FIRST NATIONAL BANK STOCKHOLDERS MEET

The annual stockholders meeting of the First National Bank of this city, was held in the offices of the bank, Jan. 17th, 1921, and the report of the active officers was received and given hearty approval.

It was decided to place the directorate of this bank at nine members instead of five as was the number for the past year.

The ballot was then taken and the following share-holders were elected directors for the ensuing year: D. J. Broughton, County Judge; H. Longbrake, member the Brownfield Hdw. Co.; E. T. Powell, Real Estate; A. R. Brownfield, Ranchman; Fred Smith, Mar. Ciero Smith Lumber Co.; T. R. Pridaun, Mgr. A. G. McAdams Lumber Co.; Tom May, Mgr. Home Oil Co.; R. M. Kendrick, president of the bank, and W. A. Bell, vice-president and cashier of the bank.

WILEY HAS A 'POSSUM

Needn't mind where we got the information, but we understand that Wiley Bridges has a 'possum over at his house fattening. We also understand that he made an special trip to Stephens county to capture the file tail, and that when fattened sufficiently the said "pos" is going to form the main "chaw" for some such occasion as Wiley Bridges' birthday dinner, or some other event in the history of the family or county—that part not being right clear.

We also gleaned that neighbor Hamilton has joined in and will do his part by furnishing the sweet "fat-ters."

We also got a "hunch" that this editor has a good chance of an invite but if not—then this is a hint—a real broad hint.

D. A. Castleberry, of Happy, Texas was here this week visiting with his cousin, Dr. H. A. Castleberry.

CANDIES of all kinds at Brothers & Brothers, and they are fresh too.

We understand there is talk of building a new school house in the Snodgrass county in West Terry.

FRESH BREAD baked daily at the Dumas Cafe.

Mr. J. Frank Thomas, brother-in-law to Dr. W. N. Lemmon, was here last week, visiting. His home is in Dallas.

ABILENE MILL BUYING 50,000 BUSHELS OF CORN

F. Templin, of Abilene, Texas, representing the big Yarbrough Mill & Elevator of that city, was here last week paying the way to purchasing 50,000 bushels of corn for that great concern, and we understand that he was reasonably successful.

In conversation with Mr. Templin, he said there was all the corn here his elevator and many more like it could use, and that more sound and uniform corn could not be found—but there was one serious objection—the farmer here did not seem to realize that their corn would bring from five to nine cents per per bush if they would keep the white corn separated from the other, and suggested that the Herald was the proper medium to educate the farmers to keeping their grain absolutely pure. This we promised to do.

And to use his own words he stated further, that a man that would try to raise cotton in this county, especially at the prevailing price, was to his notion a fool—no, we believe he said foolish—with such a corn country as this in prospect, and the reasonably sure thing of making a corn crop each year. We assured him if he would come up next fall he could quickly locate all the unmixed corn he was looking for, and would have no occasion of calling our good farmers names. He said he hoped so, as this was undoubtedly the banner corn county of the great State.

FISHER ALSUP FINED $2,000 IN NEFF CASE

Waco, Jan. 12.—The maximum fine of $2,000 was imposed upon Fisher Alsip after he was found guilty by a jury late today of libeling Governor-elect, Pat M. Neff.

Attorneys for Alsip, who was a candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction, filed motion for a new trial.

The article found by the jury to be of libelous nature appeared in the Ferguson Forum and questioned Mr. Neff's age as stated by the Governor-elect.

SEE WILLIAMS & BOWEN for Cotton Seed Meal, Bran, Shorts, Chops, Alfalfa Hay, Peanut Cake and Meal.

J. C. Hankins, of Seagraves shipped five cars of cattle to the Meadow country, Monday.

BOY SCOUTS ORGANIZED

A live wire Boy Scout club has just been organized. Mr. Jim Miller, who has been recently honorably discharged from the U. S. Marines was unanimously chosen Scout Master, and is training the boys in play drills and other Scout practices.

A cross country hike is promised for the near future. Any boy between the age of ten and sixteen, who wishes to become a full fledged Scout, should apply to Mr. Miller at Brothers' Store. There is room for about five more in the club. Only those of good moral character and a desire for all round development need apply.

