

PUTTING EXTRA ACRES ON LEGS

By T. C. Richardson, Secretary Feeders-Breeders Ass'n

Under the farm law of 1938 every farm is divided, like Gaul, into three parts. They are, briefly, the soil depleting, neutral, and soil conserving acreage, and proportion allotted to each division varies from county and farm to farm. The principal cash crops classified as "soil depleting" are governed by specific terms of the law and the regulations thereunder, and are eligible for benefit payments. The "soil conserving" crops, also designated by the law and regulation, may be grazed or fed to the normal number of livestock on the farm without penalty, and when turned under for soil improvement, also earn benefit payments. This takes care of the family milk cows and work stock already on the farm.

The "neutral" or "general crop" acreage is subject to no restrictions of use whatever. It can be planted in any crop desired except those on which the farm has a definite allotment, such as cotton, wheat, rice or peanuts. It is this acreage that offers the greatest potentialities for increased and established farm income, if properly used. Some of this—a very limited amount on the whole—will go into truck or other intensive crops for sale. Good judgement of course will dictate the use of liberal production of food crops to be used at home.

Most of this acreage, however, will have to go into feed crops of one kind or another. In the cotton belt this can easily result in such a large feed crops that the cash markets will be swamped, and the producer will scarcely get harvesting costs, much less pay for his labor and the use of the land in production. We have all seen milo sell at $2 to $5 a ton for heads, oats at 20 cents a bushel or less, corn at 35 cents, which does not represent day wages for harvesting and hauling to town. Since all feed crops must in the end go into livestock or poultry, it stands to reason that the consuming animals and fowls should be brought to the feed instead of shipping the feed to them elsewhere. A truck or railroad ride does not increase the meat or milk-making capacity of a ton of hay or a bushel of grain. The farmer who grows the feed can therefore produce animal products on the farm at a lower cost, and whatever the price of eggs, meat, milk or wool, sells his feed to a better advantage in concentrated form than as a raw material.

Farms already set up with the livestock and poultry to consume their feed crops, and the facilities for handling them, will follow their usual practices with no interference from the law. Those not so circumstanced may be temporarily embarrassed in making the necessary readjustments to utilize this acreage to the best advantage. Fencing and water supplies must be provided when livestock are introduced, and the livestock must be procured. When the feed is grown and properly stored financing can usually be found, either through private banks or the Production Credit Associations, for the purchase of livestock.

The final effect of the readjustments of cropping practices under the new law will be a better balanced farming system, the spreading of risks, more days of profitable employment in the farming year, the conservation and improvement of the soil, higher acre yields of the cash crops as a result of rotations and manuring, and a better standard of rural life in the South. Wise farmers are making the most of the opportunity to get away from the one-crop system with government benefits to help in making the change.

Mrs. R. L. Bowers and Mrs. J. L. Randal spent the week end in Austin, Texas as guests of Mrs. Percy Spencer.

Population Not Dense in Texas Despite Growth

DALLAS, May 25.—Texas has more than doubled her population since the turn of the century—a greater proportionate increase than any other section of the country save the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast regions.

However, although its gain to the 6,172,000 mark in 1937 made it second only to California in speed of growth that year, its "population density" ranking of 36th among the state indicates that it still needs "more people," says a report of the All-South Development Council.

When its present ratio of 22.2 persons per square mile is compared to such figures as 131.8 for New England, 262.2 for the Middle Atlantic states of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, 103 for the Ohio-Illinois-Michigan areas and, finally, 55.1 for the Kentucky-Alabama-Mississippi-Tennessee section, Texas' capacity for populating its wide-open spaces is especially impressive.

"The need for still greater population density is part of the magic circle involving production, wealth, consequent growth of buying power, more population and back to more production and still more buying power," the report explains, "and this circle will widen and strengthen rapidly with the awakening of Texas as to its yet largely-untapped potentialities as a producer not only of raw materials, but of consumer goods."

Summer school work began at Brownfield High School Wednesday, May 25. Several students enrolled at 8:00 o'clock on Wednesday morning, and others are expected to enroll. All students who expect to attend are expected to enroll this week and no students will be permitted to enroll after Monday, May 30 for summer work.

Summer School Announcement

Courses are being offered in English, Spanish, History, Algebra, I and II, Geometry and some other courses that may be needed. If any high school pupils need to make some half credits or to make up some credits in the subjects in which they failed, they should take advantage of the opportunity offered.

Miss Fields will have charge of the summer work. Miss Murphy will also have some Home Economics work or a course in home projects.

IN OLD CHICAGO

Old Chicago Represents An 18 Months Job

History is slow in the making—and, the movie men have found, just as slow in the remaking. In the current 20th Century-Fox offering, "In Old Chicago," which makes its debut at the Rialto Theatre, Sunday and Monday, the major part of the picture's action deals with that hectic year 1870-1871, climaxed by the historic fire in October of the latter date. And the records of the studio show that it required a year and a half of intensive effort to bring that story to the screen.

As a matter of fact, it required three months of shooting just to film the events of two days—those dread days of October 8th and 9th when the blaze was at its height.

Began 2 Years Ago It was nearly two years ago that Darryl F. Zanuck, production chief at 20th Century-Fox, decided to base a picture upon Niven Busch's story, "We, The O'Learys." It was to be a romantic film, of spectacular proportions, climaxed by a re-enactment of the fire. Immediately this decision was made, the research experts of the studio were set to work amassing what finally amounted to 240 pages of closely typed information on scenes, costumes, habits of speech and particular mannerisms of famous characters who figured in the story. Supplementing the typed data were hundreds of contemporary drawings and a few photographs culled from collections all over the United States.

Thereupon began the task of building the sets. This involved construction of two cities—one to represent Chicago in the picture's prologue as it appeared in 1854, when Molly O'Leary first saw the city. The other to represent the city as it appeared when Molly's cow kicked over the lantern that set off the blaze which destroyed the city. In the end, more than sixty acres were covered with buildings, streets, car tracks and even an artificial lake to represent the Lake Michigan shore front. These in addition to vast interior sets which occupied three sound stages on the lot.

With the sets under way, there came the problem of casting. From his own lot, Zanuck drew Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Don Ameche for leading roles. From elsewhere, he obtained the services of Alice Brady and Andy Devine Supplementing them were a host of important featured players, among them Brian Donlevy, Phyllis Brook, Sidney Blackmer and Berton Churchill, to mention a few.

More than in scenic and costume detail was accuracy preserved. It was no simulated terror which gripped extras and players on the set during the fire scene when, for example, a herd of cattle were loosed to recreate the stampede of fear-maddened beasts from the stockyards. The players knew it was only a movie, but the cattle didn't, and it required the exercise of elaborate precautions to prevent serious injury.

