NEWS ABOUT TOWN

By Observer.
Dr. Treadaway is about to recover from the La Grippe, but is left debilitated.

There was a big all day singing at Meadow last Sunday, several attending from here, and we understand they organized and will have a class at the County Sing Song at Union on the 5th Sunday in this month.

We understand the election in Pre. No. 1 resulted in defeating the special road tax for that road district by 7 votes, but as several citizens of that precinct have expressed themselves as willing to vote the 15c special tax for road tax providing the county as a whole votes it. Therefore M. V. Brownfield is circulating a paper to get the requisite number of names in the county, (200) for a county wide election in the near future, at which the voters will decide they will vote for a 15c tax for good road purposes.

We understand that Dr. J. R. Lemon has moved to Seagraves. Considerable cattle are being shipped out of the county, but they are mostly foreign cattle that were shipped in last fall for winter pasturage. At least one portion of the county has received good rains recently—the Meadow and Needmore communities, and the farmers are very busy with their crops at this time.

We understand that Dr. Wagener, of Lubbock was in Brownfield one day last week for the purpose of operating on Mr. Cartwright of Seagraves.

We note with interest that each of our banks show an increase in deposits since the last call, which is indeed good for the time of year.

NOTICE: We expect to close the Mattress Factory in about 30 days, therefore if you need a new mattress or your old one renewed, see us at once. Brownfield Mattress Factory.

John Wolfarth, an old resident of Lubbock county, died last week.

For Sale, five dozen White Leghorn hens at $1.00 each; extra good stuff. A. H. Hering, City.

SEMINOLE SCHOOL OUT

The Seminole public school closed Friday night, April 29th, just one month earlier than the usual nine months term, because of the reported shortage of school funds.

The graduating class had twelve members, ten girls and two boys. This is the largest graduating class the Seminole school has ever had, and it is the largest graduating class in the State according to the number of students enrolled in the school—Seminole Sentinel.

The Brownfield, and a number of other schools have had to close short this year, but they are arranging to be able to go the limit next term.

O. T. Halley, president of the State bank of Plainview, had business in these parts this week.

Billie Clark and son-in-law, H. H. Jones, of Lubbock, were here this week. The latter painted a large advertisement for a tire concern on the brick garage.

HERALD MAN IN MEADOW LAST SATURDAY

The Herald man, accompanied by Elder Chas. A. Metcalfe, of Idalou, (for ballast) left Saturday morning on the train for the little city of Meadow, it being actually the first time in about two years that we have been permitted to visit this hustling little city that now stands next to Brownfield in population and business in Terry county.

We found that Meadow and vicinity had just been blessed with a good rain the afternoon before, though a considerable lot of unwelcome hail had also come, they were rejoicing, and the farmers were looking for hands to start planting operations on Monday.

The people of Meadow are typical of the west, frank, big hearted, and believe in doing things, and they were busily engaged that day in voting a special school tax of $1.00 on the $100 valuation, and there seemed to be no fear whatever that it would easily carry. The farmers and business men that we talked to said they did not come to Meadow to get rich, but to enjoy good health, good water and good schools and churches, and they will do all.

Two years ago, Meadow had one store and two or three residences. Now they have a bank, lumber yard, two general stores, one hardware, one drug store and physician, a barber shop with two chairs, blacksmith shop, garage (to be opened this week) a filling station with free air, stock pens, and the Santa Fe has promised them a depot right away, three church organizations with one building, and the other two to build probably this fall if conditions are favorable, and each business is doing well, and report business improving.

COMEZ SCHOOL CLOSES

The 1920-21 term of the Comez High School came to a close last Friday, with appropriate exercises, and after a splendid year of work in all departments.

Dinner was served on the ground Friday, and the day was devoted to sports of all kinds, the main event being a ball game between Comez and Brownfield.

At night there was staged a good play by local talent, entitled "The Average Man," that was well rendered, and not only showed that the pupils had talent, but that their instructors have been on the job with good training.

Almost all portions of the county was represented, Brownfield people being especially in evidence, and all enjoyed themselves to the fullest.

Comez has always had a good and efficient school, and always will have for that is one of the main things the people of Comez work and talk for.