HOGVILLE LOCALS

Bill Hellwanger got up before daylight yesterday morning and began shooting firecrackers and cutting all sorts of capers, and in order to get him quieted down so that the rest of the town might finish its early morning nap, the Assistant Constable had to go and take Bill in charge, and on investigation it was found that he had just come to himself. Christmas Eve day Bill engaged in drinking of some kind of home brew and when he finally came to himself yesterday morning he thought it was Christmas morning and the proper time for shooting firecrackers and celebrating in general. When told it was near the middle of January he would not believe it until the Assistant Constable took him to the postoffice, and showed him the calendar. Bill says he will never be able to account for half of the month of January, 1921. Anyway, he wishes everybody in the world a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Gape Allsup hopes there will be a bumper crop of watermelons next year.

The pastor of the Bear Ford Baptist church has been given a three-month's vacation. Six weeks for the pastor and the other six weeks for the congregation.

Sile Sims is trying to invent an accordion in which a vast quantity of air may be stored for playing purposes without being compelled to pump the instrument all the time. He believes that by such an invention he can do a great service to humanity. He is certain that he will be able to prolong the life of the blind man.

The editor of the Pumpkinville Bugle has announced that the subscription price of his paper will be raised. This raise will not affect Hogville, as nobody here takes it.

A bunch of Government officers raided Bill Hardnut's moonshine still on Petunia ridge yesterday, but after making an investigation they released him, as they were unable to determine whether he was making whiskey or slop for his hogs.

Gape Allsup, the Wild Rose School Teacher, will deliver a lecture from the front porch of the postoffice tomorrow night on the subject, "Nothing for Nothing." This is a very deep subject and it is expected that several will be on hand to hear him.

ADVERTISING IN THE COUNTRY WEEKLY

(Newark N. Y. Union-Gazette)
Advertising in the country weekly is the most valuable advertising in the world. Expert advertisers say it is not only the most valuable but the most scientific advertising in the world. Advertising in the magazines has to be general, for the reason that the average magazine that you receive today was set in type several weeks ago, and the advertising copy was probably prepared several weeks before that. This means that advertisers in the magazines have to anticipate conditions several weeks in advance of the time the copy was prepared.

This is not so with advertising in the country weekly, for the country weekly has the advantage over the magazine in that the weekly circulates in a comparatively small territory and the name of the merchant or the business man who is selling the goods can be placed in the advertisement. This is impossible in the magazine advertising, which covers sometimes the whole nation.

The weekly newspapers also is considered the best advertising medium in the world by expert advertisers for the reason that it has a more intimate association with the family than the magazine or daily newspaper.

No local merchant can afford not to advertise in weekly newspapers of the better class. It is a sad commentary upon small town business men that they don't see the advantage to them of carrying an advertisement in the small town paper every single week. Such an advertisement is the cheapest salesman that the merchant can employ. The money spent in advertising in the better class of weekly newspapers is an investment and not an expense; and it is the best paying investment that the merchant can make; but not one in a thousand publishers of weekly papers is compensated anywhere near what he is worth to the merchants and to the community in which he lives and to whose interest he has dedicated his life.

Every editor of a weekly newspaper is constantly working in behalf of every merchant in his community, whether the merchant patronizes the paper or not; but every merchant of the community, unfortunately, does not have the business common sense and the business foresight to see that it is to his own personal advantage to help support the country editor by advertising—telling the people in the newspaper what he has, how it can be used and what it costs.

