People are funny. And we are not talking about that radio show one night each week over one of the big chains, called "People Are Funny." But evidently the people put on that show get an idea for it, by something like what we received through the mails, Sunday. Just who the writer of the missive is, we have no more idea than a haunt. But as he did not sign his name, we don't know how to remove his name from our list of some 1700 other people. And he says he is quitting us cold. Could it be that he has been borrowing a neighbor's paper to read, and just refuses to borrow it any longer? Anyway, we are printing the letter this week as is, and we hope he or some of his neighbors will recognize the writer and tell us, as we never were good at figuring out unsigned letters, even if they had just a bit of praise, and not all criticism, not that we are aware we deserve some criticism, along with many other people. However, we had just about concluded that people had reached a point here in the south and in Texas, particularly, that they believed in all being their own free moral agents: To vote as they pleased, to join, the lodge or church they believed was right for them, or to ride in a car instead of a buggy, or eat meat or join the vegetarians, if they wished. But we seem to have some of the old fashioned kind that because their parents went to mill with corn in one end of the sack and a rock in the other to balance the load on the old grey mare, all other people should do the same. And they just can't stand it, if some one else prefers to ride the old mare to mill with corn in both ends of the sack. During this campaign, we have printed just about all the articles for Stevenson and Sparkman that were submitted to us, as well as that for Ike and Nixon. In fact, a crew worked practically all night last Wednesday, in order to get in a lot of last minute stuff. We had to pay overtime for this night work, but it was the last chance to get this stuff before the people. Like all newspapers, we consider our editorial policy our own business. We have voted a Democratic ticket all our life, even voting for Al Smith, when many of our friends were voting a Republican ticket for Hoover, whom they blast out now. We shall continue to run the editorial policy of this paper the same way as long as we own it. The only skip we made was four years ago, when we voted for a real Democrat, the Hon. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, instead of the little man from Missouri, whom we do not consider to be a Democrat. This time we chose another man we thought to be a better Democrat, according to states right tradition of the South, than Stevenson — Texas-born Eisenhower. And we consider that our American privilege as guaranteed by the constitution and the bill of rights. We would feel very small indeed to accept one of our friends and neighbors and demand that they vote just like we vote. That is no part of Americanism, and such narrowness is not what made our nation great. We grant the writer the privilege of voting just as he likes, and if his man — Stevenson — is the winner, we'll have just as good a president as he. But what worries us is, how are we to stop his paper if we do not know his name? Or is he actually a subscriber?

Most of us, when talking about the great strides of our nation, are apt to think only of the manufacturing side that has made the modern home a press the button affair. We seldom stop to consider the great strides that has been made in agriculture at the same time. What if we did have all these modern conveniences in our home, and they are great, if the farmers failed to produce the food we need? We'd be in a heck of a fix. Some of this was brought forcibly to mind this week when we received our copy of The Nation's Agriculture, official organ of the American Farm Bureau Federation. In 1860, when our nation was overwhelmingly rural, and we mean people living on farms or in cities of less than 10,000 people. At that time, when just the northeastern and New England section of the nation had hit its stride toward a manufacturing section. The middle north and west, the south and southwest was strictly rural, with little manufacturing, and each farm fed its own personnel, and in addition, fed five people living in the cities. By 1900 this had increased to eight city folks; 11½ by 1940 and 15 by 1949. It would be even more at this time. But the farms were not taking on this extra feeding operation with the same old bull tongue plows, horses, mules and in a few instances, back during the preceding century, oxen. To meet this growing city population that depended on American farmers for every bite they ate, the farmer in turn had to adopt short cuts to production that would produce in one hour what their dads and granddads has required several hours to produce. So the tractor came to light, with its two to four row planting and cultivation at a more rapid mileage. If the American farmer was trying to clothe and feed the world with the same machinery and power that he employed even at the turn of the century, the living conditions of our people would be little better, if as good, as in India and China, and not as good as middle Europe. In fact there would be little food for the millions upon millions of people living in the larger cities of our country. In 1910, for instance, there were in the neighborhood of 25 million head of horses and mules, used on the farms of the USA, and they were losing the race with the increase in city population. As of 1950, there were some 4 million tractors to take the places of the horse power, and the farms were making steady gains on the population increase of the urbanites. Even up to ten years ago, there were a few farmers here in Terry, that allowed they would not have one of the d—n things, meaning tractors, but in some instances, the farm boys persuaded dad to allow them to buy a tractor—and the tractor has stayed put. And the race of feeding not only the city folks of America, but many in other lands, by the progressive farmers of the USA has been won. We hear some talk about the handouts the farmers get, and perhaps some of the bigger farmers do get a lion's share. But as long as the government permits periodic increases in wages of factory workers, and higher prices for everything one has to buy, including farm machinery, naturally the farmer has to have help, too. But what we can gather from talking with the rank and file of our farmers who call at our office, they appreciate the help and suggestions of soil conservation and other matters. But many of them are getting sorely tired of being told what they can plant, how much, and this, that and the other. Farmers have always been a pretty independent bunch of people, and they still like it that way.

