TELEPHONE BILLS REFLECT DECREASE

Telephone bills reflecting a one per cent decrease for the second year began this month, according to Jean Ryan, Public Information Manager, San Angelo, for General Telephone Company of the Southwest.

The reduction is the second scheduled step to eliminate the Federal Excise Tax paid by telephone customers and collected by telephone companies on telephone service. The tax was reduced during 1973 from 10 per cent to 9 per cent and will be reduced to 8 per cent during 1974.

The Federal Telephone Excise Tax was first passed as a "temporary" tax during the Korean Conflict in 1953. It was an easy tax to assess, even easier for the government to collect since telephone companies did the collecting for the government free of charge.

Despite continuing efforts to remove the tax, felt by many to be unfair, it has continued since the end of the Korean Conflict.

The tax is levied on both local telephone service and long distance calls.

THE FAMILY LAWYER Schedules In Schoolyards

Eddie, a high school dropout, liked to hang around his old alma mater, getting into various kinds of mischief. One day he was picked up by police on a charge of "loitering on school grounds."

To Eddie, this was foul play. After all, wasn't the schoolyard a public place—free for all? The court found him guilty as charged. As one judge put it: "Public school premises are not free to any and everyone, like a public street or public park. Public school premises are dedicated to the use of persons eligible to attend the schools, their officers, teachers, and employees."

A number of communities, leery of troublemakers, have passed special anti-loitering laws placing schoolyards off limits to those having no legitimate business there. And most courts have upheld the validity of these laws.

On the other hand, courts have also taken a tolerant view of what is "legitimate business." One case involved a 17-year-old boy, arrested after dark on the playground of a junior high school. At a court hearing, he explained that he had been waiting to take his younger sister home from a class party.

The judge decided this came under the heading of legitimate business, and tossed the case out of court.

Furthermore, an anti-loitering law must not exceed constitutional limits. In another case, an ordinance forbade loitering within 250 feet of any school—with no exceptions.

But this law, when challenged in court, was held to be unconstitutional. The court thought it was unfair to punish someone simply for relaxing in the vicinity of a school. Lawmakers had no authority, said the court, "to denounce mere inaction as a crime," adding:

"The majority of mankind spend a goodly part of their waking hours in idling the time away. The ordinance is an unreasonable restraint upon personal liberty."

HOMEMAKING TIPS

by Lynn Bowerman

We hear so much about the ecology and conservation of every thing—land, water, and resources. But for the busy housewife, conservation of time and energy are one of their greatest problems. I recently read that the modern housewife spends as much time doing her daily chores as the "old-time" one which seems shocking in this day of modern appliance and time and work savers. The difference lies in fact that she has to do so much chattering, errands, bookkeeping, and "we're just cleaner" than we used to be. We didn't used to have to clean clothes everyday.

Do you wonder how some people always "have time" for everything? They seem to always have their household in order, and are ready to do some of the things they really want to do.

Part of this lies in the fact that they let some things go—they don't keep a house so neat it hurts. They learn to "pick up" at bedtime, and teach their children at an early age that what goes down, must be picked up.

A few timesavers that I recently read in the "Family Circle" bear repeating. Keep an old spray bottle of water and detergent handy, plus a cellulose sponge, for quick cleanups of spills on the kitchen floor.

Prepare main courses ahead of time and store them in your freezer to take out for dinner on especially busy days.

Place a washable area rug at the entry used by the children and then insist that they wipe their feet there. A "stick" vacuum cleaner, although light in weight, will do all the quick cleaning you need. In fact, it can postpone a solid cleaning for weeks.

When covering your closet shelves with shelf paper, cut two or more sets at the same time. Roll and save the extras; it's easy to change them the next time around. Do the same when lining dresser drawers.

To keep your pictures hanging straight, put a little lump of florist's clay on the back of each picture. Straighten pictures, then push them against the wall so that the clay adheres. There will be no more straightening every time some one walks past them.

Keep ironing at a minimum; remove clothes from dryer just before they're bone-dry. Smooth and hang them up. This is great for most boys' no-press shirts and slacks. Don't let clothes overdry or they'll wrinkle.

Teenagers use a lot of glasses? Install a wall paper-cup dispenser and insist that used cups go into the wastebasket.

Don't clean your oven every week. So it isn't pristinely clean when you look at it—but who else does look at it? Bake carefully, avoid spills and clean every second week with an effective oven cleaner. Lucky are you who own a self-cleaning oven!

Don't misunderstand my suggestions! I do not recommend neglect of your home, but try not to be a slave to it. There are shortcuts and easier ways for doing everything. Time spent with your husband and children will be remembered long after a spotless house.

Scientists can divide one wavelength of light into 200 parts, .000001 of an inch each.

Parsec, 19,180,000,000,000 miles long, are derived from diminutive deviations in the position of 1 second of arc, an angle the equivalent of the width of a dime 2 miles away.

Scientifically accurate instruments for everyday measuring are the rulers, tape measures, yard and metre sticks made by Lufkin.

Some scientific instruments can produce lines as fine as a micron, 5 times thinner than a spider's thread.

The tallest woman in history was Jane Bunford of 18th century England, who grew to 7'7".

Live and Let Live

Become a Christian and live happily ever after.

Nice story, but it's a fantasy tale. No one gets permanent happiness by the touch of a magic wand or by saying some special words. No guarantee for permanent happiness exists. At least, not in any real world. Politicians and revivalists sometimes dangle it in front of us as a promise, but serious-minded people view it for what it is—an exaggerated good intention.

Neither national legislation nor doctrinal confession can perpetuate happiness. Even Jesus Himself has never made anyone irrevocably happy.

Jesus' joy can be lasting, but only under certain conditions.

(That much can be said for Communism or the American dream. Enough jobs, money, security for everyone in theory produces happiness. One difference is that those conditions are external—and another is that they can never exist. Jesus' conditions are internal and possible.)

Living in Jesus The sequence of conditions is this: (1) Letting Jesus' words "abide" in you. (2) "Abiding" in Jesus. (3) Bearing fruit, that is, keeping Jesus' commandments. (4) "Abiding" in Jesus' love.

Sounds difficult and complicated, but it isn't. Most of it is automatic. "He who abides in Me and I in him, he bears much fruit," Jesus said. If part of bearing fruit is, as I think, keeping Jesus' commandments, then the rest of the sequence is also automatic. "If you keep My commandments, you will abide in My love."

The only qualification that depends on us, then, is to "abide" in Jesus. The key idea is "abide," which means more than just exist. It means to live, to dwell. That is, to make your home in Jesus. Not just to live in Him as a guest, but to make your whole way of life in Him. Like a fish out of water, someone abiding in Jesus would suffocate and die if removed from Him.

Abiding in Jesus, though, I think, is also automatic. If we let Jesus' words abide in us, we will naturally and necessarily abide in Him.

So, if you want happiness, find out what Jesus said about life.

When mistreated, remember to "turn the other cheek" and let God take care of the wrong. When you need or want something, remember to "seek first the kingdom of God and all these things will be added to you." In everything remember "I will never leave you nor forsake you" and "I will be with you always, even to the end of the world."

"Live and let live" usually means to let the other person go his way while you go yours. Yet, in a different sense, it is a spiritual principle for permanent happiness and ultimate success. Live in the words of Jesus and let Jesus' life, love, and joy live in you.