IF SO, WHY?
A South Carolina publisher asks his male readers the following pertinent questions. The Rotan Advance adds that all his readers who care to send in answers to the questions will be given a week's subscription providing the answers are accompanied by a big sack of sare ribs.
Do you married or single? Why? Do you drink near beer? Why? What is your favorite flower? Are you troubled with insomnia? Why? Did you withdraw any money from the bank the past year? If so, where did you get it to put it in? Does your wife play the piano? What effect does this have on your rent? Are you a light eater or heavy? If heavy, state how and why? Has your yearly expenditures for rent increased, since the shortage of houses prevents frequent moving? Are you on friendly terms with your relations? Why? If possible give the names of some one less intelligent than yourself, yet getting more salary. State average monthly grocery bill and payments, if any. State briefly (no profanity allowed) what your wife thinks of being married. Do you drink, and where do you get it? (This information will be treated strictly confidential.) Exclusive of bartenders, how many people depend on you for support? Do you keep chickens? Does the wife know about it? Does your wife take in washing to help support the family? If so, state results and name of the hospital. Mrs. G. M. Wheeler left recently for Miles, Texas, in answer to a wire stating that one of her brother's children was seriously sick. Elder W. A. Barnhill, of Odum, Texas, was here the past week looking for a location, as he has spent most of his life in West Texas and does not like South Texas very well, though he contemplates retaining his farm down there yet. He preached for the Church of Christ at Gomez Sunday morning and here at the same church Sunday night to a large and attentive audience. The two churches are in hopes that he may locate in the county.

CHURCH SCHOOL OF MISSIONS

Beginning Wed. night Jan. 19th, at 6 o'clock, a school of missions will be held at the Presbyterian church, and meet each Wed. night. There will be three classes, for the adults, for young and juniors. Vital Mission Topics will be studied in the six weeks' course. Sandwiches and coffee will be served at the Church at 6 o'clock, after which the lessons will be held. Come bring your friend and enjoy these good, social hours and a helpful cause.

The church is progressing in all departments. Most of the members were present at the communion.

Services last Sunday and the Sunday school had the largest attendance in several months. The Sunday night services are also increasing in attendance and interest at the Presbyterian church. You will find a comfortable seat, good music, spiritual uplift and a warm, friendly greeting.

SYNOPSIS

PROLOGUE.

In the little town of Gitchespolis small Dan Felling dreams boyish dreams. Insured with melancholy over his supposed physical weakness. There, years later, he meets a destiny.

BOOK I—REPATRIATION.

CHAPTER I—Warned by his physician that he has not more than six months to live, Felling sits despondently on a bench, wondering where he should spend those six months. A friendly squirrel practically decides the matter for him.
His blood is pioneer blood, and he decides to end his days in the forests of Oregon.
Memories of his grandfather and a great love for all things of the wild help him in reaching a decision.

CHAPTER II—In a large southern Oregon city he meets people who had known and loved his grandfather, a famous frontiersman. He makes his home with Lennox, a typical westerner. The only other members of the household are Len-nox's son, "Bill," and daughter, "Snowbird." Their abode is many miles from "civilization," in the Umpqua divide, and there Felling plans to live out the short span of life which he has been told he has.
His extreme weakness in the face of even a slight exertion convinces him that the doctor had made a correct diagnosis of his case.

CHAPTER III—From the first Felling's health shows a marked improvement, and in the companionship of Lennox and his son and daughter he leads a happy life as if he had been born to it. By quick thinking and a remarkable display of "nerve" he saves Lennox's life and his own when they are attacked by a mad cougar. Lennox declares he is in a retribution of his grandfather, Dan Felling I, whose name as a woodsman is a household word.

Dan and Lennox started together up the long slope of the ridge. Dan climbed ahead, Lennox went with him solely as a guide. The deer season had just opened, and it might be that Dan would want to procure one of these creatures.

"But I'm not sure I want to hunt deer," Dan told him. "You speak of them as being so beautiful."

"They are beautiful and your grandfather would never hunt them, either, except for meat. But maybe you'll change your mind when you see a buck. Besides, we might run into a lynx or a panther. But not very likely, without deer."

They trudged up, over the carpet of pine needles. They fought their way through a thicket of backbrush. Once they saw the gray squirrels in the tree tops. And before Lennox had as much as supposed they were over the hump of the gorge, a young doe sprang up from its bed in the thickets.

For an instant she stood motionless, presenting a perfect target. It was evident that she had heard the sound of the approaching hunters, but had not as yet located or identified them.
With her near-sighted eyes, Lennox struggled to find Dan standing very still, peering along the barrel of his rifle. But he didn't shoot. The deer, seeing Lennox more, leaped into her service pass—that astounding run that is one of the fastest come in the wild-animal world. In the wink of an eye she was out of sight.

"Why didn't you shoot?" Lennox demanded.

"Shoot? It was a doe, wasn't it?"
"Good Lord, of course it was a doe! But there are no game laws that I back this far. Besides—you aimed at it."