It is not difficult, then to understand that Zanuck planned "In Old Chicago" as the most ambitious company. Nor to understand that when the last cost had been reckoned it was also one of the most expensive ventures in Hollywood history.

Postmaster James H. Dallas informed us this week that in conversation with Mr. Holt, who made the landing here, Mr. Holt stated that it was just about as smooth as any unprepared field he ever landed on, and with just a bit of work, could be put in excellent shape. It seems Mr. Holt made this statement after Mr. Dallas kinder apologized for the condition of the field.

Mr. Dallas further stated that during Air Mail Week, the local post-office handled 512 air mail letters and 2 packages, which shows that many did not wait until the plane came to pick up mail via air.

Miss Lucille Maize, one of the high school teachers is justly proud of the work that some of the students have done under her guidance the past year. There are lots of good teachers, and Brownfield schools has her share of them, but Miss Maize seems to put her whole heart in instructing her pupils.

In another place in this paper, we have an article about some of her outstanding students, and the work they have been doing, classing right up with the best in the state.

Funds Available for Wind Erosion

AMARILLO, Texas, May 21.— Loan applications are now being received from farmers in Region Twelve of the Farm Security Administration, which embraces all of New Mexico, West Texas, the Oklahoma Panhandle, Southwestern Colorado and Western Kansas, who needs funds to immediately protect their lands against damage by wind erosion, Roy I. Kimmel, coordinator for the Department of Agriculture in the Southern Great Plains area, announced here this week.

Mr. Kimmel's announcement followed a conference here with L. H. Hauter, regional director of the FSA and Fred Merrifield, field agent for the Southern Division of the AAA.

Applications for loans, which are being extended by the Farm Security Administration in cooperation with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, should be filed with the local A. C. P. Committees.

These loans, it was explained, are to be made where farmers assign a part of their tentative AAA payments as security.

Farmers may borrow any needed amount up to 60 per cent of their expected payment for participation in the 1938 Agricultural Conservation Administration program to adequately protect their lands against wind erosion hazards.

In effect this plan enables farmers to get funds in advance for the purchase of materials and supplies to work their eroding lands. It is especially designed to be of help to those farmers who cannot immediately obtain advances through other credit channels.

Funds obtained through this emergency lending program are to be used to put the approved tillage and seeding practices into effect in accordance with the 1938 Agricultural Conservation program requirements.

Originally this plan was scheduled to be administered in only 40 counties in the five-state area where the farm lands were most seriously affected by wind erosion. However, because of continued need for proper cultivation and seeding practices in widely separated wind erosion localities, the program was revised to include all counties in Region Twelve where the need might exist.

Farmers desiring full details for making applications for loans are encouraged to contact their local A. C. P. Committees.

Gaston Don't Think Much of E. Texas Farm

Had a little conversation with Charley Gaston one day recently, and he was telling us of his trip back east, and mentioned that he had a fifty acre farm back there. By the way, Charley has been threatening to sell out for several years and go back there, but dogged if we don't believe he has east Texas out of his mind.

He informed us that one man had been renting the place for the past three years and hadn't gotten a penny out of the man, not even enough to pay the taxes. This time he asked the man if he didn't think he ought to pay enough rent to cover the taxes. "Just can't do it, and live," was the reply.

"Well, you go ahead and work the place this year, and if you don't make enough on it to pay the taxes, I'll deed it to you. Charley says the bermuda and johnson grass is taking that country, especially their best bottom farms.

R. M. Kendrick Offers No Fishing Alibi

Most fishermen when they return from a fishing trip, have some alibi to offer, but not so with Col. R. M. Kendrick. In fact, without the least hesitancy, he'll tell you right off the reel that he is the sorriest specimen of fisherman extant. He went off some 200 or 300 miles recently and got three small minnows, and they got the rest of his bait.

We advised him to carry Homer Winston or Jack Hart next time and let them do the fishing while he looks after the refreshments. But it looks like a fellow brought up down in old Bosque county, should have a smattering of fishing, anyway.

Mr. and Mrs. Ocie Rhyne and daughter were guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Rhyne over the week end, Misses Mildred and Modena Stout of Bowie, Texas, returned with them.

Mrs. Flora Monor, who has been making her home with the L. A. Rhyne family returned to her home in Bowie, Texas, to spend the summer.

Pupils of Local Teacher Efficient

Miss Lucille Maize Brownfield High School Brownfield, Texas

Dear Miss Maize:

Your pupils, Inez Martin, Hardin Joyce, Orlena Ball and Keller Greenfield are four of a handful whose performance in the seventh annual news examination entitles them to a runner's-up prize—Parker fountain pen and pencil set—and a chance at a trip to Washington, while Congress is still in session we hope.

Will you please have your pupils write a set of ten questions of their own invention which they would expect any of their rivals in the news examination to be able to answer. These questions for which the answers should be supplied, may be based upon a single subject or a theme covering the whole range of national and world affairs.

The trip to Washington will be awarded on the basis of the grasp of the dynamics of modern history exhibited by these questions.

The test should be written and mailed to us within the next few days, along with a statement as to what dates would be best suited for your trip to Washington. Should one of your pupils win the trip, you may count on a three-day stay there and overnight stops enroute at our expense.

May we express our delight that your pupils exhibited such a broad knowledge of the material which has been published in Scholastic. Not only the performance of the best ten, but the remarkable average of 89.5 for 60 pupils is one that demonstrates conclusively that high school pupils can obtain a proficient mastery of the trend of world affairs if they take an interest.

Do you mind sending a statement or a copy of this letter to your local newspapers to in form them of the good work of your pupils? It will also help to stimulate interest in public affairs generally if your school finds it convenient to arrange for a presentation of the pen and pencil sets during assembly exercises. The sets are being mailed in your care under separate cover, and you should receive them within ten days.

Cordially yours, Marc Rosenblum Editor, Teacher Edition.

Our friend Jawn Price wanted us to get his paper right quick last week and sent it via air, which cost some nine cents. And no wonder. It had some mighty good news for Littlefield, as a letter from Congressman Mahon promised them the next federal building.

Yes, we kinda riled Bro. Hale joshing him about his burg. Say, Col. Hale, we thank you for giving us the title of Corporal. That is the highest rank we ever had conferred on us. And, by the way, you'll have a hard time making those old Yoakumites sore at us. Why, we were eating jerk beef with some of them when you was still down in east Texas drinking ditch water.

BIRTH OF A SONG

His parents wanted him to be a bridge builder, but the family background of Sigmund Romberg was too melodic, and he took to music like the well-known duck.

