"SHOWERED"

Mrs. J. C. Green and daughters entertained at her home Saturday, April 18th from 3 to 5 o'clock with a prettily appointed "shower" in honor of the recent bride, Ticia Sawyer Akers. The home atmosphere was in keeping with this most hospitable hostess and daughters—a happy event—not only to the bride but to her friends, who are many and loyal. The afternoon was spent as usual—piano and vocal music and Edison doing part of the entertaining. Miss Emily Miller gave an original spicy toast "to the girls left behind" and a toast "to the bride" was given by Mrs. W. H. Dallas. The dining table not only beautiful in hand work linen, was made even more so by the display of cut glass, silver, useful aluminum and china with other dainty gifts. The bride in her sweet girlish way accepted these gifts with appreciation. Delicious sandwiches and tea were served to the guests.—A guest.

MAIDS AND MATRONS HONOR RETIRING PRESIDENT

The Maids and Matrons Club honored their retiring president, Mrs. A. M. Brownfield with a reception at the home of Mrs. Fred Smith, Feb. 7th. The rooms were beautifully decorated with yellow and white, the club colors. After tea had been served to the guests, Mrs. McGowan, in a few well chosen words expressed the club's appreciation of Mrs. Brownfield and her work while president. The honoree responded with thanks to the members for their hearty co-operation during her term of office. An avalanche of dainty gifts were then showered on Mrs. Brownfield, each guest being delighted to express their friendship for her in this manner.—Reporter.

MAIDS AND MATRONS MEET WITH MRS. KING

The Maids and Matrons Club met at the home of Mrs. John King, Tuesday, Feb. 14th. A short business session was followed by an interesting lesson on "Early American Writers," led by Mrs. Randall. Brief character sketches of William Allen Bryant and James Fenimore Cooper, a synopsis of "Leather Stocking Tales," and "Thanatopsis" with a "Thanatopsis" rounded out the program. The hostess served tea and cake to the following: Mesdames M. V. Brownfield, Enderesen, Green, Kendrick, W. N. Lemmon, May, McGowan, Prideaux, Randal, Smith, Stokes and Miss Miller. The club will meet with Mrs. W. N. Lemmon, March 7th.—Reporter.

BREEZES FROM BAPTIST LANE (delayed)

Mr. Editor, when will it rain? You know from spiritual experience that Baptist of all denominations require some water, and we have gone without rain until it would not take a very strong sandstorm to blow us entirely out of the county; we are getting light, you know. We are not in as bad shape as Noah Bell's hogs were in 1917, but we would feel better if it were to rain some just now. There would be quite a lot of plowing done if it would rain just enough to moisten the ground a little. We are fearful that if there is no cold weather, the insects will destroy the crops this year. While we hope for the best, we never know what is in the future for us, so we will have to go it blind as usual, with the old farmer. W. L. Bandy is fattening out several head of hogs; we hope he will do well in the venture. Mr. J. G. Lowden traded horses last week and got a bronk; he says he has to blindfold him to get the bridle on. Question: How does he blindfold him. We will wait for an answer some of these days. Mr. R. L. Cornelius was on the pug list last week, but appears to be O. K. at this writing. Miss Margaret Jackson was sick last week but we are glad to learn that she is much better at this time. Mr. Claud Jackson is building a residence for some one north of town—we suppose a new couple. Mr. Cecil Acker is in bed at this time with a cold. We met a man in the road going toward town, one day last week. He was driving a mule and a horse and had a wagon load of corn. We think we could identify him, but he passed us so fast that we doubted whether or not we knew him. Mrs. Harper, mother of Mrs. J. G. Lowden, took dinner at the Acker home last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Cornelius and two daughters, Misses Fay and Melba, visited at the Acker home until bedtime, Sunday night. Mr. Editor, we feel grieved at the resignation of Rev. J. E. Anderson. The Baptist church has lost a good preacher, a good man, and one of the best pastors we ever knew. The congregation has grown greatly under his pastorate, but it is the way with all the world. Such earnest and devoted preachers with the aspirations he has to serve God as he wishes to do, will be called to higher positions and we cannot blame him because of his resignation to accept a pastorate in a city of 15,000 people, and where he has a home furnished with all the conveniences that can be wished, and with a much larger salary. And it is not just the members of the Baptist Church that regret to give him up but it is an expression of the other three churches as well. We wish him well and feel sure that success will crown his every effort, and that God will prosper him in his new field. We may tribute to a man of his worth and ability wherever he may go, and we commend him to the membership of the Baptist Church in his new charge. Maybe we will come again some day with more news than we have at this time. Crops are all harvested, and nothing to do but make a little fire in the heater and milk the cows, eat breakfast, dinner and supper and sleep. Well we have time. —Verbe Son ti Mona

