Cisco Legionaires Ready for Big Blowout

All Details Are Ready for Post's Celebration of Opening New Hut; Many Candidates to Make Pleas

Despite the rains that have come in recent days, the grounds surrounding the Legion hut have been provided with seats, a large speaker's platform has been erected from which the Legion speakers and political orators will address the throng expected on the occasion of the dedication of the big red Legion grounds as well as the flag raising ceremonies.

The executive committee of the local post, at the called meeting Monday evening, perfected the minute details of the observance, including marking the way from the city to the Legion grounds, designating strategic points where flags will be placed, marking it easy for strangers to reach the grounds without inquiry, by simply following the flags.

The political oratory will begin at 8 o'clock. Wednesday morning, events will be interrupted only to let Legionnaires incident to the dedication and flag-raising ceremonies. The opening will be in late and continuous fest, as acceptance from state, district and county candidates already received justify the statement that the major portion of the time will be consumed by those who are seeking office. It is probable that the leading candidates for governor and the more important state offices, will be here in person or their representatives. The anatomical candidates have accepted the invitation of the Legion to be present, as well as those seeking congressional favors. Of course, the many candidates will be here, and every effort will be allowed what time he requires to tell the voters why the interest of the country can best be served by his elevation to office. There is no limit as to the time of closing the celebration as far as the political speaking is concerned, as it is promised to allow everyone an opportunity to speak as long as a seat is filled with an auditor.

All neighboring American Legion posts will have representatives here, as acceptances have been received from El Paso, Big Spring, Amarillo, Brownwood, Abilene and San Angelo in this part of West Texas. A cordial invitation is also extended by the members of the local post to come and join in the greatest observance ever staged by the American Legion in West Texas.

Bishop Moore Is Criticized by Tyler Layman for Urging Pastors to Carry Politics into Pulpits

TYLER, July 24.—C. W. Bunn, 70-year-old man, a leader in Methodist church of Tyler for years, superintendent of the Sunday school and a member of the board of deacons for many years, addressed a communication to Bishop John M. Moore of Dallas, in which he criticized the Dallas man for his advancing Methodist leaders to carry politics into their pulpits. Bunn has given a copy of his letter to the press, which follows.

I have been affiliated with the Methodist church for 49 years and long and ardent support for this Christian organization entitles me, I believe, to express myself whenever I come up in connection with a church which I think will be good and helpful.

I have always had a very high regard for your opinion and was much surprised when I read in the news that you were advancing the leaders of the Methodist church into their pulpits. There is no question in my mind in the minds of thousands of other Methodists in Texas as to the ungodliness of the actions taken by them. Candler, that is, that no minister of the gospel has the right to carry politics into his pulpit, but if he should fulfill the command given him by his church to teach the gospel of Jesus Christ and Him crucified, I feel sure if ministers who are filling the pulpits of the Methodist church, by your advice and preach positions in their pulpits that they will be of great help to the Republican party, but while doing this will materially and effectively hurt the Methodist church, not for the present, but for many years to come.

I have given freely of my time and means for many years to the work of the Methodist church, the Methodist schools, the Methodist hospitals and the Methodistbanes; and I hate to see a Christian organization of which I am a part and love, dragged into

The resignation was tendered in order that he might devote his entire time to the campaign of Governor Alfred E. Smith for the presidency of the United States. ### ABILENE IS FOR R. Q. LEE, TWO CISCOANS FIND

J. T. Berry and William Reagan were in Abilene Monday in the interest of the candidacy of R. Q. Lee, candidate for congress from the 17th district. "We found conditions in that city very favorable," Berry said after returning home Monday evening. "So far as we could ascertain there was very little opposition. We found that Mr. Lee has many ardent friends and supporters there, who were outspoken in their advocacy of his candidacy, and only a small percent of those we discussed the matter with seemed reluctant to voice an expression. Those we naturally chose as favoring the candidacy of some other candidate. We were told that Lee would get more plurality of the vote in Abilene, and probably all of Taylor county."

At Eastland the rain began falling at 11:45 o'clock Monday morning as soon as possible down face and continued to fall until about 12:30 o'clock. The rainfall measured a little more than three-quarters of an inch according to the report from that place. Some lightning and a little lightning accompanied the rain. Heavy clouds persisted nearly every direction during the early afternoon.

Only minor damage had resulted since noon today from the surrounding territory. Reports from Pleasant Hill community said there was no rain there this morning, and it is thought that the rain had been followed by a heavy shower. The rain had continued for 14 hours in the vicinity of Wood, Texas, according to the reports of Leakey, Fredericksburg and Hico. Onions were raised in the area.