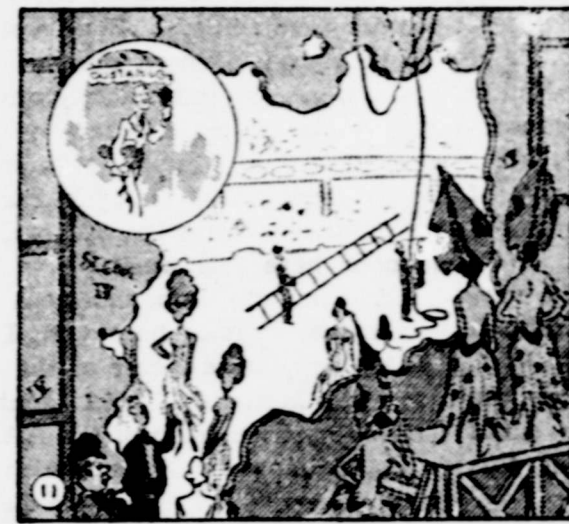

At the age of fourteen, Sigmund Romberg had mastered nearly every playable instrument and was already conducting school orchestras and bands.

As a youth, he was always hanging around back stage and rubbing shoulders with the great in musical circles. At twenty, he joined the army and became involved in the Balkan war. After nine months more of service he left for America.

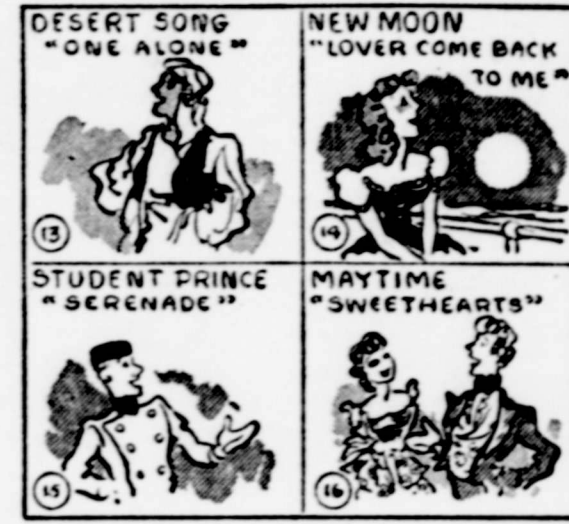

America really proved the land of opportunity for the young composer. From pencil patches to cafe musician in a week—he made the trip from Second Avenue to Broadway in less than a year.

After several years in various Broadway cafes and restaurants, Romberg became a leader—his own boss. He performed in Bustoneby's by night and watched rehearsals of his first Broadway show, "Whirl of New York", by day.

Romberg wrote sixteen Winter Garden shows in a row, among them several Al Jolson successes, and six other productions, including "Maytime."

Waltzes in the tempo of Vienna—melodies inspired by Straus, Lehar and other Danubians flowed from his prolific pen. Motion pictures and radio called him.

Romberg is proud of his membership in the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, his position as Assistant Treasurer, and his membership on the Board of Directors. He is active in the struggle to protect the rights of other composers and authors.

their property. Mexico came back with a rejoinder that a poor rule that didn't work both ways and advised them to pay Uncle Sam what they owed us.

City Marshal Earl Wilson says there are about a half dozen negroes here that are giving him more trouble than all the white and the balance of the colored population combined. And sizing up his conversation, he is getting about enough of the matter. It would pay the better element of the town to tell these outlaws to either quiet down or leave town.

The most contemptible wretch that a city or town can be punished with, is a fire bug. He burns that which belongs to other people, and at the same time, makes their rates higher, and in some cases have been known to cause insurance companies to withdraw from a town. Lamesa has had its share recently, when four large cotton warehouses with contents have gone up in smoke. One thousand dollars reward has been offered, and state officers are assisting local officers in trying to apprehend the firebugs.

A good thing can be said of Charley Lockhart and his candidacy for reelection as state treasurer. He is not burdening the mails with free propaganda which he wishes newspapers to print free for him. We had one letter this week from a candidate that took nine cents postage, and we get plenty of them with six, all of which were promptly dumped in the waste basket. We believe a saving of postage for a few weeks would pay for a nice little announcement in most of the papers, and one thing sure, all the country papers would not be sore at them.

Some candidates continue to mail us free dope done on a mimeograph machine. The return on the envelope is done with a rubber stamp. Any publisher caught running such stuff in this Panhandle domain should be sentenced to a long stay in the Dust Bowl.—Clarendon Leader.

Peter Mollyneaux of Dallas, editor of the Texas Weekly continues his one man fight to arouse the nation to the need of abolishing high tariffs as the one and only method of ending the depression. "We cannot sell our surplus farm crops abroad and that is the chief reason the depression remains with us says this editor. Cutting down production is just another way of cutting the throat of the agricultural Southland. Where's that good old Democratic urge for free trade we used to hear about when the Democrats were trying to oust the Republicans? The present Democratic Congressmen seem to have gone hog-wild for the high protective tariff they used to fight to a fare-ye-well.—Big Spring News.

TRUSTS AND MONOPOLIES

President Roosevelt comes out bodily against trusts and monopolies when he says "concentration of private power exists today without equal in history." Quoting him further, he says:

"Unhappy events abroad have retagged us two simple truths about the liberty of a Democratic people." "The first is that the liberty of a democracy is not safe if the people tolerate the growth of private power to a point where it becomes stronger than their Democratic state itself. That, in its essence, is Fascism—ownership of government by an individual, by a group, or by any other controlling private power.

"The second truth is that the liberty of a democracy is not safe if its business system does not provide employment and produce and distribute goods in such a way as to sustain an acceptable standard of living.

"Among us today a concentration of private power without equal in history is growing." This "concentration" idea of the President could easily be corroborated by the testimony of the newspaper profession, or any line using paper. Mills set an exorbitant price on their news print, for instance, and then compel the distributors to charge a price set by the mills. These mills are located in Canada, for the present, the milling interests of the States claiming that wood pulp cannot be obtained in the States.—Clarendon Leader.

Few people realize what a hodge-podge the Protestants have made in religious beliefs in this nation. Most people know there are too many denominations, but few realize that there are 150 different and distinct Protestant denominations in this nation. There are 12 different kinds of Presbyterians; 13 different kinds of Baptists; 16 different kinds of Methodists; 17 different kinds of Lutherans. The three leading branches of the Methodist church have finally quit bickering over dead issues and have voted for unification under the name, The Methodist Church. This makes a denomination of 8,000,000 members, the largest Protestant Church in the world. Just why people will allow themselves to become so biased in their religious belief that they will jump up and start another denomination for the purpose of satisfying their prejudices, we have never been able to understand. Quarrels over doctrinal differences is certainly very far from the spirit of Christianity, and those who profess to be Christians should be ashamed of themselves for being so narrow in their beliefs. Getting back to home, the people of Canyon are satisfied with one postoffice, one depot, one court house, one public school, one college; but in religious matters it takes about a dozen churches to satisfy our prejudices. We say prejudices advised.

ly for possibly not more than 10 percent of any congregation can tell you why they are members of any particular denomination, excepting that they were reared in that belief. What a wonderful world this would be if people would strive to follow in the footsteps of Christ instead of quarrelling with their neighbors about some petty doctrinal belief—in which both are probably wrong.—Canyon News.

