about their own situation, some of them tough to answer.

In Philadelphia the Office of Emergency Preparedness had to rule on a 10-year-old boy's request regarding his allowance. The boy wrote: "My father said he would give me a raise in my allowance except for Nixon's wage-price freeze. Will he be fined $5,000 if I get the raise?"

The OEP said allowances could be raised only if the receiver's productivity or responsibility increased or he was moved to a bigger job.

The boy negotiated a 50-cent-a-week increase with his dad after agreeing to wash the car.

And all that time off...

FORTY computer employees of a bank in Norristown, Pa. next month will begin working on a three-day 33-hour work week. They will get the same pay they used to get for 5-day, 40-hour work.

And all that time off...

"Welcome" School Menu

Bienvenidos is a nice Spanish word for "welcome," and that's what Texans say to the travelers along our state's 67,000 miles of highways. One of the ways we say it is through the work of highway maintenance construction supervisors who protect our colorful wildflowers and shrubbery, the trees and the grasses which help tourists see the magnificent natural beauty of Texas. Our state's perennial First Lady, Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, who persistently insists that America Be Beautiful, if honoring those maintenance construction supervisors again this year with the second annual Lady Bird Johnson Award of $1,500 and a plaque for the man who's doing the best job. The choice should indeed be hard. We'd vote for our own local maintenance construction supervisor, but we commend whoever wins the award for 1971 for his real service to all of us. Texas highways are a beautiful sight for travel-tired eyes, and we salute you, Lady Bird, for calling our attention to the hard work and thoughtful effort put forth to keep ours the Beautiful Lone Star State.

CAUTION LABELS NOW REQUIRED

Caution labels against possible eye and skin irritation and other injuries are now required on 25 brands of laundry and dishwashing detergents, reports Lady Clare Phillips, county home demonstration agent.

The labels, required by the Food and Drug Administration, warn consumers of possible eye and skin irritation, and of internal injury if the product is swallowed. Manufacturers have agreed to the labeling.

FDA authorities passed the ruling as a result of government testing on detergents. The test included a sampling of nationally marketed non-phosphate and low-phosphate brands, as well as regular phosphate-based detergents.

"So when you reach for detergent at the market," Mrs. Phillips says, "check for these warning and caution labels for your own health and safety." Follow directions for use and keep the product out of the reach of children.

"The FDA can require warning and caution labels, but only you can read that label and put it to proper use," she reminds.

THEIR SOLE MEANS OF SUPPORT—YOU!

WHO PAYS THE PIPER?

The expression "passing the buck" is universally circulated in political circles, especially where government spending is concerned.

That elusive coin of the realm is called federal or state money, when it is applied for locally. It is never labeled the taxpayer dollar, even though it comes from personal or corporate income taxes, excises or sales taxes.

Every once in a while we should recall the economic fact of life that the government is not the source of income. You and I provide this source through the successful operation of the private enterprise system.

So, the next time you endorse greater public expenditures for your favorite local, state or national cause, just remember in the final analysis you must chip in with your tax dollars to help pay the bill.

scholarships of $500 each. The scholarships are disbursed by the Texas Tech director of scholarships. Recipients are determined by a scholarship committee based on need and scholastic achievement from residents of a fifteen (15) county area of the High Plains. TAX MAN SAM SEZ

Most Texans expect a whole lot of hot weather August. Even though things have changed over the years and we work in air conditioned comfort, we ride in air conditioned comfort and we sleep in air conditioned comfort in an average case, we still sweat over our problems in August. The friendly tax folks at IRS have come up with this gentle reminder: If you don't want to sweat over your tax problems when you file your tax return on a cold day in January, you better keep your receipts and records during all the hot and cold days of 1971.

America as It Used to Be

Nostalgia is sweeping the country for the simpler days of yesterday—when kids and adults got along pretty well, regardless of the generation gap, when girls sought marriage and motherhood, in that order, when drugs rarely suggested much more than aspirin.

One measure of this new mood is America's sudden switch in reading habits. A spectacular example among recent best sellers, for instance, is Pulitzer Prize winner Paul Horgan's Whitewater, which captivated American critics and readers, and sold over 2,100,000 hardcover copies, including condensed editions and book club editions. Now this compelling novel about three young people growing up in yesterday's typical small town is enchanting new millions in a just-issued paperback edition.

Whitewater, the fictional locale that symbolizes America's bygone years, is seen through the eyes of Philipson Durham, a clean-cut hero-figure modern writers have long neglected. Torn by loyalty to his community and a search for horizons beyond his origins, he is devoted to Marilee Underwood, everybody's idea of the girl next door, and Billy Breedlove, an adventurous, widely-idolized athlete whose loyalties do not extend beyond the town's boundaries. The love that matures between Billy and Marilee, and Phil's inability to bridge Billy's occasional prankishness, carries the story to a powerfully emotional climax.

In this America remembered, of course, there is a share of vice and scandal, but they're not the sum total of things. Rather they are the inevitable result of problems that have no easy answers, of complexities that defeat the weaklings and sometimes confound even the strongest.

In all, it is a story with which Americans everywhere can identify, of life as it used to be, of hope that extends beyond tragedy and success that is earned because of hard work, honesty and integrity. Whitewater, which Life magazine called a "book that thoroughly deserves to be read," and Newsweek termed "Tender and affectionate..." has just been released by Paperback Library in a $1.50 edition. Whitewater re-affirms Paul Horgan's reputation as one of America's foremost authors, as a storyteller who can extract unusual excitement out of the joys and sorrows of growing up, ferreting out suspense in what others find commonplace and offering optimism where others see only despair.