We are not a prophet nor the son of one, but we are sticking our neck out and making a stab on West Texas weather, and that is like a child playing with fire. Not quite as dangerous, however. We have always heard that one extreme of weather here in Texas follows another. For the past two years, the great state of Texas has had one of the most withering drouths in its history. Comparable to the 1917-18 drouths, as well as the one back in the 1880ties, that few now living remember, but history records just the same. In 1917, little crops were made here in Terry. In fact, there was not too much farming at that time. But a little cotton and fair feed was made in 1918. We remember that the US agriculture department sent men in here to buy up all the sorghum grain possible which was shipped out and sold to farmers in the Sweetwater-Abilene sections, so as to supply farmers with planting seed the next year, 1919. It will be remembered that a whale of a crop was made all over west Texas in 1919. But after two years of shy rainfall, we remember that the fall of 1918 started in to swing the other way. And a few days before Christmas, one of the biggest snows on record fell. It was 18 inches on a dead level, with some drifts much deeper. However, there was little wind, and as the snow was very wet, it mostly stayed where it fell. That snow and others stayed on the ground for a month or two, and in places longer. But that was the swing of the cycle from dry to wet. And the drouths of 1933 to 1936, while not as bad, were pretty severe. Then we had another series of wet years, the maximum of more than 40 inches falling in 1941; the most rainfall ever recorded here. Then in a few years the cycle began to run to the dry years, ending up with 1951-52. Now the long distance forecasters have been saying for the past several years that we would have very dry years up to this one, but a swingback to the wet period beginning with 1953. We have an idea that Dallas and many other Texas cities will be joyous in seeing the swing to more and better water. The water proposition is really getting acute in that as well as many other Texas cities that depend on creek or river water, behind dams. In fact, the study of the water proposition, with the increase in population, is a must most everywhere. Some are working on a cheap means of extracting the salt from sea water. If this is successful, all our deserts will bloom and boom.

Drouth Still Dims New Crop Outlook

After curtailing cotton, feed and other late summer crops, drouth continues throughout the middle and southwestern territory, creating considerable doubt as to 1953, particularly in regard to the new wheat crop.

The situation, which is being likened to former disaster years, even those of the so-called dust bowl era, is gradually growing worse with further deterioration reported while skies remain clear and weather charts show no promise of rain in the immediate future.

When and if moisture finally comes, it will have to be in generous quantities to effectually break the drouth, as the great plains states of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico, and portions of Colorado and Nebraska, have received little or no rain during the past five months.

There are some exceptions, of course, most of them the result of scattered showers, but to find any real bright spots in the general picture, it is necessary to go back to the big wheat crop, which barely got in under the wire before hot weather set in last June, and the bumper corn crop now being harvested in Missouri, Nebraska and Illinois, along with a heavy crop of soybeans.

The drouth is spreading, however, and these midwestern states now need moisture for fall planting, same as their western and southern neighbors have for a long time, the big problem being to get the new wheat crop into the ground, and obtain pasture to ease the shortage of feed. Many farmers planted early but without much success, others waited and finally planted in dry soil with equally poor results, and some are still delaying operations, pinning their faith on late moisture and a mild winter.

While it is a bit early to apply the hatchet to the 1953 wheat crop, there is no question that it has made an extremely poor start, in fact, official observers searching for comparative data in the drouth-stricken area, are being forced to pry into the records of 30 and 40 years ago. These investigations haven't made for any more happiness than recent tests for subsoil moisture, which were very disappointing, to say the least.

There is an equal worry over the scarcity of feed and water supplies for livestock, and ranchers are fearful that grass overly grazed may be killed out, especially if the coming winter proves dry and unusually cold. Feed prices are high and cattle sales have been heavy, in some cases, involving foundation herds.

