FORD'S PAPER FLAYS THE CHICAGO JEWS

In Reporting Recent Scandals, Brings In President of Leading Mail Order House in that City.

The Dearborn Independent, Henry Ford's weekly magazine, recently had a splendid article on the exposures of graft and white slavery recently unearthed and started by the Chicago Tribune, and incidentally it brought out the fact that one of the richest Jews in the United States, and who has a host of customers right here in Terry county, has had a big hand in it. It is not the intention of Dearborn Independent or the Herald to hurt anyone's business, but people ought to know with whom they deal. The Herald reprints the following extracts from the article in question. If readers want to see more of the article, call at the Herald office:

Real Estate to Negroes

Julius Rosenwald, president of Sears Roebuck & Company, and one of the wealthiest men in America, is credited with the negro exodus to Chicago. There would have been a very heavy movement no doubt without any encouragement other than economic conditions. That occurred elsewhere. But nowhere were the newcomers so enthusiastically welcomed and made "at home" as on Chicago's south side. Jewish real estate agents bought up block after block of residential property occupied before by white citizens of long standing and installed Negro residents. The newcomers covered Grand Boulevard, Prairie avenue and similar streets, only a short time before the residential quarters as such people as the Armours, Pullmans and others whose names are synonymous with the building of the second city of America. Leaders of the migration extended their lines farther and farther—going to Rosenwald for help. They were sold $5,000 pieces of property on an initial payment of $50 and permitted to move in after making the initial payment. This practice and the loss of older owners was one of the causes of the race riot which flamed out in 1919—although there were clear indications that Bolshevik propaganda inspired from New York's east side had a big share in the catastrophe.

For awhile after the riot the tide of dispossession that had been rolling out the original white home owners was stilled, but it began to flow again and there were indications that it had strong financial support from Jewish men of wealth. The Negroes were encouraged from some quarters, anyway to go into politics. Soon their lower element were prominent in vice and crime. But this time they had complete control of what had been one of the best residential sections of Chicago and while many of the latter Negroes who had moved in struggled against the degradation of the district it began to take on an entirely new tone.

Resorts, cabarets, cafes, saloons, gaming dens and vice houses opened up. Soon the district was notorious for its "black and tan" cabarets, where white women, many voluntarily degraded, but many forced into such a life originally, were to be seen nightly dancing new dances with Negro men. Raids on these places have made up the bulk of routine police reports in the newspapers.

Federal court injunctions obtained against some of these resorts under the Volstead Act revealed that Negro proprietors were frequently backed by an alien—the aliens interested in such places were usually Eastern Jews, South Italians and Sicilians with a sprinkling of other races.

The situation in this quarter of Chicago is such today that there are many hard-headed business men who have declared privately that unless there is a drastic change Chicago may well fear a serious race riot. The peril has actually been alluded to in the newspapers, and thousands of the respectable Negro residents have struggled to have the resorts cleaned out. If the present vice probe is carried to its logical conclusion the decent Negro element in the district will deserve the credit.

The situation on the South Side was called to the attention of Chief of Police Charles Fitzmorris more than a year ago. Chicago believed in Fitzmorris. He pledged himself to a clean city and asked the aid of all the good citizens.

In response to his call of the city's wealthiest and most prominent citizens stepped forth. Who? No other than Julius Rosenwald. Mr. Rosenwald has devoted a large part of his wealth to Negro institutions. Indeed many Negro institutions are officered by Jews.

The Committee of Fifteen was formed as an independent civilian organization to suppress vice. Mr. Rosenwald was its chairman! Many prominent citizens were persuaded to join it. They are now resigning rapidly, four having quit in four days because they couldn't find out why the Committee of Fifteen leaders insisted that there was no vice, while private investigators imported from other cities by other organizations found 200 houses, not 1000 inmates in 20 days of investigation and found that a big majority of these places were directed by the syndicate.

And then came the first meeting of the committee to make its plans to curb vice.

There was much talk and no action—and then the money came from a source which might have been considered entirely unexpected then, but which is causing considerable comment now.

Chief Fitzmorris stepped in and volunteered to supply the funds.

"I can furnish money for a committee of this kind from my contingent fund," he said. His offer was accepted, and, according to committee members, $5,000 was turned over to pay investigators. So the civilian committee, formed to act as a check on the police department and to see that it curbed vice, began work with funds furnished by the police department.