A bill has been introduced in Congress to make the government of the United States co-defendants in any damage suits that may result from the publication of "war slacker" lists.

to be published in each county in the near future.
It is rumored that Lamesa is soon to have another newspaper, making two periodicals for the Dawson county capital, whereas the town hardly supports one. The News predicts a starve out for both publications until one or the other decides to "take out" and invariably it is the oldest established paper that wins out in the long run.—Tahoka News.
Two papers have been tried in Lamesa when paper and material were much cheaper than now, and it could not "be did."

The Herald is real proud of the statements of the two Brownfield banks, published in this issue, considering the time of year. While the loans have not materially changed since last statement, both have more cash and more deposits, despite the fact that neighboring county banks show decreases in both the later items. There was on deposit at the two banks on April 28th, the date of the call, published in this issue, a total of $364,694.15, and there is probably enough more in the Bank of Meadow to run the total right around four hundred thousand dollars.

The sale at the Bird & Dean store has been a success from every angle and well worth the money, according to Mr. Retherford, the manager. A big crowd thronged the store all day last Saturday, and the clerks have been busy all this week.

CANDIES of all kinds at Brothers & Brothers, and they are fresh too.

Misses Nancy and Lizzie Dumas, who have been teaching in Hale Co., came in last Saturday.

WHY NOT start farming right this year with pure blood Single Comb White Leghorns; culled eggs; per setting $1.25; $7.00 per 100; fertility guaranteed; sent parcel post prepaid R. M. Moorehead, Meadow, Texas.

Uncle Bart McPherson, who has been spending the winter in Comanche county, returned home last week and reports that the green bugs are bothering the small grain in that part of the State, and that they have no received sufficient rainfall.

Chautauque tickets are now on sale at the Banks and Drug Stores. Get a season ticket for yourself and the family and save money.

Chas. A. Metcalfe, of Idalou is conducting a series of meetings at the Church of Christ at Gomez, this week and is having good crowds and fine attention, it is reported.

Editor W. N. Townley of the Ward County News, Barstow, Texas, was up this week looking after business interests in the Seagraves country, and visiting with his old friends, John Kendrick, of Seagraves, and R. M., of this city.

Don't forget the play to be put on at the school auditorium tonight by the pupils of Union school, and lead but not least keep it in your head that 50 per cent of the proceeds go toward raising the tabernacle indebtedness.

Judge W. R. Spencer, district judge of this the 2nd Judicial District, has refused bail for Sam Cates of Crosby County, pending the review in the higher courts. Cates is alleged to have murdered Judge Burton, prominent lawyer, of Crosbyton, more than a year ago.

FOR Hemstiching, see the Dumas Sisters at the Lewis Brothers Store.

Holgate-Endersen Hardware Co. and the Tudor Sales Company, have each installed up-to-date filling stations lately.

See Little Buck Shot at the High School Auditorium tonight. This is a jamb up good play, well worth the price of admission, and 50 per cent of your money will go on the debt on the tabernacle.

Mrs. J. E. Anderson and children, wife of the local Baptist pastor, left Tuesday for Waco to visit relatives. Her sister will graduate at Baylor College, Temple, this year.

The Baptist church has recently installed opera seats, and propose selling the old pews to the other three churches to be used under the tabernacle. There are 37 of these seats, in good state of repairs, and they propose to sell them for $100 and loss $25 of this, and let the Presbyterian, Methodist and Church of Christ pay $25 each. It seems to us that this is a good proposition, as the material in the seats cannot be bought for this money, not to say anything about the work, and the tabernacle surely ought to be seated.

Another meeting has been listed for the tabernacle, by the Church of Christ, to begin the 1st Sunday in June, or rather Friday night before, and will be conducted by Evangelist J. Kerby Bentley, of West, Texas, and will run over the 2nd Sunday.

Show your civic pride by attending the play at the school house tonight.

BANISH DEMON OF INSOMNIA
Physician Declares "Balmey Sleep" May Be Obtained by Following Advice He Gives.

The other day a medical man, consulted by a patient who feared insomnia, instead of prescribing the expected drug, merely told his patient how to sleep. The threatened insomnia was banished, says London Answers.

One should lie on the right side, not because this affects the heart, but because it relieves pressure on the digestive organs. But the right side is not "a full right." There should be a slight tilt to the left, so that the right shoulder blade, and not just the shoulder, takes the weight.

The proper position is to elevate the feet three inches or so higher than the head and just to "crook" the legs slightly. Head pillows should not be used, or but just a small one. And that should come under the neck. Nature's pillow is the sleeper's own arm, curved.