Fortunately, so far as the wheat crop is concerned, wind damage up to this time has been small, but the danger is something of the powder keg variety — very great. Grass fires, some of wide extent, are occurring almost daily. — Santa Fe Crop Report.

CRESCENT HILL CHURCH OF CHRIST

T. J. Finley, Evangelist

There were thirty-three ladies present last week for their class which meets on Wednesday morning. Final preparations are being made by the class to send candy to the men in service. Approximately twenty boys will receive a box of candy from home for Christmas. It will bring joy to their hearts to know that the folks back home haven't forgotten them. Many of these men are overseas, while others are in the States, but regardless of their whereabouts they are still in the service away from friends and loved ones.

This is just one of the many instances where these Christian women have shown that they are ready to do good unto all people who need their help. The class continues to enjoy an interesting discussion over "Acts Of Apostles." Some new members have been added to the class roll only recently.

Thursday night, November 6 at 7:30, brother Maurice Hall of Paris, France, will speak at the Crescent Hill Church. Brother Hall has been engaged in mission work in France for the past three years. The church here has been helping in his support for that length of time. All look forward to his coming. This church is now engaged in mission work in three places. Foreign work in Italy and France and recently they pledged support to the church which meets at Plains, Texas. All of this work has been planned in an effort to carry out the great commission of "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

Mrs. Darrell Jackson, of Wichita, Kans., was here recently visiting her daughter, Mrs. L. J. Norris and her sister, Mrs. Crawford Burrow and other relatives. Mrs. Norris and children returned home with her.

Phylis Rose Jones, E. H. Crossland Wed In First Christian Church Vows

Miss Phylis Rose Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Jones, 901 East Reppto, Brownfield, became the bride of E. H. Crossland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Crossland, 312 East Broadway, in a single ring ceremony read Saturday at 7:30 p. m., in the Brownfield First Christian Church.

Rev. Homer W. Haislip, minister of the church, performed the vows before an altar banked with palms and greenery and lighted by white cathedral tapers burning in branched wrought iron candelabra. White mums and greenery were arranged in baskets flanking the altar.

Leonard Ellington, organist, played a medley of bridal music throughout the ceremony and accompanied Dr. W. A. Roberson, soloist, as he sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly."

Candles were lighter by Kenneth Gravunder and J. B. Jobe, both of Brownfield, who also served as ushers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of nylon tulle and imported Chantilly-type lace over satin, all in a soft shade of blush pink. Designed with a sheer yoke outlined in embroidery of iridescent sequins, the molded lace bodice extended into long sleeves ending in points over the hands, and the waistline was accented by a point in center front. A voluminous waltz length skirt of nylon tulle featured alternating panels of lace, and its shirred fullness was emphasized by crinoline worn underneath.

The bride's table was laid with mint green under lace and centered by the bridal attendants' bouquet. Tapers burned in crystal holders, and table appointments were in silver and crystal. The three tiered wedding cake which topped by a miniature bridal couple, was iced in white and detailed with bronze and mint confection. The bride's bouquet decorated the registration table.

After the reception the couple left for a wedding trip to El Paso. They will make their home in Brownfield after Nov. 6. For traveling the bride chose a navy wool gabardine with a pink crepe and lace blouse. Her pink Juliet-type hat was ornamented with sequins, and navy accessories completed her ensemble.

The bride is a graduate of Lubbock High School and attended Texas Technological College and North Texas State College in Denton. She majored in business administration while at college, and was pledged to Sans Souci social club at Tech. She is now employed as bookkeeper at Jay Jones Motor Company in Brownfield.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Brownfield High School and is employed at Bill's "66" Service Station in Brownfield.

net dust ruffle over a crinoline underskirt.

Bridesmaids were Misses Janelle Lewis and Joanne Shelton, both of Brownfield. Their identical dresses of green and gold nylon tulle over taffeta were designed with portrait necklines framed with tucked net berthas which crossed at centerfront. The fitted sleeveless bodices were held at the waistline with wide taffeta sashes tying in large bows at center back. The immense ballerina length net skirts over taffeta had the fullness shirred into the waistline and were worn over crinoline to accent the fullness. Their head-dresses were bandeaus of fresh flowers.

Tonia Price of Brownfield was flowergirl.

Edward Lee Courtney was bestman.

At a reception held immediately following the ceremony in the parlor of the church, the couple was assisted in receiving by their parents and members of the wedding party. Piano selections were played throughout the receiving hour by Mrs. E. C. Carson, who also accompanied her husband for several vocal solos.