COLD WATCH PRIZES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

To encourage debating in the various schools of the Lubbock District of the University Interscholastic League, some of the leading citizens of Lubbock have offered to give gold watches to the four winners. Barrier Brothers will give to each of the winners of the boys team an open face, gold watch, and C. K. Watkins and J. L. Dow to each of the winners of the girls team, a beautiful gold wrist watch. These are all good watches and the debating teams of the district should work hard to win them. We are very anxious to get strong teams to represent the district at the State Meet. To win out in the State contest takes hard work and plenty of it, but we believe that the Plains boys and girls are as capable as those from any other section of the State, and this year we want to bring the State Cup in debating to the South Plains. We hope that each county of the district will send good strong teams to the district meet which will be April 14-15. M. M. Dupre, Director General, Lubbock, Dist.

PROFESSOR AND EDITOR VISIT TAHOKA

Prof. C. P. Taylor, of Gomez, came by town last Saturday morning on his way to Tahoka, and wanting good company (?) he asked the Herald man to take a seat with him in his limber. We acknowledge we were not dressed to kill, as we were intended to work instead of touring the country, but after a shave and shine, we thought we would look equally as well as Editor Haynes, but after we got to Tahoka, we found that aimable editor all "dilled" out in a white standing collar trying to do job work. We never did see a man that could turn out real good job work, fast and furious with a standing collar on— but we found that Haynes aimed for the other fellow to do most of the work. We arrived just in time for ham and—, then while the professor was looking for some one or something—we never did learn which—weed of natural instinct, caught a whiff of strange news ink and sandered off toward the News office and actually caught Editor Haynes making out like he was working. After wringing the ink and grease off one another's hands in the Knight of the Fourth Estate gripp, we got settled down to gossip, and complimented or criticized neighboring journals to our heart's content for the space of two hours, when the Prof. finished his ambassadorship and abruptly and cruelly separated us in the midst of some of our great financial ventures and expectations. Tahoka has nicer buildings, better sidewalks, and way yonder better court house, probably a better newspaper—undoubtedly so—but Brownfield Saturday crowds skin them more ways than a farmer can whip a mule, as we found when we arrived home. This is just some of their advantages and one of ours. Both are excellent places to live and rear a news paper.

Of course we appreciated the trip and the excellent company of Prof. Taylor and hope for many more returns of the day.

The Lorenzo Enterprise came to us this week a four-column eight pager, instead of a five column, four pager. Quinn is giving the Lorenzo people a newsy sheet.

The Herald has been considering the feasibility of asking the several churches to render a Sunday School report for the columns of the Herald, each Monday morning. This, let it be understood is not to create any rivalry between the churches, but is merely to help get as many people of the town as possible interested in Bible Study. People are learning too much of everything else but the Old Book. What say preachers and S. S. Superintendents and leaders?

After ousting Prof. Dow, of Baylor for his materialist teaching and books, Rev. J. Frank Norris has now gone after the scalp of the higher-up, and is starting in on Jno. D. Rockefeller's Foundation. Rev. Norris says that the Rockefellers with their millions are actually getting control many of our colleges in the south, and infers that this accounts for aesthetic tendencies of some of our Christian Colleges.

Folks, there are some mighty good offices in the county that no one seems to want, and they are paying office with a minimum of work attached. There is for instance the office of County Attorney with a good fat little ex-officio attached and will not hinder one law practice to any great extent. Then, there is the office of Public Weigher that has got to where it seems to be a humdinger and no one seems to want it. Get busy boys, the Herald is rearing to announce you to the good voters.

