SOME GOOD AND POOR BALL GAME LATELY

The O'Donald boys came over last week and played the locals Friday and Saturday, spending the night on Friday here and were treated to a swim in the Plunge by the local boys. The O'Donald boys are as square and fair as a bank corner, and the locals love to play them, and earlier in the season the two teams were quite evenly matched, but the locals have taken four of the last five games played. The locals took the game Friday 7 to 4 and Saturday by a score of 14 to 0. The O'Donald boys only making the third sack once. Sam Bunch pitched Saturday for Brownfield. The feature of the game was a homer by O. Jones. Earl Hill played center field for the visitors as one of their men was crippled, and probably saved a second homer by Jones. The locals are itching to get hold of the Tahoka bunch now, but so far have failed to get that team to cross the county line. What's the matter Haynes?

DON'T FORGET THE SINGING CONVENTION

The first organized county singing convention will begin operation here tomorrow afternoon (Saturday) and by Sunday morning it is hoped to have the singing well under way. Several great singers from the big cities have indicated the fact that they will be here, and those who love good music are going to miss a rare treat by staying at home. It is estimated that from 1500 to 2000 people will be here, and it behooves each family to turn the big pot to service in order to see that no hungry stomachs are unfed. In the plain old language that everyone can understand, bring well filled baskets. Dinner will be served under the trees at the court park, but the singing will take place under the big tabernacle. Come for all things are now ready. FOR SWEET Milk, Butter and Cream, Phone 90. Goodpasture Dairy City.

WAS YOU SPEAKING OF SWINE—OR HOGS

Isn't it the funniest thing in the world how the human changes his mind. It is so constantly changing that it won't stay put one way till one has a chance to get a correct line on it and make a correct calculation. When we arrived in old Terry more than 12 years ago, there were oodles of people right here that said cotton did not have time to mature here the seasons were so short, but some of the most venturesome tried it anyway, and have been growing from a quarter to a bale each year. "They" said Terry was only fit for stock farming purposes, and "they" did not mean by that the modern methods of dairying, and in connection therewith, the production of hogs and chickens and other by-products, with big graineries and a red barn, and a towering silo in the middle of a scene of registered cattle. No indeed, "They" meant an amalgamated herd of questionable breeds, with the blue sky and three strands of barbed wire for protection, and a little pile of sorghum cane to feed on through the winter if nature smiled on "them" in sufficient measure for the said cane to make of its own free will and accord, accompanied by two ducks, "dominickers" and three "razorbacks" to root-hog-or-die. That was twelve years ago mind you, and people have had a chance to change their minds—oh millions of times in that time. And believing that the world is constantly growing better instead of worse, the change has been for the better. But what we started out to say was that Bert Shepherd, prominent stock farmer, of near Gomez, and we mean the modern kind of "stock-farmer," drove in Thursday with a porker that tipped the beams at 895 pounds. Of course our East Texas readers won't believe this, because they never saw a hog weigh much more than 150 lbs at say five years old, and they cannot conceive of a young hog, comparatively speaking, weighing 895 lbs. Now Bert may have been one of the "they" twelve years ago, for there were lots of "them." We don't know better, but if so, he is greatly changed. Dr. T. F. Miles, of Lorena, Texas, bought this and many more big ones and shipped them to Fort Worth, as that is on his way home. He said he did not want to do anything disparaging toward the hog industry in old Terry, but he did wish they would quit raising such "thumpers" as they were hard to load. By the way, the doctor has several black land farms in McLennan county and a large stock farm in old Terry, and if you will just pen the doctor down to brass tacks, he will acknowledge that his Terry county stock-farm is his asset, and the black land farms his liabilities. But he leaves the impression that if there ever is another chance to turn loose, he is going to drop his liabilities and move to old Terry, and add to his assets. Come alonging to Terry. Dr. J. R. Lemmon was here from Seargraves, Tuesday. BROTHERS & Brothers buys the best canned food put up to protect their customers.