One-Half Inch Rain Falls in Cisco with Other Parts of West Texas Also Soaked; Crops Are Revived

With one-half inch rainfall in rain that fell in the city it would revive all growing crops, and probably save the maize and other grain seedlings and feed crops. Corn, except that planted late, will not be benefited, and cotton was not suffering, but a rain will cause the plant to attain a larger growth. Crops in the sandy lands have not been suffering, Varnell said, though a rain would be beneficial. The rains on the hard tight lands were needed rain very badly, and if another rain falls in a few days the entire country will be greatly benefited.

It was reported by parties coming in from the west that there was a good rain around Baird Monday afternoon. The crest east of Baird Monday night bore and thus morning the rain continued for an hour or more intermittently resulting in one-half inch precipitation.

Fight Against Federal Reserve Bank Principles to Be Carried into Congress if R. Q. Lee Wins

R. Q. Lee candidate for congress from the seventeenth congressional district, asserted today that the statement by Pat Williams of Mineral Wells recently sent to the market, and Williams' statement is a definite admission that the Federal Reserve Bank has failed, Lee will say if his opponents to the fight on the Federal Reserve bank succeed, will have no effect on his determination to push this fight until the bank is reorganized.

Controlling upon charges made by T. P. Perkins that "one of his successors" had used an enclosed speaker to represent him in the campaign, Lee declared that he had always spoken from Williams' desk. Lee believed that Williams was sincere in his statement, and that Williams' statement is a definite admission that the Federal Reserve Bank has failed, Lee will say if his opponents to the fight on the Federal Reserve bank succeed, will have no effect on his determination to push this fight until the bank is reorganized.

Lee reiterated his recent statement that the two main principles to change the policies of the bank since its creation in 1913 are that the bank should be a thorough, working organization, and that it should be controlled by the people of the country, rather than by individuals, and that Lee proposed to push his fight upon the principles of the two main ideals upon any one man.

The fact that Williams announced in Dallas during the stockholders meeting of the Federal Reserve bank that he believed a continuation of the fight would be useless and that he was dropping the fight, taken by Lee as proof that he stands to oppose the policies of the bank, rather than to fight Talley personally, is sound, and he is therefore campaigning for Congress in order that he may take this fight into the halls of Congress where he believes the only relief lies. Lee declared that Williams' statement should definitely stifle, held today.

MORONES, FOE OF OBREGON, IS STILL SOUGHT

MEXICO CITY, July 24.—Luis Morones, strongest political opponent of the late President-elect Obregon, who resigned two days ago as secretary of industry, commerce and labor, was still being sought by police today. They believe he is hiding among friends. The situation remains tranquil due mainly to the desire of all factions to honor Captain Emilio Carranza, whose funeral is to be held today.

WHAT IT PROVES.

There had been a heavy wind storm; and a little boy who knew of an apple tree in a man's back yard, figured that the wind had probably shaken down some of the fruit high in the top of the tree. So he slipped along a back street, crept up to the man's back fence, laid a hand on one of the iron palings and dropped dead. The storm had blown down a live wire, which had fallen on the fence, and the little boy was electrocuted. Moralists could point to that episode as a stern warning against stealing.

But about the time the little boy was killed while trying to get over the fence to steal apples, the owner of the place, a kindly, benevolent man, started to enter the front gate. When he laid his hand on the latch, he too was killed. And what does that teach? Does it teach that a man shouldn't enter his own front yard? If there is a moral to be drawn from either, or both tragedies, it is that power companies should construct their heavy voltage lines so that if they break they can't fall and kill folks.

There is a great deal of bunk about the morals which are drawn from the doings of the forces of nature. Nature's forces do not consider morality, or distinguish between individuals, good or bad, or actions right or wrong. Nature's forces are immoral. If one works with them, one gets along all right. But if one works against them, one may not get along so well.

The writer knew a philanthropist who labored hard and late in the service of the Lord. His health broke down, and he never recovered. We knew a boozier who pickled himself in liquor, morning noon and night. His health broke down, and he never recovered. Both of these men had disregarded the requirements of health. Both had violated the laws of nature, one in doing good, one in doing ill. Both suffered.

Nature does not recognize the purpose behind the act. She is no respecter of intentions. One who sticks his fingers into the fire to steal someone's roasting sweet potato, one who thrusts his hands into the flames to save a life, one who inadvertently picks up a red hot stove lifter, gets burned. Nature makes no distinction between them.

