swer, or have answered for us. Those questions are the following:

Name and address, sex, color or race, age, single, married, widowed or divorced; relationship to head of family; home owned or rented. birth and that of parents; citizenship, ployed and trade or profession, whether veteran of any American war.

But lest you should feel that the asking of these questions is a meddlesome interference in your private affairs, let it be stated at once that the man or woman who calls at your home and asks you these questions is a census enumerator, engaged in the huge task of taking the 15th decennial census of population in the United States. in accordance with Article 1 of the Constitution of the United States, that you are required by law to give true answers to the questions and that there is no real reason whatsoever why you should not answer them. For you have this assurance from Dr. William M. Steuart, chief of the bureau of the census, in regard to it:

"No citizen need hesitate to answer the questions asked by the enumerators. The facts, so far as the individual is concerned, will be safe in the hands of the government and will never be disclosed. No one need have the slightest fear that his personal or business secrets will ever be disclosed to friend or foe. The oath of the enumerator requires that he shall keep secret the answers to queries. If he does not, he is guilty of a crime, and If detected there is not the slightest doubt as to what will happen. The law will be invoked and enforced to the limit."

The 1930 census will be the greatest "counting of noses" in the history of the world. When it is completed Uncle Sam will know just how many more children he has than he had in 1920. As to what the population of the United States will be, Doctor Steuart

"It will be more than 121,000,000 and less than 125,000,000. We are certain as to this, because we know that the population of the continental United States is now increasing at the rate of about 1,400,000 persons each year. or, to put it another way, at the approximate rate of one person every twenty seconds. These totals are made up of the annual excess of births over deaths, which amounts to about 1,150,000, and the excess of immigration over emigration, which gives an additional 240,000 each year. The 1930 census will show that our people are thirty times as many as vere in the country in 1790 and nearly twice as many as in 1890, or only forty years ago.

"History records no instance in which population has so rapidly increased as has been the case in the Inited States. Neither is it of record that the increase in population has the 1790 count numbered only 17, the anywhere else been accomplished by the United States. The 1930 census, I believe, will show forty people to each square mile, or nearly ten times more than at the time of the first census. In 1790 there were six cities in the United States with more than 8,000 inhabitants. Then the cities were responsible for only 3 per cent of the free or mortgaged; literacy, place of | population; America in those days was truly agricultural. In 1920 the cities with more than 8,000 inhabitants numbered 924 and their population was 44 per cent of the national total. Add to these the little towns and villages of less than 8,000 people and we find that in 1920 the urban population was a little more than half the total for the

In accomplishing the huge task which faces Uncle Sam's army of census enumerators, they will visit not only 30,000,000 homes but also more than 2,000,000 stores, almost 200,000 manufacturing plants, and in addition they will compile data concerning 6,000,000 farms, 14,000 mines and quarries, 100,000 irrigation and drainage projects. The reason for this is that the 15th decennial census will be not only a count of population but also a comprehensive study of the commerce and industry of the nation, including, for the first time, a census of distribution. In the last named it is hoped that there will be found at least some of the reasons for an estimated annual loss of $10,-000,000,000 in the process of placing commodities in the hands of the ultimate consumer.

"The 1930 census," says Doctor Steuart, "Is going to be, we hope and believe, the most nearly perfect tabulation of population, business and other basic facts ever taken in history. I say this with the fact in mind that nearly 3,000 years have passed since the first census was made-when King David set out to number the people of Israel and Judah. It took him nine months and twenty days to do the job, and among the things he found out was that there were in Israel and in Judah about 1,300,000 'vallant men that drew the sword."

"The first census of the United States was taken 139 years ago. The United States was first among the countries to make a regular periodical enumeration of its inhabitants a part of the fundamental law.

"The first American census, taken in 1790, was very limited in scope and was directed by the United States marshals. They were allowed thirteen months on the job, and when the totals were added up our population was about 4,000,000. That census related solely to population. The name of the head of the family was taken, together with the number of persons in each family, classified as free or slave. The whites, who were free, were classified as "free whites," as male or female, and the free whites males as over or under sixteen years of age. That was about all there was to it. The marshals who supervised enumerators 650, and you will appreveloping methods and machinery that to see me." speed up the counting of heads and the accumulation of a vast amount of data regarding economic, social, educational and other conditions. Here in the United States the development has probably been more far reaching than in any other country. Consequently the director of the census is now by law required to enumerate in the space of one month more than 120,000,000 people and at the same time obtain very extensive informa tion about 6,000,000 farms, 14,000 mines, 100,000 irrigation and drainage projects, the facts of employment and unemployment affecting millions of people, and also the trade, profession or particular kind of work done by every person of working age in the Quite a job for four weeks, is it not? Yet it can and will be completed in the allotted thirty days."

