THE HIGH SCHOOL PLAY

Without doubt the high school play put off here on Thanksgiving night was the best ever staged by the high school boys and girls of the town. Each of them had their parts perfectly it seemed and were therefore in position to act and not drag. Too many high school plays, as well as other amateur performances are too hastily staged, and the performers drag through their parts in a sing-song fashion not unlike many of our older people used to read. Those Misses Margaret Wright and Emily Miller had prepared for us. There for this play should be complimented for what they succeeded in getting out of the pupils.

The proceeds of the play lacked only a few cents totaling $100.00. The play was staged at Seminoles last Saturday night, where a good sized crowd saw it. Seminoles High School will pay us a return call with their play in the near future.

HOUSE WANTED: 4 or 5 rooms, with garden and water; prefer east part of town; will pay in advance. O. P. Morrison at Curry place.

S. O. S.

Hey, Buddy! Were you out at our last Legion meeting? If you were not, you were just SOL. Everybody had a good time. While waiting for the bunch to gather, we had a couple of spirited "42" games. These were punctuated by that old familiar battle cry "when do we eat," till finally the adjutant was prevailed on to drag forth the refreshments. These consisted of a dishpan and water bucket heaped up with sandwiches, which Misses Margaret Wright and Emily Miller had prepared for us. There was a big bucket of coffee on the stove and each man had a cup and drew his ration of tin cow and sugar. Lots of the boys had eaten before they came, and sat around and looked on wishing for a little space to put some of those good sandwiches. Mr. Ellington then told the boys about the National Convention at Kansas City last month. Discussion followed as to how to increase our membership and our work for the next year. Each man present pledged himself to try to bring in a new member to the next meeting. Laurence Green and Guy Williams joined and said they would try to get a new member.

Our next meeting was set for Thursday, Dec. 15th, and while we may not have any cats, we are planning for a sound show call at most of our future meetings. Better fall in with us; we have no inspections or court martials.

Friday and Saturday night Prof. Moody donated 20 per cent of the net proceeds of his entertainments to the Legion and we got $13.75 out of these.

Don't forget our next meeting. So come and play with us. All Legionaires and ex-service men are invited.

BIBLE PICTURES

The life of St. Paul will be given on the screen next Sunday night at the Presbyterian church.

December ends the study of Paul's life in the Sunday School lessons, so these pictures will clench your mind on the facts. Don't miss it.

MY EXPERIENCE IN THE WORLD WAR

By Homer R. Winston

On Sept. 10th we moved to a small town by the name of Dienlourd, that had been shelled until there was nothing left of it. A miracle to me was a large church that stands with two enormous bombs hanging in it. The bombs were about six feet tall and weighed about 600 pounds and loaded with TNT. The place they came thru the ceiling is about the size of the bomb, but where they hit the floor, it tore a hole about six feet in diameter. There were two isles in the church; one on the right and one on the left. Everybody (French) were at the church that day. These bombs did not explode and there was no one hurt while their homes were blown into mulch. The bombs were dropped from enemy aeroplanes, and tore up buildings within 30 feet of the church but it still stands. It was built in 1804 A. D.

The old house I was billeted in was erected in the year 1330 being 539 years old if still standing. That is one thing you can give the Europeans credit for; building houses of stone and nothing else, so it can pass down the line for generations, while we only study about our own needs and let the coming generation take care of their own. This old house seemed awful fine after living in the barns so long.