THE BAPTIST REVIVAL

On the night of the Fifth Sunday, July 31st, following the Singing Convention, the annual Baptist meeting will begin. We have hopes of it being one of the greatest revivals that ever visited our town. First, because of the greatness of God; and then because of the help we have secured. Dr. H. W. Vergin is one of the greatest preachers in the west, and that means the best anywhere. He was once a member of the Episcopal church, belonging to the rich aristocracy. His father was one of the rich cotton merchants of New Orleans. Dr. Vergin declined a seat in the New Orleans Cotton Exchange to become a humble preacher of the gospel. He was also one of the directors of the Y. M. C. A. over seas, having gone over with the first troop and came back six months after the armistice was signed. He is therefore rich in war experience. Mr. Hamilton, the Evangelist Singing, is one of the greatest musicians on the South. He declined the position of Dean of the Conservatory of Music in Union University. He is really a great choir director. Mr. Hamilton came from the position of 3. Y. P. U. and Sunday School Secretary of the State of Louisiana. He has a fine sense of humor; a heart full of love of God and a great spirit. We heartily invite all the Christians of the town and county to join in making the meeting a great one, turning revival so that the community at large may have a great religious awakening. J. E. Anderson, Pastor.

LOOKED LIKE REAL BEACH SUNDAY AFTERNOON

A large crowd of local swim fans and their friends, their neighbors and their neighbors' friends, assembled at the Big Plunge Sunday afternoon and cheered them on. The editor saw some there who had previously condemned swimming pools, and they seemed to enjoy the sport as well as other humans. Again we say, it is all how you was raised, and how the pool is conducted. You know a few years ago every horse was afraid of a car, and the actual thought it would "butt" the life out of him, but he soon learned that he car would not do that, and even he sucking colt soon became used to the "blame" things all over the farm, and now the poor horse hasn't a thing to shy at except their old time worn scare-crow; the piece of paper by the road side. But of course if anyone opposes people taking baths, that's strictly their business. But, John Dumas has spent a good lot of money here for the benefit of the health and the amusement of our people, and if he had been possessed of a million instead of a few hundred dollars, it would have been invested right here in Brownfield. John Dumas is made that way. He hasn't a penny for a dry oil well away somewhere and gone. Misses Nancy and Lizzie Dumas are leaving this week for a visit with relatives in San Angelo.

BROWNFIELD PUPILS MAKE FINE GRADES

The following records of the pupils of the Brownfield High School, show that the school is among the best in the State. The pupils took the college entrance examinations in May; their papers were sent to the State Department of Education and were graded by college men from all over Texas, and their grades actually prove that their record equal the best if not the best, of any high school in the State: Clyde Bond; tenth grade completed; supposed to obtain 11 1/2 units; 12 units actually received. J. D. Fancett; tenth grade completed; supposed to obtain 11 1/2 units; 12 units received. Alfred Stone; tenth grade completed; supposed to obtain 11 1/2 units; 12 units actually received. Bena Newlin; tenth grade completed except Civics and Arithmetic, supposed to obtain 10 units; 10 1/2 units received. Alfred Daniels; tenth grade completed; supposed to obtain 11 1/2 units; 13 1/2 units received. We challenge the State on this record. Theresa Lemmon; ninth grade completed; supposed to obtain 8 units; 8 units received. Mildred Burgess, eleventh grade completed; supposed to obtain 15 units; 12 units received plus 1 unit on general science, granted by Registrar of C. I. A. Lester Treadaway, eleventh grade completed; supposed to obtain 15 units; 12 1/2 units received.