"We had better announce this with some kind of an explanation," Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen told the committee.

"No, if we do, we will have trouble getting any funds at all from private citizens if we have to ask them," Mr. Rosenwald is quoted as saying.

"That's right," was Fitzmorris opinion. "And I might have trouble in getting the appropriation I want if the council finance committee hears of it."

It was kept quiet, but made public during the present investigation. And then came testimony that investigators for the anti-vice Committee of Fifteen were protecting vice themselves and accepting bribes!

Formation of the Committee of Fifteen, with Rosenwald as chairman and Samuel Thrasher as manager, had apparently meant nothing to the vice lords, for their activities only spread farther and farther and became more and more open.

The Juvenile Protective Association learned of the slavery of 14, 15, 16 and 17 year old girls and immediately started to find out why, and to attempt to answer the muchly jockeyed question, "Who is responsible?" To make sure they were not double-crossed they sent to New York for a train-investigator.

Investigator Kinsey, who has been the star witness of the present probe, arrived in Chicago with no previous knowledge of the city. Where Chief of Police, Fitzmorris and all his men, State's Attorney Robert Crowe and all his henchmen and Julius Rosenwald and his Committee of Fifteen, with its battery of sleuths, had found only "traces" of "causalities" Kinsey in 20 days found:

Two hundred vice houses conducted on business principles, in charge of Negroes with white girls for sale. Twenty-five streets on which vice openly flaunted itself. Eighteen cabarets run by Negroes

MARRIED

Just a few of their relatives and friends gathered at the home of the sister of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. A.R. Brownfield, last Monday morning at 8:30, to witness the wedding of Miss Janie Pyeatt and Mr. Morgan Copeland. Rev. C.E. Ball, officiated.

Mrs. Copeland is the charming and accomplished daughter of Uncle Bill Pyeatt, and was practically reared in Brownfield, and her friends are numerous.

Mr. Copeland is the cashier of the Brownfield State Bank, and one of the leading young business men of the city, and has many friends and well wishers to congratulate him in his choice of a life companion.

TERRY COUNTY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE FORMED

The Terry County Chamber of Commerce was born one morning of last week, and by noon had around 400 members. A growing youth, we claim, and whatever of other good Capt. Nasbaum may have done, this will be to his credit—if the baby lives and keeps growing. That is the job on the hands of our citizens, and if it was worth the price of the burning, it deserves to live on and on.

We understand that no permanent organization has been perfected yet, but this is for the future. If live men and women are chosen, it will mean the life of the organization.

Hail to the Terry County Chamber of Commerce.

OLD TERRY IN STRUGGLE WITH GRIPPE OR FLU

Some say one thing and some another. If it is the old fashioned grippe, it has a good grip on us, and if flu is much milder than the seige we had during the world war. They get up and about too quick after taking it.

Be what it may, some member of nearly every family is sick or has been sick, though few are seriously so when the total number sick are considered. Those who are seriously sick usually have pneumonia, some of which are double pneumonia, and are in dangerous condition.

BIGGEST SNOW IN YEARS COVERS SOUTH PLAINS

A good top season is in the ground as a result of the snow Saturday night and Sunday. At Seminole the snow of both days measured about eight inches, the heaviest fall of snow in this community in several years.

The farmers have never stopped breaking land in Gaines County, as there was enough moisture for this, and with the snow will make farming prospects at this season look good.

The snow, from reports, although varying in depths, seems to have been general over West Texas.

The man consented and he went to work.

Drained off the oil, cleaned out the dirt.

Emptied the gas tank of water, plus gas.

And filled it with Texaco, the stuff that will last.

He gave it a crank, the engine started off.

Recent archeology in Egypt is giving the evolution brethren no comfort whatever. Instead of showing the possibility that man sprang from the lower animal, right to the reverse it is proving that the further back the civilization of Egypt is traced, the higher was their culture, and for centuries now these people have been on the down grade. Anyway, there is nothing to evolution only theory, and every bird of them has a different theory. If they could present a united front, they might accomplish some thing.

GOV. NEFF SIGNS WEST TEXAS A. & M. BILL

By Stillman Evans, Staff Correspondent Star-Telegram. Austin, Texas, Feb. 10.—Governor Pat M. Neff at 3:02 o'clock this afternoon signed the bill creating the Texas Technological School.