On the night of Sept. 12th, about 1 o'clock the Germans began to catch up. I went out to hear in mind with me that the St. Mahiel front was about 40 miles long, and there was about 40,000 men engaged on our side. The barrage was put over about 5 a. m., and it is said that in the four hours, the ammunition alone cost Uncle Sam a little over $100,000 per minute, and I don't doubt it either, for everything was as light as day, but you could not see over one-fourth mile on account of the heavy down-pour of the rains. The Germans did not answer us at all, and on the 12th where we were, and we thought they must surely all be killed, but Oh! the next day—tip-k-blowie, then look around over the world and see what was left. It did not look like there was so many good things to live in this old world for anyway. On the 14th I took another trip to the front and the boys told me how they did it. In this four hours of shelling the Germans took to the dugouts (and I don't blame them either) then the barrage was gradually lifted and the infantry advanced, and lots of times before the Germans could get out of the dugouts, the Americans were over them yelling (rou-mit-em) come out of there, and the Dutch did come out and with their hands up yelling "kam-erade." They would throw a hand grenade into them and kill sometimes as many as 30 or 40. Of course there was some fighting and some of the boys got killed and several wounded, but most of the boys I talked to said about 1000 yards was close to the Germans as they got. When we were about two miles from the front, one old boy ran out and gave us the signal to slow down and give him a ride which we did. I saw his head was all tied up, and asked him what was the matter, and he said the Germans got his right car. He had come back to have it dressed but was going back to give them a—now. They shelled us a good bit this time while we were going down a long hill the other side of Fey-en-haye, and I want to assure you that it was not all play and no work to sail along in a truck with shells hitting on each side, and you don't exactly know what time you are going to bid this old world farewell. A night or two after this I was riding with an old kid by the name of Groves. A shell hit on the right side of the road and took about one foot of the hood off, and I told him to pull her open, and he says: "Sarge I've got her wide open now." There we were making about 30 miles per hour and it really seemed more like four or five. We were not so particular about lights from there on for we knew that the German knew that we were there. There was about 15,000 prisoners taken in this drive and much land. Those Dutch sure had things fixed up nice on the front; concrete dugouts, electric lights, x-ray cellars, but you could tell by the appearance of things that they left in a hurry, for in some places they left the wine glasses half full of wine, and a few clothes hanging on the line. It would not do to tie into anything for a souvenir at first, for in picking up a helmet, one might set off a mine and you had better be prepared for the other world. After the first day or so, you could get all the souvenirs you wanted, but most of the stuff

BROWNFIELD BASKET BALL TEAMS ENTERTAIN

Seminole, Texas, Nov. 29th—

On Thanksgiving day the visiting basket ball teams were most royally entertained by the boys and girls of the first teams in Brownfield, together with the high school teachers.

After the games in which Brownfield boys and girls won the highest score each time, the guests were conducted to the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bell. There they found that a most elaborate banquet had been prepared.

As the guests were seated they were greeted by the image of Brownfield first team girls again, as they were represented on the place cards in a most original way. Indeed it was unanimously agreed that these were the most original and appropriate place cards the guests could recall.

A most delicious three course luncheon followed. Those present were constantly reminded that it was Thanksgiving Day.

Those who so delightfully assisted the hostesses were, Mesdames W. C. Smith, Downing, Dalton Lewis and Misses Lois Brownfield and Emily Miller, Kate Spivey, Wright, Caldwell, and Bowers. The guests were as follows: The Gomez basket ball boys, Seagraves basket ball boys, Seminole basket ball boys and girls, Mr. Roberts, supt. Seagraves schools, Seminole faculty and friends.

On departing everyone seemed unable to express his appreciation of such delightful entertainment.

TOKIO TALKINGS

By Grasshopper

The good weather still prevails and the people are busy shocking feed and gathering corn.

Mrs. A. V. Taylor left the 21st to visit her daughter, Mrs. Viola Carmichael at Flinnava.

J. S. Day went to Brownfield Monday.

The singing at Mr. Pippin's Sunday night was a success. What is more beneficial to the young people than good singing?

C. D. Rutan moved on the W. E. Berry place, south of Tokio, Saturday. Welcome!

And still they come. Mr. McCulloch of Fisher county, moved in Monday to his place, known as the E.W. Maddux farm, that he has owned for the past two years, and the man to occupy the C. Schroeder place came in also. Welcome to all. We have more vacant places left, and we hope they will be occupied soon.

Rev. Ollan, from Plains, preached Sunday evening at the Johnson school house, and took dinner with A. V. Taylor Monday. It seems that he has his work at heart, and wants to do all the work he can do for his fellow man. Let us as a community, regardless of creed, join hands with him and push the good work, and do all the good we can this year. We have been blessed with good crops, and now let's get a spiritual uplift to go with it and give God the praise for his bountiful goodness.

was stored away as salvage, and I don't know what ever came of it. The infantry won the war all right, but the artillery, and we that were helping them some. The military police were right on their heels taking care of the prisoners as they came thru the lines, and directing the traffic, while the medical corps were taking care of the wounded.

On the 15th, the big guns raided our town with the shells hitting within a radius of 1000 yards of us. Then the dugouts looked like home sweet home. Two boys with four horses, were watering them in the creek, each riding and leading a horse when a 3 inch shell hit in front of them and blew off two of the horses' heads, and mangled them up badly, but did not touch the boys. It wounded a M. P. 50 yards away. The boys told me later they left those horses in quite a hurry. With our outfit it wounded one sargeant and 15 men, the shells hitting right in the room where they were sleeping. The shelling at this place lasted three nights straight along and it was hard to keep from getting serious, for we had began to believe that Sherman was right.

WHY ATTEND SUNDAY SCHOOL?