We trust that our grocermen will keep on hand a good stock of all the articles that the live manufacturers are advertising free of charge for the grocermen in the Herald. These advertisers are doing you a big favor in two ways. They are saving you the expense of advertising these popular goods yourself, leaving you to advertise other wares with your advertising space. Not only that, but they are leaving several hundred dollars in our town for advertising each year, which is turned loose in this town for dry goods, groceries and other supplies in contrast to other manufacturers that you are probably trying to push as much as you are the goods of those who are advertising in the Herald, yet these same manufacturers are turning all their appropriations to the big city magazines at so many thousand dollars per page, and not a dollar of their money ever reaches you. Help the Herald push the goods of the manufacturer that is spending part of their advertising appropriation right here in Brownfield. We also ask the consumer to call for the goods that are advertised in the Herald. We must stand or fall together.

SYNOPSIS.
CHAPTER I.—Occupying a dilapidated shack in the Silent City, Polly Hopkins lives with her father, small Jerry, and an old woman, Gracie, who are an adjoined farm, Oscar Bennett, prosperous farmer, is an neighbor. Gracie is devoted to Evelyn Robertson, supposedly wealthy girl of the neighborhood. Polly alone knows their secret. Marcus MacKenzie, who owns the ground the squatters occupy, is their determined enemy. Polly overhears a conversation between MacKenzie and a stranger, in which the former avows his intention of driving the squatters from his land. The stranger squatters with the squatters, and exacts Polly's gratitude.

CHAPTER II.
About the time Polly Hopkins began to repair the shack roof, Evelyn Robertson came into the room where her mother sat reading. The girl was dressed to go out and was drawing a pair of gloves over her ringed fingers. "Where are you going, Eve?" inquired the lady. "It seems to me that you're running out altogether too much. There's your piano! You haven't practiced in months. Now don't blame me, Eve, if, when Marcus asks you to play, you fall flat."

"A dull red ran into the girl's cheeks, but she made no reply as she smoothed the wrinkles from her gloves. "The good Lord knows," continued the mother irritably, "that I've kept at you enough. Now Marcus and Robert are home, how are you going to entertain them? Men demand so much." The experiences of the past two years had taught Evelyn that lesson. It had been demand, demand and more demanding ever since, on girl's impulse, she had secretly married Oscar Bennett.

"And you heard what Marcus said last night about the Silent City folks,"

"And You Heard What Marcus Said Last Night About the Silent City Folks," Went on Mrs. Robertson.

went on Mrs. Robertson. "What you want of that Hopkins girl I don't understand. Marcus says her father is the most dangerous man among the lot of them, and the girl herself is queer."

"Oh, don't talk about the squatters all the time," cried Evelyn. "I hate the very sound of the word. What's Polly Hopkins, anyway? . . . Now Marcus is home—"

"Darling," the mother interrupted eagerly, "it has always been my hope that you and Marcus would grow up together. He is so rich and so handsome! Now, isn't he?"
A groan almost leapt from Evelyn's lips. "What a fool she had been! Here she was married to a man she loathed, a man she was ashamed of! The realization that another man, rich, good-looking and in every way desirable, had turned his serious eyes upon her, almost made her blurt out the whole story to her mother; but having kept silent so long, she dared not speak now. All through the night she had tossed and turned, hunting some way to get Oscar Bennett out of her life without Marcus MacKenzie knowing anything about it. She dared not go to Oscar himself; Polly Hopkins was the only hope she had. All Bennett cared for was money. He was as tired of her as she was of him. Perhaps he would go away quietly and set her free if she gave him money enough. Would her mother give it to her?"

"Mother, do you honestly want me to marry Marcus?" she asked, trembling. Mrs. Robertson caught at the out-flying hand. "I do, I do indeed, darling," she answered. "And he'll ask you too. You sure. Perhaps not today or tomorrow, for he's just renewing his acquaintance with you. By the way he looked last night I could tell he was considering it."

A handkerchief dropped from Evelyn's fingers, and she stooped to pick it up. "If I lend Marcus one, get him suggested, riding, and—get him to ask me to marry him, will you give me any sum of money I want?"

Her voice shook with emotion, and her young face seemed suddenly old and haggard. Mrs. Robertson had never seen her daughter in such a state. "Sit down a minute, Evelyn," she commanded. "Now tell me what you want money for. I know very well that you haven't spent what I've allowed you upon yourself. That's why I've refused you so much lately. No more secrets or mystery! I want the facts. Now tell me the minute."