"I aimed just to see if I could catch it through my sights. And I could. My glasses sort of made it blur—but I think—perhaps—that I could have shot it. But I'm not going to kill deer.
There must be some reason for the game laws, or they wouldn't exist."

"You're a funny one. Come three thousand miles to hunt and then pass up the first deer you see. You could shoot that deer for your grandfather, to have done that. He thought killing deer needlessly was almost as bad as killing a man. They are beautiful things, aren't they?"

Dan answered him with startling emphasis. But the look that he wore said more than his words.
They trudged on, and Lennox grew thoughtful. He was recalling the picture that he had seen when he had whirled to look at Dan, immediately after the deer had leaped from its bed. It puzzled him a little. He had traced to find the younger man in a perfect posture to shoot, his feet placed in exactly the position that years of experience had taught Lennox was correct; and without, absolutely motionless. What many hunters take years to learn, Dan had seemed to know by instinct. Could it be, after all, that this slender workman, even now bowed down with a terrible malady, had inherited the true front-iersman's instincts of his ancestors?

The result of this thought was at least to bring in the near vicinity of a certain conclusion. That conclusion was that at least a few of the characteristics of his grandfather had been passed down to Dan. It meant that possibly, if time remained, he would not turn out such a weakling, after all. Of course his courage, his nerve, had yet to be tested; but the fact remained that long generations of frontiersmen ancestors had left this instinct upon him. The wild was calling to him, wakening instincts long smothered in cities, but sure and true as ever. It was the beginning of regeneration. Voices of the long past were speaking to him, and the Fellings once more had begun to run true to form. Inherited tendencies were a moment changing this weak diseased youth into a frontiersman and wilderness inhabitant such as his ancestors had been before him.

They were slipping along over the pine needles, their eyes intent on the trail ahead. And then Lennox saw a certain thing. He looked Dan steady-ly step in the trail and turn his eyes toward a heavy thicket that lay perhaps one hundred yards to their right. For an instant he looked almost like a wild creature himself. His head was lowered, as if he were intending. His muscles were set and ready.

Lennox had prided himself that he had retained all the powers of his ancestors, and that few men in the counties had better eyes than he. Yet

YOUR FIRST AIM IN BUSINESS

It was then that at first he only knew the almost of the stir and pulse of his own blood. He assumed then that Dan was watching something that from his position, twenty feet behind, he could not see. He tried to probe the thicket with his eyes.
Then Dan whispered. Ever so soft a sound, but yet distinct in the silence.

They stood straining for a long moment without speech.

"That was the 'sounding' thing!" Lennox went on. "Of course it might have been a bear—you never know what they're going to do. It might have got sight of us and turned off.
But I can't believe that it was just a doe."

But then his words dropped abruptly off in his throat. The gliding advance commenced again. And the next instant a gray form revealed itself at the edge of the thicket.

It was Graycoat the cougar, half blind with his madness, and desperate to his eyes.

There was no more deadly thing in all the hills than he. Even the bite of a rattlesnake would have been welcomed beside his. He stood a long instant, and all his instincts and reflexes that would have ordinarily made him flee in abject terror were thwarted and twisted by the fever of his madness. He started a moment at the two figures, and his red eyes could not interpret them. They were simply foes, for it was true that when this racking agony was upon him, even lifeless trees seemed foes sometimes.
He seemed eerie and unreal as he gazed at them out of his burning eyes; and the white foam gathered at his fangs. And then, wholly without warning, he charged down at them.

He came with unbelievable speed.
The elder Lennox cried once in warning and cursed himself for venturing forth on the ridge without a gun.
He was fully twenty feet distant from Dan; yet he saw in an instant his only course. This was no time to trust their lives to the marksmanship of an amateur. He sprang toward Dan, intending to wrench the weapon from his hand.

But he didn't achieve his purpose.
At the first step his foot caught in a projecting root, and he was shot to his face on the trail. But a long life in the wilderness had developed Len-nox's reflexes to an abnormal degree; many crises had taught him muscle and nerve control; and only for a fraction of an instant, a period of time that few instruments are free enough to measure, did he lie supinely upon the ground. He rolled on, into a position of defense. But he knew now he could not reach the younger man before the mad creature would be upon them. The matter was out of his hands. Everything depended on the aim and self-control of the tender-foot.

