FORTY-EIGHTH YEAR NUMBER 30

SUDAN, LAMB COUNTY, TEXAS

FOR A COUNTRY which is supposed to be dry, it sure does get soggy around here. It used to be so dry in these parts that we all thought "General Rains" was a military man. (This is a variation of an old Red Skelton gag in which he says he supposes his new neighbor is a military man, since he saw his underwear hanging on the line and it said "General Mills" across the seat).

The rains have been welcome, but hopefully, by the time you read this, we will have had a few days of hot, dry weather to follow it up and benefit the cotton crop. If we haven't, some may be looking into the possibility of raising rice next year.

A wet year is fine, but it may be bringing us something we never have had, and something we could continue to do nicely without. We mean chiggers, those pesky little critters which infest East Texas grass and which cause you to scratch like crazy.

A couple of people we know who haven't been out of the area recently were treated last week for chigger bites. The doctor who treated them was surprised to find they got them in their own back yard.

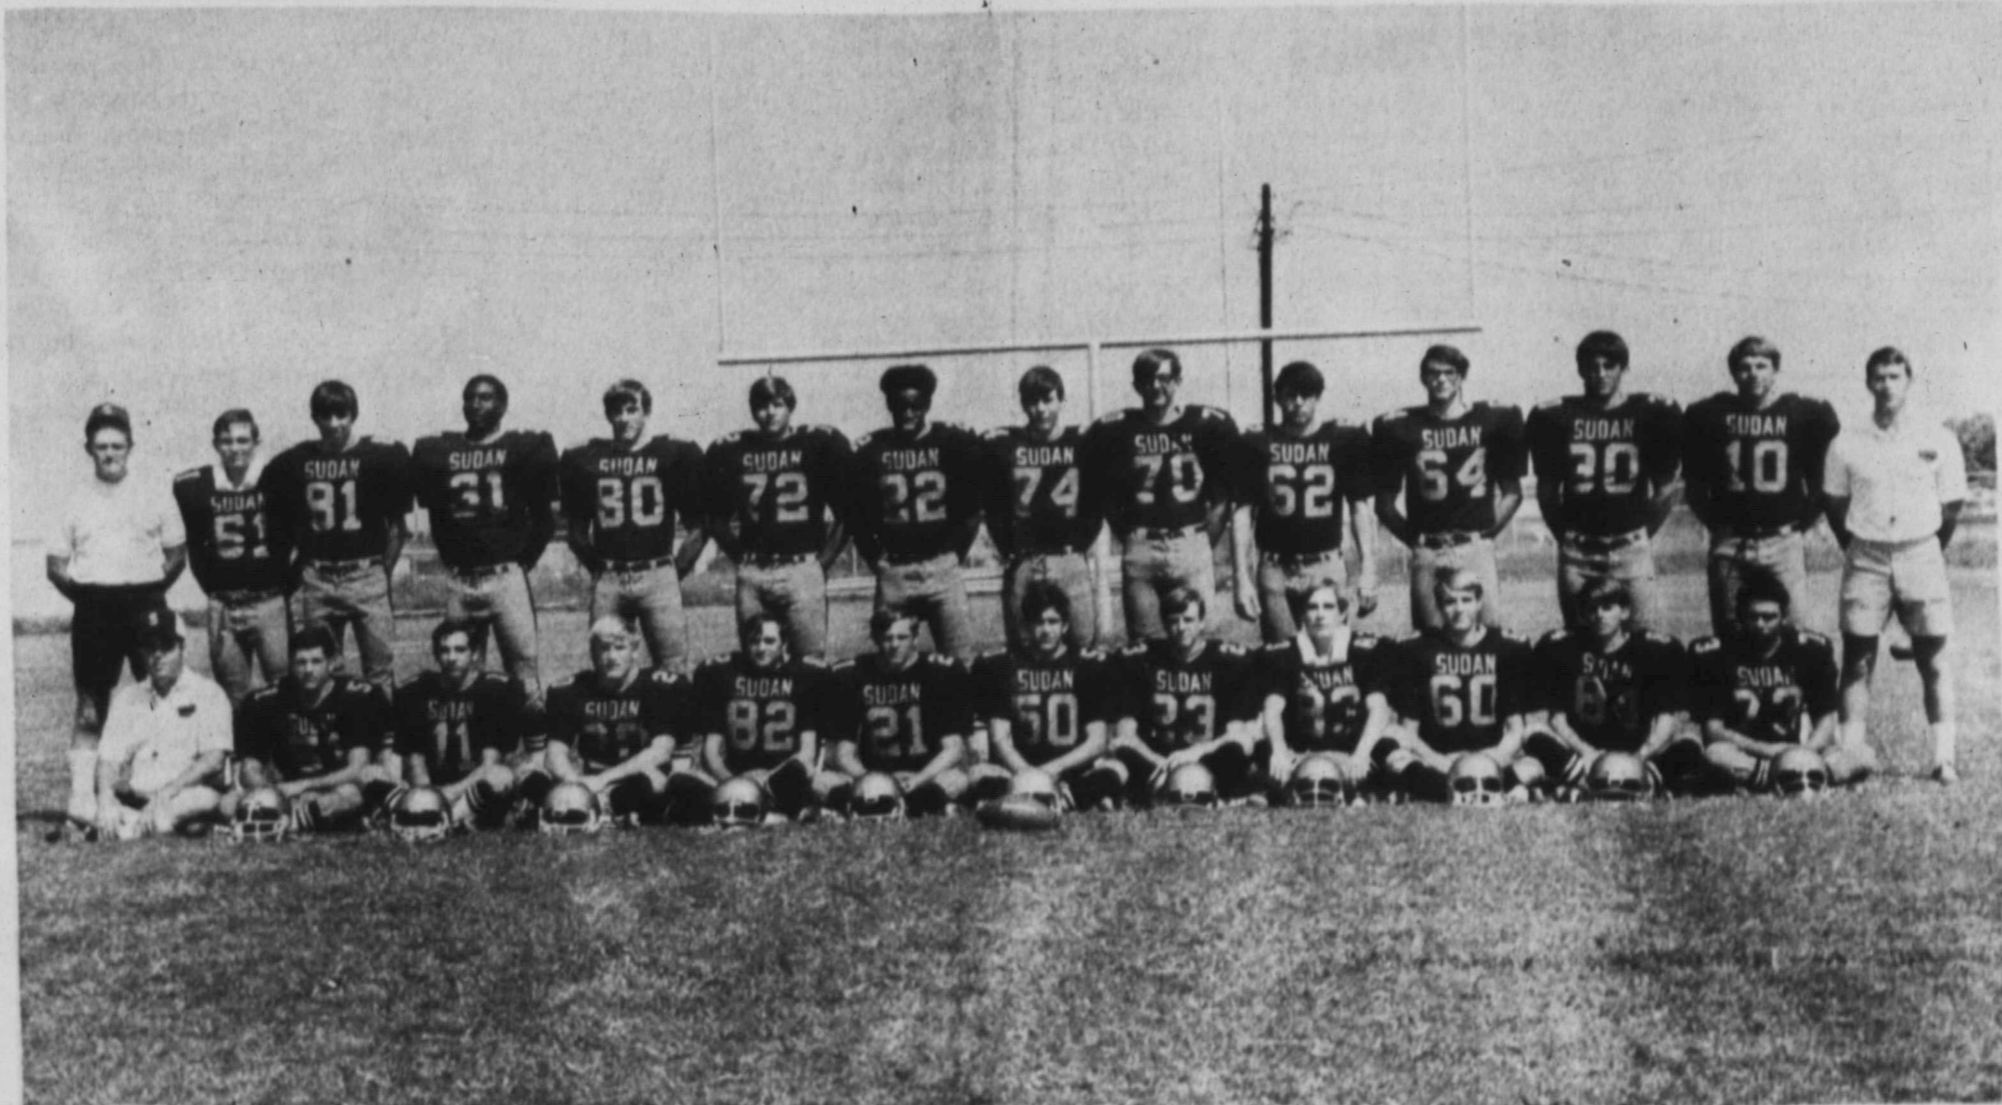

A little checking around turned up some other reports of people getting chigger bites right here in West Texas, including some who picked up a few while camping at Ceta Canyon, way up near Amarillo.