Governor Neff used three pens in affixing his signature. With one he presented to Dr. P. C. Coleman, of Colorado, a veteran proponent of the measure, he wrote "approved" with his own pen he wrote his signature "Pat M. Neff." With a third pen he is to present to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, he wrote the date and the title.

Homer D. Wade of Fort Worth, assistant manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, was present and received the gift of the pen.

A photograph of the signing of the bill was made.

The location of the college will be the next thing to be accomplished, it is estimated that at least 50 towns will be contenders for it.

The Governor has intimated that he will not name the board of directors for the college until the college is located.

The bill having passed the Legislature by the necessary two-thirds vote and carrying the emergency clause became effective immediately after having been signed by the Governor under the provisions of this act, on million is appropriated for the establishment of the college as follows: During 1923 $1,000,000 for purchase 1,000 acres of land on which the college is to be situated; during 1924 $500,000 for the erection of the college building and furnishings.

The college is to be located north of the 29th parallel and west of the 98th meridian. Its primary purpose will be education along lines of manufacturing cotton, wool, leather and other raw materials, textile engineering and technique of weaving, dyeing and tanning.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—John Bartley, noted criminal investigator, returned from Secret Service work during the war, is asked by the governor of New York to investigate a mysterious attempted robbery of the Robert S. Sikes home at Circle Lake, near Saratoga. Peculiar circumstances of the case interest Bartley, and he accepts.

CHAPTER II.—With his friend Pelt, Bartley goes to Circle Lake, the fair town of the Saratoga region. He and his old friend, the three visit the Sikes home. Sikes apparently regards Bartley as a friend, but he is suspicious of the man in prison for the attempted robbery. Bartley is found dead in bed, apparently having shot himself.

CHAPTER III.—Miss Potter, the dead man's secretary, is called to the scene. Bartley makes his way to the house, but Bartley insists he was murdered. Bartley finds evidence that Sikes, after a card party he had given, was shot on the lawn of his house, and Bartley is told that Sikes had been in the room some time before the revolver from Sikes's hand.

All three almost immediately drank from the glasses. The glasses show that they were all used at about the same time. Evidently two of the men smoked; the third did not. What I wonder is, were those three persons in the room at one and the same time?

Roche, who had long since lost his air of self-satisfaction, now offered to help us make a thorough examination of the room. When we had ended our unsuccessful search, Bartley stood silent, a puzzled expression on his face. "It's more mysterious than ever," he said at last. "I am sure he was killed in the room below, I am also sure he was not killed here. There must be blood spots somewhere. There are none in this room."

"There Must Be Blood Spots Somewhere. Yet Where? There Are None in This Room."

He went to the window and glanced out, then came back and glanced up at the steps that led to the roof. At once his face brightened, and he motioned us to follow him he bounded up the seven steps to the little door that opened into the balcony. We followed more slowly.

We found ourselves on a balcony some four feet wide that ran around the tower. About eight or ten feet below its bronze-tipped top, an iron railing protected the edge of the balcony and was covered with ivy, as were also the sides of the tower itself. Bartley paused for a moment, standing with his hand on the railing, his face serious, his eyes thoughtful.

But it was for a moment only; the next he was out of sight around the tower. Almost instantly we heard him call us, and when we reached his side he was on his knees examining the floor and the lower part of the wall. Looking where he pointed, I saw, at his feet a dark spot on the floor of the balcony, and a little higher up several similar spots on the wall of the tower. I realized that, at last, we had found what he had been looking for. There was no doubt that the splashes we saw were blood, and that it had been shed within a few hours. Had he expected to find them just where he did? I wondered.

As if answering my thoughts, he said: "Yes, and was murdered here."

Though he had been so certain that any person should select the balcony of a tower, fifty or more feet in the air, as a place in which to commit a murder, it became still more puzzling when I remembered that Sikes had been carried down two flights of stairs, undressed, placed in bed and a revolver clamped in his hand. Roche, his fat face puzzled, gave me a bewildered glance. I could suspect that Sikes's position was as I felt much the same way myself.

I expressed my surprise to Bartley and he responded, "I know, Pelt, all that you have said and all that you are thinking. It does seem out of all reason that anyone should pick the top of this tower for a murder. Yet here are the spots of blood, and there are none anywhere else. I am sure he was not killed downstairs; it must have been here, and—"

He paused and, bending over, picked something up. At first I could not make out what it was; then I saw that it was a gold-plated collar-button such as a man wears in the front of his shirt. Roche needed only one look to identify it, "Sikes's!"