The girl dropped into a chair and buried her face in her hands. "I can't," she whispered.

ted her from the wet; and she carried a light umbrella in her gloved hand. The greeting between them was one of embarrassment. "I were going to find my daddy," Polly explained. "He's somewhere along the lake. I didn't know I'd come on you this mornin'."

The memory of Mrs. Robertson's words brought a rush of color to her face, and she looked down at her feet. There surged up in her a feeling that she did not want anything to do with any of these people. Why should she? They were rich; and she was only a squatter brat! She started to walk away.

"I said," she flung over her shoulder, "I were lookin' for my daddy, Good-by."

Evelyn Robertson was not interested in Jeremiah Hopkins. As far as she was concerned, the whole Silent City might be washed off into the waves and carried away. Her own troubles filled her mind. The shock of her mother's disclosure stunned her, for without the help she had expected, she could see no way out of Oscar Bennett's clutches. In the meantime, the squatter girl was her only means of communication.

"Wait, Pollyop, wait a minute! I came down just to speak to you."

Wheeling slowly around, Polly faced her. "What do you want?" she asked in surly tones.

"Pollyop," ejaculated Evelyn, coming swiftly to her side, "I'm almost scared to death. My cousin, Bob—oh, you've got to help me again!"

Bob! Then the soldier in the uniform was Evelyn's cousin. Bob! That was the nicest name in all the world, a name fitted for the man who had dropped into the Silent City to help along the squatters. Suddenly her mood changed. She forgot Oscar Bennett and his odious words, forgot that the girl crying for help had allowed her mother to say dreadful things against her and Daddy Hopkins. If Evelyn were related to the soldier, then Polly Hopkins would do anything Miss Robertson asked of her.

"What do you want?" she repeated shyly, blushing.

"It's this," answered Evelyn. "Mr. MacKenzie's home—and my cousin came with him. My cousin, Robert Percival!"

"Is your cousin a handsome feller with long legs and a face—"

Pollyop stopped for lack of words.

"Tell Oscar I Haven't Any Money! I Just Can't Get It Now! And Pollyop, Tell Him Too That He Mustn't Write Me Any More Letters."

How could she describe the fine, sympathetic countenance she had seen from the hut roof?

"Yes," Evelyn interposed, "Bob's awfully good-looking, and he's tall too. Now listen, Pollyop; you must go to Oscar again for me this very day—Oh, dear, he's so mean to me!"

Polly considered the pretty face a moment. She could not understand why the home-coming of the cousin and Old Marc should make Evelyn so flustered. With her steady eyes upon her she was studying over this question when Evelyn burst forth:

"Tell Oscar I haven't any money! I just can't get it now! And, Pollyop, tell him too that he mustn't write me any more letters. My mother—well, if she found one of them, she'd turn me out of the house."

Polly's mouth flew open. She could not conceive of a girl doing anything in the world that would make her mother turn her out of her home.

"Lorley! Would she, now?" she gasped.

"My mother's proud," said Evelyn, in excuse. "You know that, Polly."

Certainly Polly knew it! Hadn't she ducked out of sight of the unsympathetic lady many a time when lurking near the Robertson home with a message from Oscar to Evelyn?

"I don't know what I will do, Polly," the other girl went on, "if you don't help me—and—some time I'll really do something for you."

A temptation to blurt out the words, "Yes, MacKenzie had spoken as called the squatter girl; but Evelyn looked worried! Polly's heart was as soft as the velvet in her eyes when she came upon trouble of any kind. "You've been good to Wee Jerry," she interposed gently. "Awful good. He must giggle his little life away when I bring him the goodies you send him."

(Copyright by Little, Brown & Company) crowding up the jagged sides of the deep gulf. As she came up to them, Hopkins' companions waved her a greeting, but stopped their work at the sight of her sober face.

"What's up, lassie?" demanded Hopkins. "You ain't seen a ghost, have you?"

"Worse'n that, Daddy," she replied. "Much worse'n that! Old Marc's home, an' I heard him say he's goin' to root us squatters out of the Silent City."

A horn-like glare flashed into Larry Bishop's eyes. "Did he, now, brat?" he muttered, taking up his knife and looking at it. Polly squatted down beside her father, slipping one hand under his arm. The other she gave to the child, who grasped it eagerly.