Members of the houseparty were Misses Carolyn Griffith, Joan Blevins and Joanne Price, all of Brownfield; and Mesdames Dale Robbins of Lubbock; Clyde Wilson, Homer Haislip and J. H. Aschenbeck, all of Brownfield.

The bride's table was laid with mint green under lace and centered by the bridal attendants' bouquet. Tapers burned in crystal holders, and table appointments were in silver and crystal. The three tiered wedding cake which topped by a miniature bridal couple, was iced in white and detailed with bronze and mint confection. The bride's bouquet decorated the registration table.

After the reception the couple left for a wedding trip to El Paso. They will make their home in Brownfield after Nov. 6. For traveling the bride chose a navy wool gabardine with a pink crepe and lace blouse. Her pink Juliet-type hat was ornamented with sequins, and navy accessories completed her ensemble.

The bride is a graduate of Lubbock High School and attended Texas Technological College and North Texas State College in Denton. She majored in business administration while at college, and was pledged to Sans Souci social club at Tech. She is now employed as bookkeeper at Jay Jones Motor Company in Brownfield.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Brownfield High School and is employed at Bill's "66" Service Station in Brownfield.

Old Time Terryite Is Honored

Honoring her mother, Mrs. Jess H. Harris of Comanche, who is here visiting her daughter, Mrs. Roy Collier entertained in the home of Mrs. George E. Tiernan, 311 North 5th, Tuesday, October 24, it being Mrs. Harris' 83rd birthday.

Mrs. Harris is the former Mrs. J. W. Welch, who came to this county before it was organized, will long be remembered for the many deeds of kindness shown to all who needed help in sickness or disaster. Mrs. Welch was the most charitable person the writer ever knew. We have known of her staying with the sick two and three weeks at a time, not for money, but for the love and compassion she had for her friends and neighbors.

In the early days, with only one doctor in Terry, Yoakum, Gaines, and none in Hockley, Mrs. Welch was a godsend when it came to doing something special until the doctor arrived and many people asked the doctor to bring Mrs. Welch when he was called. Truly the great deeds of mercy this good lady did will live on after she has passed on.

She was a tireless worker in the Baptist church, being a charter member of what is now known as the First Baptist Church. Mrs. Harris, though being 83 years old, is as spry and active as many women at 55, and her looks belie her age.

Mrs. Harris is also visiting her other two daughters here, Mrs. Lera Ellis and Mrs. Norma Lewis. Other children are Mrs. Ruth Brandon, Breckenridge; Dona George, San Antonio; Otho Welch, Austin; George Welch, Los Alamos, N. M., and Mrs. Jessie McDaniel of Abilene.

"USHARIT" Party Hallowe'en Night

A hilarious time was had by all present at the "USHARIT" Hallowe'en Party held October 31 in the festively decorated Fellowship Hall of the Methodist Church. The Come Double Class was host to thirty-nine of its members and guests dressed in costume regalia.

The evening's festivities began with a "Trick or Treat" expedition for the children. They were escorted on an hour's tour of homes by Mr. and Mrs. James Thurman, Mrs. Chester Couch, and Mrs. Bob Collier.

Crepe paper Hallowe'en Hats were awarded to the Bill Glicks for being the most humorously dressed couple and to Mrs. Chester Couch for being the best disguised person.

The evening's fun consisted of relays and contests in art and dramatics and numbers. The recreational period was directed by Mesdames Bob Collier, D. D. Denison and Robert Baumgardner.

Coffee was served with the "USHARIT" contributions of class members. Cookies, cake, apple pies, and pop corn were served from a buffet table centered with a basket of yellow chrysanthemums and autumn leaves.

Members and guests present for a covered dish luncheon will be served at noon. Parts of the book "Scattered Abroad," will be taught by the mission study chairman of all the various circles.

The group has recently sent three large boxes of used clothing and one large box of new garments to Buckner's Orphans Home in Dallas. Three large boxes of used clothing have also been sent to the Mexican Mission here in Brownfield.

As their community project for the month of November, society members are providing food for a local family.

Aged Pioneer Passed At Meadow Home

Tom Verner was down last week from Meadow, and told us that his dad, J. T. Verner, had passed away at 7 p. m., Oct. 27, at the ripe old age of 84 years. We had not heard of Mr. Verner's passing, but the news while sad, was not unexpected, as he had been in poor health for the past two years, most of the time being confined to his home.