LAMESA "FIREBUG" PROBLEM IS SERIOUS

One, two, three, four big cotton warehouse fires at Lamesa in recent weeks, has brought that little city face to face with an even more serious problem—the threat of wholesale cancellation (according to press report) of insurance policies in the town—which probably will not be carried out—but nevertheless firebug just as badly as the Underwriters. To prove it they held a mass meeting there last week, and rewards of a thousand dollars have been posted.

Each one of the men who attended that meeting probably has a business in which he has money invested, and has a home in which his family is living—and they are both treasured possessions. He has more cause to be alarmed than the insurance companies. Of course that firebug MUST be caught and eliminated. But equally of course, the threat of insurance companies threatening wholesale policy cancellations must also be eliminated. And both eliminations are equally important. — County-Wide News. (Littlefield.)

WHAT IS A NAME?

The English poet of two centuries ago wrote, "some to the fascination of a name surrender judgement hoodwinked", doubtless could not foresee the trend of Twentieth Century politics in America. But it is the theory embodied in that phrase which has doubtless inspired a number of enterprising citizens to seek political office. Oklahoma for instance, has already elected Will Rogers to Congress, and candidates recently announced for various offices in the State also include Sam Houston, Patrick Henry, Daniel Boone and even Mae West, a coy matron hopes the voters will come up and see her sometime.

In Texas the game has taken a new twist, but the principle is relatively the same. Last Saturday Jim Ferguson announced for Governor (he is James A., a cousin of the redoubtable James E.), and Ernest O. Thompson, a filling station employee whose name is only a slight variation from that of a leading candidate already in the race, announced also. It would not be surprising if we up sooner or later with a Bill McGraw, whose nominal similarity to Bill McGraw would add to the general confusion. And so it goes. This is opera bouffe on vast political stage, of course, and the natural reaction of the serious minded voter is one of resentment against this capable travesty on democracy. But, somehow, we cannot help viewing the trend as a healthy one. In the first place, there is no assurance that these gay political Lotharios would give us much worse administrations than those to which we have been accustomed. And in the second place maybe this is one way to start getting the voters to the polls, even if it does take Candidates Shirley Temple and Donald Duck, and some floor shows and bank nites at the ballot boxes, to complete the process. Thus, by exposing the voters to politics in an entertaining way, perhaps we can eventually awaken in them a latent curiosity which will induce them to weigh fundamental issues, study the requirements of candidates, and finally to echo with inflexible political rectitude the words of Shakespeare: "Go back; the virtue of your name is not here passable."

BIRTH OF A SONG

"STARDUST"

By Hoagy Carmichael and Mitchell Parish

In Bloomington, Indiana, where he was born, Hoagy Carmichael picked up piano from his rag-time playing mother. His father was a one step clog dancer and electrician.

Hoagy led the Indiana University band between studying law and writing songs. Paul Whiteman liked his "Washboard Blues" and recorded it.

Music publishers called Carmichael, but he turned to banking, then to his chosen profession, law.

From ASCAP Files
By Joseph R. Fiesler and Paul Carruth

His chosen, but unprofitable profession gave him lots of time to tinker with tunes, and Hoagy's brief case was full of music when he left Florida.

The Hoosier schoolboy returned to Indianapolis to continue his career, but if law was on his brain, swing was in his heart.

Hoagy wrote "Star Dust" and other songs during this period. He tried to crash Hollywood with no success, came east and settled down in the music world.

Two years later, and "Star Dust" came into first place as the hit torch song of this generation. Now Hollywood DEMANDED him.

Hoagy's many fine songs have won him high rank in the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, which licenses the performing rights of his music.

BEWARE OF "CARRIERS"

Sensational and surprising news comes from Washington—the Republicans don't like the way F. D. R. is doing. The Wall Street delegation is predicting ruin and economic disaster if the President don't stop distributing so much money to the plain people. We doubt whether "Honest Abe"—the founder of the Republican party, would have had anything to do with these self appointed Don Quixotes. We rather think that Lincoln would have been the first to sanction Roosevelt's honest and humane policies.

It would be very impolite to refer these critics back to the records of their Hoover administration in the gloomy days of 1931 and 1932 when the country was turned into a "Mellon" patch, and almost every bank in the United States faced ruin. We presume that when they speak of "Economic Disaster" they are thinking of their own economic prospects.

Not since the days of Washington and Jefferson has any man been so truly the president of all the people as has Franklin Delano Roosevelt. He is removing the needs for a dictatorship by eliminating the elements that dictators feed and grow fat upon. In a recent broadcast, he said, "Dictators are the product of starvation, unrest, poverty and unemployment."

The administration's labors have been retarded by the handicaps contingent upon human frailties. Honest mistakes, dishonest public servants and errors in judgement, have been the natural barriers that have impeded the progress towards the nation's rehabilitation.

Through all the hectic days that have passed since President Roosevelt declared a bank moratorium, his every act and decision have been amplified, multiplied, scrutinized and dissected. There never has been any mystery or secret about what our president was up to. From the very first, he took the entire country into his confidence. He has written his record into the private lives of a hundred and twenty million people. Every form of criticism has been resorted to by the die-hards of the opposition, except one—Never has there been question or doubt expressed or implied as to the President's sincerity or honesty of purpose.

Our country is not immune to the diseases that have attacked and threaten the political lives of most nations. We are constantly exposed to the ravages of communism, fascism and nazi-mania. Only absolute faith in—and full support of our wise administration can prevent these plagues from sweeping the western hemisphere.

We are at war—fighting disease carriers who clothe themselves in the garb of labor leaders, social workers and, sometimes even appear as United States senators. These must be made harmless or destroyed.

So, when you hear or read blatant just sprinkle your mind with the strong germicide of patriotism and common sense.

INDIANA CAGE WIZARD TO CONDUCT SCHOOL FOR TEXAS COACHES

DENTON, Texas — Nationally known high school basketball coaching wizard, Coach Clifford Wells of Logansport High School in

CLIFF WELLS

Indiana is to conduct the summer coaching school for the Texas High School Basketball Coaches Association at North Texas State Teachers College the last week in June.