"Did he, now, brat?" came in repetition from Bishop's throat. "Yep," asserted Polly, with an emphatic bob of her head. "I come to tell you all you'd best be lookin' out for 'im, Daddy, he's the worst man in the settlement, but everybody knows he's a thug." "He'd best be lookin' out for his own hide," Hopkins shot back with a flash of steel. "I ain't in any mind to stand much of his guff, the dirty duffer."

Withdrawing her arm from her father's, she leaned her chin on her hand. She wanted to urge them not to worry too much, to tell them of the other man, rich like old Marc, who had expressed in tender tones a kindly interest in their welfare. Somehow, though, the words would not come. The peaceful figure did not fit in with the secret understanding that expressed itself in the frowning, furtive glances that passed from one to the other of her men-folk.

"He's awful, powerful strong," she ventured in answer to the look she had intercepted, "an' powerful rich!" "An' money's what makes the mare go," struck in Lyle Braeger.

"Sure, so 'tis," answered Polly. "But 'tain't everything in the world, I got

"Sure, so 'tis," answered Polly. "But 'tain't everything in the world." Granny Hope's word for that. An' she knows a lot about love, Granny does."

Larry Bishop's sudden laugh cracked in the middle, and he swallowed forcibly.

"Love! H—!" he burst out huskily. "Granny'll know soon what a lousy money means. Some more of the Silent City'll wake up an' find the Hope shack burned to the rocks."

"Mebbe not," replied Polly simply. "Anyway, Granny needn't be so now she's livin' with us."

A sudden thought of Robert Percival shot a queer little thrill through her, and she got confusedly to her feet.

"Lorcy, but the wind's cold this mornin'!" she exclaimed.

"That's so," answered her father. "It's too blamed cold for the baby to stay here. Get off'n my neck, boy, an' go along home with Polly, an' get her up a bit."

The child set up a howl that flung itself back and forth in squealing echoes from side to side of the ravine, but the struggle of unloosening Wee Jerry's fingers from his father's thick hair was short and sharp.

"Take him home, brat," said Jeremiah to Polly. "He's like a frog, poor imp. We got a full hour's work yet."

With the child's hand in hers, Polly looked at her father.

"Come when you can, Daddy. I got a spruce for you."

"Good little kid, your girl is, Jeremiah," droned Braeger, and he grunted as he straightened out his legs.

Where Your Taxes Go

How Uncle Sam Spends Your Money in Conducting Your Business

By EDWARD G. LOWRY
Author of "Washington Class-Use," "Backs and Financial Systems," etc. Contributor Political Economy, etc. to Leading Periodicals and a Writer of Recognized Authority on the National Government's Business Methods

IV. THE BURDEN OF TAXES

Before the war the government of the United States spent about one billion dollars a year for all purposes, including interest on the public debt. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, the first full fiscal year after fighting stopped, the government spent in round figures six billion four hundred million dollars. In the fiscal year 1921, that is, up to June 30, 1921, it spent $5,159,758,930, and in the fiscal year 1922, which ends on June 30, 1922, it will spend more than four billion dollars, says Secretary Mellon of the Treasury Department.

These figures include interest on the public debt which amounts to about one billion dollars, but nothing for sinking fund or other debt redemption. Including both interest and sinking fund, the government will spend more than four times as much the fiscal year 1922 as it spent yearly before the war.

These expenditures and these heavy charges are a part of the price of victory. Your whole present problem is to curtail them. It concerns you to know just how these immense sums are gathered and how much you paid and are paying toward them, for of course we, the tax payers, the men and women with jobs, the men and women who have what the census calls gainful occupations, paid every cent of it. It was our money until the government took it.

Let us examine the fiscal year 1920, 1921, but it was slightly less than the year previous as the year ending June 30, 1922, will be a slightly less burden on us than the year preceding. According to a careful analysis made by the late Dr. E. B. Rosa, of the United States bureau of standards, a government economist who was deeply and intelligently interested in the subject, every man, woman and child in this country contributes an average of fifty-three dollars in taxes to the support of the national government. Actually it is nearer fifty-four than fifty-three dollars, but I am taking the smaller sum for the sake of the round number. That is, the average family of five persons pays $265 a year out of its earnings to the federal government alone, in addition to what is paid for state, county and city taxes.