If a good man should step from the top of a ten story building, he would hit the sidewalk just as hard as would a bad man; and a little child, ignorant of the law of gravity, would come down just as forcibly in proportion to its weight.

If we go against the laws of nature for purposes good or bad we do so at our own risk; and ignorance of the law won't help us. A man may be unselfishly endeavoring to work out some principle that would be of inestimable value to mankind; but if he miscalculates, if he misunderstands, if he in any way runs afoul of the forces of nature, she will as quickly swat him as though he attempted to concoct some diabolical device.

It seems to us that the moralist is way off his beat who declares that cyclones, floods, earthquakes and other natural catastrophes are to be regarded in the light of retributive justice.

STOCKS.

The Stock Market, in spectacular bull and bear movements, rises and falls like the tide, though not so regularly and dependably. Its spectacular aberrations really may, like the tide, have something to do with the moon. Some of them suggest lunacy. This was true of the wild scramble on the part of the public to get in on the long-continued bull market, running up prices to unprecedented levels. It has been just as true of some of the recent breaks in the market. Business—the mass of solid facts on which real values are based—continues on even keel, while the waves roar and splash. Big speculators doubtless know what they are doing. The vast army of little speculators are not exactly investment lunatics but, let us say charitably, mob-minded.

BOXING BALLYHOO.

Fight fans and fight promoters, not to say fighters themselves, just at present, are furnishing a little amusement to that considerable portion of the public that never saw a prizefight and doesn't care much who holds the heavyweight title. Here are two men getting ready for a bout. From all one can discover by scanning the sport pages, the news columns and even the editorial pages, Mr. Tunney and Mr. Heeney are both pretty good boxers. They know their onions so far as scrapping goes. If their game was really regarded as a sport by the general public they would be good drawing cards. But it's a racket more than it is a sport. It calls for ballyhoo quite as much as physique and skill. So enthusiasm lags, the forecasts regarding gate receipts are absolutely depressing, the "battle of the century" stirs very few ripples of interest or excitement. It would be fine if this apathy meant that the public was going in for punching bags and boxing gloves in the back yard with real sport and lively exercise for pa and the boys. Alas! What it probably means is that the public doesn't care a hang for boxing, amateur or professional, but would rise to the old ballyhoo bait as gullibly as ever if given half a chance.

Knee-length skirts, it is announced, will continue in the fall. And that, apparently, regardless of who's elected.

A PLEASANT FACE.

Here's an awful threat of what you're eventually going to look like if you don't start right in now to make the kind of face you want:

You owe it to your family. You owe it to the town. No one should be compelled to see:

Your face have on a frown. And then when you grow older Your friends look at your face And see in it your character. And read your growth in grace. God gives to children faces. It is a joy to see:

But you'll have one you made yourself.

When you are fifty-three.

As sure as eyes are windows Through which the soul looks out:

Your face will tell to strangers What you have been about.

—Hoards' Dairyman.

A REAL FRIEND.

Call him my friend who seeks me in my den For quiet chats which light the weary day;

Call him twice friend who knows Exactly when to go away.

Call him my friend whose voice is always free In my defense when critics' words are rough;

Call him twice friend who understands When he has said enough.

Call him my friend who comes in smiling faith For my assistance when clouds are black;

Call him twice friend—though he is but a wraith— Who paces me back?

KEEPING SOUTH SOLID IS TASK BEFORE DEMOS

NEW YORK, July 24.—Keeping the "Solid South" solid is a phase of the Democratic presidential situation which will receive attention in conferences here this week by Chairman Raskob of the national committee, and his political lieutenants.

Raskob will meet with his executive committee on his return from his home in Maryland and during the next few days will advise with members of the advisory committee headed by Senator George of Rhode Island.

Because of developments since the Houston convention, the Southern situation will receive careful consideration in the conference. It will be discussed in connection with the question of establishing southern headquarters, which still is undecided.

No charm is left about the South. Leaders believe it will go Democratic as usual. But the appointment of C. Bascom Stemp, Republican strategist, to wage a vigorous campaign for Herbert Hoover in the South, following closely upon the Asheville dry conference, has attracted attention among Democratic leaders, and they want to meet any threat that might arise.

They realize there is always a chance the unusual may happen, especially in politics, and they want to be prepared for it. In the conference this week, they will examine the situation to find if there is any danger at any point.