Wells won wide recognition, beginning in 1930, through his use of a slow set style of screen plays. In 1934 he won a state championship with a figure 8 offense and a combination man-for-man and sliding zone defense, styles that have been copied by many Indiana teams.

The Logansport High athletic director was the organizer and first president of the Indiana high school coaches association. He was appointed chairman of the high school group of the National Coaches Association at Chicago last April.

In 2 years in Indiana high school basketball, Wells has produced teams which have won 75.1 per cent of all their games, 21 district championships, 16 regional championships, and 3 major championships.

HAVE DOMESTIC SERVANTS EXAMINED PERIODICALLY

AUSTIN, Texas, May 24.—"Servants in the home can be a potent source of disease transmission," states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer, "unless they are examined periodically by a physician so they can be rendered non-infectious of the communicable disease should such diseases exist."

"There is a State law requiring food handlers in public places to have health certificates but this law exempts domestics. So the responsibility falls upon the employer.

Persons of all races are employed in Texas as cooks, maids, nurses and laundresses. As such they come in intimate contact with the grown-ups and children in the family. If the servant harbors any communicable disease the health of the employing family is endangered.

Diseases transmittable in this manner are: tuberculosis, syphilis, typhoid fever, dysentery, diphtheria and other acute contagious diseases. A typhoid carrier can easily infect an entire family. A syphilitic cook or nursemaid is able to transmit the venereal disease through contact with food, unsterilized dishes and in playing with children. Tuberculosis is of very easy transmission.

The Texas State Department of Health recommends that all employers have their family physician examine their house servants from time to time to eliminate any danger of contracting these diseases. Treatment should be instituted promptly when the servants are diseased. The

CHAIN STORES TO HELP NATIONAL COTTON WEEK

DALLAS, Texas, May 25.—The response of Texas and national chain stores to the recent request of the Texas Cotton Producers Merchandising Committee for assistance in the promotion of National Cotton week has been most gratifying. Albert L. Walters, Secretary of the Texas Chain Stores Committee, said here today.

The cotton producers committee, of which C. H. Pigg of Waxahachie is chairman, passed a resolution requesting the nation's chain stores cooperation in the attempt to reduce the cotton surplus by a drive beginning with National Cotton week on May 30th.

"8500 stores belonging to the Institute of Distribution, which includes such firms as Sears Roebuck, J. C. Penny, F. W. Woolworth, Montgomery Ward, McCroy, McCellan, S. H. Kress, and W. T. Grant Co., are joining with the 37,000 national food chain stores, the national drug chains and shoe chains in devoting their windows, their counters and their newspaper advertising to the task of selling two years of cotton for every yard sold last year," Mr. Walters said.

"When it is realized that last year the chain stores belonging to the Institute of Distribution sold cotton goods having a retail value of 600 million dollars, and that the food, drug and shoe chains used or sold millions of pounds of cotton goods, the possibilities of the campaign are tremendous," Walters said. "The promptness and heartiness of the chain stores response is very pleasing to us, and we feel that it augurs well for the success of the campaign," Walters concluded.

P. R. Cates has returned from a ten day trip to Port Isabella.

Maytime is Plan-time for Playtime

HOWEVER softly May Zephyrs blow, they awaken in all of us the fond yearning for Summer and vacation.

Like seeds, these stir in the depths of the wind and twine pleasant tendrils about our thought. Visions intrude upon the daily task . . . of gossamer mists lifting at dawn from a campsite in the sumberous Shenandoah . . . of clean, tang-laden sunshine flooding a salty seaport in Brittany or Nova Scotia . . . of squat Mexican missions . . . the Rhineland . . . Bermuda . . . our own Northwest . . . or a pretty little cottage by the sea.

Whichever it's to be, half fun lies in planning. And there, the newspaper helps. Travel columns are full of the very information you're after. Daily advertising is a reliable guide in buying cruise luggage . . . resort clothes . . . sporting equipment . . . sun lotion . . . new tires for the car . . . all the other accoutrements of one of the happiest times of the year. Advertisements can help to make vacation dreams come true!

"DRINK MILK" DRIVE GAINS NATION-WIDE SUPPORT

MORE than three million pieces of literature—3,507,272 as a matter of statistics—and endorsements of 22 governors helped increase milk consumption in homes, restaurants, hotels and soda fountains during National Milk Week, November 14-20, according to the Milk Industry Foundation.

A summary of the dairy industry's first nation-wide effort to popularize "the most nearly perfect food" shows that some 2,800 milk companies in cooperation with the cooperative milk producers' associations and other organized dairy farm groups were active in the program.

ready the country's largest single source of farm income—of even greater significance to the American farmer.

Newspaper advertising, radio, motion pictures, photographs and promotional ideas ranging from parades to the pasturing of cows on historic Boston Common centered public attention on milk. Hundreds of local Milk Week committees were actively engaged in the work.

Many school dieticians and teachers endorsed the move to "Keep Youthful—Drink Milk" by exercises in their classrooms.

Dairy leaders believe "Milk Week" helped make the public better informed of the great nutritive value of milk and the essential part it should play in the national diet.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
PATTERN PICTURES

An exposure of 1/100 second at f.5.6 on chrome type of film caught this water pattern.

NATURE has a mysterious way of creating patterns, designs. She seems to abhor plainness as much as she abhors a vacuum.

Consider that every cell that is the substance of matter is fashioned in some kind of pattern. The snowflake has a pattern. Liquids crystallize in patterns. The wind arranges snow drifts in patterns as it does the sand on dunes and deserts. The tide goes out and leaves the sea bottom rippled with designs. Calm water disturbed makes rhythmic designs on its surface. Shadows make patterns. Leafy boughs against the sky, moss on the rocks, tiger skins, wings of birds—what is there unadorned with some kind of pattern? Nature is full of them, evidences of a seeming purpose to maintain rhythm, beauty and order in the universe. Man imitates them, consciously or unconsciously, in the structures he builds, the materials he fabricates and the order in which he places things.

Have you ever thought of patterns, nature's and man's, as subjects for a camera hobby? Some camera artists have made prize pictures of patterns. It's a way to obtain new pleasure from the world about you. It requires, first, skill in seeing patterns. They are so common that only the exceptionally obvious ones, like those in sea sand, are likely to be noticed by a person not looking for them. These we call curious, but gaze up through a skyscraper in the course of construction or go down to the waterfront and study the patterns that the masts and rigging of ships make against the sky. Watch for shadow designs made by ordinary objects, such as a picket fence or a cartwheel. These are the kinds that only the purposeful observer is likely to notice. For him, patterns that may be caught with a camera are everywhere. Plump a stone into a pool or spill a box of matches on the table and you have one made to order for you.