He looked up, and the whole wretch picture was thrown upon the retina of his eyes. The cougar was still racing straight toward Dan, a gray demon that in his madness was more terrible than any charging bear or elk. For there is an element of horror about the insane, whether beast or man.

They waited. The sound ended.

C. Ingram, of Amarillo, auditor for the Magnolia Petroleum Co., was in Brownfield this week checking over the business preparatory to turning the management of it over to Chester Gore.

We stated in these columns last week that Robt. Welch was working for the A. G. McAdams Lumber Co. at Meadow. We should have stated he was manager for the Cicero Smith Lumber Co.

the report roared through the summer air. The gun was of large caliber; and no living creature could stand against the furious, shocking power of the great bullet. The lead went straight home, full through the neck and slanting down through the breast, and the coyote recoiled as if an irresistible hand had smitten him. It is doubtful if there was even a muscular quiver after Graycoat struck the ground, not twenty feet from where Dan stood. And the rifle report echoed back to find only silence.

Lennox got up off the ground and moved over toward the dead coyote. He looked a long time at the gray body. And then he stepped back to where Dan waited on the trail. "I take it all back," he said simply. "You take what back?" "What I thought about you—that the falling line had gone to the dogs. I'll never call you tenderfoot again. But I tell me one thing. I saw the way you looked down the barrel. I could see how firm you held the rifle—the way you kept your head. And that is all like your grandfather. But why, when you had a repeating rifle, did you wait so long to shoot?" "I just had one cartridge in my gun. I didn't think of it until the coyote charged."

Lennox's answer was the last thing in the world to be expected. He opened his straight mouth and uttered a great, boyish yell of joy. His eyes seemed to light. The eyes of the men met, and Lennox shook him by the shoulder. "You're not Dan Felling's grandson—you're Dan Felling himself!" he shouted. "No one but him would have had self-control to wait till the game was almost on top of him—no one but him would have kept his head in a time like this. You're Dan Felling himself, I tell you, come back to earth. Grandson nothing! You're a throwback, and now you've got those glasses off. I can see his eyes looking right out of yours. Step on 'em, Dan. You'll never need 'em again. And give up that idea of dying in four months right now; I'm going to make you live. We'll fight that disease, to a finish—and win!"

And that is the way that Dan Felling came into his heritage in the hand of his own people, and in which a new spirit was born in him to fight—and win—and live.

BOOK TWO

The Debt.

CHAPTER I.

September was at its last days on the Umqua divide—that far wilderness of endless, tree-clad ridges where Dan Felling had gone for his last days. Everywhere the forest people were preparing for the winter that would fall so quickly when these golden September days were done. The Under Plane of the forest—those smaller peoples that live in the dust and have beautiful, tropical forests in the ferns—found themselves digging holes and filling them with stores of food. Of course they had no idea on earth why they were doing it, save that a quiver at the end of their tails told them to do so; but the result was entirely the same. They would have a shelter for the winter.

But the most noticeable change of all, in these days of summer, was a distinct tone of sadness that seemed throughout the forest. Of course the wilderness note is always somewhat sad; but now, as the leaves fell and the grasses died, it seemed particularly pronounced. All the forest voices added to it—the wail of the geese, the sad suttering of fallen leaves, and even the whisper of the north wind. Of course all the tones and voices of the wilderness sound clearest at night—for that is the time that the forest really comes to life—and Dan Felling, sitting in front of Lennox's house, watching the late September moon rise over Bald mountain, could hear them very plainly.

It was true that in the two months he had spent in the mountains he had learned to be very receptive to the voices of the wilderness. Lennox had not been mistaken in thinking him a natural woodsman. He had imagination and insight and sympathy; but most of all he had a heritage of woodlore from his forefathers' ancestors. Two months before he had been a resident of cities. Now the wilderness had claimed him, body and soul.