SAN ANGELO, July 24.—The decomposed body of a man, presumably a negro, was found Monday in an abandoned house in a ranch about three miles from San Angelo. ## LUCKY STRIKE SALES BIGGEST IN ITS HISTORY

Inquiry was made of George W. Hill, president of the American Tobacco company, at his office, as to the effect of the cut price situation on the profits and business of the American Tobacco company. He said, "The net profit of the American Tobacco company for the first six months of the year 1928, exceeded those for any similar period in the history of the company. The increase in volume of sales as compared with the corresponding period of 1927, is in excess of $12,000,000—easily the largest volume of sales for any six months' period during its history." He further stated that "the profits for June, 1928, despite two price reductions, and despite extensive advertising expenditures, was in excess of the profits for June, 1927." Hill emphasized

The shin bones went to Sheffield, England, where they became knife handles that were carried in men's pockets to South Africa and London.

The sinews and tendons went to Canada and Mexico—first boiled down into glue used in the manufacture of furniture.

CHAPTER XXI—Continued
"Sorry, Professor, but you see me no better than the rest of you, after all." Daniels was leaning forward, supporting himself with his hands, bearing heavily down on the table. "You might as well hear me out." he turned to Cowles.
The whole thing was arranged,
had a good position at the bank,
at I loved the wheel. Those red and black squares, the clink of dice going out on the tables, held more intoxication for me than ever.
Nothing else I've ever known.
Needless to say, I lost, but the game had got me and the rest was pretty easy. There was money all about me, and the most simple thing to do was to borrow a bit of it. I did that at first.

"Oh, you must know the old story,
about the money that I'd borrowed,
and then I began to realize that it was time for the auditors to come and take a look at the books. You can imagine, gentlemen, how I felt, scarcely knew what to do—where the WAGON."

"Oh, please, please, Mr. Cowles, don't take me back there. Please, don't." Rose ran forward, catching the man's coat lapels, shaking him in her frenzy of fear. "Don't you see now," she sobbed, "it's just like I told you? I didn't have nothing to do with it. And neither did Chuck."

Cowles looked at the girl. Her story held water. He told sorry for the poor kid. She had just got herself mixed up with the gang without knowing what she was doing. But he had promised Cassidy that he wouldn't let her out of his sight.

"Well, I'll tell you what I'll do, girlie," he promised, "I'll see that you get a square deal, and the boy, too."

"Say, he was in it as much as we was," Lefty interrupted, straining at his bonds.

"He was not," the Sparrow looked up from the floor, where he had slowly risen to a sitting posture.
"He didn't know nuttin' about it.
Wasn't he knocked out cold all th'
time? Didn't the gal say so?"

"You cut out!" The Professor snarled. "You know he helped to plan this stick-up."

"Nut'in' of th' sort," the Sparrow
insisted. "Youse planned it yerself.
We was only in on it because we was slated for th' doily work.
Chuck didn't have nuttin' to do with it.
Honest, he didn't." He turned to Cowles a pleading look in his eye.
"Ah, hell, cap'n, have a heart.
Th' kid don't know nuttin' about it.
Sure, he was in on it, but give 'im
a break. He's tryin' to go straight himself again. He come here ta tell ta 'Professor' dat."

"Well, that's all right, but I'll have to take 'em down to the station just the same," Cowles argued.

The clatter and rattle of the wagon
as it rolled up in front of the door brought them all to attention.
The two detectives and the
policeman herded their captives out
the door and into the Black Maria.
As Sparrow passed, Chuck grasped his hand and pressed it silently.

Sergeant Cassidy looked up from his desk at the boy and girl who stood in front of him.

"Now look here, kids," he began.
"Letting you go, both of you, because I believe this girl's telling the truth. She told a straight story before I found out later that I was wrong. But if you both mean what you say I'm going to let you go.
You never been up before," he turned to the boy, "and if you're going straight from now on—well, I'm not going to be the one to give you a record."

"Gee, sergeant, that's mighty decent of you. Believe me, I'm going straight." Chuck looked down at the girl beside him and pressed his hand to her cheek.

"You look after him," he commanded.
Rose, "and don't let me hear of either of you getting messed up in anything like this again."

"Oh, m'st sergeant, I can promise that." Rose breathed a sigh of relief.
"Do you mean to say we're really free?"

The sergeant nodded. "But I'll be looking after you, so watch your step. Kid—watch your step."

But his warning was lost. For Chuck had gathered Rose into his arms, and despite the watchful eyes of several detectives who were still sitting in their usual corners,
busy at their game of Twenty-one,
was kissing her.

"You needn't worry about us," sergeant, he smiled. "We're going right up to some little church
mebbe the one around the corner,
an' after that we're going to take up farming. How about it, Rose?"