With the exception of a comparatively few, when the vast total is considered, the original records of every family enumerated in the 1790 and subsequent census are on file in the census bureau, according to Mr. Steuart. The missing records have been lost or destroyed by accident. However, file on John Hancock has been preserved and his family was reported as being made up of "two white males over sixteen years of age, three white females and seven other free persons, not white." It is presumed the seven free persons listed as "not white" were negro servants.

In the taking of the 1860 census, each person was for the first time asked to give the value of his or her real and personal property. The records for Illinois show that Abraham Lincoln's family comprised Mr. Lincoin, his wife, his three sons and a boy, fourteen years old, named Philip Dinkell, Mr. Lincoln said he was worth $17,000, of which $5,000 was the value of his real estate, the remainder being personal property. In the same census James Buchanan listed his household as consisting of himself, his niece, Miss Harriet Lane, and eteven employees and servants, all of the latter being of foreign birth. The system of individual enumeration, was adopted at the census of 1850, and at the same time a number of new classifications were added-Illiteracy, school attendance, occupa- she'd think of coming! the girl lewelry and railroad freight cars. tion, place of birth, age, etc.

MISS ELLEN'S WEDDING DRESS

667 F YOU must be going, Mrs. Harris, please stop just a moment longer till I ask your advice about something," sald Miss Ellen Dobson, with excited importance as her caller, a newcomer in the neighborhood, rose to take leave. "I'm getting me a wedding dress and want your opinion of these samples."

"A wedding dress?" gasped Mrs. Harris in blank astonishment as Miss Ellen, a spinster on the stroke of 60, produced for inspection a handful of price-tagged dabs of satin, silk and

"Yes, for Mary Rose's wedding." "O-o-oh!" Mrs. Harris breathed relief. "She's the pretty niece in the Middleton bank that you were telling me about?"

"Yes," beamed Miss Ellen. "One of my brother Jim's girls. But if she was my own child I couldn't have a more motherly feeling toward her. You see,' she explained, laying out the samples on the fat arm of the crimson velour chair, "when Mary Rose was little she was very delicate, and the doctor told her parents if they wanted to raise her they must take her into the country and keep her there until her health was established, as the sayin' But Jim had just gone into the grocery business and couldn't pick up and leave town, and Hattle hated to take the older children away from good So, to make a long story short, I rented my house here in Centers and got me a little place with a cow and chickens out at Applegate, and had Mary Rose live with me. We was together seven years. The happiest years of my life. And oh, how I missed her when Mary Rose went back to her folks! There, I've spread them out. Which is your choice? Mine's divided between the heliotrope and pearl

"But since your brother and sisterin-law had other children and you were so attached to Mary Rose, why couldn't they let her stay with you for keeps?" asked Mrs. Harris after she had expressed preference for a wistaria sample.

"They would if I'd asked 'em," replied Miss Ellen, "-being so grateful for what I'd done. But Jim was moving his family to Middleton that autumn, and I knew Mary Rose would have advantages there that I couldn't give her if she stayed behind at Centers. And it's all turned out for the best," she smiled through a mist of tears. "According to accounts, George Shipley, Mary Rose's young man, is as fine a fellow as they make 'em. And he belongs to an el-e-gant family," she proudly announced. "His father's the leading jeweler in Middleton. But clate what the latter figure means it's no more than Mary Rose deserves," radiantly concluded Miss Ellen, "She's such a dear girl! So loving she writes will be an army of more than 100,000. me regular every week, and on her "Since the 1700 census the nations summer vacation trips, either coming of the world have been gradually de- or going, always stops over at Centers Usually when Miss Ellen was replenishing her wardrobe, she had in Clementina Spinks. But the wedding dress was not to be entrusted to any home-dressmaking. And after due consultation and recommendation, it was put in the expert hands of "Lucile," in the Monarch building. The finished product, boxed and tissue-paper-wrapped like rare flowers from a florist's, was sent home three weeks before the wedding day. But none too soon. For the wedding dress had to be exhibited to all the neighbors, and Miss Ellen found that she got the most pleasurable reactions by giving a "private view" to two or three at a time.

Then, after this prolonged excitement over the wedding dress-its purchase. Its making, It's proud display -came a shock to the neighborhood like a blow in the face.

The day before she was to leave for Middleton Miss Ellen announced that she had changed her mind and was not going to Mary Rose's wedding after all.