Bartley did not speak until he had walked entirely around the tower and was again beside us.

"Chief," he said, "we may say there is no doubt that Sikes was killed up here. I do not know why such a strange place was chosen, but I do know that he was dragged down these stairs after his death and placed in his bed to make his death appear to be suicide. The odds were very high in favor of the criminal's being able to succeed in his design, too. But he slipped up—slipped up in the manner in which he put the gun in his hand and in the way in which he closed the case. But why he should have killed Sikes up here I cannot understand."

He paused for a moment, as if thinking, then continued, "Sikes gave a party last evening. The crime must have been committed after the party broke up. That was probably between one and two o'clock in the morning. One man, perhaps two, stayed behind to talk with Sikes. We can't say positively that they did, but they may have. Roche thinks that this man, or men, committed the murder. One man may have stayed and then gone away before the murder, or someone else may have come later. They may have come up here to see the view, and one of them shot him. After the crime the body, at any rate, was taken downstairs again and un-dressed, the nightshirt placed on it, and it laid in bed. As he wanted it to appear like suicide, the murderer placed the gun in the dead man's fingers, but he either did not remember, or perhaps did not know, how the eyes should look after a sudden death. The very things done to make us think it was suicide prove that it could not have possibly been so."

As Bartley was now ready to go downstairs again, we all returned to the room below. The first thing we saw when we entered, was a brown stocking, the mate to the one in the room below. We had not noticed it on our way to the balcony as it lay half under the rug and the opened door hid it. Bartley picked it up, glanced at it, smiled, and was going to say something when a voice called us from below.

In a second we were down the stairs and in Sikes's bedroom. The door to the stairs was closed just as we had left it; Bartley opened it to find a young man with a big camera under his arm on the landing. He gave us an inquiring glance; then seeing Roche, whom he seemed to know, he announced, "Doctor King said you wanted me up here to take some pictures. What shall I take first?"

Bartley glanced at the bed and I thought saw a slight start. The bedclothes that had been drawn down around Sikes's waist when we were examining the revolver in his hand, had been replaced by Bartley before we went to the floor above, in the position in which they were when we entered the room—that is, around Sikes's neck and half covering his chin.

"You had better take first a picture of the bed as it is now," Bartley suggested. "Then I will put the bedclothes down and you can take a picture of his hand with the revolver in it."

The first picture took some time for the young man could not seem to find the proper place for his camera, but at last it was done.

"Now for the other one," Bartley went to the side of the bed, reached up, and pulled back the bedclothes. As he drew them down he paused and a cry escaped him.

"Look!"

As my eyes fell on the hand of the dead man I, too, started. When we had gone upstairs the revolver was clasped in Sikes's stiff fingers. Now they were empty. Someone had removed the gun!

CHAPTER IV

The Dead Man's Eyes. For several moments we were all so startled that none of us spoke. For myself, I could only look at the hand that had, so short a time before, held the revolver. I could not imagine who could have taken it, and what his purpose in doing so could be. I glanced at Bartley. His face was set, a white line showing around his tightly closed lips. He was angry, very angry.

As he turned to Roche, who stood with eyes bright, his voice shook a little. "Roche, go and get Miss Potter at once. Tell her to call all the servants and have them assemble in the living room. I will be down in a moment."

Roche hurried out without speaking. Immediately Bartley bent again over the hand that had held the revolver. When he straightened up he told the photographer that he would not need him any longer. As soon as the young man had left the room, Bartley turned to me with a rueful little smile.

"Well, Pelt, I certainly slipped up this morning. We left this room without locking the door. True, there was no key, but I should have left either Roche or you on guard. In-

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

INTERESTING FACTS

106,327 Ford Cars and Truck Retailed in November

Approximately the same number scheduled for delivery
this month

What Does This Mean?

This volume of deliveries to actual owners is entirely unprecedented for this time of year.

It has taxed the manufacturing ability of the Ford Plants working at full capacity.

It indicates a volume of business during the rapidly approaching months of "heavy demands" which will be far beyond the maximum production schedule which the Ford Motor Company has set.

And that means a Ford shortage even more acute than the one which existed last Spring and Summer.