Have all your neighbors really known how much for them your love has grown? They'll likely never know the facts unless we show them by our acts. There's something we have often heard. An act will tell more than a word. So kindly acts that we bestow, will surely let our neighbors know.

When to Drink

Mohammedans, Black Muslims, and Mormons all disallow drinking of alcoholic beverages, as part of their basic rules. Christianity, however, has no such prohibition, yet many Christians think drinking is wrong. Why? How is it that various people who all believe the Bible come to different conclusions about the propriety of drinking liquor?

The cynical reply would charge that some people read the Bible to find out and perform what it requires and other people read the Bible to conform to what they like and, otherwise, to do as they wish. True or not as these attitudes may be on some issues, concerning alcohol such cynicism is not valid.

Drinking Restricted

Do passages of the Bible prohibit drinking? Yes. Do passages of the Bible permit drinking? Yes. Is the Bible thus contradictory? No.

The state in which I live permits some people to drive cars and prohibits others, but it is not contradictory—why? Because the issue is not really driving or not driving. The issue is safety. So the state allows drinking and allows driving, but does not allow drinking and driving together. Separately they may be relatively safe, but in combination they killed 30,000 people last year in the United States.

The Bible similarly applies two standards by which a Christian should judge whether, in his circumstances, he should approve of drinking or of abstinence. As people and circumstances differ, the answers given by Biblical standards differ also.

The first standard is self-control—or, more accurately, God-control. One of the "fruits of the Spirit" is temperance—that is, self-control. Many places in the Bible condemn drunkenness because intoxicated people cannot think or act properly and, consequently, are a menace to themselves and others.

The Bible, however, further disallows intoxication because the drunken man cannot be controlled by the Holy Spirit, and the essence of Christianity is that God lives in a man to guide and empower his life. "Be not drunk with wine... but be filled with the Spirit."

Thus the Bible is against drunkenness, but what about drinking? If the alcoholics in the country number in millions, the drinkers number in tens of millions. Does the Bible address them? Yes and no.

Concern for Others

Yes, because most people who drink will occasionally get drunk, and the Bible says that is the act of a fool. No, because the other standard concerning drinking is given only to Christians—though non-Christians would be wise to adapt it to themselves also.

"The kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit... It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby your brother stumbles."

The second standard is concern for others. In the first century people could buy meat that had been used in sacrifices to idols. Some Christians refused to eat it because they felt it involved them in false worship. Other believers knew better but, to avoid offending and confusing their brothers, they also abstained in their presence. Likewise many believers gave up alcohol to avoid weakening brothers who had problems with drunkenness.

Spending Plans

The NAM witness said that industry plans to spend $926 million this year on pollution control research and development. "It is impossible to understand how industry could spend even more if it had money siphoned away by an additional tax on its op-

187,000,000 acres of national forests and grasslands in 1968. In 1928, the estimate was 900,000 animals.

Is Honesty Old-Fashioned?

"Dishonesty is the best policy" may be the motto of the men who have established a fast-growing business operation—providing term papers for college and university students who have more money than ability or integrity.

In the Boston area, where there are several educational institutions of national reputation, there is an obvious market for ghost-written term papers—if the ghosts can stay hidden and the students can pass off the papers as their own.

This has resulted in the formation of several companies which are doing business openly, under such names as Universal Term-papers, International Term-papers, Inc., and Termpapers Unlimited.

The estimated volume of their literary output in the Boston area alone was 10,000 term papers during the past school year, with a total dollar volume of about $250,000, according to Time magazine.

Moral Decline

One father, wanting to make sure that his two children would graduate from college with creditable grades, reportedly contracted to have all of their term papers ghost-written.

The erosion of moral standards, even in some educational institutions, may be seen in the fact that the faculty of Babson College, when confronted with the fact that one of the Babson seniors, Ward Warren, was the owner and operator of Termpapers Unlimited, declined to take action against him. The faculty declared that Warren's business was "very distasteful," but refused to punish him, on the basis that his customers were the guilty ones. Perhaps they believed Warren's explanation that those who bought term papers from him were using them only as research material. Perhaps . . .

Is dishonesty infecting our whole society? Have people really begun to believe that there are no absolutes—that the only measure of right or wrong is what will be accepted by society?

Passed the Test

Before you lose heart entirely with the whole human race, let me mention another incident which occurred recently.

Two black boys in Crystal River, Florida, found a wallet lying on the sidewalk outside a supermarket. Looking inside it, they found that it contained $100. Remember, they had not stolen the wallet. They had found it. And nobody knew that they had found it. A hundred dollars is a large sum of money to two young black boys.

If they had had the kind of integrity manifested by the operators of the term paper racket, what would they have done with the money?

Well, they didn't. They asked their father what to do. He told them to give the wallet to the man who owned it—which wasn't hard to do, because there were credit cards in the wallet, identifying the owner.

So the two black boys—and their father—have passed the test of honesty and integrity, while some college and university students are flunking the most important test in their lives.

There is a Book which says, "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether they be good or bad."

Four national forests in Texas have a total net acreage of 658,023 and cover part of eleven East Texas counties.

World's largest member of the grouse family is the Auer-hahn. It attains a weight of 15 pounds and a wingspan of 5 feet.