If we can depend upon the judgment of great men of these times, our efforts in the Sunday School room one hour out of 168 is well spent. The following words by the great statistician, Rodger W. Babson, will hardly be questioned by the most worldly business man: "We have gone daily over things like steam, electricity, water power, building of railroads and ships, and have forgotten the human soul, upon which all these things depend and from which all these things originate." Forgetting the human soul is rather a grave accusation to be brought against any individual or community. A man who has reached the age of twentyone has had three years of Sundays with which to study the "Book of books" that his soul might delight in farness (Isiah 55:2). A man who has reached the age of forty and has never used the Sabbath day properly, has approximately six years of misspent Sundays to account of.

God, our father known of old as the Lord of our far-flung battle line, beneath whose hand we hold dominion over palm and pine: Lord God of hosts be with us yet, lest we forget; lest we forget!

No one ever rises higher than his ideal. Ideal is the index finger that has explained all the success of the past, and will explain all that will be made through the unborn years. Unfortunately is the life without ideal. We are indebted to other sources than those qualities we possess ourselves for any degree of success we have made. There is a God given quality possessed by every man that must be used by his own free will if he is brought into the fullness of a perfect man. The Prodigal Son would have died in a far off country by the hog pen had he not said: "I will arise and go," so be like the prodigal son and arise and go to Sunday School.

SEACRAVES NEWS

By Gold Dust Twins.

An interesting program will be rendered by the school pupils in the school auditorium on the evening of the 16th. All patrons and friends are cordially invited and urged to attend.

Dr. Ralph Lemmon made a business trip to Midland the Middle of the week.

Mrs. Carl Slaton, who underwent an operation in Waco a few weeks ago, is now convalescent, and will be able to return to her home soon. Judge Stark of Seminole spent last Thursday here visiting the school. The members of the various churches met at the school house Sunday afternoon and discussed plans for the Christmas tree. It was decided there should be a community affair in the school auditorium on Christmas Eve. Punk Barus and Wade Clifton, of Tatum, N. M., spent the week end in Seagraves.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wicker have returned to Seagraves with their new daughter, Mildred. Mr. Jim Brabham of Idalton, is here this week making plans to move back here in the near future.

Nine new pupils entered school last week. Conditions are becoming more crowded each week, and in all probability an extra teacher will be employed after Christmas.

Mr. George Wilson, of Tullia, Texas was through town, prospecting the latter part of last week.

CANDLES of all kinds at Brothers & Brothers, and they are fresh too.

Another car load of turkeys were shipped from Brownfield Saturday. Old Terry is helping to feed the hungry of the cities.

SYNOPSIS.
CHAPTER I.—Young Carlye Whitburn Dale, of "Bill Dale," as he elects to be known, a young man of some ability, John K. Dale, arrives at the Halfway Road in eastern Tennessee, about a life of idle ease—and incidentally a bride, Patricia Clavering, at the altar-determined to make his own way in life. He meets "Babe" Littleford, typical mountaineer girl, "Big Heck" Clavering, the hills, takes him to John Moreland's home. Moreland is chief of his clan, which are an old feud with the Littlefords. He tells Dale of the killing of his brother, having been killed, years ago, owner of rich coal deposits, by a man named Carlye. Moreland's description of "Carlye" causes Dale to believe the man was his father.

CHAPTER II.—Dale arranges to make his home with the Moreland family, for whom he entertains a deep respect.

CHAPTER III.—Talking with "Babe" Littleford next day, Dale is ordered by "Black Adam" Ball, bully of the district, to leave "his girl" alone. Dale replies spiritedly, and they fight. Dale whips the bully, though badly used up. He arranges with John Moreland to develop Dale's coal deposits. Then Littleford sends a note to Dale, asking him to meet him with his followers next day, in battle. Moreland agrees.

CHAPTER IV.—During the night all the guns belonging to the Littlefords and the Morelands mysteriously disappear.

CHAPTER V.—Dale arranges to go to Cincinnati to secure money for the mining of the coal. The two clans find their weapons, which the women had hidden, and line up for battle. "Babe," in an effort to stop the fighting, crosses to the Moreland side of the river, and is accidentally shot by her father and seriously wounded.

CHAPTER VI.—To get proper surgical aid, John Moreland, Ben Littleford and Dale convey "Babe," unconscious, to the city. Doctors assure them she is not seriously hurt. Dale meets an old friend, Bobby McLaughlin, who has married Patricia Clavering. Telling his father of David Moreland's coal, the old gentleman's action convinces his son of his father's guilt in the killing of Moreland.

CHAPTER VII.—It is arranged that "Babe" is to stay with Mrs. McLaughlin, who is a devoted nurse. Bobby McLaughlin's financial aid to develop the mine, interests Newton Wheatley, capitalist, who agrees to furnish the money. Dale realizes he loves "Babe."