Go pattern hunting with your camera. Taking such pictures challenges your photographic skill and you will find that both your album and your mind will be enriched thereby.

of this year. Says Thompson, "The figures on Texas support the belief that this state is becoming more popular. According to present indications the number of visiting cars and motorists in 1938 will compare favorably with any earlier year."

"We estimate that motor tourists routed by our bureau will spend about $9,000,000 in retail stores, $8,000,000 in restaurants and other eating places, $7,500,000 for gasoline, oil and other transportation costs and a similar amount for hotel accommodations and lodgings. About $3,000,000 will go for amusements and $2,000,000 for souvenirs and incidentals."

HARMONY—

On last Sunday our community observed Mother's and Father's Day jointly. The program was very interesting, composed of readings, short plays and songs relating to those who were to be honored. The stage was very prettily decorated with red and white. After the morning program, lunch was spread at noon. The response for well filled baskets certainly went over big. After a two hour recreation period the program continued until 2:30. Bro. Avery Rogers, Baptist pastor of Brownfield, concluded the program with a message on "Home." We heard many say they had never heard an abler or more appealing message on that theme, and he left an impression that will not soon wear off. We thank him very much for coming our way, and assisting us to again find our balance. We had a crowded house and wish that all the people of our county could have heard Bro. Rogers on that subject.

This past week has been a busy week for our teachers. On May the 18th the elementary grades, composed of Miss Celma McManis' room and the primary grades, which is Mrs. C. A. Wilhite's room furnished interesting entertainment, consisting of reading and short plays. A May Pole drill by the little folks who were dressed in pink and blue was very pretty. We all enjoyed the program so much.

The seventh grade graduation class of Mr. C. A. Wilhite's room included

Gentle Iconoclasm with Politics Eschewed

EDITOR'S NOTE—Dr. Pope's opinions are his own, and his articles do not necessarily always reflect the editorial policies of this paper.

Washington, D. C. Nov. 15, 1940— I have just spent a couple of days waiting at the offices of Federal Director of Press and Propaganda, Sherman Minton, and while I did not get to see Director Minton personally, I did get as far as Assistant Cohen's desk. I went there on business concerning the renewal of my Federal license as a publicity writer. My present license automatically expires in a couple of weeks, and my formal application for a probationary renewal must be accompanied by three copies of every article I have written since the issuance of my present expiring license, or permit. I understand that one copy goes to Director of P & P Minton, and one copy each to a Mr. Farley and the Hon. James Roosevelt.

Mr. Farley is still something, but only figuratively, for James Roosevelt seems to be pretty much the head man in everything. Nice fellow too, that young Jim Roosevelt—so courteous and democratic—but strictly business, and all that. And what he says goes! How fortunate too, that he so ably takes many of the burdens from the shoulders of his illustrious father. Even his speaking voice, with minute attention to inflection and intonation, is so like his father's that he frequently conducts the radio fireside chats without listeners having the slightest suspicion that it is only Jimmy. Even his salutation when he says "My friends," is very much like FD's own voice. This is especially convenient and helpful when fish are allegedly biting their best.

I wish to particularly impress everyone that my visit to P & P Director Minton's office was PURELY BUSINESS, because we are not permitted to interview Federal officials, or show lack of wholesome respect by emitting a long catalog of impertinent questions, like we so impudently used to do. When they have information to give out they simply issue Official Bulletins, and after these have been OK'd and initialed by Mr. James Roosevelt, we and required to write or print them exactly as given to us. Otherwise, our Federal license would be summarily revoked, and very properly so.

For a time some of the boys, led by Dorothy Thompson and Hugh Johnson, made a show of disrespectful disobedience that amounted almost to open rebellion, and as a consequence the rest of us came pretty near losing all rights, entirely—all of which would have been too terrible for those who had faithfully championed the Administration's cause even back in the dark days of Public Question and the Corn Revolt in 1938.

A CAGED JUDICIARY
While a few of the boys secretly complain, most of us are getting along nicely. After all, it does make everything rather simple and easy for us to have all our work cut out in advance. For, as we very well remember, once upon a time we had to work and sweat like fury trying to get out something a little better than the other fellow, but now we know precisely what we are to do. And having learned by experience that it is best for all concerned to do exactly that and nothing more, we do it patriotically and in knowledge, supported by sharp admonition, that we are loyally supporting the new Roosevelt 20-Billion-Dollar Five Year Plan. Consequently, and in turn, readers of the very few, but select, newspapers and magazines that are left, since the press has been so wholesomely purged, know pretty well beforehand that no startling political news or partisan chatter will disconcert them or disturb their collective march of progress to the Federal Relief offices.

The men and women of the press, not having too much work to do themselves, are deeply concerned about James Roosevelt. You see, with his responsibilities in holding so many different jobs, Jimmy is kept awfully busy. The strain must be terrific. One of his officers is in the new U. S. Supreme Court building, where he functions as Chief Censor of the Judiciary. Another is in the GAO where he is pinch-hitting as Comptroller General—until the affairs of that outmoded department are finally wound up, and the office permanently closed. But more about GAO and James in a later article.

Under the new order and Jimmy absolutely nothing irrelevant can be presented to disturb that venerable body, the U. S. Supreme Court. Certainly no reactionary appeals or petitions by economic royalists, nor anything calculated to obstruct or hinder our surge of progress toward the more abundant life can get by the ever-watchful Chief Censor, or the Assistant Censor, Mr. Henry A. Wallace. We hear now that they are looking about for an Official Bouncer for the Supreme Court, and that they may draft Elliott Roosevelt for the post.

1940 ELECTIONS POSTPONED

A lot of folks wore dazed or addled looks and some spoke in whispers for a day or two after the regularly scheduled 1940 election was cancelled by executive proclamation, and the date for holding it definitely postponed. But nobody did anything about it. There had been rumors of widespread, though mild disorders around the Relief agencies, and the country had in some measure come to expect that some drastic action in the interest of public safety might become necessary. There was no sense in fussing and stewing, as nothing can be gained by worrying about an election.

But the main trouble started long before this. In fact, during the summer of 1938 an unpleasant uprising developed among the disgruntled and rebel Democrats, known as the Riffist movement, which stirred up bitter dissent in the primaries. The first few primary elections of '38 turned out OK, especially in Florida and Kentucky. Some trouble developed in Pennsylvania, but that was mild in comparison with the shameful carry-overs in other states later the same year, where old-timers and habitual incumbents stubbornly refused to retire to private life, or unauthorized persons persisted in reviving the obsolete custom of running for office against those the White House had picked as key men for important and strategic positions. There were several instances where the Riffists had nominated persons who were rebels against the Roosevelt regime, and totally out of step with the new principles of progressive government.