"But, Miss Ellen, you'll have to go!" gasped Mrs. Harris, breathless from astonishment. "There's your wedding dress!"

Miss Ellen had attempted a playful role of facetious excuses for her changed plans, but Mrs. Harris' reference to the wedding dress touched too sore a spot in her aching heart and her eyes brimmed with tears.

"I didn't intend a living soul should ever know the real reason for my changing my mind," said Miss Ellen in a grieving voice, "But I don't mind telling you, if you won't let it go any

"I give you my solemn word," pledged Mrs. Harris.

"You see. It was one of those co-Incidences of fate," began Miss Ellen dramatically. "My coming home from downtown in the car with the girl who reminded me so much of Mary Rose and overhearing her talk about the upsetting letter that she's received. The letter was from her Aunt Mamie living in a little western town and was to tell her that her aunt was comin' on to her wedding for the cirl's goin' to be married same as Mary Rose.

"'I hadn't the remotest idea that mourned to her lady friend. 'I love Aunt Mamie dearly and always have been as nice to her as I knew how. But that's entirely different from introducing her as a relative. Aunt Mamie belongs to another world from that of Dick's and his family. She's always lived in a small town and she hasn't any education to speak of and oh, dear, I'm just sick over it!"

Miss Ellen paused to wipe away her

"Suddenly I saw it all as clear as crystal, as the sayin' is," she contin-"Mary Rose's honest-to-goodness feelings if she had to introduce me to Jack as her relative. For like the girl in the car's young man and her Aunt Mamie, him and me don't belong to the same world. I'm a small-town person, too-and I'm not educated very good. Not going to Mary Rose's wedding is a terrible disappointment. I won't deny it isn't. But after overhearing what that girl said, wild horses couldn't drag me, as the sayin' is."

One woman in a thousand, Mrs. Harris kept her word and Miss Ellen's confidence inviolate.

So the neighbors could only talk and wonder why Miss Ellen had so suddenly changed her mind.

Many and various-and often wild -were the conjectures made, but the consensus of opinion was that somehow Miss Ellen had found out that because Mary Rose was marrying her "higher-up young man," she was ashamed of her aunt.

"Well, at least I admire Miss El len's spunk," declared Mrs. Fairchild to Jane Arrowsmith, as the two neighbors were discussing the favorite topic the morning of the day that Mary Rose was to be married at high "She's kept her mouth shut and not let on she cares. That's what I call sporting."

And as though to make good her words, at that moment Miss Ellen appeared in the doorway, head up, clear-eyed smiling.

"I've come to invite you both to my house this evening," she announced. "I just felt I couldn't let Mary Rose's wedding day pass like an ordinary day, so I'm goin' to have a company supper in her honor. Besides," she added with an attempt at playfulness, "If I didn't make an occasion, I don't know when I'd get to wear my wedding dress."

Of course every one invited went. They were too sorry for Miss Ellen to disappoint her, Moreover, Hallie Lewis, who lived across the street from Miss Ellen's saw-and reported at the telephone-all the things that delivery wagons brought to the house opposite-fried oysters, chicken pies, a freezer of ice cream, and a confectioner's wedding cake with fancy icing.

Never had Miss Ellen's little house so brimmed over with flowers and lights, and lively talk as that evening when the supper guests had congregated. Never had Miss Ellen looked so "regal"-the word was Jane Arrowsmith's-as in the lovely wedding dress.

"I think there's nobody else to come," she said at ten minutes after the given hour, "and if you'll all walk out into-" A ring at the bell interrupted, and wondering who the late comer could be, Miss Ellen hastened to the front There followed excited exclamations, excited laughter. "We're on our way to Niagara but stopped over at Centers until the midnight express," Mary Rose's familiar voice finally reached the ears of the sitting-up-and-taking-notice parlorful of guests. "I just had to make up somehow for my disappointment over your not getting on to the wedding, Aunt Ellen. Besides, I'm so anxious for you and Jack to know each other!"

But it's a trade in which sons succeed fathers.

And a responsible lot are these navlgators. Shipping's safety depends upon them, and more, as evidenced by the revelations of Charles Edward Russell, a one-time newspaper man, in a history of the service, "From Sandy Hook to 62 Degrees."

During the World war, he says, "the pllots of New York were intrusted with secrets about the defenses of the port and the operation of the American Navy department that would have been priceless to the Germans.

"No pilot ever mentioned one of these to a human being-to wife, child, brother, father, anybody. If the captain of a German submarine had known what every Sandy Hook pilot knew, the submarine could have appeared off the battery and thrown shells into Wall Street.