CHAPTER VIII.—Returning to the Halfway Road, Dale meets Major Bradley, lawyer, and real friend of the mountaineers, whom he engages as counsel for the company. A man named Cliff, who is a friend of Dale's, tries to betray the Morelands by selling him the coal rights and telling them they are of little value. Dale attempts to throw him, but Cliff draws a revolver. Dale is unscathed.

CHAPTER IX.—Golf enlists the aid of a turbulent crowd, the Balls and Torrey, to make trouble for Dale's company. The Littlefords and Morelands agree to forget the old feud and dwell in harmony.

CHAPTER X.—"Babe" returns to her home, leaving a burden to the McLaughlins. Dale renounces, and she agrees to go back for the sake of an education. Waylaid by "Black Adam" Ball, Bobby McLaughlin, who has married Patricia Clavering, and Dale is arrested and taken to jail at Cartersville. He does not see how things could have killed Ball.

CHAPTER XI.—There is much speculation as to who really killed Ball, the general opinion being it was Big Heck, who had constituted himself Dale's guardian.

CHAPTER XII.
Jailed.
Cartersville settles close between the points of two outlying foothills and it is a delightfully lazy and old-fashioned town. For the most part it is made up of gabled old brick houses which have pretty settings of green lawn, roses, honeysuckles and trees. Even in the small business district, the streets are lined with trees. They have electric lights there, and water mains, a common school and a high school, a courthouse, a jail and a theater.

It was a little after midnight when Dale and the other two men roared through the shaded streets. Dale noted that the people they met under the swinging lights spoke cordially and with marked courtesy to his companions. It was very evident that the sheriff Tom Flowers and his men were in high standing in their home town.

Sheriff Tom Flowers drew in before a hitching-post that stood in front of the courthouse, a great old wooden building with a clock in its tower. "We'll dismount here," said he.

They did. The major took the reins of his horse. "I'll see that the animal is well cared for, sir," he said to Dale. "And as soon as I have seen to my horses I'll be with you. I wish to talk matters over with you. Suppose I bring supper for us both, eh?"

Dale thanked Bradley, and turned away with the officer. They walked a short block and entered a low, square building of brick and stone of which the windows were small and high and barred with iron. Dale knew that it was the Cartersville jail, and his heart sank in spite of him. Just as death by violence had been entirely new to him, so also was this entirely new to him.

Flowers took a ring of heavy keys from the hand of the jailer, and led the way down a whitewashed corridor. It was not yet bedtime, and the other prisoners were still up; some of them were reading newspapers, others were trying to mend their clothing, still others were doing nothing. A few of them called out boldly and bade the new prisoner welcome—and each of these received a grunt or order from the sheriff to keep quiet. Dale paid no attention whatever to his would-be tormentors.

At an iron door at the end of the corridor, the officer halted and faced about. "If there could be such a thing as a comfortable cell here," he said in a low and kindly tone, "it's this one." He went on earnestly: "Now I want you to believe me when I tell you that it is with real regret that I put you behind a door of iron. But if I didn't do it, somebody else would do it; and it's possible that I can be a little more decent about it than another officer would be."

"I realize all that, y'know," replied Dale, "and I'm very much obliged to you, sheriff."

Flowers unlocked the door, and Bill Dale walked in. Flowers locked the door and went away.

Dale began to inspect his quarters. To all appearances, they were at least clean. There was a narrow bed covered with a pair of gray blankets, a stool and a soapbox, and nothing more. The light in the corridor behind him

BROWNFIELD, TEXAS

"Hardly plausible, major. In that event there was nothing against the man whose bullet finished Ball, because he did it to save me; and he would have owned to it and prevented my arrest. A man who liked me well enough to kill Ball to save my life would like me well enough to confess and save me from suffering for it. I am sure of that, major."

"Ah, my boy," smiled the older of the two, "you don't yet know the mountain heart. Jail is a terrible thing to the liberty-loving mountaineer. But love of you, and love of fair-dealing, will soon overcome the fear of jail, and you will be free—if what I strongly suspect there to be well founded. I'll leave you now, Dale. I'll see you in the morning, sir. Good night!"

When his optimistic attorney had gone, Dale glanced once more at the door to his miserable line from Dante's "Inferno," and began to remove his outer clothing preparatory to going to bed. He did not feel anything like so confident concerning the outcome of his trial as Major Bradley evidently felt. Then he became even more dejected, and he told himself that the major had spoken so reassuringly merely to help him keep up heart.