This threatened to bring major disaster to the Administration, but the situation was saved somewhat by the wise and vigorous action of Mr. James Roosevelt, who went into the rebellious states with letters from his father. But this year, 1940, the Riffists' ranks were much augmented, and they were aided and abetted by followers of other political groups calling themselves Conservatives or Constitutionalists, Progressives of America, Jeffersonian or Jacksonian Republicans, and Liberals. They would not listen to the voice of reason even when it came from the White House, nor would they heed President Roosevelt's personal pleas. Riffist candidates and political hellkites incited the voters to make asses of themselves, and as a result some nominations had to be set aside by official proclamation, and suitable men given their proper places by special appointment.

Then too, since the autumn of 1938 a number of our weather people have been acting unfairly. Some, with the openly avowed intention of cheating the Government by shirking such sacred obligations known as taxes, have moved to Mexico, where they have taken over Tiajuana and Agua Caliente and renamed them New Hollywood and West Miami. The parkway dividing the two towns has been named South Wall Street.

But the real or true seriousness of the situation became suddenly apparent only recently. To be exact, it was just a few days before the regular November election day that a White House scout jumped to a radio and warned the people that a handful of the self-expatriated royalists were suspected of abetting an obscure lobbyist's scheme for the annexation of this country by Mexico. Patriotic fever and hosannas still rage in some isolated parts of the U. S., but the frenzy abated shortly following President Roosevelt's radio speech. Mr. Roosevelt delivered a very forceful appeal, and his words were of such noble quality that the people were instantly soothed and reassured. He also very properly utilized the propitious comment for fittingly emphasizing the profound human and great national need for the uninterrupted advancement of his new 20-Billion-Dollar Five-Year Plan. And simply because he felt in his heart that holding the election at this particularly critical time would further disturb the country's equilibrium, he was, in the interest of full and complete recovery, willing to make the unselfish sacrifice of serving his people for an additional indefinite period. Therefore and forthwith, so his enrap listeners were told, he was issuing Official Proclamation Number 44, calling off the November election!

Another day I may tell you more about the progress of liberalism and good government under the new 20-Billion-Dollar Five-Year Plan, and about the election we found unnecessary and improper to hold. I will also explain how and why many new Senators and Congressmen are coming to Washington for the 1941 session who never had their names on ballots; how they were simply appointed after some of the old oppositionists failed to pass the rigid entrance examinations. Many who thought they were Congressmen and Senators—but are not—flunked mostly in Government Reorganization, Court Reform, Wages and Hours, and Earmarked Relief Appropriations.

1940 MISCELLANEA

Observed Mr. John L. Lewis and Mr. William Green and lunching at Jim Farley's Forum Cafeteria. Since the NLRB handed down its decision under the new 1939 edition of the Wages and Hours law, that workers are entitled to guaranteed annual wages, and in addition automatically become part owners of the plants and factories that hire them, the workers are not inclined to organize or strike against themselves. As a result of this legal quirk the Labor Organizing Industry has encountered a depression of its very own. Mr. Green and Mr. Lewis, having lost something uncommon, are now discovering they have much in common—and two lions lie down together.

I understand that Mr. Lewis may be the new Mayor of Jersey City, and that his first official act will be an order prohibiting the ownership or possession of rubber hose for any purpose. Right now he is playing the lead in his own production, "Coal Black and the Seven Giants," on the Ford Sunday Evening hour. Saw Mr. Associate Justice Hugo L. Black in the telegraph office. The Government lid on press and propaganda developed multiple ramifications, so Mr. Justice Black, remembering his thrilling senatorial days, volunteered and was accepted as head of the telegraph and waste basket division—provided Tommy Corcoran, or somebody, would write his dissenting opinions.

The FHA and HOLC have been consolidated into one unit now, the Home and Farm Foreclosure Squad and it occupies the largest building in Washington.

Rural Electrification Approved for Terry

The Rural Electrification Administration has given preliminary consideration to an application for a loan to build rural lines in Lynn, Terry and Garza counties, and has outlined the steps which must be completed before an allotment of funds can be made. REA is corresponding with John Heck, Wilson, Texas.

It will be necessary for the project sponsors to obtain and submit signed applications for membership in the cooperative as well as applications for electrical service from it; also obtain signed essemets for the right-of-way for the power lines, and prepare and send to REA a detailed map of the proposed project, showing the area most feasible to be served with the allotment when and if it is made available.

Although no retail rate for selling electricity can be established until all cost factors have been determined, a rate has been tentatively suggested, under which a minimum bill of $2.50 a month would pay for 25 kwh. This amount of electricity will not only light the average size home, but it will operate such appliances as a washing machine, or an iron and $5.50 would pay for 100 kwh. enough for adequate lighting and operating of a washing machine, an iron, a radio, a water pump and one major appliance, such as a refrigerator.

Speed in development of this project depends very largely on prompt compliance by local leaders and the community with the REA requests for information and action. If the information is satisfactory and the local organization adequate, REA expects to be able to allot money to meet the entire construction costs. No money will be lent to pay for rights-of-way.

The Plainsman (Chas. A. Guy) in a recent issue of the Lubbock Avallanche all but endorsed the candidacy of Lieutenant Governor Woodul for attorney general of Texas. After disposing of those "young men" for Allred's dismissed West Texas only candidate for the office, Goodrich of Shamrock, with the statement that his chance of election was nil. Why, Charlie, what has become of the old West Texas spirit? Surely it out lived the candidacy of Clint Small—Anton News.

If we were a betting man, Editor Richards, we would be willing to lay a rather heavy wager that Chas. (who seems to be absent) will never answer that one.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Picturing Children Indoors

Floodlight from almost directly overhead makes the child's figure stand out against a background of rich shadow. The picture was snapped when the subject had forgotten there was a camera near.

PARENTS usually think of outdoors and sunny summer days as the proper place and time for picturing children, and once this was true. Before the advent of fast films and electric light bulbs especially designed for amateur photography, daytime was the only time snapshotshooters could work. Today that is no longer the case.

Nowadays, pleasing child pictures may be taken inside the home either by day or night, and more amateurs are taking them. This is partly because the home provides an ideal setting for pictures one wants to keep, and partly because the photographer can control his light to make pictures more interesting.

The modern large-sized amateur flood bulbs are so powerful that the camera worker can put two of them in reflectors three to four feet from his subject, and take snapshots, as he would outdoors, with an ordinary box camera. The camera is, of course, loaded with supersensitive film and its lens set at the largest opening. Other cameras can be used at 1/25 second shutter speed and f.8 or f.11 lens opening.