The Verners came to Terry County in 1920 and settled in the Meadow section, and have made that part of the county as well as other parts to a lesser degree, some mighty fine citizens. Mr. Verner was a member of the Baptist church, and Tom stated that his granddad was a Baptist minister. Mr. Verner was born in Alabama, but came to Texas when a young man, settling along the line of Johnson and Hill counties, near Grandview.

When the promoters began to build the Fort Worth and Denver railroad, especially west of Wichita Falls, Mr. Verner joined the crews, and was a cook part of the time. He also helped to build some railroads in Oklahoma.

Funeral services were conducted at the Meadow Baptist church with Rev. Matthew Doyle in charge, and funeral sermon by Rev. F. Nipp. Burial in Meadow cemetery. He was survived by his wife, four sons, and four daughters, names of which appear elsewhere.

INSPECTORS CAPTURE 3 ILLICIT STILLS

The Texas Liquor Control Board inspectors in September reported the seizure of 3 illicit stills.

With the stills, which had a cubic capacity of 165 gallons, inspectors capture 200 gallons of mash. One gallon of moonshine liquor was destroyed.

Two stills were taken in Titus County, and one was taken in Lamar County.

Why The Split-Up In Conservation Dists.

Maybe some of you have been wondering why the split-up in the Cochran-Yoakum-Terry Soil Conservation District. In fact, we had wondered, too, but we felt sure that there was no animosity nor misunderstandings that caused it. You know that when there are disputings about most anything, politics, religion, schools or government, the fact always leaks out. You are not left to guess about the matter.

So, we began to make some inquiries. Jay Barret and Herman Wheatley are the Terry County Supervisors. We did not get to see either of these men but we did find that the dissolution of the CYT district is mutual, and that it will possibly be for the betterment of all concerned. So, at each of the county seats, Morton, Plains and Brownfield, an election will be held Saturday, the 8th of November. The one here will be held in the County Judge's office, with farmers or farm owners voting.

Now for just a little history of the setup of the three county soil conservation district, which was started back about 1940. At that time there was little farming in either Cochran or Yoakum, and even Terry was far behind the present farm acreage. So, with a small farm population, the organizers agreed that a three county farm setup would be better at that time. So, CYT came into existence on this co-operative basis, with two supervisors here, two at Morton and one at Plains.

So, you see, the dissolution of the big district was both mutual and friendly. Most of the counties around us now have their own district, which is just a part of the State Soil Conservation setup. These counties, to mention a few, are Dawson, Lynn, Lubbock, Hockley and Lamb.

The first proposition on the ballot will be the dissolution of the old three county district CYT. The second proposition will be a new independent setup for each of the three counties.

Farm Bureau To Meet In San Antonio

WACO — The nineteenth annual state convention of the Texas Farm Bureau Federation will be held November 10-12 at the Plaza Hotel in San Antonio, according to an announcement made by Vice-president C. H. DeVaney of Coahoma. Registration starts Sunday, Nov. 9, on the mezzanine floor. The convention proper will get under way Tuesday morning at 9:30.

J. Walter Hammond, president of TFBF, will be unable to attend the meeting this year for the first time in many years. The state farm leader is recuperating at his farm at Tye, Texas, after suffering an artery condition Oct. 1 at a meeting of American Farm Bureau Board of directors in Chicago.

High on the convention agenda are problems dealing with water legislation, rural roads and many other state and national issues involving agriculture. Voting on resolutions will be at the last session Wednesday afternoon.

National and state leaders in government and Farm Bureau will headline this year's program. Senator George D. Aiken of Vermont, member of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, will speak Tuesday night at the annual banquet.

Tuesday afternoon speakers include Romeo E. Short, vice-president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Congressman Clark W. Thompson of Galveston, member of the House Committee on Agriculture; and Harry L. Bryson, director of field services of the AFBF.

Commodity specialists, agricultural experts and friends of Farm Bureau have been invited to attend the sessions.

New cases of tuberculosis reported to Texas health authorities in 1951 were 4,415.

Weekly Health Talks By TMA

You've heard it said "The Greeks had a word for it." Just like everyone else, though, once in awhile they come up with the wrong word.