DISTRICT SINGING CONVENTION ORGANIZED AT TAHOKA

A meeting was held in Tahoka on Sunday, July 10th, for the purpose of organizing a District Singing Convention, embracing the 22nd Judicial District. Delegates were present from Lubbock, and Garza counties. Dawson, Crosby and Terry counties failed to send delegations. The meeting was opened with a prayer by H. M. Bray. After several songs had been sung, the convention entered into a business session for the purpose of electing officers and the adoption of a constitution and by-laws. Officers elected were: S. B. Hatchett, Tahoka, president; R. L. Wilson, Lubbock, Vice-President and W. B. Bishop, Wilson, Secretary. The by-laws were read by Mr. Wilson and were unanimously adopted. The regular meeting time of the convention will be the third Saturday and Sunday in May each year. Another meeting will be held in Lubbock the 2nd Sunday in September at which time a place will be elected for 1922. Through the courtesy of E. L. Howard, proprietor of the Star Theatre, the meeting was held in this building Sunday, and with the electric fans in operation, provided a comfortable place for those in attendance. The visiting delegates were entertained by Tahoka people.—Tahoka News.

ELWOOD IS POST OFFICE AT HOCKLEY COUNTY SEAT

J. R. Evan, who is County Judge of Hockley county, was in this city last Thursday, and stated that the postal authorities had decided upon a name for the postoffice at the county seat, and that it would be known as Elwood. It will be remembered that the new county seat was first named Hockley City, but owing to the existence of another postoffice in the State very similar to that, the postal authorities would not accept that name for the postoffice, and so a number of other names were submitted, and they have recently been notified by the postal department that the name of the new county seat will hereafter be known by that name—Lubbock Avalanche. Ross Rentfro shipped 3 cars of very nice cattle, Monday. Little Ray Hockley Jr. recently had his tonsils removed at the local sanitarium. A car of hoes each were shipped from here and Seargraves, Saturday. Among those who have recently renewed for the best paper published in Terry county, were, J. S. Corning, City, Joe Beall, Meadow, and Rev. J. B. Vinson, of Quanah, Texas. John Randall, local druggist, left Saturday for Lubbock, to visit his daughter, Mrs. P. Spencer and family.

IDLE WIVES CLUB

Mrs. W. H. Lemmon delightfully entertained the Idle Wives at her home, Friday July 15th. Three tables of forty-two were arranged and after several rounds, the high score favor, a dainty work bag was won by Miss Emily Miller. Mrs. Prideaux drew the consolation favor. Mrs. Lemmon had as guests, Misses Hickerman and Miller. The serving of a delicious ice course followed the games, the hostess being assisted by her niece, Miss Dorothy Thomas, of Dallas. Mesdames May and Prideaux will entertain the Club and their husbands at the home of Mrs. May, on Friday evening, July 29th.

The governor has let it be known that considerable graft is being practiced in some of the State Departments and the legislature has asked him to specify. It looks like a mess is going to be stirred up at Austin that will stir clear up to the Panhandle with the first gulf breeze.

Gov. Parr's message to the legislature had for its center piece, heart and soul, ground sill and all a theme of rigid economy. That was the program he ran on, and the platform the people elected him on. Jones does not want his taxes increased at this time but at no time in the immediate future.

Quite a number of counties including neighbor Lubbock, are creating county parks. The Herald realizes that this is not the right time for old Terry to jump in on a big batch of expense, but it is sure the early to begin to look out and price sites for a county park, as the longer we wait the costlier the site.

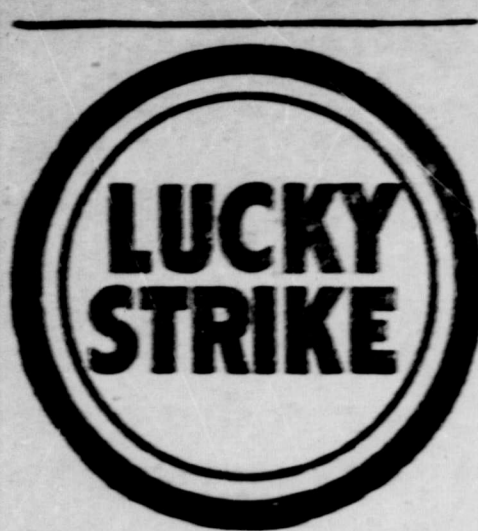

The Lubbock Avalanche covered the three days convention of the State Farmers Union in good style last week, with a daily each day. It gave a full and reliable report of the daily proceedings of the convention. The Herald is also glad that representative farmers from all over the State were permitted to see the great South Plains, the great of Texas.