The night passed, and another bright summer day dawned, and in the Cartersville jail there was one prisoner who had not slept at all. Each of those long and heavy black hours had been an age to this prisoner to whom jail was so new.

At noon a furious windstorm, accompanied by much vivid lightning and blinding rain, sprang out of the west and began to sweep the countryside and out of the lowering wet gloom there came one to deliver Bill Dale. He was a mountaineer, young and stalwart and strong, and about him there was much of that certain English fineness that was so striking in his father.

He entered the low, square building of brick and stone and stopped in the center of the corridor, where he stood, while water ran from his wet clothing and gathered in little pools at his feet, and looked to his right and to his left. Dale saw him, and cried out in surprise: "Caleb!"

Caleb Moreland walked straight, his head up and his shoulders back, a splendid picture of virile young manhood, to the end of the corridor. He gripped two of the door's hated bars, bars that had long been worn smooth by other human hands; he pressed his smoothly shaven, sunburned face against the iron, and smiled.

"How are y' a-feelin' by this time, Bill? It's some—of a place, ain't it?" Dale took a step toward him. "Well, a queen's honor is nice. What are you doing here, Caleb?"

"I've come to set you free," said Caleb Moreland. Dale stared unbelievably. "But that is impossible, Cale. How could you set me free?"

"Call Tom Flowers, and I'll sight 'em." Dale called, and the officer came immediately. Caleb Moreland turned from the cell door and faced him. "I've come to set you up on the killin' of Black Adam Ball," began the young hillman.

He swallowed, went a trifle pale under his tan, and continued bravely: "Bill Dale, he never done it. I am the one 'at done it. Bill he shot at Adam, but he missed—Adam had been shot at Bill first, y'understand, but I didn't miss. I don't never miss. I'm a plumb tomstone shot. My alius rums me out at any match. I'd ha' owned up to it any day, but the thought o' jail he skeered bad. I jest can't let a good man as Bill Dale that would do a thing I done myself. So you see, Tom, and put the right man on that."

Flowers had a good look at the man who touched it. But he was not surprised. "Tell us about it, Cale."

"I have an idea, Dale," he resumed, "that if we knew who fired that third shot, we'd know who did for Ball. It might have been done in order to save you. Ball was noted, I understand, as an unfair and tricky fighter. He might have been trying to trick you when he rose and fell groaning. Perhaps he meant to draw you into the open, that he might have a clean shot at you."

Dale shook his head gravely.

quested. Caleb looked toward Dale, then he faced the lord of Cartersville's little prison again.

"Well, sheriff, when I see Bill Dale go off toward the trustee by himself and alone, I knowed right then he was in danger of bein' laywayed by some of them lowdown Talls and Cherokee Torries. So I decides to foller after him and gyard him, with-out him a-knowin' anything about it, which same I done. When he met Adm Ball—"

He broke off abruptly. "Go on," urged Flowers.

"I reckon I won't," smiled Caleb, and his eyes were still twinkling. "I reckon I won't do no more talkin' jest now. Yes, I reckon the proper place for me to do my big talkin' is in the cotchouse at my trial. Lock me up will ye Tom?"

"We'll see," said Flowers. Forthwith he dispatched a deputy for Judge Carter and Major Bradley, who hastened to the jail.

An hour later Caleb Moreland was the occupant of the cell at the end of the whitewashed corridor, and Dale was mounting his bay horse Fox to ride back into the heart of the everlasting hills. He arrived two hours after nightfall. The Morelands were glad to see him. There was rejoicing there in the broad valley that lies between David Moreland's mountain and the Big Pits. Everybody had been expecting him, and many were the pairs of eyes that had been watching for him. He found himself suddenly wishing, with a tightening at his throat, that his father could know how much bigger and how much better it was to be thus esteemed than to be wealthy.

Luke took charge of his tired horse and led it away to the old log barn and to some fifteen ears of yellow corn. Luke's father escorted him proudly, the guest of honor, in to one of Addie Moreland's incomparable old-fashioned suppers, which was none the worse for being late. Several Littlefords sat at the long, home-made table.

John Moreland turned up the light a little, and cracked a worn but timely joke; then he looked toward one of the men whom he had fought throughout many years, and muttered into his thick brown beard:

"I've got news for ye, Bill," he said, recognizing Dale even in the darkness. "I've been a-eavesdrappin' at old Ball's house, and I had to choke about ten dawgs to do it. Bill, ole boy, them Balls has done swore by everything on earth and in Heaven and in Torment 'at they'll kill you if the law don't. I god, ye'd better watch out, Bill."