The taxpayer is next of kin to the treasury. At any rate he is the first person notified when the treasury needs money, and he always has to dig down into his jeans for whatever is needed. Taxpaying, even more than charity, begins at home. The boy's best friend is his mother, but the taxpayer's only friend is himself. The only thing that can be done for him is to disclose as vividly as possible how much his government is costing and let him decide what he will do about it. It all comes down to this: The more money the government spends through defective organization or extravagance, the less you have to spend or save.

So much for the cost of the national business we support. We are all minority stockholders. The concern has no other source of revenue than our contributions. It doesn't make any money. In times like these, when almost everybody feels that he gets too little for what he sells and has to pay too much for what he buys, it seems to me the least we can do is to take an active and intelligent interest in this great common enterprise of ours and make sure that it is well organized; that it doesn't waste or spend extravagantly; that the employees are paid an adequate wage and have proper working conditions; that their morale is kept high and their enthusiasm in our interest unabated; in fine, that as a business it shall be conducted as efficiently and economically and on as modern scientific principles as any large private business.

Is it?

That is a question you must answer for yourself after I have acquainted you with the actual situation and condition.

THE CALCASIEU FROG

Two gay young frogs, from inland Bogs, had spent the night in drinking. As morning broke and they awoke, while yet their eyes were blinking a farmer's pail came to the swale.

And caught them as quick as winking ere they could either scattered sense or breath.

He dumped them in the millman's can; He can't find up the cover down. They soog are started off to town. The needless frogs began to quake, And sober up in cold milkshake. They quickly find their breath will stop.

Unless they swim upon the top. They swim for life and kick and swim until their weary eyes grow dim; Their muscles ache, their breath grows short.

And gasping, speaks one weary spout "Sag, old boy, it's pretty tough to die so young, but I've enough of kicks for life. No more I'll try I was not raised on a milk diet."

"Tut, tut, my lad," the other cries. "A frog's not dead until he dies; let's keep on kicking, that's my plan and maybe yet see outside this can."

"No use, no use," faint heart replied "I'm up to his toes and gently died, the braver frog undaunted still, kept kicking with a right good will, until with joy, too great to utter, found he'd churned a lump of butter And climbing on that chunk of grease he floated around with greatest ease.

Moral

When times are hard—no trade in town—Don't get discouraged and go down. But struggle still—no murmur utter—A few more kicks may bring the butter.

I AM THE FARMER

By James F. McDowell.

I am the provider of all mankind 'pon me every human being constantly depends.

A word itself is builded upon me, oil, my products, my honesty.

Because of my industry, America my country, leads the world. Her prosperity is maintained by me; her great commerce is the work of my good hands; her "balance of trade" springs from the furrows of my farm.

My reaper brings food for today my plow holds promise for tomorrow.

In war I am absolute; in peace I am indispensable—my country's surest defense and constant reliance.

I am the soul of America, the hope of the race, the balance wheel of civilization.

When I prosper, men are happy; when I fail, the world suffers.

I live with nature, walk in the green fields under the golden sunlight, out in the great alone where brain and brawn and toil supply mankind's primary need. And I try to do my humble part to carry out the great plan of God.

Even the birds are my companions; they greet me with a symphony at the next day's dawn and chum with me until the evening's prayer is said.

If it were not for me the treasures of the earth would remain securely locked; the graineries would be useless frames; man himself would be doomed speedily to extinction or leary.

Through me is produced the energy that maintains the spark of life. I rise with the early dawn and retire when the "chores" of the world are done.

I am your true friend. I am the Farmer—From the Star-Tribune, Waverly Minn.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK
BROWNFIELD, TEXAS

MY EXPERIENCE IN THE WORLD WAR

By Homer R. Winston

Nearly every boy in the company got a pass to Coblenz for two or three days; just a few got passes to Paris. A little while after this, we organized the 90 Division Association. Every company in the division sent one man to represent it and it fell on me to represent my company. We finally decided the first reunion to be at Dallas, Texas.