* Hornsby Has Big Baseball Punch

THE man with the great record, the man with the great punch and the man with more baseball instinct and intellect than any player in the game today, is Rogers Hornsby, who plays second base for the Chicago Cubs.

Hornsby is thirty-four years of age but he never has played any better baseball than he did last season for the Cubs. He's been a whale of a performer at the bat and in the field as well as a pace setter and an inspiration to all his mates.

Since 1916 he has been an outstanding hitter in the National league. That was his first year as a regular with the St. Louis Cardinals. Now he has put in fourteen years in the big leagues. His lowest batting average was in 1916 when he hit .313. His highest was in 1924 when he hit .424. Three years, 1922, 1924 and 1925 he batted over .400.

Hornsby is within a balf inch of six feet in eight and weighs 175 pounds in condition and he's always in condition. In addition to his prowess Hornsby has always ranked as a fine fielding second baseman. His indomtable spirit has been of even more value to the Cubs than his hitting or his play in the field. Hornsby is always at his best in August and September. He came to the Cardinals in 1915 after only one year in the Texas-Oklahoma league. After twelve years with the Cards he was traded to New York in 1927. He was traded to Boston the next year and the Cubs bought him to round out a championship team. It can truly be said that Hornsby, on his fifteen-year record, is the greatest player in the game today. His lifetime big league batting average is .365.

When the motorist-taxpayer reads that his state is spending millions of dollars for road improvements he may feel that the expenditure is ample. However, the money that is actually devoted to road betterment is but a small percentage of the total motoring

Taking figures compiled for Minnesota, which are exemplary of most other states, the total state and local road bill amounts to about 10 per cent of Minnesota's complete motoring expenditure.

Replacement of parts, fuel, lubricants, accessories, financing, new cars and trucks, insurance, and so on, this year cost Minnesota motorists $372,-000,000. It is estimated by the state highway department that in 1930 Minnesota will spend $38,500,000 for roads. It is prophesied that the total motoring bill for 1930 will be $390,000,000. Consequently, the license and gasoline tax moneys which go into the trunk highway fund will be less than 5 per cent of the total motoring bill.

C. M. Babcock, Minnesota's com-

"Although our total motor bill is increasing, the cost per vehicle mile is decreasing. This is partly due to improvements in the cars, but mostly due to improved highways. With further improvements in our highway system, we can still further reduce the cost per car mile. Every dollar spent for better roads will save dollars for gasoline, tires and repairs."

With automobile registrations increasing rapidly and with a steady increase in the mileage covered by the individual motorist, most states would not be violating any economic rule by devoting more money to first-class pavement construction. Quite to the centrary, the wise spending of more money for smooth pavements would bring a proportionate reduction in car operating costs. The invisible charge collected by inferior roads is far greater than the motorist realizes-from one to two cents a mile.

Steve McKeever, who has led the epic battle to remove "Robbie," agreed to the 'peace pact" proposed by fellow eague officials acting as arbiters, despite the fact that it is virtually the same as that rejected by him when it was presented last December by President Heydler. Peace reigns once more as the Robins prepare to chirp their spring song in preparation for a big season.

Spark Plugs Important for Increasing Power

Some tests recently made in one of the automobile manufactuer's laboratories showed that an automobile engine in which the spark plugs had been used for more than 12,000 miles developed 31.2 horse power when run at an engine speed equivalent to 20 miles per hour. The same motor run at the same speed with a new set of spark plugs produced 38 horse power, an increase of 6.8 horse power, or 21.8 per cent. This shows the importance of good plugs for increasing power and decreasing fuel consumption.

Automobile Radios Are Getting Quite Common

Only a short time ago the radio enthusiast who strung an aerial over the top of his car and installed a receiving set in the back so that he could hear programs as he drove along was looked upon as a bit queer and people smiled as they passed such an outfit along the road. Nowadays, with the vastly better receiving sets many of the better grades of automobiles are being regularly equipped with aerials built into the car tops, so that high-grade recelving sets can be installed at any time the owner desires. The main problem in connection with such an installation is the elimination of interference from the automobile spark plugs, which can be done with the proper arrangement of condensers and resistances. The low tension sparks at the circuit breaker and the generator commutator are even more easily taken care of.

It will be only a short time now before all the better grades of autos will have a receiving set as standard equipment, and even the cheaper cars will be arranged to put them in as optional equipment.