John Moreland rose from his chair. "Much obliged to ye, By. And good night to ye. Let's go into the house Bill. I didn't think them d—l pole cats had that much nerve—and I don't hardly believe it yet. It might ha' been white lecker a-talkin. Their kind o' white lecker ain't hawnest, like By Heck's is, though his'n is bad enough. Their kind'll make a man resurrect his dead enemies out o' the graveyard and shoot 'em up all over again. It ain't a-goin' to do a great deal o' harm Bill, if ye don't light no lamp when ye go to bed. A man can't never tell jest what's a-goin' to happen."

"And the Ball-Torrey outfit—" Dale began, when the Moreland chief cut in: "Ef the Ball-Torrey outfit pesters you, they're every one purty darned apt to die with what is knowed gen'ly in this section as the rifle-bullet disease."

OUR PEACE-TIME DUTY

General Pershing, speaking to the national guard officers at Camp Edwards not long ago, declared the widespread illiteracy among the young men of the country a "national disgrace." He expressed the hope that never again would we find our young men untrained in mind and body as was the case at the outbreak of the world war.

The selective draft law vindicated itself as a statistical measure as well as a war measure. What we found out about ourselves as a nation was an eye-opener to our public men. The percentage of mentally and physically unfit was astounding.

General Pershing advocates an annual survey in order to keep in touch with our situation in the future. He puts this need upon the broadground of preparedness, and in this he is no doubt right.

But what about the fitness of our young men for the pursuit of peace? A raising of our standard of literacy and physical condition is a most important economic need. Not only will increased production result, but there will be fewer losses from accidents and disease.

Our peace time situation makes the same demand upon us for increased diligence and physical and mental training as does the need for preparedness for war. The ultimate success of democracy will depend upon a trained and self-sufficient citizenry. Our public school system should be our first love of America. This is an essential defensive measure.

Any physical training should be general. A few star athletes in the field with a group of hollow-cheated weaklings on the bleachers will not be sufficient. Well trained bodies for all should be the test of athletics in schools and colleges, and with this aim made the objective higher physical standards for all of the people will soon follow.

"The Mule"

Being told to write a brief essay on "The Mule," Howard turned into his teacher the following effort: "The mule is a hardier bird than the guse or the turkie. It has two legs to walk with, two more to kick with, and wears its wings on the side of its head. It is stubbornly bekward about coming forward."

Origin of Coal.

After an exhaustive study of a number of coal seams, James Lomax concludes that almost all had their origin in vegetable matter deposited on the spot, the coal substance being formed by the dropping of leaves, twigs, bark and fruits, in the shape of seeds and fragments comes mainly from large trees.

Dainty Accessories

Immortal pretty things in dress accessories and house furnishings are presented in the shops at Christmas time for women. The only difficulty is to make the right choice among them. Whoever determines to settle upon neckwear cannot go wrong; for no woman ever cries "hold, enough!" in this matter of dainty accessories. A vestie and collar of embroidered swiss, as pictured here, is a thing of sheer beauty that is sure to please.

MEADOW BRIEFS

By Aesculapias
The students of our school gave an entertainment Friday night, consisting of songs by the small children and a solo by Mr. Sam Saunders. The principle event of the evening was the play. We do not recall the names of all making the cast, but the parts were well rendered; two of the girls displaying real histrionic ability. The audience was large and enthusiastic and some of them quite tall and rather opaque. We shall be glad to have them stand in front of us at the next public function.
Mr. and Mrs. George Duke are happy over the arrival of a little girl at their home Sunday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Will Bryant are also entertaining a little girl, who also made her appearance Sunday morning. We congratulate all parties and hope the little ones will prove a blessing.
Percy Decard and family took a spin over into New Mexico Sunday, to visit his wife's people. Dr. Mooreland, wife and little daughter motored over to the New town of Leveland in Hockley Co., Sunday.
The town is rather small, but they have abundant room in which to build and a rich county to support it when it is built. Found the few there very optimistic as to the future of the place.
The father and mother of G. W. Watkins are visiting here. D. W.

Smith is off on a visit to his old home in Fannin county. The continued dry weather is injuring the range at this place and horses and cattle are not doing so well as last year. At that time the farmers were hauling maize and kaffir and it was picnic every day. They are not hauling much at present and we are getting in bad straits. A little sugar or sack of flour is all they are getting. Why don't you philanthropic farmers bring a few bundles of feed when you come to town. However, you will notice that some of our cows have a can safely attached to their shoulders, so if you haven't the feed with you drop a few nickels in the tin can.
(This week)
This is the third installment since any article has been seen in print. What's the matter say you? The two former articles were mailed here on Tuesday and the one published was mailed on Wednesday. Unless the editor is casting them into the waste basket there is something wrong with the post office at one or the other end of the line. We have never received but two of the articles both being published this week. One untraced delayed came in last week on a belated Wednesday train and a course was too late for publication. If possible, Aesculapias, mail on Monday and they surely will get here in time each week--Editor.
Opal, the little daughter of Mr. Up-ton, east of town, was carried to Lubbock, Friday, where she was operated on for appendicitis. A phone message says she is getting on finely.