These had been rare days. At first he had to limit his expeditions to a few miles each day, and even then he would come in at night staggering from weariness. He climbed hills that seemed to tear his diseased lungs to shreds. Lennox wouldn't have been afraid, in a crisis, to trust his marksmanship now. He had the natural cold nerve of a marksman, and one twilight he brought the body of a lynx tumbling through the branches of a pine at a distance of two hundred yards. He got so he could shatter a grouse out of the air in the half of a second or so in which its bronze wings glinted in the shrubbery; and when a man may do this a fair number of times out of ten he is on the straight road toward greatness.

Then there came a day when Dan caught his first steelhead in the North Fork. There is no more beautiful thing in the wilderness world than a steelhead trout in action. He simply seems to dance on the surface of the water, leaping again and again, and racing at an unheard-of speed down to shreds. Lennox wouldn't have been afraid, in a crisis, to trust his marksmanship now. and falling song was its own voice, the articulation of the very heart and soul of the wilderness.

"It's the wolf pack," Lennox told him softly. "The wolves have just joined together for the fall rutting."

"Then this means the end of the summer?" Dan asked.

"In a way, but yet we don't count the summer ended until the rains break. Heavens, I wish they would start! I've never seen the hills so dry, and I'm afraid that either Bert Cranston or some of his friends will decide it's time to make a little money fighting forest fires. Dan, I'm sure fighting forest fires."

"Dan, I'm suspicious of that gang."

"He's got a cabin over toward the marshes, and it has come to me that he's going to start tomorrow, or maybe he's already started today, down into the valley to give his evidence. Of course, that is deeply confidential between you and me. If the gang knew about it, he'd never get through the thickets alive."

But Dan was hardly listening. His attention was caught by the husked, intermittent sounds that are always to be heard, if one listens keenly enough, in the wilderness at night. "I wish the pack would sound again," he said. "I suppose it was hunting."

"Of course. And there is no living thing in these woods that can stand against a wolf pack in its full strength."

"Except man, of course."

"A strong man, with an accurate rifle, of course, and except possibly in the starving times in winter he'd never have to fight them. All the beasts of prey are out tonight. You see, Dan, when the moon shines, the deer feed at night instead of in the twilights and the dawn. And of course the wolves and the cougars hunt the deer. It may be that they are running cattle, or even sheep."

But Dan's imagination was afloat. He wasn't content yet. "They couldn't be hunting man?" he asked.

"No. If it was midwinter and the pack was starving, we'd have to listen better. It always looked to me as if the wild creatures had a law against killing men, just as humans have. They've learned it doesn't pay—something the wolves and bears of Europe and Asia haven't found out. The naturalists say that the reason is rather simple—that the European peasant, his soul scared out of him by the government he lived under, has always fled from wild beasts. They're tilters of the soil, and they cut up the fear of God into the animals and as a result there are quite a number of true stories about tigers and wolves that aren't pleasant to listen to. But our own frontiersmen were not men to stand any nonsense from wolves or cougars. They had guns, and they knew how to use them. And they were preceded by as brave an ancestor as warlike a race as ever lived on the earth—armed with bows and arrows. Any animal that hunted men was immediately killed, and the rest found out it didn't pay.

"Just as human beings have found out the same thing—that it doesn't pay to hunt their fellow men. The laws of life as well as the laws of nations are against it."

But the words sounded weak and dim under the weight of the throbbing darkness; and Dan couldn't get away from the idea that the codes of life by which most men lived were forgotten quickly in the shadows of the pines. Even as he spoke, man was hunting man on the distant ridge where White-perfoot the cougar had howled.

TRAVIS POST DECLARES FOR SUNDAY MOVIES

Austin—Travis Post, American Legion, declared most strongly against closed motion picture theatres Sunday, at one of the most crowded meetings ever held by the post. Monday, January 3, a bill to repeal all Sunday Blue Laws, for forbidding Sunday movies, and games of all kinds, was favored by the post, and a resolution to that effect was passed almost unanimously.

The Post bases its resolution against Sunday restrictions on the fact that such laws tend to threaten personal liberty of the soldiers, sailors and marines who fought for that liberty; and that every man should be allowed to judge whether he will be amused on Sunday or not.

The resolution also calls for the drawing up of a bill to be presented to the 37th legislature, which will convene Jan. 11th, and pleads Travis Post to work for the passage of the same. The bill is to be called "An Act to Repeal all Existing Laws of the State of Texas, in Regard to Moving Pictures, Etc."