The Texas Senate has voted to display Jim Ferguson's mug in the hall of fame, Austin. Some more dry rot and a waste of the people's money. Texas, or no other State for that has produced half a dozen governors whose likeness should decorate the wall of the capitol, but it has become a habit with the legislature less the fine of successors be broken, and we suppose a governor's picture would disgrace the walls even though he had robbed a blind man. However, we don't have to look at 'em, only help pay for 'em, and why worry. But don't ever think W. H. Steadman would ever introduce the bill? Well, hardly.

The First National Bank recently had the Herald print a number of blank statements for them, on which the farmers who are their customers are to render statements to them. These statements, when filled in will be not unlike those used by banks in making their statements to the Comptroller of Currency, except that in place of loans, stock and bonds for resources, the farmers will render his livestock, farm implements, tools, feed, crop, etc., and his liabilities will consist of his indebtedness to banks, merchants or for his lands or cattle. The age has arrived when the farmer and stockman is considered just as much a business man as the bank of merchant.

The Station Stationer is now after the scalp of the Taboka News for saying the empire gave the Station team a 4 to 1 victory over Taboka recently, and the Station paper asks him who gave Station the 3 to 2 game the following day, and remarks that neither empire was from Station. The Stationer further challenges the Taboka team any time any place. Now Editor Donald of the Stationer is just waiting breath for nothing, for under no circumstances have we ever noticed before where Taboka has ever lost a game; only the victories heing reported. We know of several Jones lately that were drier than Ed. Editor Higgins is a good sport, but a poor loser. When the home team loses a game it almost sends Hayes to the cemetery and he swallows his "goulash" for a week every time he thinks about it. Poor fellow!

The Herald is seventeen years old and just lacks another year of being her own mistress under the laws of the State of Texas. Still she will be short three years of a voter. On these seventeen years, she has had twelve years under the present management. But we are not going to tell how much machinery and supplies she had then and now like Editor Dow did recently when the Avalanche had its 2nd birthday, because there is always a board of tax examiners and independent school boards setting about this time of year, listening for any uncanny remarks about one's wealth. Nevertheless the Herald has added a little machinery in that time or we wouldn't have had any.

Who ever heard of an editor "busting" a bottle of real whiskey on purpose? But that's what Editor Stricklin of the Terry County Herald did a few days ago. If we mistake not this is a case for the Texas Press Association to deal with next year when meetings are held at Denton, and in view of the fact that he boasts of the incident, we think he should be dealt with severely, and we believe the Association will have the support of the editor's own home banker in the prosecution. His action is certainly a reflection on the newspaper fraternity.—Ward County News.

Like the father of our great country, we cannot tell a lie. We "busted" the bottle, and might have "busted" the contents if given a half show. But no banker's evidence is going in any newspaper's court of inquiry if we can prevent it. They are all ways with the plaintiff.

The Wreckers

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright by Cass, Seay & Co.

The wreckers' things for the Sheriff, a mis-set switch or a bullet in the dark would knock the entire hard-bull reform experiment into a cocked hat.

There was every reason, now, to hope that the experiment was going to be a success, at least, at our end of it. If it could go on just a little farther. Slowly but surely the new policy was winning its way with the public. Traffic was booming, and almost from the first the Interstate Commerce Commission had let its iron, just as the police will be a man alone where there is reason to believe that he has taken a bribe and is trying his best to walk straight.

Also, for the drastic income tax regulations—the laws about health, and safety devices, and grade crossings, and full crews, and the making of reports to this, that, and the other state official; laws which, if enforced, the latter would have left the railroad management with little to do but to pay the bills; for these something better was to be substituted. We had Governor-Burns' assurance for this. He had met the boss in the lobby of the building the day after the election, and I had heard him say: "You have kept your promise, McCormack. For the first time in its history, your railroad has let a state campaign take its course without bullying, bribery, or undelayed corruption. You'll get your reward. We are going to have new laws, and a Railroad Commission with authority to act both ways—for the people when they need it, and for the carriers when they need it. If you can show that the present laws are unjust to your earning powers, you'll get relief and the people of this commonwealth will cheerfully pay the bills."