Dealers' stocks all over the country are low, there are no reserves to draw upon to meet the demands for deliveries.

There is no way in which dealer reserves can be built up as deliveries have been made to costumers as fast as Cars could be manufactured since last April.

The only way you can protect your desire to obtain prompt delivery of a Ford even at this time is to place your order immediately.

We believe you are entiteled to know these facts as they actually exist.

This emphasizes more strongly than anything we could possible say the necessity of you making prompt arrangements with a Ford Dealer for the listing of your order, particularly if you are contemplating the purchase of a Ford Car or Truck for use this Spring or Summer.

Standing in front of us with her neck straight and her shoulders thrown back defiantly, she almost shrieked the last words at us. S. A. was so angry that she did not seem to know what she was saying. I wondered why she should be in such a rage. So far as I could see, there was no reason for it. We stood silent and embarrassed. Bartley's eyes never left her face. Under his grave scrutiny she flushed and her eyes dropped. "Miss Potts," he said suddenly, "you don't want me to believe that you know who killed your brother-in-law, do you?"

His question seemed the last straw. She turned on him like a fury, and her eyes roved over the desk as if she were looking for something to throw at him. She shrieked, "You say I know who killed him—I know? Why, I don't even believe that he was murdered. How dare you say that—how can you stand there and say it to my face?"

She shrieked, "You say I know Who Killed Him—I know!"

HARRIS HAPPENINGS

Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzgerald from near Plains, visited the parents of both, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Fitzgerald, of this community, and Mr. and Mrs. Smith, of Tokio. Mr. Smith has had an attack of pneumonia, but is better.

Mrs. S. T. Murphey spent Wednesday with Mrs. F. M. Ellington, while their husbands made a business trip to Brownfield.

Misses Freda Tandy and Eileen Ellington spent the week end with their teacher, Miss Marie Taylor, at Tokio.

Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Murphey took supper at the Clare home last Friday. Mrs. Roy Fitzgerald is the owner of a Belle City incubator, and has it setting, so we will know another place to go to get fried chicken.

Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander, accompanied by Miss Thelma Latham, went to Lubbock Saturday. The visited Mrs. Alexander's sister, Mrs. M. E. Ellington and family at Meadow, awhile.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Fitzgerald, who formerly lived in this community, but is now living in Wyoming, are the parents of a new son, born in December. He will be known as Gordon Clyde.

Do you ever stop to think that when we set our house in order, making it sweet and restful and establishing within it thoughts and faiths that we are leading strings to God, we create a blessed sanctuary for some human soul—if it be just our own. Nothing can be greater and the community is enriched by it though it may not appear so on the surface. Every woman who contributes a fine home atmosphere is a pillar of the state. The women who dress in the extreme of fashion and live for a mere round of idle, unproductive interests do not count.

Big selection of coat suits, capes and coats, crepes and taffeta at the Jones Dry Goods Store.

T. J. Kern, progressive farmer of the Gomez country is a new reader. Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Copeland of the Ropesville country were down last week shopping with our merchants. It looked good to see these old timers in town, and the expressed themselves that their visit would be more often in the future.

Our old friend Wm. Rippertoe, of Goodlett, Texas, renewed for the Herald again this week, putting him up to Feb. 1924.

Remember we have good shows every Friday and Saturday night at the Legion Theatre.