The post further pledges itself to bear all expenses of gathering data which will assist in the passage of this bill, and to do all in its power to push it through.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Of Dr. McGuire, Graduate Optometrist Coming to Randal Drug Store, at Brownfield, Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 24-25th.

Remember that Dr. McGuire has made a specialty of refraction for 18 years.

And comes with a list of testimonials from good influential people who has used his glasses for years with best results. He uses the latest improved methods in making examinations, both subjective and objective tests, the latter being the retinoscope or electric shadow test, the same as they use in the large cities. By using these tests, searching scientifically for each and every defect, then having the lens ground to the requirements of each eye, the frame or mounting made and adjusted to fit your face, then you will have perfect vision, and all this you will get by having DR. McGUIRE the prescription optometrist do your optical work.

Don't experiment with unskilled spectacle peddlers or the fake traveling optician who professes to be an eye specialist, charges enormous prices for cheap, inferior glasses, and run the risk of ruining the only pair of eyes you will ever possess. The day of guess work in optics is past, and the world demands the skilled optometrist.

HEADACHE FROM EYE STRAIN Prof. Donders, a high authority, says that eye strain causes more headache than all other causes combined. Many people, especially those studying hard in school, are suffering from headache or a heavy feeling in the brow and don't realize that the cause is a defect or weakness of the eyes. Such cases can be relieved with glasses that will correct the error in the eyes. Our stock comprises the latest styles and shapes in both eye glasses and spectacles, lenses of styles and shapes, Kryptok and Ulex, the invisible bifocal, far and near vision in one. If the children's eyes are weak, have them examined before starting to school. Don't neglect to have your eyes looked after and get the proper glasses you need in time, as the constant strain on your eyes is liable to cause some of the muscles or nerves of your eye to become paralyzed or cease to act then no one can fit you with proper glasses that will give satisfaction. No one can make you new eyes; all that can be done is to repair your old ones. I warrant all my work to give perfect satisfaction, and have made special prices to advertise my optical work here.

Brownfield, 2 days, Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 24-25th, 1920, at the Randal Drug Store.

County Judge's Order for Election

The State of Texas, County of Terry—Whereas, on the 10th day of January, 1921, a petition was filed with the Honorable Commissioners' Court of said County, asking for a election on the question of the extermination of Prairie Dogs as provided under and by virtue of the provisions of Title 108 of the Texas Civil Statutes, 1920, and—

Whereas, on the 10th day of January, 1921, said Commissioners' Court by order duly entered on the minutes of said court, in Vol. 2, page 81 of the Commissioners Court Minutes of said County, ordered the County Judge to give notice of said election at least 30 days from the date of said order, and—

Whereas, said petition bears the requisite number of signatures of free holders of said county as required by law and in every respect in conformity with law.

Now, therefore, I, D. J. Broughton, County Judge of Terry County, do hereby order that an election be held on the 24th day of February, 1921, at every established voting box in said county to determine whether or not a majority of the legally qualified voters of said county desire to exterminate said Prairie Dogs.

The Election shall be held at the regular election boxes in said county by the regularly appointed managers of elections.

No person shall vote at said election unless he or she be a free-holder in the county, and is also a qualified voter under the constitution and laws of the State.

The ballots to be voted in said election shall have written or printed on them "For Extermination of Prairie Dogs" or "Against the Exterm-

MAGNOLIA

Oils, Gas and Lubes are still going at a good rate, because they come from a depend source, and a source that will always stand behind their products. When your tank needs refilling ask your dealer for GENUINE MAGNOLIA products and insist on it.

Off Summer Pastures

As your animals come in off the pastures they'll miss the tonics and laxatives which nature supplied to keep them in condition. It's a big change. You must supply what is lacking in the dry feed—hay, grain and fodder—or they will get "off feed" and out of fix.

Dr. Hess Stock Tonic

Supplies the Tonics—Laxatives—Diuretics
Keeps animals free from worms. It keeps the appetite and digestion good. It keeps the bowels open and regular. It helps to keep up the milk flow. It keeps feeding cattle right up on their appetite. It keeps hogs healthy, thrifty, free from worms. It means health and thrift for all animals.