Ability to take snapshots like this is a great help in obtaining natural, unposed child pictures. It is no longer necessary to take "time" exposures or to tell the child to "hold very still." Now his toys can be placed in the circle of light cast by the flood bulbs, and as soon as he is absorbed in them, and unconscious of the camera—snap goes the shutter and the picture is made!

There is a variety of lighting arrangements one can use on child pictures. For a cheerful, joyous effect, everything in the picture should be light in tone, and there should be even illumination, with no deep shadows. However, when a dramatic effect is desired, illumination can be restricted to the child's face and hair, with everything else in deep shadow. This tends to give the impression of a very small child in a very large room; sometimes an effect of loneliness which is more appealing than if the picture were bright and carefree.

Beautiful "high-key" effects can be obtained with the child on a window-seat where daylight diffuses through the curtains, and bright floodlight inside so that there are no dark areas or masses of shadow. The child's clothing should be light in color. Good balancing of light will give a picture that is almost all white and lighter tones of gray, with just enough shadow here and there for accents. "Backlighting," as from the window, can also be obtained by placing behind the child so that the hair becomes a bright, silky halo.

Surrealism Goes Photographic

TWO WEEKS WITH PAY

This table-top photograph was taken with the aid of two photographic floodlight bulbs, "spotted" on the subject at different angles; exposure 30 seconds at f.22. The candles were then lighted, main lights turned off and the lighted candles exposed for 2 seconds. The following text will (it is hoped) explain the title.

"SURREALISM. A French movement in literature and art influenced by Freudianism, purporting to express the subconscious activities of the mind by presenting images without order or sequence, as in a dream."

SO says the dictionary, but we beg leave to amend by inserting the words, "and which has invaded the field of photography." If you don't believe it, cast a psychoanalytical eye on the above photograph and consider whether it does not truly fit the amended definition.

"Images without order or sequence as in a dream." Who will contend that the images in the above picture do not fit that part of the definition? "Purporting to express the subconscious activities of the mind." Who dares to say that these images do not express subconscious activities quite as intelligently as any of those depicted in the surrealist concoctions of the painters?

Oh, yeah, but what activities and how?

The fair photographer who took the picture entitled it "Two Weeks With Pay," meaning a vacation, and here, believe it or not, are the subconscious activities purported to be expressed:

The washboard is the psychic symbol of labor left behind. The open handouts express release from said labor. The liverwurst ring represents thoughts of summer hotel menus. The bird's nest bespeaks an anticipation of communing with nature. Although the egg in the nest is really a golf ball, thus seeming to show a certain confusion of thought, it is explained that a bird's nest signifies a "birdie" with which a golf ball is always hopefully associated. The festive candles clearly represent the highlights of the vacation but the unconscious celebration which evolved the electric fan, threatening to blow the lights out, was caused by the thought of probably keeping cooler by staying at home. Could there be any better example of the Freudian frustration complex?

To those who do not like "Two Weeks With Pay" as the title, the suggestion is made that they may try "Maternal Instinct" and figure it out for themselves.

In any case, the picture serves to show that any capable amateur photographer can join the surrealist school without apologies. All you need to do is to pick up a number of incongruous objects about the house, place them in juxtaposition on a table top, spotlight the scene with a couple of photographic floodlight bulbs, take the picture and give it a name. Will that be fun? And if anyone challenges it as not being Surrealism, you can call it Dadaism, or what have you in artistic cuts, and get still more fun out of the argument.

John van Guilder.

75,000 Texas Farm Families Have No Chickens

COLLEGE STATION—A total of 75,126 Texas farm families, or 15 per cent of all farm families in the state, do not have a poultry flock, according to Geo. P. McCarthy, poultryman of the Extension Service of Texas A. and M. College. McCarthy's statement is based on the 1935 agricultural census.

Among the southern states, only Florida, with 30.7 per cent of her farms without chickens, and Mississippi, with 15.4 per cent poultryless farms, rank below Texas.

Texas compares favorably with other southern states with her average of 48 chickens per farm on the farms that have poultry. Only Oklahoma, with an average of 50, exceeds Texas in the list of southern states. Representative states from other sections of the nation show Kansas with an average of 97, Oregon 61, Ohio, 87, and Maine 55. These figures, McCarthy stressed, include commercial flocks.

"The nutrition experts of the Extension Service tell me that the average farm family of five needs a flock of 50 hens," McCarthy pointed out. "Certainly we would like to see more hens on all farms in the state and we would also like to see higher and more efficient production."

This fight is being promoted by A. C. Curtis, of Haskell, Texas, and Woodie Windham, well known here. The mixups will start promptly at 8:30, and the boys promise a thrill from jump to finish. The match will be held adjoining the Venetian Auditorium, but on the outside where it will be cool.

There will be three bouts, a ten rounder between Woodie Windham, Haskell and Buzz Woods, Hobbs, N. M.; 8 rounds put on by A. C. Curtis, Haskell, and Jelly Harry, Odessa; 4 rounds will be between Red Walters, Andrews, and Rusty Fitzgerald, Odessa.

Admission will be popular prices.

Rodgers Curry of Rule, was in the city Wednesday. Mr. Curry until recently was employed on the Rule Review, but is temporarily without a job. His brother, Albert, now with a big Dallas printing firm learned to run the linotype in the Herald office.

Ford Exhibit At New York World's Fair

THE theme of the Ford Motor Company's exhibit building at the New York World's Fair in 1939 will be prophetic of the advances America may expect in transportation in coming decades, according to an announcement by Edsel Ford, president of the company.

Based upon an exposition of the institutional character of the Ford company and the fundamental policies which have directed its growth during the past 35 years, the fair exhibit will reach its climax in "The Road of Tomorrow," an elevated highway more than half a mile long, rising upon a series of spiral ramps, traversing the borders of a patio and finally circling the main building on a deep setback at the top of the walls.

The exhibit, in four rather distinct parts, will include an entrance rotunda facing the main west gate, a spacious Manufacturing Hall, a patio, with pools, playing fountain and large rest areas, and the elevated road. From the west side of the patio, steps will rise to a broad mezzanine. There Ford V-8 and Lincoln-Zephyr cars will load passengers for the ride over "The Road of Tomorrow."

From the loading platform the cars will pass to the south, enter the spiral ramps, climbing to the upper level and following the elevated highway as it passes over the mezzanine, west along the south wall of Manufacturing Hall, through a tunnel lined with photomurals; thence circling the top of the building, through a glass tunnel high in the Rotunda; down the ramp to the second level, around the patio and back to the starting point.

At night flood lighting will fall upon the cars as they circle the highway high on the walls of Manufacturing Hall, playing moving shadows on the building walls, in full sight of the whole fair grounds. The building will occupy the highest location on the grounds. It will be decorated in white, red and blue and will be floodlighted at night.