"Oh, Chuck, don't," she breathed, looking up at him with an adoring eye.

"An' we're gonna raise a lot of chickens, cows an' ducks an' everything."

THE END.

SUN BATH SUITS
POPULAR IN PARIS

PARIS, July 24.—Sun-bath suits this season in the matter of popularity,
now that every smart woman seems to like the sun more than the water.

They are just as abbreviated at one end and just as decollete at the other as handsome design and a French sense of the fitness of things will allow. The most important point in choosing a sunbathing suit is to bring the sun
line lower than the evening decolletage. And this brings about another problem, for the decollete suit looks perfectly discreet and lovely on willowy young women.
Those of heavier proportions will be wise to add a beach robe.

Jean Patou calls a charming sun-bath suit "Ladylike." It is of sun as it rolled up in front of the door brought them all to attention.
The two detectives and the
policeman herded their captives out

PLUMP GIRLS, NOT WILLOWY, TO BE IN STYLE

CHICAGO, July 24.—Well girls,
if you want to belong to the stylish group the forthcoming season you must be willowy, rather than willowy. That is the edict promulgated by the style censorship committee of a group of manufacturers
who are arranging a fashion show
here August 5 to 12.

Exhibitors say the straight line is definitely out and the female in spirit is back. Gowns are to be marked by low places, fullness, circular treatment, uneven hem lines and other features that will regale the silhouette mode to oblivion.

Black is to be the predominating
color for day time wear, with off
white shades for evening gowns.
For hats, brown shades, woodchestnut and sand, with some new tints in blue, will have first call.

Prices, as usual, will be high. The less material in a gown, the more it will cost.

The success of prohibition enforcement might be weighed by the fact that fewer conventions seem to be going to Canada — Munro

Hiram Johnson and Hoover Bury Hatchet after Feud of Years; Senator to Aid Erstwhile Foe

SAN FRANCISCO, July 24.—From forest fastness in the northern coast ranges to sandy, sun-battered stretches along the Mexican border, California has rallied around Herbert Hoover, the states' adopted son and first presidential candidate, with a rush. In fact, it faintly resembles the famous gold rush of '49, when men and women, old and young, raced to be first to the treasure.

Ninety thousand people are expected to attend the notification exercises in Stanford University's stadium, which stands in a picture-esque setting of fragrant eucalyptus trees, exotic intruding palms, and orange groves. It will be Old Home Week as well as the nation's largest political rally.

State Neutralized.

The state politically has been Hooverized. California's disastrous political war, which has lasted as long as the siege of Troy, will officially end today with Senator Hiram Johnson, his erstwhile enemy at the nominee's Palo Alto home. Since Johnson became governor in 1908 and waged war on the Southern Pacific's grip on the state, two factions have fought, been locked in a death grip.

In 1916, the front defended Charles Evans Hughes for the president, and may have affected world history.

But now there is peace. The Johnsons and the group which backed Hoover against Johnson in the 1928 primary battle have signed a peace pact. Both sides

Since Taking Black-Draught This Man Is Eager For His Meals and Feels Much Better.

Harrisburg, N. C.—Mr. M. F. Pink, of this place, says: "It must have been fully twenty-five years ago that I began taking Black-Draught regularly. It wasn't so long after I married."

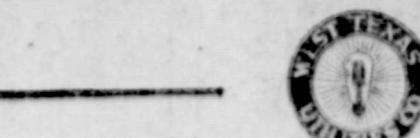

"I was in town one day, and while talking to a friend I stopped over to pick up something. When I straightened up, I felt dizzy. I spoke to him about this and how I had not felt like eating."

"My friend told me to take some Black-Draught. I knew my mother had used it, and so I bought a package. When I got home, I took a good big dose, and the next night, another. In a few days I felt much better. I was hungry and the dizziness was gone."

"A good many times I have had this dizziness and a bad taste in my mouth, or headaches, and then I take Black-Draught and get better. I do not have to take it very often. We buy from five to seven packages a year."

Therbert's Black-Draught has been found to relieve sick headaches in thousands of cases that were due to constipation. Containing no mineral drugs, it acts gently, yet promptly. Try it. AC-128

Worthy Climbers

The man who is ambitious is not satisfied to stand still, however comfortable his present estate may be.

He climbs to higher things. Hence, whatever comes, his life is never purposeless.

It is thus with the man who puts money in the bank a part of his fixed routine.

Faithful to his obligations to himself and to society, he rises steadily, to greater heights of success.