Fast all this, though, and even past the numerous, painstaking of the disappointed carriers, there was the old sore: the original barrier that no amount of internal reform could break down. There could be no permanent prosperity for the Short Line while its majority stock was controlled by men who cared absolutely nothing for the property as a working factor in the life and activities of the region it served.

That was the way Mrs. Sheila had put it to the boss, one evening alone in the summer when they were sitting on the Kentucky porch, and I had turned in, as usual, with a bunch of telegrams that didn't matter. She had said that the experiment couldn't be a success unless the conditions could be changed in some way; that so long as the railroads were owned or controlled by men of the Mr. Dunton sort and used as agencies in the money-making game, there would never be any real peace between the companies and the people at large.

It was at Bannock Junction that we picked up Mr. Horneack. I was glad when I saw him come in. I had just been thinking that it wasn't healthy for the boss to be getting things like this out of him all the time, and I knew Mr. Horneack would keep him talking about something or other all the rest of the way.

For a little while they talked business. By and by the business talk wound itself up and I heard Mr. Horneack say: "I saw Ripley going in on as to assert that 'Macrae' wasn't Mrs. Sheila's married name at all, and to say that her long stay with her Western cousin was—and still is—really a slight from conditions that were too humiliating to be borne."

"I don't care what was said, or who said it, the boss cut in brusquely. "It's ridiculous to suppose that any woman, and especially a woman like Sheila Macrae, would attempt to pass herself off as a widow when she wasn't one."

"I know," said the traffic manager, temporizing a little. "But on the other hand, I've never heard the major, or any one else, say outright that she was a widow. It seems to be just taken for granted. It stirred me up a bit on Van Beter's account. You don't go anywhere to mix and mingle socially, but it's the talk of the town that 'Upson is in over his head in that quarter'."

I shut my eyes and held my breath. Mr. Horneack hadn't the slightest idea what this was all about, but he was sure that the boss didn't speak grave until the part sentences were slanting under the air, and then he said: "Upson is well able to take care of himself, Horneack, and I don't think we need worry about him," and then over his shoulder to me: "Jimble, it's time to wake up. We're getting in."

As he always did on a serious trip, Mr. Horneack ran to his office to see if there was anything pressing, before he did anything else. May was still at his desk, and in answer to the boss' question he shook his head. "No, nobody that couldn't wait," he said, referring to the day's callers. "Mr. Hands was up with a couple of telegrams I didn't know, but he only wanted to inquire if you would be in the office this evening after dinner. I told him I'd find out when you came, and let him know by phone."

I thought, after all that had happened, Horneack certainly had his nerve to want to come and make a talk with the man his head assassins were trying to murder. But if Mr. McCormack took that view of it, he didn't show it. On the contrary, he said Fred would be all right to telephone Horneack; that he was coming down after dinner and the office would be open, as usual.

I slipped out and went to Mr. Van Beter's office at the other end of the hall. Bobby Kedes was there, holding the office door, and I asked him where I could get Tarbell. Luckily, he was able to tell me that Tarbell was at that moment down in the station restaurant, eating his supper; so down I went and hurried in with my story of the Horneack call, and how it was to be repeated a little later on.

When I looked into the grill-room at the railroad club, I found that Mr. McCormack had been here to it by a few minutes: that he had already ordered his dinner at a table with Major Kedes. I suppose, by good fortune, I ought to have gone off into a corner by myself, but I saw that the boss had tipped a chair at the end of the table where I usually sat, so I just went ahead and took it.

"Come in here, that way, I didn't get the rest of the talk, but I took it that your boss had been right, regarding what you had said about me having the major for a table-mate two days in succession."

"The boss is mine, my dear boy," the postal old Kentonian was telling him as I sat down. "I was by way of picking up a bit of information here this afternoon that I thought ought to be passed on to you without any great delay."