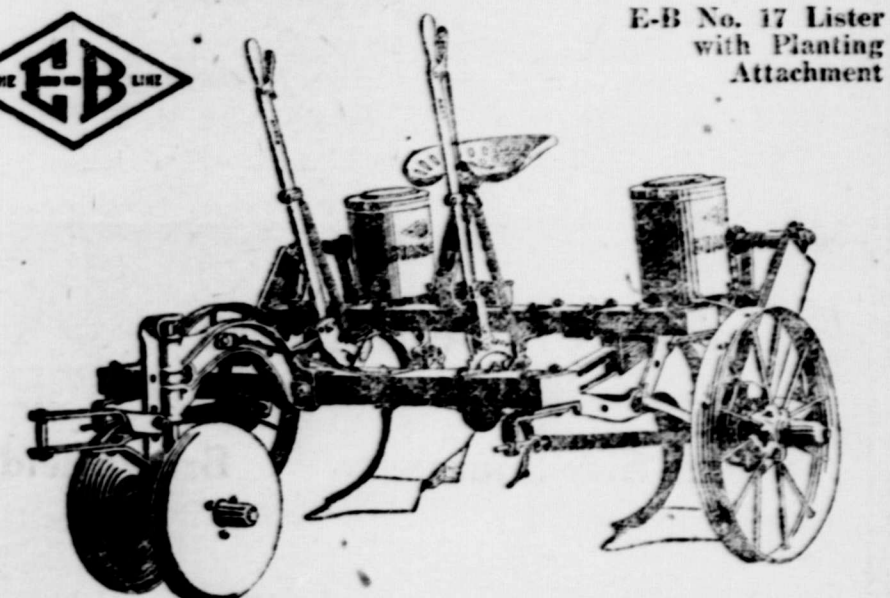

Recent renewals were H. D. Leach, J. B. Burk, W. W. Tapp, E. D. Westfall, J. F. Malcolm, Chas. Acker and Charley Duncan. Thanks, awfully.

Don't fail to see "My Wild Irish Rose" Friday Feb. 23rd at Legion Theatre.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Roberts of Coahoma, accompanied by their little daughter, Leatha Nell, and Mr. and Mrs. Cleve Holden were here last week to see Elmer Roberts, son of the former, who was ill. Mr. and Mrs. Holden visited in the home of his sister, Mrs. Strickland, while here.

ALL KINDS OF and vegetables in season, at Jones D. Co.

Mr. Chas. Acker, of Brownfield, has been ill several months, and is reported no better. See him and cheer him up.

An Unusual Offer on E-B Standard Two-Row Listers

You will admit that a dealer seldom helps you pay for what you buy, yet that is just what we will do on E-B Two-Row Listers. The Coupon below is worth $2.50 toward the regular purchase price of one of these labor-saving machines.

The E-B Lister makes an ideal machine for either a tractor or horses. The heavy tongue truck puts the machine under perfect control of the team without excessive weight on the horses' necks. The E-B may be used with or without a pole as desired. Reversible flanged wheels may be set for running in the furrow or straddling the ridge. The beams may be easily adjusted for different widths.

Planting attachments may be quickly added to this machine and driven by chains and sprockets. They may be fitted with disc or shovel covers.

COUPON—WORTH $2.50

This coupon signed and presented before June 1, 1924, pays $2.50 toward the regular purchase price of this splendid lister. Do it now and the $2.50 is yours.

NOTICE OF SHERIFF'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue of a writ of execution (Order of Sale) issued out of the district Court of Stonewall County, Texas, by the Clerk thereof, in cause No. 1397 therein pending, on January 8th, 1923, wherein Mrs. M. S. Pierson, a feme sole, the same person as Mrs. Maggie Pierson, is Plaintiff, and J. L. Chennault, as principal, and J. Rector Ward as endorser, and to me directed and delivered, I have levied upon and will, on the 6th day of March, 1923, being the first Tuesday in March 1923, between the hours of 10 o'clock A.M. and 4 o'clock P.M., at the Courthouse door of said Terry County, Texas, in the town of Brownfield, proceed to sell, at public auction, for cash, to the highest secure bidder therefor, all the estate, right, title, interest, and claim that the said J. L. Chennault and J. Rector Ward, defendants, so had, of, in, and to the following described tract of land, situated in Terry County, Texas, on 10-wit, December 1st, 1915, July 31st, 1919, May 17th, 1920, and January 24th, 1922, or any of said dates, and had at all times since, and do now have, to-wit:

All the South-east One-fourth (S.E. 1/4) of Section No. 10, Block D14, Certificate No. 218, C. & M. Ry Co., lands containing 160 acres, it being the land sold and conveyed by J. Proctor Ward and wife to said J. L. Chennault, by deed dated December 1st, 1915, and now of record in Volume 10 on page 180 of Terry County Deed Records.

This levy and sale are to satisfy a judgement in said cause for said Mrs. M. S. Pierson, Plaintiff, against said defendants in execution, dated Oct. 10th, 1922, as follows, to-wit: Against J. L. Chennault for $389.32, with 6 per cent interest from Oct. 10, 1922, and costs; and against J. Proctor Ward as endorser for $70.97 with 6 per cent from Oct. 10, 1922, and costs; and against both defendants for foreclosure of liens.

All costs accrued being $60.50 and costs for executing this writ. Witness my signature, this January 11th, 1923.