Bed clothing should be just sufficient for warmth. Overweight or over-tightness—some sheets are tucked in much too tightly—induces restlessness, which may easily develop into insomnia, which is as much a habit as a disease.

Each individual has a nervous system which is his own and unlike any one else's. It is, therefore, advisable, in the case of persistent inability to sleep, to move to the best bedstead. Try an east-west position, instead of a north-south, or vice-versa.

The sleeping result may surprise you.

SYNOPSIS. CHAPTER I

At Sand Creek Siding
As a general proposition, I don't believe much in the things called "hunches." But there are exceptions to all rules, and we certainly uncovered the biggest one of the lot—the boss and I—the night we left Portland and the good old Pacific coast.

It was this way. We had finished the construction work on the Oregon Midland and were on our way to the train, when I had one of those queer little premonitory chills you hear so much about and know just as well as could be that we were never going to pull through to Chicago without getting a job of some sort. The reason just before we came to the railroad station, the boss walked calmly under a ladder standing in front of a new building; and besides that, it was the thirtieth day of the month, a Friday, and raining like the very mischief.

Just to sort of tell us the very, maybe, the fates didn't begin on us that night. They waited until the next day, and then proceeded to shove us in behind a freight-train wreck at Wilegar, Idaho, where we sat for hours. It looked as if that didn't amount to much, because we weren't due anywhere at any particular time. The boss was on his way home for a little visit with his folks in Illinois, and beyond that he was going to meet a bunch of Englishmen in Montreal, and maybe let them make him general manager of one of the Canadian railroads.

So Mr. Norcross was in no special hurry, and neither was I. I had been confidential clerk and shorthand man for the boss on the Midland construction, and he was taking me along partly because he knows a cracking good stenographer when he sees one, but mostly because I was dead anxious to go anywhere he was going.

But, if it hadn't been for that twelve-hour lay-over we would have caught the Saturday night train on the Pioneer Short Line, instead of the train Sunday morning, and there would have been no meeting with Mrs. Sheila and Miss Ann; no telegram from Mr. Chadwick, because it wouldn't have found us; no hold-up at Sand Creek siding; in short, nothing would have happened that did happen.

It was on Sunday that the job began to get ready to land on us. Right soon after breakfast, with the help of a little Pullman berth table and me and my typewriter, Mr. Norcross turned our section into a business office, saying that now we had a good quiet day, we'd clean up the million or so odds and ends of correspondence he'd been letting go right as we were trudging for the Midland right-of-way through the Oregon mountains.

From where he sat staring to me the boss was facing forward and now and then an absent sort of look came into his eyes while he was talking of his letters, and it puzzled me because it wasn't like him. One of the times after he had given me a full gist of letters and had gone off to smoke while I typed a few thousand lines from my notes to catch up, I made a discovery. There were two people in Section Five just ahead of us, a young woman and a girl of maybe fifteen or so, and the Pullman was the old-fashioned kind, with low seat-backs. I put it up that in those absent-minded intervals Mr. Norcross had been studying the back of the young woman's neck. I was measurably sure it wasn't the little girl's.

Along in the forenoon I made an exposed to go and get a drink of water out to the forward stoker, and on the way back I took a good square look at our neighbors in Number Five. The young woman was pretty enough to start a stopped clock—only "pretty" isn't just the word, either; there wasn't any word when you come right down to it. And the little girl was simply a peach—a nice, downy, rosy peach; chunky, round-faced, sunny-haired, jolly; with a neat little turned-up nose and big sort of boyish laughing eyes that fairly dared the world.

At the second all the dinner Mr. Norcross told me to strap up the machine and put the files away in the grips and we'd go out. He was pretty quiet, breaking out once, in the meal course, to tell me that he'd just had a forwarded telegram from an old friend of his that would see us off for a day or two in Portal City, the head quarters of the Pioneer Short Line. Farther along, pretty well into the ice-cream and black coffee, he came to life again to ask me if I had noticed the young lady and the girl in the Pullman section next to ours.

I told him I had, and then, because I had never known him to bother his head for two minutes in conversation about any woman, he gave me a shock; and here were tickled in Portal City—and to find that our names have asked the train conductor to add to the baggage check for a day or two in Portal City, the head quarters of the Pioneer Short Line.