"The boss looked up quickly. "What is it, major?" he inquired. "Are you going to tell me that something new has broken loose?"

"I wish it might be that heightfully definite," I do so, Graham. But I can't let's me tell a bit of news talk. They're selling it good at the Commodore club, that Horneack and John Marshall—you know him—that Sedgwick stock jobber who has an ice cream in the Citizens' Store. Warehouse business—here finally come together."

"In a business way, you mean?"

"The major gave a right and left twist to his big mustaches and straightened one shoulder. "They are most probably calling it business," he said. "I know what has happened, in spite of the fact that the local people know that their economic salvation depends upon a wide and even distribution of their C. S. & W. stock, there has been a good bit of buying and selling and swapping around. I remember you prophesied that in a little while we'd have another crack in the bank, and a day or two ago, I remember that I didn't dispute your prediction. I merely said that our ground leases—the fact that all of the C. S. & W. plants and buildings are on withheld lands—would still give us the whip-hand over any new monopoly that might be formed."

"Yes, sir," I remember you said that, the major allowed.

"Very good, Marshall, and his poster prediction may have required a varying control in C. S. & W., and they may be selling now to patch up an alliance with Horneack. But in that case the new monopoly will still lack the one vital ingredient: the power to fix prices. If there is a new combine, and it tries to make the producers, and merchants pay more than the agreed percentages for storage and handling—"

"I know," the major cut in. "You'll all see up in the railway of you'll watch and put it out of business by terminating the leases. I hope you may, I'm sure I do hope you may. But you'll realize that I didn't advise you on that point, sir. You took Major Ripley's opinion. Maybe the only way to beat with you, but, especially by Graham, I don't like to—touch it right now."

"The boss didn't seem to be much moved by the doubt. He just smiled and said we'd be likely to find out what was in the wind, and that before very long. Then he spoke of Horneack's afternoon call at our office, and mentioned the fact that the Red Tower president would probably try again, later in the evening. "The major let the business matter drop, and he was watching his way patiently through the salad course when he looked up to say: "Was there anything in your trip to Brownsboro to warrant Sheila's little telegraphic danger signal, Graham?"

"Nothing worth mentioning," said the boss, without turning a hair; though it, as I made sure, because he didn't want Mrs. Sheila to be mixed up in the plotting business, even by implication.

The major didn't press the inquiry any farther, and when he spoke again it was of an entirely different matter. "Away along in the beginning, somebody—I think it was John Chadwick—spoke of you as a man with a sort of rascally, slightly-bored, somewhat Graham, what have you done with that temper in those head-bath days?"

"The boss' smile was a good-natured grin. "Temper is not always a matter of temperament, major. Sometimes it is only a means to an end. Much of my experience has been in the concentration camps, where I have had to deal with men in the raw. Just the same, there have been moments within the past six months when I have been deeply tempted to burn the wires with a few choice words of the short and snappy variety and throw up my job."

"Which, as you may see, brings us to the President's Denton," per in the old lawyer bravely. "He is still opposing your policies."

"To a new wage day he was still bounding me to do something that would boost the stock, regardless of what the something should be, or of its effect upon the permanent value of the property."

"I'd understanded you to say that these—uh—suggestions from Denton had stopped," the major inquired.

"Temporarily, at least. I haven't heard anything from New York—not lately."

"Then Denton's nephew hasn't made himself known to you?"

"No, sir," the major said, "I'm not in Mr. Horneack's confidence, which is one of the things I have to be thankful for. But this is news: I didn't know he was out here."

The news-press had his head graying in confirmation of the fact. "He's back, I'm sorry to say, Graham. He has been back quite some little time, vibrant, round with the Grigsbys and the Griggses and a lot not of the new-fish people up at the central."

It was the boss' turn to go silent, and I could guess pretty well what he was thinking. The presence of President Denton's nephew in the West meant more than I could say. But he could imagine the boss was thinking that his own single experience with Collingwood was enough to make him wish that the nephew of Big Money would stay where he belonged—among the high-bullies and spenders of his own set in the effects East.