Take "cataract" of the eye. You've probably heard the term used in connection with a waterfall. That's more or less what the physicians of ancient Greece thought a cataract of the eye was. They believed there was a large space between the lens of the eye and the colored matter which lies in front of it, the iris, in the middle of which is a hole, the pupil. Into this space, they thought, fell a cloudy fluid which cut off the sight and made the pupil, normally black, look gray or white.

Today scientists know that the trouble lies within the lens itself, not in front of it. A cataract is any cloudy spot in the lens, regardless of size, shape, or color. A patient may have a cataract so small it never bothers him. On the other hand, even a tiny cataract located in a part of the lens needed for vision can be annoying. Cataracts usually occur in old people but may be seen on those of other ages as well, including infants.

One thing above all should be remembered about cataracts: the diagnosis does not carry with it the certainty of blindness. With treatment, the progress of a cataract sometimes can be slowed up considerably. Furthermore, when the patient's vision becomes bad enough to handicap him in getting around, an operation can be done. In children the cloudy lens is cut in two and left in the eye to be absorbed; this procedure is called needling or discission. In older people the lens must be removed from the eye. After the operation glasses can take the place of the missing lens of the eye, which is not replaced by Nature, and if the rest of the organ is healthy, the sight often is near normal or at least useful.

Everything that cuts down the vision is not a cataract. Some people speak of a "cataract ON the eye," but the lens, the part involved, is IN the eye.

Seventy-two of each 100,000 Texans died of tuberculosis in 1933. In 1951 the death rate had been reduced to 24.8 per 100,000.

PRESENT NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE PRESERVATION OF FREE ENTERPRISE, INC.

It won't pay to sit back and relax just because the national election is over. All the problems that existed the morning we went to the polling places, are still with us, every one of them. The Communists will keep right on working to undermine America from within and without, and millions of Americans, as members of one pressure group or another, will continue to grab for special advantages at the expense of the rest of us.

No man likes to think of himself as a member of a pressure group, but most of us are, in one way or another. And what I have to say about such groups goes for all of them, including the rich and powerful ones.

Every one of these groups owes its existence to the fact that our complicated in the last fifty years, economy has become increasingly. Many of us still remember when school teachers spoke of Longfellow's "Village Blacksmith" as the personification of honest labor, toiling in his own shop, using the same tools and methods and pleasing the same customers year after year. Where is the blacksmith now? For that matter, where is the horse which gave him his reason for being in business?

Surely the auto repair industry, with its elaborate and frequently changing machinery, with the sizeable cash investment called for, with all the tie ins for the sale of gasoline and oil, is not at all like the simple forge under that spreading chestnut tree we used to read about.

It would be easy to go on with illustrations of modern complexity. When a farmer markets soybeans, is he selling food for cattle or the raw material for scores and scores of different manufactured products? Many times even the grower doesn't know the final use of his crop.

This complexity leaves men wondering where they fit in. The auto mechanic looks toward his union. His employer looks toward a trade association. The farmer looks toward the price stabilizer. Consumers unite. Brokers and bankers and dealers and manufacturers all form their own groups, each determined to put on all the pressure it can.

Obviously we can't turn back the clock, revive the horse, reopen the blacksmith shop and go back to mud roads, candlelight and out door plumbing. Neither can we afford to sit around and sigh for the good old days, because if we do, the intensification of pressure groups will tear the United States and the American free enterprise system to tatters, even faster than the socialists will, and we'll surely wind up in the slavery of a police state.

The fact is that in this country we know so much more about machinery than we do about people!

We can build all kinds of elaborate machines, and hook them up in smoothly working sequences to perform genuine marvels. But we haven't learned yet how groups of people can hook themselves together to work smoothly for common purposes.

Every lover of America, every friend of our free enterprise system, can help in this effort. Every one of us has to do his utmost to see that the new President and the new Congress approach our national problems in the national interest. Believe me, if the new men in Washington just re-shuffle the pressure

Filling A Major Traffic Need

The country's major new traffic arteries, according to official reports, have been used to a phenomenal extent, exceeding all expectations. The New Jersey Turnpike, for example, passed the 10,000,000 vehicle mark only eight months after its completion. The same average has been 46,000—twice the number anticipated. The same picture is presented in reports from the Pennsylvania Turnpike on its new extension, and from the Chesapeake Bay Bridge and the Delaware Memorial Bridge.

These modern facilities, providing smooth passage and shortened distances, are geared to meet the needs of the motoring public. Traffic will flow where the turnpikes and bridges are constructed; the sooner they are built in many places the sooner congestion and bottlenecks will be eased.