Mr. Albert Hardin was on the sick list the past week.
The B.Y.P.U. was entertained Saturday night at the home of O. W. Watkins. There was also a social and candy breaking at the home of Mr. J. J. Nettles to accommodate those not members of the former organization.
It has been decided to have a Christmas tree at the Baptist church.
The Meadow Dramatic Club redeerded Topsy Turvy to a large audience, Friday night, at the Ropes school house. We have some fine dramatic talent among our young people, and who knows what a fine future is before some of them.
We have a new garage in operation. From indications the operators are doing well.
Dock Peeler had the misfortune of being kicked in the face by the crank of a car. It was sure some kick.
HARRIS HAPPENINGS

Britt Clare went to town Monday to have his hand treated.
S. T. Murphy and E. H. Tandy, took cotton to town this week.
E. H. Tandy and family spent last Sunday with Britt Clare and family.
AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH
Next Sunday the pastor will give a report on the great Convention and Rev. J. Frank Norris' attack on infidelity in Christian schools.
At the night service, the theme will be, "Christianity and War" or "How the next war will be fought and the armament used."

EDWARD G. LOWRY

No Washington correspondent is better known or more highly esteemed than Edward G. Lowry. That in itself means that he has broad and deep knowledge of national and world affairs; that he is skillful in getting the news and tactful in writing it, and that he has the confidence of the public men with whom he comes in contact. But Mr. Lowry has more than that. He has the really patriotic feeling that the intimate knowledge of the nation's affairs, which he acquires through his work in Washington, should be imparted to the people of the country who have not his privileges. In such a way that they will be led to take that personal interest in the doings of the government, which alone will result in good government. He wants the people to realize that it is their government, answerable to them only, and that they only are responsible for its good qualities and its bad qualities. It is this feeling that has inspired much of Mr. Lowry's best work.
Born in Atlanta in 1876, Mr. Lowry was educated in private schools, the Georgia Military Institute and by private tutors, and began his journalistic career at the age of twenty-four. In 1904 he was sent to Washington and has been there almost continuously ever since. He has been the political correspondent of Harper's Weekly, has written many articles for the periodical press and since 1913 has been the Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post, and for a considerable time the managing editor of that paper. When Germany started the World war the government naturally found important work for Mr. Lowry. For two years he was attached to the American embassy in London, and then he returned to become a captain in the aviation section of the signal corps. Then he was assigned to the military attaché at London and on the British front in Flanders, and was with the American Army of Occupation in Germany. For his valuable work he was awarded the British Military Cross. Recently he wrote "Washington Close-Ups," a series of character sketches of eminent figures in the national capital, which the country is reading with vast enjoyment.
For two years Mr. Lowry has been making a close study of the business of the government. He is given credit in congress for his aid in passing the budget bill and in bringing about the naming of the joint committee of the house and senate to investigate and report upon the administration and organization of the government executive departments. He now wants the people of the United States to know the details of the United States government, which is their business. He believes the knowledge of these details will make of them better Americans and give them a better government.
No man imbued with Mr. Lowry's high ideal could have carried out this study of the government business so exhaustively and minutely as he has. Probably he now knows more about it than any other man in the world. With extraordinary perseverance and dogged persistence he went after hidden facts and multifarious details—and got them. Nothing was too big for his comprehension or too small for his attention. At one time he went to a member of the cabinet with the statement that the government had on its payroll, exclusive of the officers and men of the army and navy, one employee for each 68 people of age and over engaged in gainful occupations. It took that cabinet officer, with the assistance he had at his command, a considerable time, and considerable effort to verify Mr. Lowry's statement, but he found it to be true.
As the result of his careful studies Mr. Lowry has written a series of articles in this paper, which have been read with interest and expense; where the money comes from, and how and for what it is spent; whether the organization of the business side of government is efficient or inefficient; whether the government wastes the money we give it. The series is not in any sense political. It is not an attack, not a muck-raking expedition. It recites facts, conceded, acknowledged facts. These facts come from the men in the government—from the government itself—and they are all facts that every American citizen is entitled to know and should know.
The series of articles on this subject of "Where Your Taxes Go" will be carried in these columns. They should be read by every American who is interested in the welfare of the nation.

Edward G. Lowry.