My own little guess the proper thing to do was to get out of the West as soon as possible. But he could imagine the boss was thinking that his own single experience with Collingwood was enough to make him wish that the nephew of Big Money would stay where he belonged—among the high-bullies and spenders of his own set in the effects East.

As I sat there, the major said to me, "I'll be in the office this evening after dinner. I told him I'd find out when you came, and let him know by phone."

As he always did on a serious trip, Mr. Horneack ran to his office to see if there was anything pressing, before he did anything else. May was still at his desk, and in answer to the boss' question he shook his head. "No, nobody that couldn't wait," he said, referring to the day's callers.

PROTESTANT HOSPITAL RECEIVES VISITORS

Conforming in detail to the plans of the most famous hospitals in the country, the new Protestant hospital at Ballinger street and Pennsylvania avenue, recently completed at a cost of $250,000 is open to the public from 2 to 8 o'clock, Sunday July 8th.

Drs. Harold V. Johnson and A. R. Ponton, owners of the new institution, have filled a community need and the new hospital is destined to rank as one of the best in the State, according to W. M. Massie, president of the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce, who with Secretary Shannon, and other officers of the organization the heads, visited the institution on a tour of inspection Thursday afternoon.

A highly trained staff has been organized under the direction of Drs. Ponton and Johnson, with Miss A. W. Thompsett, a graduate of Columbia university, installed as superintendent. Miss Loraine Sanders, also a graduate of Columbia, has been appointed dietitian. W. D. Vinson is business manager of the institution. Miss Thompson is perhaps one of the best known hospital superintendents in this section of the State, according to the Chamber of Commerce officials. She was superintendent of the Lubbock sanitarium, owned by Dr. Ponton for more than eight years. The new hospital is open to any licensed physician or surgeon, Drs. Denton and Johnson have announced.

One of the important features in connection with the institution is a nurses' training school, of which Miss Mary Farwell is superintendent. At least sixty students may be accommodated. Miss Farwell has announced. A two-story frame residence directly in the rear of the hospital has been remodeled and equipped for the nurses' home.

From the entrance to the elevator at the ambulance driveway to the main operating rooms on the fourth floor, convenience and comfort for patients and attendants alike has been the keynote in the construction of the hospital building.

Every one of the 110 rooms are equipped with telephone and signal service systems. Forty of the rooms have private bath. The rest have connecting bath. All are steam heated and the plumbing is so arranged as to preclude the possibility of one disabled connection or fixture disarranging the heating system in the rest of the building.

Diet kitchens on each floor are situated so that food is sent up by the elevator from the main kitchen in the basement. The nurses' dining room is also situated on the basement floor.

Each floor is connected with the other by means of an incline passage, also by elevator. Spacious verandas facing the south from each of the three upper stories of the building may be used by convalescing patients.

Consultation rooms, laboratories, X-Ray equipment rooms and two modernly equipped operation rooms are situated on the fourth floor.

Following the inspection of the building, Mr. Massie Thursday pronounced it the equal of any institution of the kind he had ever seen, predicting that the people of West Texas and other sections of the state when they once learn of the new hospital and its management here, will patronize that institution in preference to going to Dallas or any other place, where no better accommodations could be secured, he said.—Ft. Worth Record.

HEALTH NOTES

By Dr. Maeton M. Garrick, State Health Officer.

Young girls should be dissuaded from wearing corsets. If you insist on being a knocker, knock to good advantage; knock the fly and open garbage can for the betterment of your own and your neighbors' health.

Take a smile to the sick room. It will have a wonderful effect on the morale of the patient, and will do no particular harm.

The hope of the State lies in its HEALTHY citizens. Health first—low taxes afterwards. Preventable disease is not merely accidental. It is due to criminal carelessness.

It is a bad policy for the State to allow conditions that breed and foster vice, disease, crime, lawlessness. Bad housing does all of this. It is a blight to the State, a disgrace and a reproach.