This is rather alarming to those of us who always like to wallow in the grass. Perhaps someone who knows about bugs could tell us, but we always assumed chiggers couldn't live in this region. Now if this should be true, and the reason they're here now can be linked to the excessive rainfall, we're probably safe, and they won't be around in years to come. But if it is a migratory thing, then we need to build a big fence between here and Seymour, or wherever it is needed, to keep all varmints out.

Another thing which we sure don't want from that area is blister bugs. These green, ugly insects crawl down your collar in the summer and you mash them, and then you get an angry sore. And they congregate by thousands wherever there is light. (Evil does not always love darkness).

KNOTHOLE IN THE WOODWORK: A recent poll shows that only 11 per cent of those polled considered Sen. George McGovern a conservative. We don't know who those 11 per cent are, but they really must be wild... Also, U.S. Rep. Wright Patman of Texas says he favors McGovern. Well, they say confession of your sins is good for your soul... If they keep on liberalizing school dress and appearance codes, pretty soon it not only will be permissible to go naked, it will be necessary for some in order to determine their gender (happily, not all students, though)... A wide satin sash marked the empire waistline. Her bouffant veiling fell in tiers from a matching Venice lace capulet of white flowerlets. She carried a cascading bouquet of white rose buds with baby's breath and a lift-out white glamelia corsage atop an ivory prayer book that her mother carried at her wedding.

LEWIS LLEWELLYN

On God's Side

President Richard M. Nixon said, in his acceptance speech at the close of the Republican National Convention in Miami Beach, "During the tragic War Between the States, Abraham Lincoln was asked whether God was on his side."

"It's not whether God is on our side," Lincoln replied (as quoted by Nixon), "but whether we are on God's side." The President added, "May that always be our prayer for America."

Earlier, George McGovern, in his address to the Democratic National Convention in the same convention hall, had said, "Join with me in this campaign . . . and together we will call America home to the founding ideals that nourished us in the beginning."

So both presidential candidates have indicated essentially the same thing — that we need to get back to the ideals of our founding fathers and to make sure that we are on God's side.

Sixteen days after Election Day, when the nation's voters will decide whether to entrust the welfare of the country for the next four years to George McGovern or to Richard Nixon, we will celebrate Thanksgiving Day.

In proclaiming our first national Thanksgiving Day, President George Washington said, ". . . it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of Almighty God, to obey His will, to be grateful for His benefits and humbly to implore His protection and favor."

He asked the people of the young nation to "unite in most humbly offering our prayers and supplications to the great Lord and Ruler of nations, and beseech Him to pardon our national and other transgressions, to enable us all, whether in public or private stations, to perform our several and relative duties properly and punctually; . . . to promote the knowledge and practice of true religion and virtue; . . . and generally to grant unto all mankind such a degree of temporal prosperity as He alone knows to be best."

The roots of our national greatness are intertwined with the pages of the Bible, the Book which says, "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."

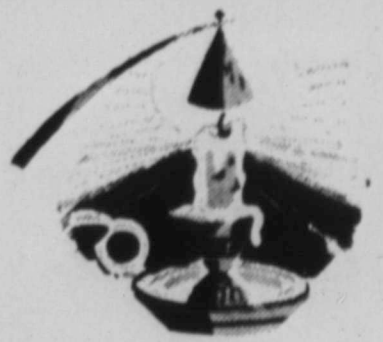

Since our nation is composed of us, its citizens, the best thing that each of us can do, for the welfare of our country and for our own personal welfare, is to make certain that we are, individually, on God's side in every aspect of our lives.

If we are on God's side, then He will be on our side — and we and our nation will be safe.

SALAD FOR LOVERS

"Lettuce alone" has been termed "honeymoon salad." For your second honeymoon, however, you'll probably want to mix it up with your husband, who, you hope, still thinks of you as a cute tomato. Here is a salad recipe about which he won't be as cool as a cucumber.

6 hard-boiled eggs, coarsely chopped.
1 can (1 pound) pork and beans.
1/4 cup chopped green onions, including tops.
Pfeiffer Caesar Dressing (to taste).
Salt (to taste).
3-4 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled.
1/4 cup minced parsley.
Drain beans. Add remaining ingredients and toss lightly. Serve on chilled salad greens. Makes 6 servings.