"It wasn't the young woman who answered the boss. 'I haven't been up all night since I was a little kiddie and our house burned down.'"

"We reached the big water tank, and the boss picked out one of the square footing timbers for a seat. It seemed as if he were finding it a good bit harder to get acquainted with his half of the combination than I was with mine, but after a little the young woman showed out a bit and made him talk—she helped pass away the time, I took it—and the little girl and I sat and listened. When the young woman finally got him started the boss told her all about himself, how he'd been a millwright ever since he left college, and a lot of things that I'd never even dreamed of. It's curious how a pretty woman can make a man turn himself inside out that way, just for her amusement."

"The boss asked her if she were warm enough, saying that if she were not, he and I would scrape up some sawdust or something and make a fire. She replied that she didn't care for a fire, that the night wasn't at all cold—which it wasn't. Then she asked that she was human, clear down to the tips of her pretty fingers."

"You may smoke if you want to," she told the boss. "I shouldn't mind it in the least."

"The boss lighted his cigar. There was more talk, in which he turned out that the young woman and her cousin were to have been met at Portal City by somebody she called 'Cousin Basil,' but there wouldn't be any saw, because she had written ahead to say that possibly they might stop over with some friends in one of the apple towns."

Then Mr. Norcross said he wouldn't miss anything by the drop-out but an appointment he had with an old friend, and he guessed that could wait. I listened, thinking maybe he would mention the name of the friend, and don't you?"

"I can tell better after it's over," I said. "Maybe we'll have to stay here"

"I shouldn't mind," she came back briskly. "I haven't been up all night since I was a little kiddie and our house burned down."

HOGVILLE LOCAL NEWS

A large and enthusiastic rain cloud attended the ice cream supper given by the Widow of the Bear Ford community, Tuesday night. The cream all got wet, also Gape Allsup and Miss Farusia Allsup. The elements have been so unkind to the Widow of late that she would now be almost afraid to plan a second husband.

Spring is now here for certain—Zero Peck having shown signs of developing symptoms of spring fever. This is the best and most reliable barometer Hogville has on this subject.

The preacher of the Bear Ford church in his sermon last Sunday night longed for the old-fashioned woman dressed in the old-fashioned way. In the course of his remarks he said: "The modern woman's lower limbs are all in view, her chest is bare, her arms are naked and what she does have on is made of a little lace and pickaboo stuff. They seem very careful to keep their ears hid."

Day Smith visited Pumpkinville one day last week. Automobiles are beginning to get pretty thick there and Dag says it seems to him that drivers of some instead of trying to be careful and not hurt anyone with them, they try to hit a fellow.

Kumor has had it for some time that Gape Allsup was about to marry the widow of the Bear Ford community, but by announcement to friends at the postoffice yesterday Gape set the matter at rest. He said there was nothing to the report; that he thought very well of the widow, but with her five children there was too much "hood" in the transaction. However he does not wish the lady to know his reasons as he thinks she already has trouble enough with her children.

Bill Hellwanger fears prohibition is going to stick this time.

While in Pumpkinville last week Dag Smith attended a dance at a public hall. He says the dancers all appeared to have St. Vitus dance. (Dag does not know about the shimmy.)

The old still house on Putnam Ridge was destroyed by fire last night. No effort was made to save it. The fire fighters devoted all their energies to saving the new moonshine still which is located in the timber near by.

It is generally conceded that Zero Peck's grandchildren and great-grandchildren will have no ancestry to brag about, unless it be on the mother's side of the house.

Since so many people have died from drinking wood alcohol Dag Smith has adopted a plan of testing all the liquor he gets. He keeps a glass of each lot and awaits the results before taking any for himself.

MESDAMES PRIDEAUX AND FARRAR ENTERTAIN
The Maids and Matrons were entertained last meeting by Mesdames Farrar and Prideaux, in the hospitable home of the latter.

After the business meeting, the interesting lesson was conducted by Miss Lois Brownfield. "A Study of Kipling's Short Stories," his style, original plots, his mannerisms, and other features were brought out in the lesson by different members. A short sketch of such stories as "Benevolent Clergy," "His Wedded Wife," and others were given. This proved one of the most interesting studies of the course.

The hostesses served delicious salad course and ices, after which the club adjourned.

