Honing the Mind.

"The minds of men are a great deal like the old-fashioned straight razor," said William Boyd, Junior, president of the American Petroleum Institute. "They have to be honed, and competition is the strop that makes a keen blade."

Mr. Boyd was speaking at the opening of the Silver Anniversary of the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa. And there his remark was particularly apt. On a space of 15 acres, some 1,800 different exhibitors displayed the mechanical marvels that have made the present-day oil industry possible. Refining equipment, drilling rigs, innovations in the transportation of oil—these and a thousand and one other developments were on display. And every one of them is the result of competition. Men make better tools and find more efficient techniques because they know their competitors are trying to do the same thing, and those who lag behind in the march of progress can't last long. That is why the industry has progressed from the divining rod to the seismograph in its search for oil—and why it has learned to dig a straight hole miles deep, or to bend that hold to reach some desired formation.

To quote Mr. Boyd again, "The Petroleum industry is often the target of political, financial, professional and editorial attacks." But, whatever the reason for these attacks, the industry's answer is in its performance. It has met an incredible demand with only minor dislocations in supplying us with the oil we want when we want it. And its going on to do an even better job in the future.

Danger Signals.

The late George Horace Lorimer, who built the Saturday Evening Post from obscurity into an American institution, once wrote: "I have passed through one panic and one depression after another. In my lifetime I have seen much ruthless exploitation of men and resources, but in spite of this America has always forged ahead on the courage and initiative of its private citizens. And steadily, through all that period, I have seen business practices and ethics grow better; I have seen sentiment developing against the waste and exploitation of our natural resources, and a public conscience hardening against the old abuses. Could a paternalistic government have done better? I venture to doubt it. Granting all the waste, the ruthlessness and the loose ethics of the past, America has done a pretty good job and no ism would have done a better one. To exchange one form of ruthlessness that is steadily growing less, for another that's steadily hardening, would not be a sound trade."

The editorial from which that is taken appeared in the Post nearly twelve years ago. In those twelve years we have seen the "steadily hardening" ruthlessness come to full flower in communism, fascism, and national socialism. In those same twelve years, for all our alleged shortcomings, we have seen the living standards and the opportunity of the average American remarkably bettered. At a time when great governments keep themselves in power through terror, oppression and assassination, the United States has held to its concept of the dignity of the individual—and its principle of the fullest liberty for all.

Still, we cannot afford the luxury of complacency. In those twelve years, there has been a weakening of our national fibers. We have taken steps, tentative but unmistakable, which could carry us in time to ironclad government paternalism and eventual dictatorship. The steady encroachment of government into business; the growth of powerful bureaucracies and administrative law; the emphasis on "social gains" at the expense of individual freedom; the growing dependence of individuals and whole states on the Federal government for undertakings which belong in the province of private enterprise and local government—these are the danger signs.

The people can correct the excess of industry, of labor, and of any other group. But no people, without war or revolution, can correct the excesses of total government. That is the unanswerable argument against any form of statism.

Cotton Losses Due to Asphalt Coating of Ties

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Losses as high as $40 a bale face the cotton industry because of an asphalt coating on many steel ties used in baling the lint unless immediate action is taken, the National Cotton Council reported today.

magging blemishes appear in the finished goods. Approximately 50 per cent of the ties now in use are coated with the substance.

Cotton manufacturing plants report that fabrics made from such bales have been rejected and returned, and that other lots have been discounted heavily as a result of black stains in finished products.

The Council has made the following preliminary recommendations:

1. That manufacturers of cotton bale ties discontinue coating ties until a suitable coating material can be provided;
2. That cotton spinners refuse to sell coated ties for re-use as bale ties;
3. That intensive efforts be undertaken to find a solvent which will effectively and economically remove paint from coated ties now in trade channels, and that oil mills, compresses and gins be urged to have the paint or coating removed before using ties;

4. That an intensive educational and informational campaign be initiated throughout the industry immediately.

The Council reported that the major producer of cotton bale ties has discontinued the coating process and another manufacturer is considering similar steps. However, approximately 60 to 75 per cent of the bale ties required for the 1948-49 cotton crop have been manufactured and now are in the channels of trade. As about half of these ties are coated, the disposition of this volume remains a serious problem for the industry.

The Council spokesman said that close cooperation in all divisions of the industry might prevent establishment of severe penalties and a possible embargo on any cotton delivered with coated ties.

DETECTIVES COMPLETE SAFE-CRACKING JOB

The 750-pound safe had been removed from the shop and battered, beaten, cut, hacked and burned, but it remained closed. To add insult to injury, the yeggs had used the shop's own tools for the attempted job.

Finishing the safe-cracking job, Zarnow and Toll opened the safe, in the presence of the owner, in just 90 seconds.

POSTCARDS TRAVEL FAR.
ALFRED, N. Y. (UP)—During a parade, Alfred University students released a batch of balloons with attached postcards from the prize-winning float. The students expected the balloons would carry no farther than the next county. They were considerably surprised when two postcards were returned from Sloatsburg, Rockland county, N. Y., and Harrison, Westchester county, N. Y., approximately 350 miles away.

A "PEACE PLATE" FOR TODAY
Save Wheat! Save Meat! Save the Peace!

FRIDAY PEACE PLATE

Dinner in a casserole—chock-full of spring's good things—brings our favorite fish to a Friday table. And it's not expensive.

The lucky ones in the Northwest may choose salmon for this delectable fish pie, for it's economical there. Away from the Northwest, you'll probably find other fish lower-priced.

Many markets offer fish steaks at about 25 cents a pound. And so today's tasty main dish for four costs about 60 cents—only 15 cents a person.

FISH PIE, CHEESE BISCUIT TOP

1 lb. fish
1 1/2 tablespoons fat
1/2 cup flour
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup fish stock
Salt and pepper
1 cup diced potatoes
1 cup green peas
1/2 cup celery

Wash fish; cook slowly in 1 cup of salted water for about 20 minutes, or until flesh separates or "flakes" when tested with the point of a knife.

Make a sauce by blending the melted fat and flour and gradually adding the milk and stock in which the fish cooked. Add seasonings and vegetables and place in a greased casserole. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375°F) for about 30 minutes. Top with cheese biscuits. Serves 4.

Make the biscuits according to your favorite recipe, adding 1/2 cup grated cheese to the sifted dry ingredients.

Something different in salads is our gold and green one with carrots and crisp new cabbage shredded together. It's thrifty to buy these plentiful vegetables.

Let's try a complete dinner like this one:

Fish Pie, Cheese Biscuit Top
Spring Greens
Gold and Green Salad
Celery Seed Dressing
Rhubarb Crumble

FOOD TIPS: Watch for the two-meal vegetables when you buy. Why throw away tender tops of new turnips or beets when they'd be your dish of spring greens for today's dinner? You can have the roots for one meal—and the tops for another.

Wash the tops, trim away damage spots, and crisp before cooking. There's a lot of difference between greens that are crisp when you cook them and greens that go into the pot wilted.

If beet or turnip tops don't provide quite enough greens for a dish, sample the free supply in your back lawn—tender dandelion or lamb's-quarter greens.

Or add a little spinach, mustard greens, or kale to make the dish "round."

You'll find a recipe for another tasty fish dish, Fried Fish Cutlets, and for 149 other money-saving and food-saving main dishes in a booklet just issued by the Office for Food and Feed Conservation which prepares "Peace Plate" recipes for you.