4-H'ers Find Bugs Not Just Spiders and Flies

SAN JOSE SCALE
ORANGE DOG
MASKED HUNTER

SPECIAL—What does an orange dog, San Jose scale and a masked hunter, have in common? They are insects! Just three of hundreds of species which 4-H members learn about in the national 4-H entomology program.

An orange dog is an insect whose larva feeds on orange trees and gives off a bad odor. San Jose scale disfigures fruits and kills trees. Masked hunters infest houses looking for bugs to eat, but they attack animals and humans with a painful bite and their larva attract dust.

Working in the national 4-H entomology program, sponsored by Hercules Incorporated, some 56,000 4-H members also learn about other strange, sounding insects like wheat stem sawfly, shot-hole borers, plus common beetles, worms and flying insects.

Under supervision of the Cooperative Extension Service, they learn how to look for, identify and control, all varieties of insects. And they use their knowledge to benefit others in their community. Like Sharon Kay Rogers, of Bailey, Miss., a 1971 national winner in the entomology program, who surveyed her town to discover if fire ants existed. The fire ant kills small animals like chickens and puppies and causes painful bites in humans and large animals.

Out of 202 surveys, the 4-H'ers found fire ants at all but one place. Using many methods, she alerted the community to the dangers caused by fire ants and informed state and federal agriculture officials of the danger. The fire ant is now being controlled in her community.

Other young people have used their knowledge in mosquito abatement programs, collecting insects for laboratories and exchanging specimens with teens around the world.

Learning about insects is fun and rewarding 4-H'ers say. They point to the recognition offered by Hercules including four medals of honor to outstanding members in each county, a $50 U.S. savings bond to a state winner and the opportunity to try for one of sixteen expense-paid trips to the National 4-H Congress.

At the national 4-H event in Chicago, Nov. 26-30, scholarships of $700 each will be awarded six national winners.

DAVE LLEWELLYN

A World of Difference

"Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the earth."

So God commanded Adam and Eve, and now — at least 6,000 years later — we have complied. Parts of the earth now are unquestionably full.

Unfortunately, God gave the same command to the fish and the birds. But the multiplication of people and the need to feed them all has taken a toll in birds and fish. Pesticides have taken some; pollution, others.

You'd think God would have thought of that? He did.

To man — but not to the birds or the fish — God concluded His instructions with "and subdue it." Elaborating on this, He said, "Rule over the fish of the sea and over the birds of the sky and over every living thing that moves on the earth." All animal life God put into man's care.

And more. King David, in a Bible psalm, adds that God has made man ruler over God's works and has "put all things under his feet."

How has mankind responded to this responsibility? "Subdue" may mean to conquer and destroy, so it may be cruelly said that some men have heeded God's orders with a vengeance.

But God did not create man for destructive purposes. Indeed, the world was not created only to support men, but also to honor God, as a display of His creative power. His creation was so awesome that David wondered:

"When I consider Your heavens, the works of Your fingers,

Sunday School Lesson for September 10, 1972

The moon and the stars which You have appointed.

What is man, that You take thought of him?"

The answer is that man is very special, unique in God's creation. When God called into existence the elements, and plants, and lower animals, He said, "Let there be . . ."

When He created man He said, "Let Us make . . ."

Man had to be specially designed. He (that is, he and she) was structured to be like God — "A little lower than God," David's song goes. "In Our image and according to Our likeness," God said in Genesis.

Among the God-like characteristics that man was given was the right to rule. As God rules over angels and men, time and the universe, man rules over lower animals and plants, and physical matter. Note that it is not by divine decree that men rule other men. "God rules in the affairs of men," Daniel instructs, and "all human authority in government is either God-given or usurped."

So God especially prepared man for his responsibility to subdue the earth. But by "subdue" God evidently meant to reduce conflict and to calm, to eliminate counteractive forces, to co-ordinate. Man's rule was not to be by force, but by right. Authority was not to be grasped, but accepted.

God put into man's hands His magnificent testimony to His existence, power, and concern for mankind. He put into our hands His word.

What have we done to it?

MRS. DAVID FRANKLIN DRISKILL

Black-Driskill Vows Solemnized At Bula

Miss Helen Louise Black and David Franklin Driskill of Plainview repeated marriage vows Saturday, August 19, in the First Baptist Church at Bula, Texas. Rev. Jerry Haley of Edmonson officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Black. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Forest Driskill of Amarillo.