BUDDY IS HOME

Buddy is home. We all remember when he left. We all—except Ambassador George Harvey—know when he went to France. We all know what he did there and what came to him. Now he is home again.
We wept when he went; we wept when he came back to us. Never in the history of our country has there been another occasion equal to this in pomp and ceremony. Buddy, a doughboy, a private in the ranks, receives the honors designated for a full general in our army.
Weddings by proxy are not unknown. This was a funeral by proxy. Buddy representing all the khaki-clad Americans of all ranks who fell in France. Tomorrow, it will all be over. What will it mean to us? What will it mean in the days and months and years to come? Has it all been but an outburst of sentiment, mingled with sentimentality?
This people joined with the people of seven other nations, whose representatives at a post-war conference are now in Washington, in a war to end war. When active warfare ended, this government withdrew into its shell. It refused further association with these governments with which it had fought the war to end wars.
Buddy is home. What does his home-coming mean to the Americans for whom he, in common with tens of thousands of his American buddies, and millions of British, French, Belgian, Italian, Russian, Portuguese, Rumanian and Serbian buddies gave their lives. Was it a war to end war? Whether it was or not depends very much on what the home-coming has signified to the people of this country.—Washington Herald.

NOTICE OF ELECTION

By the authority vested in me by law and in accordance with Ordinance No. 14 of the City Council of the City of Brownfield, Texas, passed and adopted the 1st day of November, 1921, I, Geo. W. Neill, Mayor of the City of Brownfield, Texas, do hereby order that an election be held within the said city on the 30th day of December, 1921, at the office of the County Judge in the Courthouse of said City, whereas that qualified property tax paying voters thereof may determine if serial bonds of this city in the amount of Sixteen Thousand and no-100 ($16,000.00) dollars, being thirty-two bonds of Five Hundred ($500.00) dollars each, Nos. One and Two due and payable August 1st 1927, and two bonds in their numerical order due and payable on the 1st day of August of each year thereafter until the whole have become due; for the purpose of building, extending and equipping an Electric Light Plant for the City of Brownfield, Texas, and to draw interest payable semi-annually, and due on the 1st day of February and August of each year after the issuance of such bonds and a tax sufficient to meet the interest and create a sinking fund to retire such bonds at their maturity shall be levied; and by virtue of Ordinance No. 15, passed and adopted on the 21st day of November, 1921, by the City of Brownfield, Texas, it was ordered that a proposition be submitted to the qualified voters of this city if serial bonds in the sum of Eighteen Thousand and no-100 ($18,000.00) dollars, being thirty six bonds of $500.00 each, maturing two each year, beginning August 1st, 1927, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, interest, payable semi-annually, on the 1st day of February and August of each year, of this city to be issued for the purpose of Building, Extending and Equipping a Water Works System for the city of Brownfield, Texas, and for the levy of a tax sufficient to meet the interest and create a sinking fund to retire same at their several maturities.

J. C. Green, A. M. Brownfield, A. W. Endersen and Clyde Lewis are hereby appointed to hold such election in the office of the County Judge, in the Courthouse, City of Brownfield, Texas.

Those desiring to vote in favor of issuance of serial bonds in the sum of Eighteen Thousand ($18,000.00) dollars for building, extending and equipping a Water Works system for this city, shall have written or printed on their ballots: "For the issuance of Eighteen Thousand ($18,000.00) dollars Water Works bonds maturing serially and levy of tax to meet the interest and sinking fund." Those opposed to such a proposition shall have written or printed on their ballots: "Against the issuance of Eighteen Thousand ($18,000.00) dollars Water Works bonds maturing serially and levy of tax to meet interest and sinking fund." Those desiring to vote in favor of issuing serial bonds in the sum of Sixteen Thousand ($16,000.00) dollars for building, extending and equipping an Electric Light plant for the city of Brownfield, Texas, shall have written or printed on their ballots: "For the issuance of Sixteen Thousand ($16,000.00) dollars electric light bonds, maturing serially and levy of tax to meet interest and sinking fund." Those opposing same shall have written or printed on their ballots: "Against the issuance of Sixteen Thousand ($16,000.00) dollars electric light bonds, maturing serially and levy of a tax sufficient to meet interest and sinking fund."
And I direct that notice of such election be given for 30 days preceding same by causing copies of this notice to be published in some newspaper in this city, printed in the English language and which has been so published and printed for one year preceding the date of the first publication hereof, and causing this notice to be posted in four public places in said city.
In testimony whereof I have signed these presents and caused the same to be signed by the Secretary of the City of Brownfield, Texas, and attested by the seal of said City on the 22nd day of November, A. D. 1921.