Those present were, Mesdames Brownfield, Smith, King, McGowan, Farrar, Bell, Shelton, Alexander, Kendrick, Endersen, Prideaux and Misses Miller and Brownfield.

Mrs. W. H. Dallas entertained the Womens Missionary Society, on Wed. May 11th, complimentary to Mrs. Rose of Pecos, Texas, and Mrs. Cross-waith, of Kansas City. Several interesting contests offered much pleasure. Ferns were presented to the guests of honor. A delicious ice cream course was served by the hostess.

MOTHER

My mother knows all my sorrows and joys.
Does your mother know dear girls and boys?

Who is your best friend on earth? Children ask one another.
Are you able to say with truthfulness "To my mother!"

My best friend on earth is mother. I would not trade her for any other. So when they ask me as they do one another,
Who is your most loved earthly friend?

I can answer with all truthfulness: It is my mother.
May each mother's sad heart be turned to gladness.

On Mother's Day as she sits around the hearth,
By a message saying: "To the sweetest Mother on earth."
And may her heart be filled with pride and joy.

To be remembered by her boy.

PROUD OF THEIR HIGHWAY

Edinburgh Citizens, Not Without Reason, Claim Princes Street Is Superior to Any.

When Edinburgh began to outgrow its streets and run over into the countryside the citizens took the matter in hand and decided to enlarge their city. They started with a drab little street which they built over from the ground up and called it Princes street. From the very first it was laid out by the Scots of Edinburgh determined that Princes street should be the most beautiful street imaginable.

Today Princes street is, to the Scot, the most beautiful street in the world. The stranger from another land struggles to remain true to home attractions and compromises by pronouncing Princes street one of the most beautiful streets in the world. On one side of the Scottish main street are ranged the best hotels, shops and clubs of Edinburgh. On the other are terraces and monuments with a frame of trees and grass.

From this street you can see the towers of Edinburgh castle standing out against the sky. Here are statues of Edinburgh's great and gardens where the Scots can take the air without going to the outskirts of the city. Of the statues, the most beautiful is that of Scotland's favorite writer, Sir Walter Scott. An arch decorated with many spires forms a covering for a marble statue of the novelist. About him in corners of the arch are small statues of his greatest characters.

Princes street is beautiful because the Scots have never swerved from their purpose of making it so. Nothing can be added to Princes street, no structure built without the approval of the city.

WOULD BREAK OLD CUSTOM

Modern Girl Not Satisfied With Second Place, Even When Inscribed on Her Tombstone.

There's a certain old cemetery out in Jersey, where, now and again, when visiting friends the writer straggles about on Sunday. Many a story lingers about a neglected grave or a haughty headstone.

But two very-much-alive young people furnished her diversion one afternoon. They were engaged, that was plain, and they were with her a happy sister, broken by the girl's clear soprano.

"Do you know, George, what I've been noticing in this cemetery?" Apparently George did not.

"Why, on almost every tombstone marking the grave of a man and his wife, his name comes first with hers tucked modestly below. Take this: And she read aloud, "Thomas Springer. Died April 22, 1842. Age eighty-five years. His wife Annie, died June 2, 1838, aged forty-three years. You see even in the old days the wife's name on the tombstone is at the bottom. Isn't it queer?"

George had evidently not bothered much about tombstones. He'd been too busy looking at her. But it didn't really matter much, he thought.

"Oh, but it does," she argued. "It's another attack on a woman's individuality. Now, when I die, much as I care for you, I don't want my name to be a postscript on your tombstone."

Naturally George assured her that it shouldn't be, and they strolled on in tune with the infinite and the weather. It had been a glimpse of the twentieth century girl that would have amazed Annie Springer, at rest beneath the moss-grown granite.

Birthplace of Famous Ships.
Many famous warships were built and launched at Portsmouth, N. H., the first being the 54-gun ship Fanfani, the first of the English navy, launched in 1740. It was followed by the Bell, 1680, and by the America in 1749, all of the British navy. The first vessel of the continental navy launched there was the 22-gun Raleigh in 1775. The second was the immortal Ranger, from whose deck John Paul Jones received the first salute to the Stars and Stripes on February 14, 1778. The frigate Congress, sunk by the Confederate Ironclad Merrimac, and the Kearsarge, which sank the Confederate steamer Alabama off Cherbourg, France, were two other famous Yankee war vessels built at Portsmouth.