Altar decorations included an archway entwined with lily-of-the-valley, pink carnations and pink bows, flanked by bouquets of white gladiolas and pink carnations.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white formal gown of bridal satin overlaid with lace. The long lace sleeves were fastened at the wrist with tiny covered buttons and lace loops. Her bouquet of cascading pink sweetheart roses, stephanotis and English ivy with an orchid lift-off corsage was atop a white Bible. She wore her great-grandmother's wedding ring as something old, and the traditional blue garter. Her gown and veil served as something new. The white Bible was borrowed.

Maid of honor was Miss Barbara Black, sister of the bride. Misses Jodi Withrow and Susan Black, cousins of the bride, served as bridesmaids. They wore formal gowns of pink linen styled with Empire waistlines and long full sleeves. The necklines were edged with pink and white daisy trim. They carried three long stem pink roses tied with streamers of pink satin ribbon.

Flower girl was Dora Black, sister of the bride. Her dress was fashioned like that of the other attendants' dresses.

Ringbearer was Donald Black, brother of the bride. The heart shaped pillow was made of satin and lace to match the bride's gown by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. E. W. Black.

Best man was Charles Driskill of Amarillo, brother of the groom. Wayland Hutto and Shu Okumara, both of Plainview, both served as groomsmen and ushers.

Traditional wedding selections were played by Miss Margaret Richardson. She accompanied Mrs. Jackie Rumbough, soloist, as she sang "Twelfth of Never". The bride's mother wore an aqua blue sleeveless dress topped with a matching jacket and a white carnation corsage. The groom's mother wore a pink knit dress with a white carnation corsage.

Registering guests was Mrs. Bill Black of Lubbock, sister-in-law of the bride.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Sherry Black and Diane Black, cousins of the bride, and Mrs. Bill Black presided. A floor length net cloth over pink covered the table which was centered with a single pink candle in a ceramic candleholder encircled by a ring of pink and white flowers.

For travel the bride wore a pale blue jacket and blue and yellow and beige plaid skirt ensemble and the orchid corsage.

The couple are at home in Plainview where they attend Wayland Baptist College as sophomores. He is a 1968 graduate of Caprock High School in Amarillo. Mrs. Driskill graduated in 1971 from Sudan High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest Driskill of Amarillo hosted a rehearsal supper in the fellowship hall of the church at Bula Friday night following the rehearsal for the Driskill-Black wedding party.

Decorating Tips

By Rhonda Racz Home Decor Director Hardwood Institute

YOUNG BUYERS LIVE TWO WAYS

Virginia Frankel, a wry, witty decorator and author, has just written a book, What Your House Tells About You, and she had some unusually frank comments about young buyers today that are interesting.

One thing she notes is that often people of all ages are schizophrenic when it comes to purchasing. A conservationist will have a home filled with plastic pieces. Try disposing of them! A young couple starting out who want a more natural life-style for themselves will have an apartment filled with glass, chrome, and assorted plastics. Why?

Because many young people never stop and think about their own environment; they're often too concerned with environment on a grand scale. Sounds weird? It is. But young buyers are like that, she contends. They also don't always relate their own living habits with what they think because they haven't been exposed to the idea that a person's living environment is a reflection of what they are. This is something they gradually learn, however.

Many cities in the big building booms of the 1960's erected glass and steel office buildings with such disregard for the landscape that now, many once beautiful streets look more like stacks of ice cube trays. Architectural critics and sociologists contend that this increasing sterility has led to a growing feeling of coldness in the cities and a parallel feeling of isolation on the part of city dwellers.

Today, however, there is a popular outcry against it, and people are demanding greater warmth and variety in architecture as they become more aware of themselves and their roles in our society.

The same is true for decorating. The chrome, plastics, glass, and synthetics are headed for a tailspin, as the younger buyers become aware that they are talking one way but living another. A plastic society is what most young people are against and the fact that they haven't always related this to their own personal environment is only a matter of time.

In fact, there is much evidence that the time may be coming a lot faster than some people expect. Note the fashion trends, the interest in antiques, the revival of the motion pictures of the thirties, and the current renaissance of English furniture. All these facts put together suggest that the interest in plastics in home furnishings has peaked and that hardwoods and other natural materials are about to be re-discovered by young buyers.