The New John Deere Combine You Should Know About

It's ready for you-the new John Deere No. 5 Combine. All that a good combine should be and several steps ahead of any similar machine yet produced. In the No. 5 you get John Deere dependability in full measure. This light-weight combine will stay on the job when time means money and do good work

You get balanced draft-combine's wide tread main wheels straddle the tractors wheel tracks. Wheels are high and wide. These features, along with the light weight of the No. 5, means lighter draft. Three-wheelin-line construction insures flexibility for good work on uneven ground. Grain platform is hinged to the combine frame.

You will like the simplicity of design and the easy operation of the John Deere No. 5, and the way it saves the grain and delivers it to the tank.

Motor has plenty of reserve power to maintain correct operating speed in heavy grain. High grade bearing equipment and grease gun oiling are other features

Here is a combine that is built right and will stay right, which is the kind of machine that is most economical in the long run.

"But didn't she know you were Irish?" Fellowes interrupted, his suspicions reawakened.

The duenna eyed him shrewdly. "Not she! "Twas a Portuguese she wanted. One that knew the way av the counthry, and Mother Scraphina says, says she, me young leddy wouldn't be satisfied wid-"

"Was that honest?"

"And why not?" snapped the attendant. "How was a chit of a girrul to know what was betther for her? And I'll thank ye not to miscall me, that's been a good friend to ye, for all yer black scowls, and murtherin' rages. and the blood ye've spilt on the right hand and the left."

"I'm sorry," Fellowes apologized. genuinely bewildered. "But you mustn't blame me-

"Arrah, and 'tis nobody else I'll blame, and me young leddy asettin wid the sait tears on her cheeks, all for the way ye mishandled her, wan minite for kissin' and the next for hangin'! Think shame to yerself. sorr, that have spread misery wid yer hate, and won't see love when it comes in yer path, but turrn yer back on it, and go off to seek God knows phwat!"

She paused to catch her breath, perhaps to give him an opportunity to answer but he was speechless, fumbling for comprehension of her words.

"Ah, as shure as me name's Mary McCarthy, that was housekaper to the Irish Nuns, and for hunger sint out to wait on the swatest young leddy alive, 'tis ye are the fool av the worrld!" The beady, black eyes as sumed a sympathy at odds with the spirit of the declaration. "God forgive ye. sorr," she went on softly, "do ye have to be told 'tis just yerself she loves?"

"I'm afrald you don't know what you're talking about," Fellowes proested unsteadily. "Miss inglepin was very fond of Captain Collishawe. He deserved her affection. That's why I feel so had over his death."

"Oh, my glory," exclaimed Mary McCarthy. "Tis a babe in arrms ye are! Ain't ye got the sinse to know she turrned down poor Capt'in Collishawe for yerself? That was why she made such a todo over him-and to her credit. A kind, gentle iamb to t

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. which is more nor the best av them In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can With a strength none would have readily understand the vital imporsuspected, she clutched one of Feltance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water-you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent for California Fig Syrup by the full lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking. and no doubt you will wonder what became of yours kidney trouble and

This Mother Had Problem

As a rule, milk is about the best food or children, but there are times when they are much better off without it. It should always be left off when children show by feverish, fretful or cross spells, by bad breath, coated tongue, sallow skin, indigestion, billiousness, etc., that their stomich and bowels are out of order.

In cases like this, California Fig Syrup never fails to work wonders, by the quick and gentle way it removes ill the souring waste which is causing the trouble, regulates the stomach and bowels and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act normally of their own ac cord. Children love its rich, fruity flavor and it's purely vegetable and harmless, even for babies.

Millions of mothers have proved its merit and reliability in over 50 years of steadily increasing use. A Western mother, Mrs. May Snavely, Montrose California, says: "My little girl, Edna's, tendency to constipation was problem to me until I began giving her California Fig Syrup. It helped her right away and soon her stomach and bowels were acting perfectly. Since then I've never had to have any advice about her bowels. I have also used California Fig Syrup with my little boy, with equal success." To be sure of getting the genuine, which physicians endorse, always ask

BILIOUSNESS

"MY people had used Black-Draught and found it satisfactory, and I have not found anything that could take its place," writes Mr. H. C. Hendrix, of Homerville, Ga.

"I take Black-Draught for biliousness. When I get bilious, I have a nervous headache and a nervous, trembling feeling that unfits me for my work. After I take a few doses of Black-Draught I get all right. When I begin to get bilious, I feel so tired and run-down, and then the headache and trembling. But Black-Draught relieves all this.

"Changing water (I travel some in my work) seems to be hard on my digestion, but an occasional dose of Black-Draught makes me feel full of pep and equal to my work."