The Germans have some very funny customs; for instance if anybody gets sick or catches some kind of disease, the Burgomaster walks down the street and about every 200 yards stops and reads the news for the day. Everybody sure gives good attention too. The Dutch women don't think anything about walking from 8 to ten miles to some kind of Missionary Society. A kilo is 5-8 of one mile, so you can see they are very fond of walking, and I guess that is why some of them are so old. I saw several over the 100 mark. Every 5-8 of a mile they have a small bench on the side of the highway under a tree so they can rest. All the highways are lined on each side with arge beautiful trees. Every Saturday, they will scrub the house and the streets, and cook plenty of food, so they do not hit a lick of work on Sunday. Where we were located they were Catholic, and everybody went to church on Sunday morning. Go home and eat, then drink the good Moezle "vine" until about midnight. They seemed to get plenty of joy out of life. You did not have to be so very rich to hire maids, for the price was about 8 cents per day and board, and the same price for a farm hand. Railroad hands drew from 40 to 80 cents per day and boarded themselves and though they were getting rich. The price of meat was 60c per pound, but none of the ordinary people could afford to eat it. Cotton goods were very high, but you could get good silks from 35c to 80c per yard.

About the 20th of May, we got orders to turn our trucks over to some other outfit, and sent us to the Wengerohr with full packs, a distance of about 14 miles to walk. There we got on the train for St. Nazaire.

Before getting back to the U. S. A. I want to tell a few things that others said about us, for our division had no newspaper representative and mighty little publicity we got. We heard at San Antonio that the Express offered to send a correspondent with us, but General Allen refused for the reason that we were going

MOUSE MUSINGS

(Another Effort)

Crack and Crevice one time said. When we die, we'll not be dead— But we'll have just simply passed. When they burry us at last. And the directors said, "Amens!" If you pass, you'll live again. First as Rip Van Winkle, but back upon the job, you'll be. Crack and Crevice finally shuffled off this coil of life unuffled; and while breathing their last sigh. There is no such word as die; yet while claiming to be well, their remains began to smell. And they thought to calm their sir, and would send for an embalmer; Nothing in the world is real. There's no world and there's no shoul. Yet, no matter what we think, No one can ignore a stink; So they called an undertaker. When they could not wake them, sir, And their bodies never stirred. When at last they were interred. In the cemetery laid. Their automatic bodies soon decayed But they cried in muffled tones. As worms crawled o'er their bones. "We have never felt more power. All the joys of life are ours." Finally to dust converted. No a moment disconcerted. Crack and Crevice sternly said: "You can see that we're not dead. One can easily forget the riftings. If they read our book on "Siftings." "We have not been sick a day: "What you see is not decay: "It's all imagination. "There is no disintegration: "Keep your mind from error free. "And be strong and well as we." —Crack and Crevice

THEY BELIEVE IN GOING AFTER ADVERTISING

Garland, a little city a few miles north of Dallas, has long been regarded as having the best set of advertising merchants in any town of its size in Texas. Right under the shadow of the skyscrapers of Dallas, these wide-awake Garland merchants have industriously and persistently used the columns of their home paper with the result that Garland has enjoyed an immense volume of business and has a record of scarcely no failures in the past fifteen years. It is just the logical conclusion that follows such a course, but here comes the noteworthy feature. The other day the merchants of Garland met and decided to spend larger advertising appropriations in 1922. Those merchants had read Rodger Babson's forecast for 1922 and resolved with the rising tide of business certain to come this year, they did not propose to be left behind. Garland merchants deserve the success that is coming to them.—Clarendon News.

T. B. ON INCREASE AMONG YOUTHFUL GIRLS

Despite the very pronounced decline in the mortality from tuberculosis, which has taken place during the last decade, the disease is actually increasing among girls between the ages of fifteen and twenty years.

This shown clearly by figures covering the ten year period from 1911 to 1921. Adolescent girls constitute the only groups in which the tuberculosis death rate has not declined.

For the period 1911 to 1916 the death rate was 144.5; in 1919, 145.8 and in 1920, 151.5, an increase of 5 percent.

The fact that all other age groups showed a decrease for the same time, makes this increase very important. During the same period that the tuberculosis death rate for adolescent girls was increasing five per cent, the death rate among adolescent white boys was decreasing twenty-five per cent. For some time past students of tuberculosis have been giving this question considerable thought, but as yet no satisfactory answer has been obtained.

One way in which this problem can be reduced is periodic examinations so that the disease may be located in its early stages and treatment given in time so that one afflicted will have a chance of recovery, says the Texas Public Health Association.
